"If one of you is frightened during sleep, let him say: 'A‘ūdhu bi kalimāt Allāh at-tāmmāti min ghaḍabihi wa ‘iqābihi wa sharri ‘ibādihi, wa min hamazāt ash- shayāṭīni wa an yaḥḍurūn' (I seek refuge in the perfect words of Allāh from His anger, His punishment, the evil of His servants, and from the incitements of the devils and that they should be present), for indeed it will not harm him."

(Narrated by Abū Dāwūd, al-Tirmidhī, and al-Nasā'ī).

Supplication for Insomnia and Difficulty Sleeping:

7. And it is narrated from Khālīd ibn al-Walīd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he suffered from insomnia. The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Shall I not teach you words which, if you say them, you will sleep? Say: 'Allāhumma Rabba as-samāwāti as-sab'ī wa mā aẓallat, wa Rabba al-araḍīna wa mā aqallat, wa Rabba ash-shayāṭīni wa mā aẓallat, kun lī jāran min sharri khalqika ajma'īn, an yafruṭa 'alayya aḥadun minhum aw an yatḡhā, 'azza jāruk wa tabāraka ismuk'" (O Allāh, Lord of the seven heavens and what they shade, Lord of the earths and what they contain, and Lord of the devils and what they lead astray, be a protector for me from the evil of all Your creation, lest any of them transgress against me or rebel. Mighty is Your protection, and blessed is Your name). He said them and slept. (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).
8. And it is narrated from Zayd ibn Thābit, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: I complained to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, about insomnia that afflicted me. He said: "Say: 'Allāhumma ghārat an-nujūm, wa hada'at al-'uyūn, wa Anta Ḥayyun Qayyūm, lā ta'khudhuka sinatun wa lā nawm, yā Ḥayyu yā Qayyūm, ahdi' laylī wa anim 'aynī'" (O Allāh, the stars have set, the eyes have rested, and You are Ever-Living, Sustainer of existence. Neither drowsiness overtakes You nor sleep. O Ever-Living, O Sustainer of existence, calm my night and make my eyes sleep). I said it, and Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, took away what I was experiencing.

This concludes the selection from Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, as cited in al-Dhakhā’ir, vol. 1, p. 116.

The Virtue of Supplication

It is mentioned in the book al-Targhīb wal-Tarhīb by al-Ḥāfiẓ al-Mundhirī: Encouragement to Supplicate Frequently and What Has Been Narrated Regarding its Virtue:

It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, in what he narrates from his Lord, Exalted and Majestic is He, that He said: "O My servants, I have forbidden oppression for Myself and have made it forbidden among you, so do not oppress one another. O My servants, all of you are astray except for those I have guided, so seek guidance from Me, and I shall guide you. O My servants, all of you are hungry except for those I have fed, so seek food from Me, and I shall feed you. O My servants, all of you are naked except for those I have clothed, so seek clothing from Me, and I shall clothe you. O My servants, you sin by night and by day, and I forgive all sins, so seek forgiveness from Me, and I shall forgive you. O My servants, you will not reach My harm so as to harm Me, and you will not reach My benefit so as to benefit Me. O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, the humans of you and the jinn of you, were as pious as the most pious heart of any one man among you, that would not increase My kingdom in anything. O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, the humans of you and the jinn of you, were as wicked as the most wicked heart of any one man among you, that would not decrease My kingdom in anything. O My servants, if the first of you and the last of you, the humans of you and the jinn of you, were to stand in one place and ask of Me, and I were to give every one of them what he asked, that would not decrease what I have any more than a needle decreases the sea if put into it. O My servants, it is but your deeds that I record for you, and then I shall recompense you for them. So whoever finds good, let him praise Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, and whoever finds other than that, let him blame no one but himself."

Saʿīd said that Abū Idrīs al-Khawlānī, when he narrated this Ḥadīth, would kneel on his knees. Narrated by Muslim, and the wording is his. It was also narrated by al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Mājah. The wording of Ibn Mājah is: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, Allāh, Blessed and Exalted is He, says: 'O My servants, all of you are sinners except for those I have pardoned, so ask Me for forgiveness, and I will forgive you. And whoever among you knows that I have the power to forgive and seeks My forgiveness through My power, I will forgive him. All of you are astray except for those I have guided, so ask Me for guidance, and I will guide you. All of you are poor except for those I have enriched, so ask Me, and I will provide for you. If your living and your dead, your first and your last, your moist and your dry, were to gather together and be upon the heart of the most pious servant among My servants, it would not increase My dominion by the wing of a gnat. And if they were to gather together and be upon the heart of the most wretched servant among My servants, it would not decrease My dominion by the wing of a gnat. And if your living and your dead, your first and your last, your moist and your dry, were to gather together and every asker among them were to ask for what his wish attained, it would not decrease My dominion except as if one of you were to pass by the shore of the sea, dip a needle in it, and then remove it. That is because I am Generous, Majestic; My giving is speech. If I intend something, I only say to it, "Be," and it is."

And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: Indeed, Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, says:

"I am as My servant thinks I am, and I am with him when he supplicates to Me."

(Narrated by al-Bukhārī and Muslim).

And it is narrated from al-Nu'mān ibn Bashīr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, that he said:

\"Supplication is worship." Then he recited: {And your Lord says, "Call upon Me; I will respond to you." Indeed, those who disdain My worship will enter Hell [rendered] contemptible.} (Qur'ān, Ghāfir: 60). (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī).*

And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Whoever would be pleased that Allāh responds to him during times of hardship, let him supplicate much during times of ease." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: Allāh, the Exalted, said:

"O son of Ādam, as long as you call upon Me and hope in Me, I shall forgive you for what you have done, and I shall not mind." The Ḥadīth. (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from 'Ubādah ibn al-Ṣāmit, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "There is no Muslim on earth who supplicates to Allāh with a supplication, except that Allāh, the Exalted, gives it to him or diverts from him an equivalent amount of evil, as long as he does not supplicate for something sinful or for the severing of ties of kinship." A man from the people said: "Then we shall supplicate much." He said: "Allāh is more [generous]." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "There is no Muslim who directs his face to Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, in a matter, except that He gives it to him; either He hastens it for him, or He stores it for him in the Hereafter." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

And it is narrated from Jābir ibn ‘Abdullāh, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, that he said: "Allāh will call the believer on the Day of Resurrection until He makes him stand before Him and says: 'My servant, I commanded you to supplicate to Me and promised you that I would respond to you. Did you supplicate to Me?' He will say: 'Yes, O Lord.' He will say: 'Indeed, you did not supplicate to Me with any supplication except that I responded to you. Did you not supplicate to Me on such-and-such a day for a grief that befell you, that I should relieve you of it, and I relieved you of it?' He will say: 'Yes, O Lord.' He will say: 'I hastened it for you in the world. And you supplicated to Me on such-and-such a day for a grief that befell you, that I should relieve you of it, and you saw no relief.' He will say: 'Yes, O Lord.' He will say: 'I have stored for you for it in Paradise such-and-such. And you supplicated to Me for a need that I should fulfill for you on such-and-such a day, and I fulfilled it.' He will say: 'Yes, O Lord.' He will say: 'I hastened it for you in the world. And you supplicated to Me on such-and-such a day for a need that I should fulfill for you, and you did not see its fulfillment.' He will say: 'Yes, O Lord.' He will say: 'I have stored for you for it in Paradise such-and-such.' The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: 'So Allāh will not leave any supplication that His believing servant supplicated with, except that He will clarify for him either that He hastened it for him in the world, or that He stored it for him in the Hereafter.' He said: "The believer will say at that station: "If only nothing of his supplication had been hastened for him."" (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Do not be incapable in supplication, for no one perishes with supplication." (Narrated by Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ and al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Supplication is the weapon of the believer, the pillar of religion, and the light of the heavens and the earth." (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Whoever among you has the door of supplication opened for him, the doors of mercy have been opened for him. And Allāh is not asked for anything, meaning more beloved to Him, than to be asked for well-being." And he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, supplication benefits from what has descended and from what has not descended. So upon you, O servants of Allāh, is supplication." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī and al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Salmān, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, Allāh is Modest and Generous; He is shy, when a man raises his hands to Him, to return them empty and disappointed." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: Indeed, Allāh is Merciful and Generous; He is shy of His servant when he raises his hands to Him, then does not place good in them. (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Whoever is afflicted with poverty and presents it to the people, his poverty will not be alleviated. And whoever is afflicted with poverty and presents it to Allāh, Allāh will soon grant him provision, either immediate or delayed." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd, al-Tirmidhī, and al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Thawbān, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Nothing repels predestination except supplication, nothing increases lifespan except righteousness, and indeed a man is deprived of provision because of a sin he commits." (Narrated by Ibn Ḥibbān and al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from ʿĀʾishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Caution does not avail against predestination, and supplication benefits from what has descended and from what has not descended. And indeed, affliction descends and supplication meets it, and they contend until the Day of Resurrection." (Narrated by al-Bazzār, al-Ṭabarānī, and al-Ḥākim).

And it is narrated from Ibn Masʿūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Ask Allāh of His bounty, for Allāh loves to be asked. And the best worship is waiting for relief." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Supplication is the marrow of worship." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

It is narrated from Jābir ibn ʿAbdullāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Shall I not guide you to what will save you from your enemy and bring you your provisions? Supplicate to Allāh in your night and your day, for supplication is the weapon of the believer."

Encouragement to Use Certain Words to Begin Supplication and Some Narrations Regarding Allāh's Greatest Name:

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Buraydah, from his father, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, heard a man saying: 'O Allāh, I ask You by virtue of my bearing witness that You are Allāh, there is no god but You, the One, the Self-Sufficient Master, Who begets not, nor was He begotten, and there is none co-equal or comparable unto Him.' He said: 'You have asked Allāh by the Greatest Name by which, if He is asked, He gives, and if He is called upon, He answers.'" (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī).

And it is narrated from Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, heard a man saying: 'Yā Dhā al-Jalāli wal-Ikrām' (O Possessor of Majesty and Honor). He said: 'Your supplication has been answered, so ask.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan Ḥadīth).

And it is narrated from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, Allāh has an angel entrusted with whoever says: 'Yā Arḥam ar-Rāḥimīn' (O Most Merciful of the merciful). Whoever says it three times, the angel says: 'The Most Merciful of the merciful has turned to you, so ask.'" (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).

Ethics and Behavioral Education: Clarification of the Virtue of Good Character and the Censure of Bad Character

Imām al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And indeed, you are of a great moral character.} (Qur’ān, al-Qalam: 4). And Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And [those] who restrain anger and who pardon the people.} (Qur’ān, Āl ‘Imrān: 134).

And it is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was the best of people in character." (Agreed upon). And from him, he said: "I never touched brocade or silk softer than the palm of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, nor did I ever smell a fragrance more pleasant than that of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. I served the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, for ten years, and he never once said to me, 'Uff!' nor did he ever say about something I did, 'Why did you do it?' nor about something I did not do, 'Why did you not do such-and-such?'" (Agreed upon).

And it is narrated from al-Ṣaʿb ibn Jaththāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I gifted a wild donkey to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, but he returned it to me. When he saw what was in my face, he said: 'We only returned it to you because we are in a state of iḥrām (consecration for Ḥajj or ʿUmrah).'" (Agreed upon).

And it is narrated from al-Nawwās ibn Simʿān, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I asked the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, about righteousness and sin. He said: 'Righteousness is good character, and sin is what troubles your soul and you dislike for people to find out about.'" (Narrated by Muslim).

And it is narrated from ʿAbdullāh ibn ʿAmr ibn al-ʿĀṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was neither obscene nor one who uttered obscenities. He used to say: 'Indeed, the best among you are those with the best character.'" (Agreed upon). And it is narrated from Abū al-Dardāʾ, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Nothing is heavier in the scale of a believer on the Day of Resurrection than good character. And indeed, Allāh detests the obscene and the foul-mouthed." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ Ḥadīth). The foul-mouthed is one who speaks obscenely and with vile words.

And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was asked about what most admits people to Paradise. He said: 'Fear of Allāh (taqwā) and good character.' And he was asked about what most admits people to Hellfire. He said: 'The mouth and the private parts.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ Ḥadīth).

And from him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The most complete of believers in faith are those with the best character, and the best among you are those who are best to their wives." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ Ḥadīth).

And it is narrated from ʿĀ'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "Indeed, a believer attains by his good character the rank of one who fasts and stands in prayer at night." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd).

And it is narrated from Abū Umāmah al-Bāhilī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "I guarantee a house in the outskirts of Paradise for one who forsakes arguing, even if he is in the right; a house in the middle of Paradise for one who forsakes lying, even if he is joking; and a house in the highest part of Paradise for one who has good character." (An authentic Ḥadīth, narrated by Abū Dāwūd with an authentic chain of narration).

And it is narrated from Jābir, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, the most beloved of you to me and the closest of you to me in gathering on the Day of Resurrection are those with the best character. And indeed, the most detestable of you to me and the farthest of you from me on the Day of Resurrection are the tharthārūn (verbose/talkative), the mutashaddiqūn (those who speak with affectation/eloquence to impress), and the mutafayhiqūn." They said: "O Messenger of Allāh, we know the tharthārūn and the mutashaddiqūn, but what are the mutafayhiqūn?" He said: "The arrogant." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan Ḥadīth). The tharthārūn one who speaks much with affectation. The mutashaddiq is one who speaks condescendingly to people, filling his mouth with words for the sake of eloquence and to aggrandize his speech. The mutafayhiq is derived from fahq, which means fullness; he is one who fills his mouth with speech, expands upon it, and uses obscure words out of arrogance, haughtiness, and to display superiority over others. Al-Tirmidhī narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak, may Allāh have mercy on him, in his interpretation of good character, that he said: "It is a cheerful face, generosity, and refraining from harm."

It is mentioned in al-Targhīb wal-Tarhīb by al-Ḥāfiẓ al-Mundhirī:

- It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, that he said: "Indeed, a servant attains by his good character the great ranks of the Hereafter and honorable stations, even if he is weak in worship. And indeed, he reaches by his bad character the lowest level in Hellfire." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).
- And it is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "Indeed, the guided Muslim attains the rank of those who fast constantly and stand in prayer reciting the verses of Allāh, by virtue of his good character and noble nature." (Narrated by Aḥmad and al-Ṭabarānī). Ḍarībah means nature.
- And it is narrated from Ṣafwān ibn Sulaym that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Shall I not inform you of the easiest worship and the lightest on the body? Silence and good character." (Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā).
- And it is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The believer's nobility is his religion, his manliness (murū'ah) is his intellect, and his standing (ḥasab) is his character." (Narrated by Ibn Ḥibbān, al-Ḥākim, and al-Bayhaqī).

- And it is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said to him: "O Abū Dharr, there is no intellect like good planning, no piety like restraint, and no standing like good character." (Narrated by Ibn Ḥibbān and others).
- And the Ḥadīth of Abū Dharr from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, has already been mentioned under Sincerity: "He has indeed succeeded who purifies his heart for faith, makes his heart sound, his tongue truthful, his soul tranquil, and his disposition upright."

And Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Allāh, the Exalted, said to His Prophet and beloved one, praising him and manifesting His blessing upon him: {And indeed, you are of a great moral character.} (Qur'ān, al-Qalam: 4). And 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, said: "The character of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was the Qur'ān."

A man asked the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, about good character, so he recited the words of Allāh, the Exalted: {Keep to forgiveness, and enjoin what is right, and turn away from the ignorant.} (Qur'ān, al-A'rāf: 199). Then he, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "It is to maintain ties with those who sever them from you, to give to those who deprive you, and to forgive those who wrong you."

And he, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "I was sent only to perfect noble characteristics." (Narrated by Aḥmad from the Ḥadīth of Abū Hurayrah).

And he, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The heaviest thing placed in the scale on the Day of Resurrection is fear of Allāh (taqwā) and good character." (A Ḥadīth narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī from the Ḥadīth of Abū al-Dardā').

And he, peace be upon him, was asked: "Which deeds are best?" He said: "Good character." And he, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Allāh does not beautify the form (khalq) and character (khuluq) of a servant only to feed him to the Fire."

And al-Fuḍayl said: "It was said to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him: 'Such-and-such woman fasts during the day and stands in prayer at night, but she has bad character and harms her neighbors with her tongue.' He said: 'There is no good in her; she is from the people of the Fire.'"

And "It was said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, which of the believers is best in faith?' He said: 'The one with the best character.' A Ḥadīth: 'It was said: O Messenger of Allāh, which of the believers is best in faith?' He said: 'The one with the best character.'" (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd from the Ḥadīth of Abū Hurayrah).

Luqmān al-Ḥakīm's son said to his father: "O father, which quality in a person is best?" He said: "Religion." He asked: "And if there are two?" He said: "Religion and wealth." He asked: "And if there are three?" He said: "Religion, wealth, and modesty." He asked: "And if there are four?" He said: "Religion, wealth, modesty, and good character." He asked: "And if there are five?" He said: "Religion, wealth, modesty, good character, and generosity." He asked: "And if there are six?" He said: "O my son, if these five qualities are combined in him, he is pure, pious, Allāh is his guardian, and from Shayṭān he is protected."

And al-Ḥasan said: "Whoever has bad character torments himself."

And Yaḥyā ibn Mu‘ādh said: "In vastness of character lie the treasures of provisions."

And Wahb ibn Munabbih said: "The example of one with bad character is like that of a broken piece of pottery that cannot be mended nor returned to clay."

And al-Fuḍayl said: "For a dissolute person with good character to accompany me is more beloved to me than for a devout worshipper with bad character to accompany me."

And al-Junayd said: "Four things elevate a servant to the highest ranks, even if his deeds and knowledge are little: forbearance, humility, generosity, and good character, which is the perfection of faith."

"And Ibn ‘Abbās was asked: 'What is nobility (karam)?' He said: 'It is what Allāh has clarified in His Mighty Book: {Indeed, the most noble of you in the sight of Allāh is the most righteous of you.}' He was asked: 'Then what is standing (ḥasab)?' He said: 'The best of you in character is the best of you in standing.' And he said: 'Every building has a foundation, and the foundation of Islām is good character.'"

And ‘Aṭā’ said: "No one has risen except by good character, and no one attained its perfection except al-Muṣṭafā (the Chosen One), peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. So the closest of creation to Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, are those who follow his footsteps in good character."

Clarification of the Reality of Good Character and Bad Character

Imām Abū Ḥāmid al-Ghazālī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Know that people have spoken about the reality of good character, what it is, and they have not addressed its true nature, but rather its fruits. Then they did not encompass all its fruits; rather, each one mentioned those of its fruits that came to his mind and were present in his thoughts, and they did not direct their attention to mentioning its definition and its true nature that encompasses all its fruits in detail and comprehensively. This is like the saying of al-Ḥasan: "Good character is a cheerful face, generosity, and refraining from harm." Al-Wāsiṭī said: "It is not to dispute nor to be disputed with," due to the intensity of his knowledge of Allāh, the Exalted. Shāh al-Kirmānī said: "It is refraining from harm and bearing burdens." Some said: "It is to be close to people and a stranger among them." Al-Wāsiṭī once said: "It is to please creation in times of ease and hardship." Abū 'Uthmān said: "It is contentment with Allāh, the Exalted." Sahl al-Tustarī was asked about good character, and he said: "Its minimum is endurance, refraining from retaliation, mercy for the oppressor, seeking forgiveness for him, and compassion towards him." He once said that "one should not accuse the Truth (Allāh) regarding provision, but trust in Him and be content with the fulfillment of what He has guaranteed, so he obeys Him and does not disobey Him in all matters, whether between him and Allāh or between him and people." 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Good character consists of three qualities: avoiding forbidden things, seeking lawful sustenance, and being generous to one's family." Al-Ḥusayn ibn Manṣūr said: "It is that the harshness of creation does not affect you after your contemplation of the Truth." Abū Sa'īd al-Kharrāz said: "It is that you have no concern other than Allāh, the Exalted."

These and similar statements are many, and they address the fruits of good character, not its essence. Moreover, they do not encompass all the fruits. Unveiling the reality is more appropriate than transmitting differing sayings. So we say: Khalq (outward form) and khuluq (inner disposition/character) are two expressions used together. It is said, "So-and-so has a good khalq and khuluq," meaning he has a good outward appearance and a good inner nature. Khalq refers to the outward form, and khuluq refers to the inner form. This is because a human being is composed of a body perceived by sight and a spirit and soul perceived by insight. Each of them has a form and an appearance, either ugly or beautiful. The soul, perceived by insight, is of greater worth than the body, perceived by sight. Therefore, Allāh magnified its importance by attributing it to Himself when He, the Exalted, said: {Indeed, I am going to create a human being from clay. So when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] soul, then fall down to him in prostration.} (Qur'ān, Ṣād: 71-72). He thus indicated that the body is related to clay and the spirit to the Lord of the Worlds. The terms spirit and soul in this context refer to the same thing. So, khuluq (character) is an expression for a firmly established state in the soul from which actions proceed easily and effortlessly, without need for thought and reflection.

Thus, khuluq (character) is an expression for the state of the soul and its inner form. Just as the absolute beauty of the outward form is not complete with the beauty of the eyes without the nose, mouth, and cheeks, but rather the beauty of all is necessary for the outward beauty to be complete, so too in the inner self, there are four pillars, and beauty in all of them is necessary for good character to be complete. When these four pillars are balanced, moderate, and proportionate, good character is achieved. These are the power of knowledge, the power of anger, the power of desire, and the power of justice.

As for the power of knowledge, its goodness and soundness lie in it becoming such that it easily perceives the difference between truth and falsehood in speech, between right and wrong in beliefs, and between beauty and ugliness in actions. When this power is sound, the fruit of wisdom (ḥikmah) is obtained from it. Wisdom is the head of good morals, and it is that about which Allāh said: {And whoever has been given wisdom has certainly been given much good.} (Qur'ān, al-Baqarah: 269).

As for the power of anger, its goodness lies in its contraction and expansion being according to what wisdom dictates. Likewise, desire, its goodness and soundness lie in it being under the direction of wisdom, meaning the direction of reason and the Sharī'ah. As for the power of justice, it is the control of desire and anger under the direction of reason and the Sharī'ah. Reason is like a sincere advisor, and the power of justice is the ability, like an executor carrying out the directives of reason. Anger is that in which the directive is executed, like a hunting dog that needs to be trained so that its release and restraint are according to signals, not according to the agitation of its own desire. Desire is like a horse ridden in pursuit of game; sometimes it is tamed and trained, and sometimes it is unruly. Whoever has these qualities balanced and moderate has absolutely good character. Whoever has some of them moderate but not others has good character relative to that specific aspect, like one who has some parts of his face beautiful but not others. The goodness and moderation of the power of anger are expressed as courage, and the goodness and moderation of the power of desire are expressed as chastity. If the power of anger deviates from moderation towards excess, it is called recklessness. If it inclines towards weakness and deficiency, it is called cowardice and timidity. If the power of desire inclines towards excess, it is called gluttony. If it inclines towards deficiency, it is called frigidity. What is praiseworthy is the middle path, which is virtue, while the two extremes are blameworthy vices. If justice is lost, it does not have extremes of excess and deficiency, but rather one opposite, which is injustice. As for wisdom, its excess, when used for corrupt purposes, is called malice and cunning, and its deficiency is called dullness. The middle path is what is specifically called wisdom. Therefore, the mothers and foundations of morals are four:

Wisdom, courage, chastity, and justice.

By wisdom, we mean a state of the soul by which one perceives right from wrong in all voluntary actions. By justice, we mean a state and power of the soul by which it governs anger and desire, directs them according to wisdom, and controls them in their release and restraint according to its dictates. By courage, we mean the power of anger being subservient to reason in its advance and retreat. By chastity, we mean the discipline of the power of desire through the training of reason and the Shari'ah. From the moderation of these four foundations, all beautiful morals emanate. From the moderation of the power of reason comes good management, keen intellect, sound judgment, correct conjecture, and discernment of the subtleties of actions and the hidden flaws of souls. From its excess comes cunning, scheming, deceit, and craftiness. From its deficiency comes dullness, inexperience, foolishness, and madness. By inexperience, I mean lack of experience in affairs despite a sound imagination; a person may be inexperienced in one thing but not another. The difference between foolishness and madness is that the fool's objective is correct, but his path is flawed, so he does not have sound reflection in pursuing the path leading to the goal. As for the madman, he chooses what should not be chosen, so the origin of his choice and preference is corrupt. As for the character trait of courage, from it emanate generosity, bravery, magnanimity, self-control, endurance, forbearance, steadfastness, restraining anger, dignity, and friendliness, and similar praiseworthy morals. As for its excess, which is recklessness, from it emanate boastfulness, extravagance, irascibility, arrogance, and vanity. As for its deficiency, from it emanate baseness, degradation, impatience, meanness, pettiness, and reluctance to undertake necessary duties. As for the character trait of chastity, from it emanate generosity, modesty, patience, tolerance, contentment, piety, gentleness, helpfulness, charm, and lack of greed. As for its inclination towards excess or deficiency, from it result greed, gluttony, impudence, malice, prodigality, parsimony, ostentation, shamelessness, frivolity, absurdity, flattery, envy, schadenfreude, subservience to the rich, and contempt for the poor, and so on.

So, the mothers of excellent morals are these four virtues:

Wisdom, courage, chastity, and justice. The rest are their branches. No one reached perfect moderation in these four except the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. People after him vary in their proximity to and distance from him. Everyone who is close to him in these morals is close to Allāh, the Exalted, in proportion to his closeness to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. Whoever combines the perfection of these morals deserves to be a king obeyed among creation, to whom all creation refers and whom they emulate in all actions. Whoever is devoid of all these morals and is characterized by their opposites deserves to be expelled from among lands and servants, for he has approached the accursed, banished Shayṭān, so he should be distanced, just as the first is close to the favored angel, so he should be emulated and approached. For the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was sent only to perfect noble characteristics, as he said in the Ḥadīth: "I was sent to perfect noble characteristics," mentioned previously in the section on the etiquette of companionship. The Qur'ān has alluded to these morals in the descriptions of the believers. Allāh, the Exalted, said: {The believers are only those who have believed in Allāh and His Messenger and then doubt not but strive with their properties and their lives in the cause of Allāh. It is those who are the truthful.} (Qur'ān, al-Ḥujurāt: 15). Faith in Allāh and His Messenger without doubt is the power of certainty, which is the fruit of reason and the pinnacle of wisdom. Striving with wealth is generosity, which relates to controlling the power of desire. Striving with oneself is courage, which relates to using the power of anger according to the conditions of reason and the limits of moderation. Allāh, the Exalted, described the Companions, saying: {Harsh against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves} (Qur'ān, al-Fath: 29), indicating that harshness has its place and mercy has its place; perfection is not in harshness in all situations, nor in mercy in all situations. This is a clarification of the meaning of character, its goodness and ugliness, and a clarification of its pillars, fruits, and branches, and a clarification that morals are susceptible to change through discipline.

Know that some of those overcome by idleness found striving, spiritual discipline, and engaging in purifying the soul and refining morals burdensome. Their souls did not permit this due to their inadequacy, deficiency, and the corruption within them. So they claimed that morals cannot be changed, for natural dispositions do not change. They used two arguments for this: first, that character (khuluq) is the inner form, just as physical form (khalq) is the outer form. The outer physical form cannot be changed; a short person cannot make himself tall, nor can a tall person make himself short, nor can an ugly person beautify his appearance. Likewise, inner ugliness follows the same pattern. Second, they said that good character suppresses desire and anger, and we have experienced this through long striving and know that this is a requirement of temperament and nature, for it is never cut off from a human being. Engaging in it is a waste of time without benefit, for what is sought is cutting off the heart's attention to immediate gratifications, and that is impossible to achieve. We say: If morals were not susceptible to change, then admonitions, exhortations, and disciplines would be futile.

Let us address some of the noble characteristics and virtuous qualities that benefit and are incumbent upon every Muslim, and are even more incumbent and emphasized for the mujāhid:

Sincerity (Ikhlāṣ):

We excerpt from the words of Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, in his book Madārij al-Sālikīn, with some abridgment:

Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And they were not commanded except to worship Allāh, [being] sincere to Him in religion.} (Qur'ān, al-Bayyinah: 5). And He said: {Indeed, We have sent down to you the Book, [O Muḥammad], in truth. So worship Allāh, [being] sincere to Him in religion. Unquestionably, for Allāh is the pure religion.} (Qur'ān, al-Zumar: 2-3). And He said to him: {Say, "Indeed, my prayer, my rites of sacrifice, my living and my dying are for Allāh, Lord of the worlds. No partner has He. And this I have been commanded, and I am the first of the Muslims."} (Qur'ān, al-An'ām: 162-163). And He said: {[He] who created death and life to test you [as to] which of you is best in deed.} (Qur'ān, al-Mulk: 2).

Al-Fuḍayl ibn 'Iyāḍ said: "It is the most sincere and most correct." They asked: "O Abā 'Alī, what is its most sincere and most correct?" He replied: "If a deed is sincere but not correct, it is not accepted. And if it is correct but not sincere, it is not accepted, until it is sincere and correct. Sincere means it is for Allāh, and correct means it is according to the Sunnah." Then he recited the words of Allāh, the Exalted: {So whoever would hope for the meeting with his Lord - let him do righteous work and not associate in the worship of his Lord anyone.} (Qur'ān, al-Kahf: 110).

And Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And who is better in religion than one who submits his face to Allāh while being a doer of good.} (Qur'ān, al-Nisā': 125). Submitting one's face is sincerity of intention and action for Allāh, and doing good (iḥsān) therein is following His Messenger and his Sunnah. And Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And We will approach what they have done of deeds and make them as dust dispersed.} (Qur'ān, al-Furqān: 23). These are deeds that were not according to the Sunnah or were intended for other than the Countenance of Allāh. The Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said to Sa'd ibn Abī Waqqāṣ, may Allāh be pleased with him: "You will not remain behind and perform a deed seeking thereby the Countenance of Allāh, the Exalted, except that you will increase thereby in goodness, rank, and elevation."

The Messenger of Allāh was asked about a man who fights for show, a man who fights for courage, and a man who fights out of partisanship – which of these is in the cause of Allāh? He said: "Whoever fights so that the word of Allāh is supreme, he is in the cause of Allāh." He informed about the first three with whom the Fire will be kindled: the reciter of the Qur'ān, the mujāhid, and the one who gives charity with his wealth, who did so that it might be said, "So-and-so is a reciter," "So-and-so is courageous," "So-and-so is charitable," and their deeds were not sincerely for Allāh. In the authentic divine Ḥadīth, Allāh, the Exalted, says: "I am the richest of partners, [independent] of shirk (partnership). Whoever performs a deed in which he associates another with Me, it is for the one with whom he associated, and I am free of him." In another narration, He will say to him on the Day of Resurrection: "Go and take your reward from the one for whom you worked; you have no reward with Us." In the Ṣaḥīḥ, from him: "Indeed, Allāh does not look at your bodies nor at your forms, but He looks at your hearts." And Allāh, the Exalted, said: {Their meat will not reach Allāh, nor will their blood, but what reaches Him is piety from you.} (Qur'ān, al-Ḥajj: 37).

In a reported divine narration: "Sincerity is a secret from My secrets, which I entrust to the heart of whomever I love among My servants." Their expressions regarding sincerity, truthfulness, and intention have varied, but the objective is one. It was said: "It is singling out the Truth, Glorified is He, with intention in obedience." And it was said: "Purifying the action from the observation of created beings." So, the sincere person has no ostentation, and the truthful person has no self-admiration. Sincerity is not complete without truthfulness, nor truthfulness without sincerity, and neither is complete without patience. It was said: Whoever witnesses sincerity in his sincerity, his sincerity needs sincerity. So, the deficiency of every sincere person in his sincerity is to the extent of his seeing his sincerity. When the seeing of sincerity falls away from him, he becomes sincerely sincere (mukhlīṣ mukhlāṣ). It was said: Sincerity is the equality of the servant's actions in public and in private. Ostentation is when his outward appearance is better than his inner reality. Truthfulness in sincerity is when his inner reality is more cultivated than his outward appearance. It was said: Sincerity is forgetting the sight of creation through constant gazing at the Creator. Whoever adorns himself for people with what is not in him falls from the sight of Allāh. From the words of al-Fuḍayl: "Abandoning action for the sake of people is ostentation, and acting for the sake of people is shirk. Sincerity is that Allāh grants you well-being from both."

Al-Junayd said: "Sincerity is a secret between Allāh and the servant; no angel knows it to write it down, no devil knows it to corrupt it, and no desire knows it to sway it." It was said to Sahl: "What is most difficult for the soul?" He replied: "Sincerity, because it has no share in it."

Definition of Sincerity:

The author of Manāzil al-Sā'irīn said: "Sincerity is purifying the deed from every blemish." That is, his action should not be mixed with any blemish from the desires of the self, whether it is seeking adornment in the hearts of creation, seeking their praise and fleeing from their blame, seeking their veneration, seeking their wealth, their service, their love, their fulfillment of his needs, seeking their love for him, or other such defects and blemishes, the sum of which is intending other than Allāh with his action, whatever it may be.

He said: The Levels of Sincerity: It is of three levels:

The First Level:

Removing the sight of the action from the action, freeing oneself from seeking recompense for the action, and relinquishing contentment with the action. Three afflictions may befall the doer in his action: seeing it and noticing it, seeking recompense for it, and being content with it and finding solace in it. In this level, one is freed from this tribulation. What frees him from seeing his action is his witnessing Allāh's favor upon him, His grace, and His enabling him, and that it is by Allāh, not by himself, and that his action was only brought about by Allāh's will, not his own will.

So, every good in the servant is purely Allāh's grace, His favor, His beneficence, and His blessing, and He is the One to be praised for it. The servant's seeing his actions is, in reality, like his seeing his physical attributes such as his hearing, sight, perception, and strength, or even his health, the soundness of his limbs, and the like. All of it is purely Allāh's gift, His blessing, and His grace.

What frees the servant from this affliction is knowledge of his Lord and knowledge of himself. What frees him from seeking recompense for the action is his knowledge that he is a mere servant, and a servant does not deserve recompense or wages for serving his master, as he serves him by virtue of his servitude. Whatever reward and recompense he receives from his master is a favor from Him, beneficence towards him, and a blessing upon him, not a transaction, as wages are only deserved by a free person or the servant of another; as for one's own servant, he does not.

What frees him from contentment with his action and finding solace in it are two things:

First, contemplating its flaws, its afflictions, his shortcomings in it, and what it contains of the self's share and Shayṭān's portion. Few are the deeds in which Shayṭān does not have a share, however small, and in which the self does not have a portion. The Prophet was asked about a man turning in his prayer, and he said: "It is a snatching that Shayṭān snatches from the servant's prayer." If this is the turning of his gaze or glance, then what about the turning of his heart to other than Allāh? This is Shayṭān's greatest share of servitude. So what can be thought of what is beyond that? As for the self's share in the action, only the people of true insight know it.

Second, his knowledge of what the Lord, may His Majesty be Exalted, deserves of the rights of servitude, its outward and inward etiquettes, and its conditions, and that the servant is weaker, more incapable, and less than able to fulfill them properly and to be pleased with them for his Lord. The knower (ʿārif) is not pleased with any of his actions for his Lord, nor is he pleased with himself before Allāh for the blink of an eye, and he is ashamed to meet Allāh with his actions. His poor opinion of himself and his actions, his hatred for them, and his dislike for his breaths and their ascent to Allāh prevent him from being content with his actions and content with himself. Some of the Salaf (pious predecessors) would pray four hundred rakʿahs in a day and night, then grasp his beard and shake it, saying to himself: "O abode of all evil, have I been pleased with you for Allāh for even the blink of an eye?" Some of them said: "The affliction of the servant is his contentment with himself. Whoever looks at himself with approval of any part of it has destroyed it. And whoever does not suspect himself at all times is deluded."

The Second Level: Feeling ashamed of the action despite exerting effort and maximizing exertion by protecting oneself from witnesses, and seeing the action in the light of enabling grace from the source of generosity.

These are three matters: his shame for his action, which is intense shyness before Allāh, as he did not see that action as worthy of Him despite exerting his utmost effort in it. Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And they who give what they give while their hearts are fearful because they will be returning to their Lord.} (Qur'ān, al-Mu'minūn: 60). The Prophet said: "It is the man who fasts, prays, gives charity, and fears that it will not be accepted from him." Some of them said: "Indeed, I pray two rak'ahs and then leave them in the position of a thief or an adulterer whom people see, out of shyness before Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He." So the believer combines excellence in fear and a poor opinion of himself, while the deluded person has a good opinion of himself despite his wrongdoing. The second is maximizing effort by protecting oneself from witnesses, meaning he exerts his utmost energy in correcting the action, protecting himself from it being witnessed as from you and by you.

The third is to seek protection in the light of enabling grace with which Allāh illuminates the servant's insight, so you see in the light of that illumination that your action is from the source of His generosity, not from you nor by you. This level thus encompasses five things:

Action and diligence in it, shame and shyness before Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, safeguarding it from being witnessed as from you, and seeing it from the source of Allāh's generosity, Glorified is He, and from Him.

The Third Level: Sincerity of action through freedom from [attachment to] the action, letting it proceed according to knowledge, while you proceed witnessing the decree, free from the fetters of convention. The Shaykh explained his meaning of sincerity of action from action by saying: "You let it proceed according to knowledge, and you proceed witnessing the decree." The meaning of his words is that you make your action follow knowledge, conforming to it, guided by it, proceeding as it proceeds, stopping where it stops, and moving as it moves, alighting at its stations, drinking from its sources, looking to the religious, commanding decree, adhering to it in action and omission, seeking and fleeing, looking to the arrangement of reward and punishment upon it as a cause and an earning. Despite that, you proceed with your heart witnessing the universal, decreed judgment in which causes and effects, movements and stillness are enfolded, and nothing remains there but pure will and the Lord's sole uniqueness in actions and their source from His will and volition. Thus, he is upholding the command and prohibition in action and omission, proceeding according to it, and with predestination and decree in faith, witnessing, and reality. So he is looking to the reality while upholding the Sharī'ah. These two matters are the servitude of these two verses: *{For whoever wills among you to take a right course. * And you do not will except that Allāh wills, Lord of the worlds.}* (Qur'ān, al-Takwīr: 28-29). And Allāh, the Exalted, said: *{Indeed, this is a reminder, so whoever wills may take to his Lord a way. * And you do not will except that Allāh wills. Indeed, Allāh is ever Knowing and Wise.}* (Qur'ān, al-Insān: 29-30).

So, letting the action proceed according to knowledge is the scene of {For whoever wills among you to take a right course}, and its companion's proceeding while witnessing the decree is the scene of {And you do not will except that Allāh wills, Lord of the worlds}.

Shaykh 'Abdullāh 'Azzām said:

Intention and the Causes of Victory:

1. "Indeed, Allāh only grants victory to this Ummah – through its weak ones – by their supplication, their prayer, and their sincerity." (Narrated by al-Nasā'ī).

Ibn al-‘Arabī said: Part of Allāh's great wisdom is that He commanded preparation against the enemy and taking them by force, and He informed that victory after that would be through the weak, so that creation might know, in what they were commanded regarding preparation, the extent of worship in contemplating worship, and that they might hope for the reality, and that victory is from Allāh, which He bestows at the hands of the weakest. So, preparation is for worship, and knowledge of the direction of victory in the weak is for Tawhīd, and that the entire matter belongs to Allāh, by custom and reality, which He directs as He informed.

2. It is narrated from Sa‘d ibn Abī Waqqāṣ, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Are you not given victory and provision except by your weak ones?" (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

The beginning of the Ḥadīth in al-Bukhārī from Muṣ‘ab ibn Sa‘d states: He (Sa‘d, may Allāh be pleased with him) saw that he had superiority over those below him, so the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Are you not given victory and provision except by your weak ones?"

Al-Muhallab said: The Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, intended by this saying to Sa‘d humility and the negation of pride and arrogance from the hearts of the believers. And he, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, informed that by their supplications they are given victory and provision, because their worship and supplication are more sincere and more imbued with humility, due to their hearts being free from attachment to the adornments and finery of the world, and the purity of their consciences from what distracts them from Allāh, the Exalted. So they made their concern one, thus their deeds were purified and their supplications answered.

3. It is narrated from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him: "Conquests were achieved by a people whose swords were not adorned with gold or silver; rather, their adornments were camel hide (‘alābī), lead/tin (ānuk), and iron." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).
4. The Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, while in a tent, said: "O Allāh, I implore You [to fulfill] Your covenant and Your promise. O Allāh, if You will, You will not be worshipped after today." Abū Bakr took his hand and said: "Enough, O Messenger of Allāh, you have earnestly entreated your Lord." He was wearing armor. He came out saying: {Their assembly will be defeated, and they will turn their backs [in retreat]. Nay, but the Hour is their appointed time, and the Hour is more disastrous and more bitter.} (Qur’ān, al-Qamar: 45-46). In another narration: "And that was on the day of Badr." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

Ibn Ishāq said: ‘Abdullāh ibn Abī Bakr narrated to me that he was told: "Sa‘d ibn Mu‘ādh said: 'O Prophet of Allāh, shall we not build for you a shelter (‘arīsh) for you to be in, and prepare your mounts by you, then we meet our enemy? If Allāh grants us honor and makes us victorious over our enemy, that will be what we loved. And if it is the other, you will sit on your mounts and join those behind us. For indeed, O Prophet of Allāh, a people have stayed behind you who are no less loving of you than us. Had they thought you would encounter war, they would not have stayed behind. Allāh will protect you through them; they will advise you sincerely and wage Jihād with you.' Then the shelter was built for the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, and he was in it."

5. Abū Mūsā al-Ash‘arī narrated to us that a Bedouin man came to the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, and said: "O Messenger of Allāh, a man fights for spoils, a man fights to be mentioned, and a man fights for his position to be seen. Who is in the cause of Allāh?" The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Whoever fights so that the word of Allāh is supreme, he is in the cause of Allāh." (Narrated by Muslim).

Fighting occurs for five reasons:

Seeking spoils, displaying courage, showing off, partisanship, and anger. Each of these can be praiseworthy or blameworthy.

What is meant by "the word of Allāh" is the call of Allāh to Islām. It is possible that what is meant is that no one is in the cause of Allāh except one whose reason for fighting is solely to make the word of Allāh supreme, meaning that if he added to that any of the aforementioned reasons, it would invalidate it. It is also possible that it is not invalidated if that occurs implicitly, not as the primary and intended purpose. Al-Ṭabarī stated this explicitly, saying: If the original motive is the first, then what arises for him after that does not harm him. This is the view of the majority. The validity of the majority's opinion is indicated by what Abū Dāwūd narrated with a good chain from ‘Abdullāh ibn Ḥawālah, who said: "The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, sent us to gain spoils, but we returned without gaining anything. He said: 'O Allāh, do not entrust them to me, for I would be too weak for them; nor entrust them to themselves, for they would be incapable of it; nor entrust them to the people, for they would favor themselves over them.'"

The aim of making the word of Allāh supreme includes seeking His pleasure, seeking His reward, and seeking to repel His enemies, all of which are interconnected.

6. It is narrated from Sulaymān ibn Yasār that he said: People dispersed from Abū Hurayrah, so Nāqil, one of the people of Syria, said to him: "O Shaykh, narrate to us a Ḥadīth you heard from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him." He said: "Yes, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "Indeed, the first of people to be judged on the Day of Resurrection will be a man who was martyred. He will be brought, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say: 'What did you do with them?' He will say: 'I fought for Your sake until I was martyred.' He [Allāh] will say: 'You have lied. Rather, you fought so that it would be said, "He is courageous," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face until he is thrown into the Fire. And a man who learned knowledge and taught it, and recited the Qur'ān. He will be brought, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say: 'What did you do with them?' He will say: 'I learned knowledge and taught it, and I recited the Qur'ān for Your sake.' He [Allāh] will say: 'You have lied. Rather, you learned knowledge so that it would be said, "He is a scholar," and you recited the Qur'ān so that it would be said, "He is a reciter," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face until he is thrown into the Fire. And a man whom Allāh had blessed with all kinds of wealth. He will be brought, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say: 'What did you do with them?' He will say: 'I left no way in which You love for wealth to be spent except that I spent in it for Your sake.' He [Allāh] will say: 'You have lied. Rather, you did it so that it would be said, "He is generous," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face, then thrown into the Fire." (Narrated by Muslim).

7. It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Whoever sincerely seeks martyrdom will be given it, even if it does not befall him." In another narration: "Allāh will make him reach the stations of the martyrs, even if he dies on his bed." (Narrated by Muslim).

8. "Whoever asks Allāh for martyrdom with sincerity, Allāh will make him reach the stations of the martyrs, even if he dies on his bed." (Narrated by Muslim).

The meaning of the two Ḥadīth is that if he asks for martyrdom with sincerity, he will be given the reward of the martyrs, even if he is on his bed. In it is the recommendation to ask for martyrdom and the recommendation to have good intentions.

9. It is narrated from Jābir that he said: "We were with the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, on a military expedition, and he said: 'Indeed, there are men in Madīnah who, whenever you traverse a path or cross a valley, they are with you; sickness has kept them behind.'" In another narration: "Except that they share the reward with you." (Narrated by Muslim).

In the Ḥadīth: The virtue of good intention, and that whoever intends to go on a military expedition or other acts of obedience, and an excuse prevents him, he will attain the reward of his intention. And the more he regrets missing it and wishes he were among the fighters and the like, the more his reward will increase, and Allāh knows best.

In the Ḥadīth is an indication that a person attains by his intention the reward of the doer if an excuse prevents him from the action.

10. It is narrated from Abū Umāmah al-Bāhilī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: A man came to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, and said: "What is your view of a man who fights seeking reward and fame, what is for him?" The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Nothing is for him." He repeated it three times, and the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Nothing is for him." Then he said: "Indeed, Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, does not accept any deed unless it is done purely for Him and His Countenance is sought thereby." (Narrated by al-Nasā'ī).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah: A man said: "O Messenger of Allāh, a man intends Jihād in the cause of Allāh, and he seeks some worldly gain." He said: "He has no reward." The people found this grave, and said to the man: "Go back to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, perhaps you did not understand him." He said: "O Messenger of Allāh, a man intends Jihād in the cause of Allāh, and he seeks some worldly gain." He said: "He has no reward." They said to the man: "Go back to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him." He said for the third time: "He has no reward." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

Ibn 'Ābidīn said in his commentary (Ḥāshiyah, vol. 4, p. 120): "As for if his main intention is Jihād and he desires spoils along with it, then he is included in His, the Exalted's, saying: {There is no blame upon you for seeking bounty from your Lord} (Qur'ān, al-Baqarah: 198), meaning trade on the way to Ḥajj. Just as it does not negate the reward of Ḥajj, so too for Jihād."

11. "Whoever dies without having fought (in Jihād) or having resolved to do so within himself, dies on a branch of hypocrisy." (Narrated by Muslim).

Meaning, he resembles the hypocrites who stayed behind from Jihād in this characteristic, for abandoning Jihād is one of the branches of hypocrisy.

This concludes the selection from Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, as cited in al-Dhakhā’ir, vol. 1, p. 276.

Excellence (Iḥsān):

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah that he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Ask me." They were in awe of asking him, so a man came and sat by his knees and said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is Islām?" He said: "That you do not associate anything with Allāh, you establish the prayer, you pay the Zakāh, and you fast Ramaḍān." He said: "You have spoken the truth." He said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is faith (īmān)?" He said: "That you believe in Allāh, His angels, His Book, His meeting, His Messengers, and you believe in the resurrection, and you believe in predestination, all of it." He said: "You have spoken the truth." He said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is excellence (iḥsān)?" He said: "That you fear Allāh as if you see Him, for if you do not see Him, He indeed sees you." He said: "You have spoken the truth."

And it is narrated from Abū Ya‘lā Shaddād ibn Aws, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, that he said: "Indeed, Allāh has prescribed excellence in everything. So if you kill, kill well; and if you slaughter, slaughter well. Let one of you sharpen his blade and spare suffering to the animal he slaughters." (Narrated by Muslim).

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said: The Station of Excellence (Iḥsān):

It is the core of faith, its spirit, and its perfection. This station encompasses all other stations, for all of them are contained within it. Everything that has been said from the beginning of the book until here is part of excellence. The author of Manāzil al-Sā'irīn, may Allāh have mercy on him, said: He cited as evidence for this station the saying of Allāh, the Exalted: {Is the reward for good [anything] but good?} (Qur'ān, al-Raḥmān: 60). Excellence encompasses all aṭḥāb (doors/aspects) of realities, and it is that you worship Allāh as if you see Him. As for the verse, Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with him, and the commentators said: Is the reward for one who says "Lā ilāha illā Allāh" (There is no god but Allāh) and acts upon what Muḥammad brought, anything but Paradise? It has been narrated from the Prophet that he recited: {Is the reward for good [anything] but good?} (Qur'ān, al-Raḥmān: 60). Then he said: "Do you know what your Lord said?" They said: "Allāh and His Messenger know best." He said: "He says: Is the reward for one upon whom I bestowed the blessing of Tawhīd anything but Paradise?" As for the Ḥadīth, it is an indication of the perfection of presence with Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He, and His watchfulness, which combines fear of Him, love for Him, knowledge of Him, turning to Him in repentance, sincerity to Him, and all the stations of faith.

Levels of Excellence: He said it is of three levels:

The First Level:

(Excellence in intention by refining it with knowledge, strengthening it with resolve, and purifying it in state). This means that excellence of intention is achieved through three things: first, refining it with knowledge, by making it follow knowledge according to its dictates, refined by it, and purified from the blemishes of selfish desires, so one intends only what is permissible according to knowledge, and knowledge is following the command and the Sharī'ah.

Second, strengthening it with resolve. Strengthening means firmness and power, i.e., it is accompanied by a resolve that carries it through, and not accompanied by lethargy and slackness that weakens and enfeebles it. Third, purifying it in state, i.e., the state of its possessor is pure from impurities and blemishes that indicate impurity of his intention, for the state is the manifestation of the intention and its fruit, and it is also its substance and its motivator, so each of them is affected by the other. Its purity and refinement are part of the perfection of the purity and refinement of the other.

The Second Level:

Excellence in states, which is that you guard them out of jealousy, conceal them out of refinement, and rectify them through realization.

He means by guarding them: preserving them and protecting them out of jealousy for them lest they change, for they pass like clouds. If one does not observe their rights, they change. Observing them is by constant loyalty and avoiding estrangement. He also observes them by honoring their arrival, for they are guests, and if a guest is not honored upon arrival, he departs. He also observes them by controlling them as a possession, holding fast to them, and not allowing them to be taken by a highway robber or plunderer. He also observes them by submitting to their ruling and yielding to their authority if it agrees with the command. He also observes them by concealing them out of refinement, which is to hide them from people as much as possible so that they do not know about them, and not to display them except for a proof, a need, or a preponderant benefit, for in displaying them without that, there are numerous afflictions, along with exposing them to thieves, robbers, and raiders.

The Third Level:

(Excellence in time, which is that you never depart from witnessing, you do not mix your aspiration with anyone else, and you make your migration to the Truth perpetual).

Meaning, you do not depart from the state of witnessing. This is only possible for the people of firm belief who have triumphed over their selves and have traversed the distances between the self and the heart, and the distances between the heart and Allāh, by striving against the obstacles on those distances. And his saying, "you do not mix your aspiration with anyone else," means that you attach your aspiration to the Truth alone and do not attach your aspiration to anyone other than Him, for that is shirk (partnership) in the path of the truthful. His saying, "and you make your migration to the Truth perpetual," means that everyone who turns to Allāh with truthfulness and sincerity is among those who migrate to Him, so he should not lag behind in this migration, but rather should accompany it perpetually until he reaches Allāh, Exalted and Majestic is He. For it is but an hour, then it passes, and he who journeys praises the outcome of the journey. And for every heart, there are two migrations, and they are an obligatory duty upon it at every breath: a migration to Allāh, Glorified is He, with Tawhīd, sincerity, repentance, love, fear, hope, and servitude. And a migration to His Messenger by seeking his judgment, submitting, entrusting, and yielding to his ruling, and receiving the rulings of the outward and the inward from his niche, so that his worship through him is greater than the worship of a caravan by a skilled guide in the darkness of night and the labyrinths of the road. If his heart does not have these two migrations, let him cast ashes upon his head and re-examine his faith from its foundation, and turn back to borrow light before it is cut off from him and it is said to him on the Şirāṭ (bridge) from behind the wall, and Allāh is the One whose help is sought.

Steadfastness (Istiḳāmah):

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Allāh Almighty said: {Indeed, those who have said, "Our Lord is Allāh," and then remained on a right course - the angels will descend upon them, [saying], "Do not fear and do not grieve but receive good tidings of Paradise, which you were promised."} (Fuṣṣilat 41:30). And He said: {Indeed, those who have said, "Our Lord is Allāh," and then remained on a right course - there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve. Those are the companions of Paradise, abiding eternally therein as reward for what they used to do.} (Al-Aḥqāf 46:13-14). And He said to His Messenger: {So remain on a right course as you have been commanded, [you] and those who have turned back with you [to Allāh], and do not transgress. Indeed, He is Seeing of what you do.} (Hūd 11:112). Thus, He clarified that steadfastness is the opposite of transgression, which is exceeding the limits in everything. Allāh Almighty said: {Say, "I am only a man like you, to whom has been revealed that your god is one God. So take a straight course to Him and seek His forgiveness."} (Fuṣṣilat 41:6). And Allāh Almighty said: {And [if] they had remained on the right course, We would have given them abundant water to drink, so We might test them thereby.} (Al-Jinn 72:16-17).

Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, may Allāh be pleased with him, the friend of the Ummah and the greatest of them in steadfastness, was asked about steadfastness, and he said: "That you do not associate anything with Allāh; he meant steadfastness upon pure Tawhīd." ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Steadfastness is to be upright upon the command and prohibition and not to swerve like the swerving of foxes." ‘Uthmān ibn ‘Affān, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "They remained steadfast: they made their actions sincere for Allāh." ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, and Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, said: "They remained steadfast: they performed the obligatory duties." Al-Ḥasan said: "They remained steadfast upon the command of Allāh, so they acted in obedience to Him and avoided disobedience to Him." Mujāhid said: "They remained steadfast upon the testimony that there is no god but Allāh until they met Allāh." I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh sanctify his soul, say: "They remained steadfast upon His love and His servitude, not turning away from Him to the right or to the left."

In Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, it is narrated from Sufyān ibn ‘Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, tell me a statement about Islām which I will not need to ask anyone about after you.' He said, 'Say, "I believe in Allāh," and then be steadfast.'" And in it, from Thawbān, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, he said: "Be steadfast, though you will not be able to do so perfectly; know that the best of your deeds is prayer, and no one maintains ablution except a believer."

What is required of the servant is steadfastness, which is adherence to the right course. If he is unable to achieve it, then approximation is required. If he falls short of that, then it is negligence and loss, as in Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim from the ḥadīth of Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, who said: "Follow the right course, seek closeness to it, and know that none of you will be saved by his deeds." They said, "Not even you, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Not even I, unless Allāh envelops me with mercy and grace from Him." In this ḥadīth, he combined all the stations of religion. He commanded steadfastness, which is adherence to the right course and correctness in intentions, words, and deeds. And he informed in the ḥadīth of Thawbān that they would not be able to achieve it perfectly, so he moved them to approximation, which is to come close to steadfastness according to their ability, like one who shoots at a target; if he does not hit it, he comes close to it. Despite this, he informed them that steadfastness and approximation do not grant salvation on the Day of Resurrection, so no one should rely on his actions, nor be conceited by them, nor think that his salvation is through them. Rather, his salvation is by the mercy of Allāh, His pardon, and His grace. Steadfastness is a comprehensive term that encompasses all aspects of religion. It is to stand before Allāh upon the reality of truthfulness and fulfillment of the covenant. Steadfastness relates to words, actions, states, and intentions. Thus, steadfastness in them occurs for Allāh, by Allāh, and upon the command of Allāh. One of the gnostics said: "Be a person of steadfastness, not a seeker of miracles, for your soul is inclined to seek miracles, while your Lord demands steadfastness from you." I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh Almighty sanctify his soul, say: "The greatest miracle is adherence to steadfastness."

Truthfulness

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh Almighty have mercy on him, said:

It is the greatest station of the people, from which all the stations of the wayfarers arise. It is the straightest path; whoever does not travel on it is among the disconnected and ruined. By it, the people of hypocrisy are distinguished from the people of faith, and the inhabitants of Paradise from the inhabitants of Hellfire. It is Allāh's sword on His earth, which, when placed on anything, cuts it, and when it confronts falsehood, it overthrows and fells it. Whoever wields it, his assault is not repelled, and whoever speaks with it, his word prevails over opponents. It is the spirit of actions, the touchstone of states, the impetus for braving perils, and the gate through which those who arrive enter the presence of the Lord of Majesty. It is the foundation of the structure of religion, the pillar of the tent of certainty, and its rank is second only to the rank of prophethood, which is the loftiest rank of all beings. From their dwellings in Paradise, springs and rivers flow to the dwellings of the truthful (ṣiddīqīn), just as from their hearts to their hearts in this world, there is a continuous and flowing connection.

Allāh, Glorified is He, commanded the believers to be with the truthful and specifically favored the prophets, the truthful (ṣiddīqīn), the martyrs, and the righteous. He Almighty said: {O you who have believed, fear Allāh and be with those who are true.} (Al-Tawbah 9:119). And He Almighty said: {And whoever obeys Allāh and the Messenger - those will be with the ones upon whom Allāh has bestowed favor of the prophets, the steadfast affirmers of truth, the martyrs and the righteous.} (Al-Nisā' 4:69). They are the highest companions, and excellent are those as companions. Allāh continues to extend to them His blessings, His kindnesses, and

His increase, as an act of grace and success from Him. They have the rank of companionship with Allāh, for Allāh is with the truthful. And they have the station of nearness to Him, as their rank is second to the rank of the prophets. He Almighty informed that whoever is truthful with Him, it is better for him. He said: {So when the matter has been determined, if they had been true to Allāh, it would have been better for them.} (Muḥammad 47:21). He Almighty informed about the people of righteousness and praised them for their best deeds of faith, Islām, charity, and patience, stating that they are the people of truthfulness. He said: {Righteousness is not that you turn your faces toward the east or the west, but [true] righteousness is [in] one who believes in Allāh, the Last Day, the angels, the Book, and the prophets and gives wealth, in spite of love for it, to relatives, orphans, the needy, the traveler, those who ask [for help], and for freeing slaves; [and who] establishes prayer and gives zakāh; [those who] fulfill their promise when they promise; and [those who] are patient in poverty and hardship and during battle. Those are the ones who have been true, and it is those who are the righteous.} (Al-Baqarah 2:177).

This is explicit that truthfulness is through outward and inward actions and that truthfulness is the station of Islām and faith. Allāh, Glorified is He, divided people into truthful and hypocritical, saying: {That Allāh may reward the truthful for their truth and punish the hypocrites if He wills or accept their repentance.} (Al-Aḥzāb 33:24). Faith is based on truthfulness, and hypocrisy is based on falsehood. Falsehood and faith do not coexist unless one of them is at war with the other. He, Glorified is He, informed that on the Day of Resurrection, nothing will benefit the servant and save him from His punishment except his truthfulness.

Allāh Almighty said: {This is the Day when the truthful will benefit from their truthfulness. For them are gardens beneath which rivers flow, wherein they will abide forever, Allāh being pleased with them, and they with Him. That is the great attainment.} (Al-Mā'idah 5:119). And Allāh Almighty said: {And the one who has brought the truth and [the one who] believed in it - those are the righteous.} (Al-Zumar 39:33-34). So, the one who brought the truth is one whose characteristic is truthfulness in his speech, his actions, and his state. Truthfulness is in these three: Truthfulness in speech is the consistency of the tongue in utterances, like the consistency of an ear of grain on its stalk. Truthfulness in actions is the consistency of deeds with the command and following, like the consistency of the head on the body. Truthfulness in states is the consistency of the actions of the heart and limbs with sincerity, exerting one's utmost effort, and expending all energy. Thereby, the servant becomes one of those who brought the truth. According to the perfection of these matters in him and their establishment by him, his state of being a ṣiddīq (intensely truthful) is determined. Therefore, Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, may Allāh be pleased with him and grant him contentment, held the pinnacle of ṣiddīqiyyah; he was called al-Ṣiddīq absolutely. Al-Ṣiddīq is more eloquent than al-ṣadūq (truthful), and al-ṣadūq is more eloquent than al-ṣādiq (one who speaks truth). The highest rank of truthfulness is the rank of ṣiddīqiyyah, which is perfect submission to the Messenger with perfect sincerity to the Sender. Allāh Almighty commanded His Messenger to ask Him to make his entry and exit based on truth, saying: {And say, "My Lord, cause me to enter a sound entrance and to exit a sound exit and grant me from Yourself a supporting authority."} (Al-Isrā' 17:80). And He informed about His intimate friend Ibrāhīm that he asked Him to grant him a reputation of truth among later generations, saying: {And grant me a reputation of truth among later generations.} He gave good tidings to His servants that they would have with Him a sure footing of truth and a seat of truth. Allāh Almighty said: {And give good tidings to those who believe that they will have a [firm] precedence of honor with their Lord.} (Yūnus 10:2). And He said: {Indeed, the righteous will be among gardens and rivers, In a seat of honor near a Sovereign, Perfect in Ability.} (Al-Qamar 54:54-55). These are five things:

The entry of truth, the exit of truth, the tongue of truth, the footing of truth, and the seat of truth. The reality of truthfulness.

In these matters, it is the established truth connected to Allāh, leading to Allāh, and it is what was by Him and for Him of words and deeds, and their recompense in this world and the Hereafter.

Among the signs of truthfulness is the heart's tranquility towards it, and among the signs of falsehood is the occurrence of doubt, as in al-Tirmidhī, marfū' (attributed to the Prophet) from the ḥadīth of al-Ḥasan ibn 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, who said: "Truthfulness is tranquility, and falsehood is doubt." In the two Ṣaḥīḥs, from the ḥadīth of 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, who said: "Indeed, truthfulness leads to righteousness, and righteousness leads to Paradise. A man continues to speak the truth until he is recorded with Allāh as a ṣiddīq (intensely truthful). And indeed, falsehood leads to wickedness, and wickedness leads to the Hellfire. A man continues to tell lies until he is recorded with Allāh as a liar." Thus, He made truthfulness the key to ṣiddīqiyyah and its beginning, and it is its ultimate goal. A liar will never attain its rank, neither in his speech, nor in his actions, nor in his state, especially one who lies about Allāh in His names and attributes, denying what He affirmed or affirming what He denied for Himself. There is no ṣiddīq among these at all. Likewise, lying about Him in His religion and His Sharī'ah by permitting what He prohibited and prohibiting what He did not prohibit, by dropping what He obligated and obligating what He did not obligate, by disliking what He loved and recommending what He did not love—all of that is contrary to ṣiddīqiyyah. Similarly, lying to Him in actions by adorning oneself with the guise of the truthful, the sincere, the ascetics, the reliant, while not truly being among them. Therefore, ṣiddīqiyyah is the perfection of sincerity, submission, and adherence to the report and the command, outwardly and inwardly, to the extent that the truthfulness of two contracting parties brings blessing to their transaction, and their falsehood eradicates the blessing of their transaction. As in the two Ṣaḥīḥs from Ḥakīm ibn Ḥizām, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said the Messenger of Allāh said: "The two parties to a transaction have the option (of cancelling) as long as they have not separated. If they are truthful and disclose (any defects), their transaction will be blessed for them. But if they lie and conceal, the blessing of their transaction will be eradicated."

Words on the Reality of Truthfulness:

‘Abd al-Wāḥid ibn Zayd said: "Truthfulness is fulfilling (one's obligations) to Allāh through action." It was said: "The alignment of the inner self with speech." It was said: "The congruence of the inner self and outward appearance," meaning that the outward appearance of a liar is better than his inner self, like the hypocrite whose exterior is better than his interior. It was said: "Truthfulness is speaking the truth in situations of peril." It was said: "A word of truth in the presence of one whom you fear and from whom you hope for benefit." Al-Junayd said: "The reality of truthfulness is to be truthful in a situation from which only falsehood can save you." It was said: "Three things do not miss the truthful: sweetness, gracefulness, and awe."

In a divine tradition: "Whoever is truthful with Me in his inner self, I will make him truthful in his outward appearance before My creation." Yūsuf ibn Asbāṭ said: "That I should spend a night dealing with Allāh with truthfulness is more beloved to me than striking with my sword in the path of Allāh."

Some said: "Whoever does not perform the perpetual obligation, the temporary obligation will not be accepted from him." It was asked, "What is the perpetual obligation?" He said, "Truthfulness." It was said: "Whoever seeks Allāh with truthfulness, He will give him a mirror in which he sees truth and falsehood." It was said: "Adhere to truthfulness where you fear it will harm you, for it will benefit you; and abandon falsehood where you think it will benefit you, for it will harm you." It was said: "A truthful merchant never becomes destitute."

From here, the truthful person is compelled by the utmost necessity to follow the command, submit to the Messenger in his outward and inward aspects, emulate him, and worship through obedience to him in every movement and stillness, with sincerity of intention for Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic. For Allāh Almighty is not pleased with His servant except for that. Anything other than this is nourishment for the self, mere gratification of its desires, and following its whims, even if it involves whatever austerities, spiritual exercises, and seclusions it may. For Allāh, Glorified and Exalted is He, has refused to accept any deed from His servant or be pleased with it until it is in accordance with the following of His Messenger, purely for His sake, Glorified is He.

Reliance (Tawakkul)

It is stated in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn: Allāh Almighty said: {And when the believers saw the confederates, they said, "This is what Allāh and His Messenger had promised us, and Allāh and His Messenger spoke the truth." And it increased them only in faith and submission.} (Al-Aḥzāb 33:22). And Allāh Almighty said: {Those to whom people said, "Indeed, the people have gathered against you, so fear them." But it [only] increased them in faith, and they said, "Sufficient for us is Allāh, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs." So they returned with favor from Allāh and bounty, no harm having Sū' (evil) touched them. And they followed the pleasure of Allāh, and Allāh is the possessor of great bounty.} (Āl 'Imrān 3:173-174).

And Allāh Almighty said: {And rely upon the Ever-Living who does not die.} (Al-Furqān 25:58). The verses commanding reliance are numerous and well-known.

From Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him and his family, said: "Nations were presented to me, and I saw a prophet with a small group, a prophet with one or two men, and a prophet with no one. Then a large multitude was shown to me, and I thought they were my nation. It was said to me, 'This is Mūsā and his people. But look to the horizon.' And there was a great multitude. It was said to me, 'Look to the other horizon.' And there was a great multitude. It was said to me, 'This is your nation, and with them are seventy thousand who will enter Paradise without reckoning or punishment.' Then he rose and entered his house. The people began to discuss those who would enter Paradise without reckoning or punishment. Some said, 'Perhaps they are those who accompanied the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him.' Others said, 'Perhaps they are those who were born in Islām and never associated anything with Allāh.' And they mentioned various things. Then the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, came out to them and said, 'What are you discussing?' They informed him. He said, 'They are those who do not seek ruqyah (incantation), nor have themselves cauterized, nor believe in omens, and upon their Lord they rely.' 'Ukāshah ibn Miḥṣan stood up and said, 'Pray to Allāh to make me one of them.' He said, 'You are one of them.' Then another man stood up and said, 'Pray to Allāh to make me one of them.' He said, 'Ukāshah has preceded you in this.' (Agreed upon).

From Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, also said: "Sufficient for us is Allāh, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs," was said by Ibrāhīm, peace be upon him, when he was thrown into the fire. And it was said by Muḥammad, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, when they said, "Indeed, the people have gathered against you, so fear them." But it [only] increased them in faith, and they said, "Sufficient for us is Allāh, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

From 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, say: "If you were to rely upon Allāh with true reliance, He would provide for you as He provides for the birds: they go out in the morning hungry and return in the evening full." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

We quote from what Ibn al-Qayyim said in Madārij al-Sālikīn (abridged):

Allāh Almighty said: {And upon Allāh rely, if you should be believers.} (Al-Mā'idah 5:23). And He said: {And upon Allāh let the believers rely.} (Ibrāhīm 14:11). And He said: {And whoever relies upon Allāh - then He is sufficient for him.} (Al-Ṭalāq 65:3). And He said about His allies: {Our Lord, upon You we have relied, and to You we have returned, and to You is the destination.} (Al-Mumtaḥanah 60:4). And He said about the companions of His Prophet: {Those to whom people said, "Indeed, the people have gathered against you, so fear them." But it [only] increased them in faith, and they said, "Sufficient for us is Allāh, and [He is] the best Disposer of affairs."} (Āl 'Imrān 3:173). And He said: {The believers are only those who, when Allāh is mentioned, their hearts become fearful, and when His verses are recited to them, it increases them in faith; and upon their Lord they rely.} (Al-Anfāl 8:2). The Qur'ān is full of this.

Reliance (Tawakkul) is half of the religion, and the other half is turning in repentance (inābah). For religion is seeking help and worship. So, reliance is seeking help, and turning in repentance is worship. Its station is the broadest and most comprehensive of stations, and it remains perpetually populated by those who alight there due to the vastness of what reliance pertains to and the multitude of the needs of all beings. The generality of reliance and its occurrence from believers and disbelievers, the righteous and the wicked, birds, wild animals, and livestock. So the inhabitants of the heavens and the earth, those who are accountable and those who are not, are in the station of reliance, even if the object of their reliance varies. His allies and His chosen ones rely on Him for the attainment of what He requires in faith, the victory of His religion, the exaltation of His word, Jihād against His enemies, and for what He loves and the implementation of His commands. Below these are those who rely on Him for their own steadfastness and the preservation of their state with Allāh, free from people. Below these are those who rely on Him for a known provision He grants them, such as sustenance, well-being, victory over an enemy, a spouse, or a child, and the like. And below these are those who rely on Him for committing sins and abominations, for the pursuers of these demands often do not attain them except by their seeking help from Allāh and their reliance upon Him. Indeed, their reliance may be stronger than the reliance of many of those who perform acts of obedience. This is why they throw themselves into perils and dangers, depending on Allāh to save them and grant them their demands.

So the best reliance is reliance in what is obligatory, meaning the obligation towards the Truth (Allāh), the obligation towards creation, and the obligation towards oneself. The broadest and most beneficial reliance is reliance in effecting external change for a religious benefit or in repelling a religious harm. This is the reliance of the prophets in establishing the religion of Allāh and repelling the corruption of those who cause corruption on earth, and this is the reliance of their inheritors.

Then, people after that vary in reliance according to their aspirations and objectives. Some rely on Allāh to obtain kingship, and some rely on Him to obtain a loaf of bread.

The Meaning of Reliance (Tawakkul), its Degrees, and What Has Been Said About It:

Imām Aḥmad said: "Reliance is an action of the heart. This means it is a cardiac action, not a statement of the tongue, nor an action of the limbs, nor is it from the realm of knowledge and perceptions."

Some interpret it as contentment, saying it is contentment with what is decreed. Bishr al-Ḥāfī said: "One of them says, 'I have relied on Allāh,' while he lies against Allāh. If he truly relied on Allāh, he would be content with what Allāh does."

Abū Turāb al-Nakhshabī said: "It is to cast the body into servitude, to attach the heart to Lordship, and to be tranquil in sufficiency. If given, he is thankful, and if denied, he is patient." So he made it a composite of five matters: performing the actions of servitude, attaching the heart to the Lord's management, being tranquil with His decree and predestination, being assured of His sufficiency for him, being thankful when given, and being patient when denied.

The people unanimously agree that reliance does not negate taking the means. Reliance is not sound except with taking them; otherwise, it is idleness and a corrupt form of reliance. Sahl ibn ‘Abd Allāh said: "Whoever criticizes movement (i.e., taking action) has criticized the Sunnah, and whoever criticizes reliance has criticized faith." Reliance is the state of the Prophet, and earning a living is his Sunnah. So whoever acts according to his state should not abandon his Sunnah. It was said: Reliance is cutting off the heart's attachments to other than Allāh. Sahl was asked about reliance, and he said: "A heart that lives with Allāh without attachment." Our Shaykh, may Allāh be pleased with him, used to say: "The decreed matter is encompassed by two things: reliance before it and contentment after it. So whoever relies on Allāh before the action and is content with what is decreed for him after the action has fulfilled servitude," or words to this effect. I say: This is the meaning of the Prophet's statement in the prayer of istikhārah: "O Allāh, I seek Your guidance by Your knowledge, and I seek Your power by Your might, and I ask You of Your great bounty." This is reliance and entrusting. Then he said: "For You know and I do not know, and You have power and I do not have power, and You are the Knower of the unseen." This is disavowal before Allāh of knowledge, might, and power, and seeking means through Him, Glorified is He, by His attributes, which are the most beloved means by which those who seek means appeal to Him. Then he asked his Lord to decree that matter for him if it contained benefit for him, sooner or later, and to turn it away from him if it contained harm for him, sooner or later. This is his need which he asked for. Nothing remained for him except contentment with what He decrees for him, so he said: "And decree for me good wherever it may be, then make me content with it."

Trustworthiness (Al-Amānah)

It is stated in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Allāh Almighty said: {Indeed, Allāh commands you to render trusts to whom they are due.} (Al-Nisā' 4:58). And Allāh Almighty said: {Indeed, We offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it; but man [undertook to] bear it. Indeed, he was unjust and ignorant.} (Al-Aḥzāb 33:72).

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "The signs of a hypocrite are three: when he speaks, he lies; when he promises, he breaks his promise; and when he is entrusted, he betrays." (Agreed upon). In another narration: "Even if he fasts, prays, and claims to be a Muslim."

From Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, narrated to us two ḥadīths. I have seen one of them, and I am awaiting the other. He narrated to us that trustworthiness (amānah) descended into the core of men's hearts. Then the Qur'ān was revealed, and they learned from the Qur'ān and learned from the Sunnah. Then he narrated to us about the removal of trustworthiness, saying: 'A man will go to sleep, and trustworthiness will be taken from his heart, and its trace will remain like a speck. Then he will go to sleep again, and trustworthiness will be taken from his heart, and its trace will remain like the trace of a blister, like an ember you roll over your foot, and it swells up, and you see it bulging, but there is nothing in it.' Then he took a pebble and rolled it on his foot. 'Then people will engage in transactions, and hardly anyone will fulfill the trust, until it is said, "Indeed, among the tribe of so-and-so, there is a trustworthy man." And it will be said of a man, "How strong he is, how charming he is, how intelligent he is!" while there is not even a mustard seed's weight of faith in his heart.' And indeed, a time came upon me when I did not care with whom among you I dealt. If he was a Muslim, his religion would compel him to return it to me. And if he was a Christian or a Jew, his governor would compel him to return it to me. But today,

I would not deal with any of you except so-and-so and so-and-so." (Agreed upon).

Modesty (Al-Ḥayā')

We quote from Madārij al-Sālikīn (abridged):

Allāh Almighty said: {Does he not know that Allāh sees?} (Al-ʿAlaq 96:14). And Allāh Almighty said: {Indeed, Allāh is ever, over you, an Observer.} (Al-Nisā' 4:1). And Allāh Almighty said: {He knows that which deceives the eyes and what the breasts conceal.} (Ghāfir 40:19).

In the Ṣaḥīḥ, from the ḥadīth of Ibn ʿUmar, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That the Messenger of Allāh passed by a man who was admonishing his brother regarding modesty, so he said, 'Leave him, for modesty is from faith.'"

In both (Ṣaḥīḥ al-Bukhārī and Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim), from ʿImrān ibn Ḥuṣayn, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh said: "Modesty brings nothing but good."

In both, from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, that he said: "Faith has seventy-odd branches or sixty-odd branches. The best of them is the statement, 'There is no god but Allāh,' and the least of them is removing a harmful thing from the road. And modesty is a branch of faith."

In both, from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh was more modest than a virgin in her seclusion. If he saw something he disliked, we would recognize it in his face."

In the Ṣaḥīḥ, from him: "Indeed, from the words of the first prophethood that people have received is: If you feel no shame, then do as you wish."

In al-Tirmidhī, marfūʿ (attributed to the Prophet): "Be truly modest before Allāh." They said, "We are modest, O Messenger of Allāh." He said, "That is not it. But whoever is truly modest before Allāh, let him guard the head and what it contains, let him guard the stomach and what it encompasses, and let him remember death and decay. And whoever desires the Hereafter leaves the adornment of this world. Whoever does that has been truly modest before Allāh."

Definition of Modesty (Ḥayā’):

Ḥayā’ is from ḥayāh (life), and from it is al-ḥayā for rain, but it is limited. According to the life of the heart, the strength of the quality of modesty exists within it. Lack of modesty stems from the death of the heart and soul. The more alive the heart, the more complete is modesty. Al-Junayd, may Allāh have mercy on him, said: "Ḥayā’ is seeing the blessings and seeing one's shortcomings, and between them, a state called ḥayā’ is generated. Its reality is a quality that incites one to abandon vile acts and prevents one from neglecting the right of the one who has a right."

From the words of some sages: "Revive modesty by associating with those from whom one feels shy. And the flourishing of the heart is with awe and modesty. If these two depart from the heart, no good remains in it."

In a divine tradition, Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, says: "Son of Ādam, as long as you are modest before Me, I will make people forget your faults, and I will make the regions of the earth forget your sins, and I will erase your slips from the Preserved Tablet. Otherwise, I will call you to account on the Day of Resurrection." In another tradition: "Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, revealed to ‘Īsā, peace and blessings be upon him: 'Admonish yourself. If you take heed, then be modest before Me to admonish people; otherwise, do not.'" Al-Fuḍayl ibn ‘Iyāḍ said: "Five are signs of wretchedness: hardness of the heart, dryness of the eyes, lack of modesty, desire for the world, and prolonged hope." In a divine tradition: "My servant has not been fair to Me. He calls upon Me, and I feel shy to refuse him, yet he disobeys Me and does not feel shy before Me."

Modesty has been divided into ten types: the modesty of transgression, the modesty of shortcoming, the modesty of reverence, the modesty of generosity, the modesty of decorum, the modesty of self-belittlement and self-contempt, the modesty of love, the modesty of servitude, the modesty of honor and dignity, and the modesty of one who feels shy of himself.

Guarding the Tongue

Al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Know that it is incumbent upon every accountable person to guard his tongue from all speech except speech in which a clear benefit appears. When speech and silence are equal in benefit, the Sunnah is to refrain from it. This is because permissible speech may lead to a prohibited or disliked act, and this is common in practice, and safety is unparalleled by anything.

And from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "Whoever believes in Allāh and the Last Day, let him speak good or remain silent." (Agreed upon). This ḥadīth is explicit that one should not speak unless the speech is good, which is that whose benefit is apparent. When one doubts the appearance of benefit, he should not speak.

And from Abū Mūsā, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, which of the Muslims is best?' He said, 'He from whose tongue and hand the Muslims are safe.'" (Agreed upon).

And from Sahl ibn Sa'd, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever guarantees for me what is between his two jaws and what is between his two legs, I will guarantee for him Paradise." (Agreed upon).

And from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, say: "Indeed, a servant may utter a word without thinking about it, by which he slips into the Fire further than the distance between the East and the West." (Agreed upon).

And from him, from the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "Indeed, a servant may utter a word that is pleasing to Allāh Almighty, to which he pays no attention, by which Allāh raises him degrees. And indeed, a servant may utter a word that incurs the wrath of Allāh Almighty, to which he pays no attention, by which he plummets into Hell." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

And from Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān Bilāl ibn al-Ḥārith al-Muzanī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Indeed, a man may speak a word of Allāh Almighty's pleasure, not thinking it would reach what it reached, by which Allāh records His pleasure for him until the Day he meets Him. And indeed, a man may speak a word of Allāh's wrath, not thinking it would reach what it reached, by which Allāh records His wrath for him until the Day he meets Him." (Narrated by Mālik in al-Muwatta' and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, sound ḥadīth).

And from Sufyān ibn 'Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, tell me something to which I can hold fast.' He said, 'Say, "My Lord is Allāh," then be steadfast.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what is the most dreadful thing you fear for me?' He took hold of his own tongue and then said, 'This.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, sound ḥadīth).

And from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Do not speak excessively without remembering Allāh, for excessive speech without remembering Allāh Almighty hardens the heart. And indeed, the furthest of people from Allāh is the hard-hearted one." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

And from ‘Uqbah ibn ‘Āmir, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what is salvation?' He said, 'Control your tongue, let your house suffice you, and weep over your sin.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good ḥadīth).

And from Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh’s prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "When the son of Ādam wakes up in the morning, all his limbs humble themselves before the tongue, saying, 'Fear Allāh concerning us, for we are only with you. If you are upright, we are upright, and if you are crooked, we are crooked.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī). The meaning of "tukaffiru al-lisān" is they submit and yield to it.

And from Mu‘ādh, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, inform me of a deed that will admit me to Paradise and distance me from the Fire.' He said, 'You have asked about something great, and indeed, it is easy for whom Allāh Almighty makes it easy. Worship Allāh, associating nothing with Him, establish prayer, give zakāh, fast Ramaḍān, and perform Ḥajj to the House if you are able to find a way to it.' Then he said, 'Shall I not guide you to the gates of goodness? Fasting is a shield. Charity extinguishes sin as water extinguishes fire. And the prayer of a man in the middle of the night.' Then he recited: {Their sides forsake their beds...} until he reached {...they used to do.} (Al-Sajdah 32:16-17). Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of the head of the matter, its pillar, and its pinnacle?' I said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.' He said, 'The head of the matter is Islām, its pillar is prayer, and its pinnacle is Jihād.' Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of what controls all of that?' I said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.' So he took hold of his tongue and said, 'Restrain this.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, will we be taken to account for what we speak?' He said, 'May your mother be bereaved of you! Are people thrown into the Fire on their faces except for the harvests of their tongues?'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, sound ḥadīth).

Certainty (Al-Yaqīn)

Ibn al-Qayyim said in Madārij al-Sālikīn:

The station of certainty: It is to faith as the soul is to the body. By it, the gnostics excel, for it the competitors compete, and towards it the diligent strive. The actions of the people were based upon it, and all their indications point to it. When patience is wedded to certainty, the attainment of leadership in religion is born between them. Allāh Almighty said, and by His word the guided are guided: {And We made from among them leaders guiding by Our command when they were patient and [when] they were certain of Our signs.} (Al-Sajdah 32:24).

He, Glorified is He, singled out the people of certainty for benefiting from signs and proofs, saying, and He is the most truthful of speakers: {And on the earth are signs for the certain [in faith].} (Al-Dhāriyāt 51:20). And He singled out the people of certainty for guidance and success from among all beings, saying: {And who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muḥammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain [in faith]. Those are upon [right] guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful.} (Al-Baqarah 2:4-5). And He informed about the people of the Fire that they were not among the people of certainty, as Allāh Almighty said: {And when it was said, 'Indeed, the promise of Allāh is truth, and the Hour [is coming] - no doubt about it,' you said, 'We do not know what the Hour is. We assume only an assumption, and we are not certain.'} (Al-Jāthiyah 45:32). So, certainty is the spirit of the actions of the hearts, which are the spirits of the actions of the limbs. It is the reality of ṣiddīqiyyah (intense truthfulness), and it is the pole of this affair around which it revolves. From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, from the Prophet, may Allāh’s prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "Do not seek to please anyone by incurring Allāh's displeasure, nor praise anyone for Allāh's bounty, nor blame anyone for what Allāh has not given you. For indeed, what Allāh has provided, the eagerness of an eager person will not bring it to you, nor will the dislike of a disliker repel it from you. And indeed, Allāh, by His justice and fairness, has placed tranquility and joy in contentment and certainty, and He has placed worry and grief in doubt and discontent."

Certainty is the companion of reliance (tawakkul), and for this reason, reliance has been interpreted as the strength of certainty. The correct view is that reliance is its fruit and result. This is why it is good to pair guidance with it. Allāh Almighty said: {So rely upon Allāh; indeed, you are upon the clear truth.} (Al-Naml 27:79). Truth here is certainty. The Messengers of Allāh said: {And why should we not rely upon Allāh while He has guided us to our ways?} (Ibrāhīm 14:12). When certainty reaches the heart, it fills with light and radiance, and every doubt, uncertainty, discontent, worry, and grief is dispelled from it. So it fills with love for Allāh, fear of Him, contentment with Him, gratitude to Him, reliance upon Him, and turning to Him in repentance. It is the substance of all stations and that which carries them. It has been differed upon whether it is acquired (kasbī) or gifted (mawhibī). It was said: It is knowledge deposited in the hearts, indicating it is not acquired. Sahl said: Certainty is from the increase of faith, and there is no doubt that faith is acquired. The verification is: it is acquired concerning its means, and gifted concerning itself and its essence. According to the people (scholars/Sufis): Certainty does not reside in a heart wherein there is tranquility towards anything other than Allāh. Dhū al-Nūn said: Certainty calls for shortening hope, and shortening hope calls for asceticism (zuhd), and asceticism bequeaths wisdom, which bequeaths consideration of consequences. He said: Three are among the signs of certainty: little association with people in social interaction, abandoning praise for them for gifts, and refraining from blaming them when denied. Three are also among its signs: looking to Allāh in everything, returning to Him in every matter, and seeking His help in every situation. Al-Junayd said: Certainty is the establishment of knowledge that does not revert, does not change, and does not alter in the heart. Ibn ‘Aṭā’ said: According to their nearness to piety (taqwā), they attain certainty. The basis of piety is avoiding prohibitions, which is avoiding the self. So, according to their detachment from the self, they attain certainty. Abū Bakr al-Warrāq said: Certainty is the mainstay of the heart, and by it, faith is perfected. By certainty, Allāh is known, and by reason, one comprehends from Allāh.

Al-Nahrajūrī said: When the servant perfects the realities of certainty, affliction becomes a blessing for him, and ease becomes a calamity for him.

Patience (Al-Ṣabr)

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Imām Aḥmad, may Allāh Almighty have mercy on him, said: Patience is mentioned in the Qur’ān in about ninety places. It is obligatory by the consensus of the Ummah, and it is half of faith, for faith is two halves: half patience and half gratitude. It is mentioned in the Qur’ān in sixteen types:

First: The command for it, such as His Almighty’s saying: {O you who have believed, seek help through patience and prayer.} (Al-Baqarah 2:153), and His saying: {Be patient and vie in patience.} (Āl ‘Imrān 3:200), and His saying: {And be patient, and your patience is not but through Allāh.} (Al-Naḥl 16:127).

Second: The prohibition of its opposite, such as His saying: {So be patient, as were those of determination among the messengers and do not be impatient for them.} (Al-Aḥqāf 46:35), for weakness (wahn) stems from a lack of patience.

Third: Praise for its people, such as His Almighty’s saying: {The patient, the truthful.} (Āl ‘Imrān 3:17), and His saying: {And the patient in poverty and hardship and during battle. Those are the ones who have been true, and it is those who are the righteous.} (Al-Baqarah 2:177). This is frequent in the Qur’ān.

Fourth: His, Glorified is He, declaration of His love for them, such as His saying: {And Allāh loves the patient.} (Āl ‘Imrān 3:146).

Fifth: His declaration of His accompaniment (ma'iyah) with them, which is a special accompaniment that includes their protection, support, and aid, not the general accompaniment of knowledge and encompassment, such as His saying: {And be patient. Indeed, Allāh is with the patient.} (Al-Anfāl 8:46), and His saying: {And Allāh is with the patient.} (Al-Baqarah 2:249).

Sixth: His informing that patience is better for its adherents, such as His saying: {And if you are patient - it is better for those who are patient.} (Al-Naḥl 16:126), and His saying: {But if you are patient - it is better for you.} (Al-Nisā' 4:25).

Seventh: His decree of reward for them with the best of their deeds, such as His Almighty's saying: {And We will surely reward those who were patient according to the best of what they used to do.} (Al-Naḥl 16:96).

Eighth: His, Glorified is He, decree of reward for them without account, such as His Almighty's saying: {Indeed, the patient will be given their reward without account.} (Al-Zumar 39:10).

Ninth: The giving of good tidings to the people of patience, such as His Almighty's saying: {And We will surely test you with something of fear and hunger and a loss of wealth and lives and fruits, but give good tidings to the patient.} (Al-Baqarah 2:155).

Tenth: The guarantee of victory and support for them, such as His Almighty's saying: {Yes, if you remain patient and conscious of Allāh and they [the enemy] come upon you [attacking] in rage, your Lord will reinforce you with five thousand angels having marks [of distinction].} (Āl 'Imrān 3:125). And from this is the saying of the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him: "And know that victory comes with patience."

Eleventh: His, Almighty, informing that the people of patience are the people of firm resolve, such as His Almighty's saying: {And whoever is patient and forgives - indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination.} (Al-Shūrā 42:43).

Twelfth: His informing that righteous deeds, their reward, and great fortunes are only attained by the people of patience, such as His Almighty's saying: {Woe to you! The reward of Allāh is better for those who believe and do righteousness. And none are granted it except the patient.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ 28:80), and His saying: {But none is granted it except those who are patient, and none is granted it except one having a great portion [of good fortune].} (Fuṣṣilat 41:35).

Thirteenth: His informing that only the people of patience benefit from signs and lessons, such as His Almighty's saying to Mūsā: {“Bring out your people from darknesses into the light and remind them of the days of Allāh.” Indeed in that are signs for everyone patient and grateful.} (Ibrāhīm 14:5), and His saying about the people of Saba': {So We made them narrations and dispersed them in [complete] dispersal. Indeed in that are signs for everyone patient and grateful.} (Saba' 34:19). And His saying in Sūrat al-Shūrā: {And of His signs are the ships in the sea, like mountains. If He wills, He calms the wind, and they remain motionless on its surface. Indeed in that are signs for everyone patient and grateful.} (Al-Shūrā 42:32-33).

Fourteenth: His informing that the desired and beloved success, salvation from the disliked and feared, and entry into Paradise were attained by them through patience, such as His Almighty's saying: {And the angels will enter upon them from every gate, [saying], "Peace be upon you for what you patiently endured. And excellent is the final home."} (Al-Ra'd 13:23-24).

Fifteenth: That it bequeaths its possessor the rank of leadership (imāmah). I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh sanctify his soul, say: "Through patience and certainty, leadership in religion is attained." Then he recited His Almighty's saying: {And We made from among them leaders guiding by Our command when they were patient and [when] they were certain of Our signs.} (Al-Sajdah 32:24).

Sixteenth: Its association with the stations of Islām and faith, as Allāh, Glorified is He, associated it with certainty, faith, piety (taqwā), reliance (tawakkul), gratitude, righteous deeds, and mercy. For this reason, patience is to faith as the head is to the body; there is no faith for one who has no patience, just as there is no body for one who has no head. ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "The best life we attained was through patience." The Prophet, in the authentic ḥadīth, informed that it is a light and said: "Whoever strives to be patient, Allāh will make him patient." In the authentic ḥadīth: "Wondrous is the affair of the believer, for all his affair is good for him, and this is not for anyone except the believer. If prosperity attends him, he expresses gratitude, and that is good for him; and if adversity befalls him, he endures patiently, and that is good for him." He said to the black woman who used to suffer from epilepsy and asked him to pray for her: "If you wish, be patient, and you will have Paradise; and if you wish, I will pray to Allāh to cure you." She said, "I become uncovered, so pray to Allāh that I do not become uncovered." So he prayed for her. He commanded the Anṣār, may Allāh Almighty be pleased with them, to be patient with the preference (ātharah) they would encounter after him until they meet him at the Pool (Ḥawḍ). He commanded patience when encountering the enemy. He commanded patience at the time of calamity and informed that it is indeed at the first shock. He commanded the afflicted with what is most beneficial for him, which is patience and seeking reward (iḥtisāb), for that alleviates his calamity and increases his reward. Impatience, discontent, and complaining increase the calamity and remove the reward. He informed that patience is entirely good, saying: "No one is given a gift better and more encompassing than patience."

Definition of Patience:

Patience (al-ṣabr) in language means to restrain and withhold. From it is "qutila fulān ṣabran" (so-and-so was killed by ṣabr), meaning he was held and restrained. And from it is His Almighty's saying: {And keep yourself patient [by being] with those who call upon their Lord in the morning and the evening, seeking His countenance.} (Al-Kahf 18:28), meaning restrain yourself with them.

So, patience is: restraining the soul from impatience and discontent, restraining the tongue from complaint, and restraining the limbs from agitation.

It is of three types:

Patience in obedience to Allāh. Patience from disobedience to Allāh. Patience upon the trials of Allāh. The first two are patience related to what involves one's earning (kasb), and the third is patience upon what the servant has no earning in. I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh sanctify his soul, say: "Yūsuf's patience in refraining from complying with the wife of al-ʿAzīz in her affair was more complete than his patience when his brothers threw him into the well, sold him, and separated him from his father. For these were matters that occurred to him without his choice, in which he had no earning. The servant has no recourse in them but patience. As for his patience from disobedience, it was patience of choice, contentment, and warring against the self, especially with the factors that strengthen the motives for compliance. For he was young, and the drive of youth towards it is strong. He was unmarried, having nothing to compensate him or curb his desire. He was a stranger, and a stranger does not feel shy in the land of his estrangement from what one feels shy of among his companions, acquaintances, and family. He was a slave, and a slave also does not have the same deterrent as a free man. The woman was beautiful and of high status, and she was his mistress. The overseer was absent, and she was the one inviting him to herself and extremely keen on that. Despite that, she threatened him with prison and humiliation if he did not comply. With all these motives, he was patient by choice, preferring what is with Allāh. How does this compare to his patience in the well over what was not of his earning?" He used to say: "Patience in performing acts of obedience is more complete than patience in refraining from prohibitions and is more virtuous, for the benefit of performing an act of obedience is more beloved to the Legislator than the benefit of abandoning disobedience. And the harm of not performing an act of obedience is more detestable and disliked by Him than the harm of committing disobedience." He, may Allāh have mercy on him, has a work on this in which he established it with about twenty arguments, which this is not the place to mention. The intention is to speak about patience, its reality, its degrees, and its rank. And Allāh is the Giver of success.

Types of Patience:

It is of three types: patience by Allāh, patience for Allāh, and patience with Allāh.

The first: It is primarily seeking His help and seeing that He is the One who grants patience, and that the servant's patience is by his Lord, not by himself, as Allāh Almighty said: {And be patient, and your patience is not but through Allāh.} (Al-Naḥl 16:127). Meaning, if He does not make you patient, you will not be patient.

The second: Patience for Allāh. This is when the motive for patience is the love of Allāh, the desire for His countenance, and seeking closeness to Him, not for showing strength of soul, seeking praise from creation, or other such objectives.

The third: Patience with Allāh. This is the servant's revolving with Allāh's religious will for him and with His religious rulings, keeping his soul patient with them, proceeding with their course, staying where they stay, turning with them wherever their mounts turn, and alighting with them wherever their encampments are established. This is the meaning of his being patient with Allāh, meaning he has dedicated himself to His commands and His beloved things. This is the most severe and difficult type of patience. It is the patience of the ṣiddīqīn (the intensely truthful). Al-Junayd said: "The journey from this world to the Hereafter is easy and simple for the believer. Forsaking creation for the sake of Allāh is difficult. The journey from the self to Allāh is arduously difficult. And patience with Allāh is the most difficult." He was asked about patience and said: "Swallowing bitterness without frowning." Dhū al-Nūn al-Miṣrī said: "Patience is distancing oneself from transgressions, remaining calm when swallowing the pangs of calamity, and displaying richness when poverty befalls one's means of livelihood." It was said:

"Patience is standing with affliction with good manners." It was said: "It is annihilation in affliction without display or complaint." It was said: "Accustoming the soul to face adversities." It was said: "Remaining with affliction with good companionship, like remaining with well-being." 'Amr ibn 'Uthmān said: "It is steadfastness with Allāh and receiving His affliction with welcome and ease." Al-Khawwāṣ said: "It is steadfastness upon the rulings of the Book and the Sunnah."

It was said: "Patience is seeking help from Allāh." It was said: "Patience is like its name (ṣabr also means aloe, which is bitter), bitter in taste, but its consequences are sweeter than honey." It was said: "Patience is to be content with the perishing of your soul for the pleasure of the one you love," as it was said: "I will be patient so that you may be pleased, and I will perish in sorrow; it is enough for me that you are pleased and my patience destroys me." It was said: The ranks of the patient are five: ṣābir (patient), muṣṭabir (one who endeavors to be patient and is filled with it), mutaṣabbir (one who forces himself to be patient), ṣabūr (one who is greatly patient, whose patience is more intense than that of others), and ṣabbār (one who is exceedingly patient). The ṣābir is the most general. The muṣṭabir is one who acquires patience and is filled with it. The mutaṣabbir is one who burdens himself with it, forcing himself to it. The ṣabūr is one of great patience, whose patience is more severe than that of others. The ṣabbār is one of abundant patience; this is in quantity and amount, while the one before it is in quality and manner. 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Patience is a mount that does not stumble."

It was said concerning His Almighty's saying: {Be patient and vie in patience and be steadfast (rābiṭū).} (Āl 'Imrān 3:200), that it is a progression from the lower to the higher. Patience (ṣabr) is less than vying in patience (muṣābarah), and vying in patience is less than steadfastness (murābaṭah). Murābaṭah is a reciprocal form from rabṭ, which means to tie or bind. The murābiṭ (one who is steadfast/guards the frontier) is so called because the murābiṭūn tie their horses, awaiting the alarm.

Then, it was said for every expectant person who has bound himself to an act of obedience he awaits, that he is a murābiṭ. From this is the Prophet's saying: "Shall I not inform you of that by which Allāh erases sins and elevates ranks? Performing ablution thoroughly despite difficulties, taking many steps to the mosques, and waiting for prayer after prayer. That is the ribāṭ, that is the ribāṭ." And he said: "A day of ribāṭ in the path of Allāh is better than the world and what is in it." It was said: "Be patient with your souls in obedience to Allāh, vie in patience with your hearts in affliction for Allāh, and be steadfast with your inner selves in longing for Allāh." It was said: "Be patient in Allāh, vie in patience by Allāh, and be steadfast with Allāh." It was said: "Be patient in times of blessing, vie in patience in times of hardship and adversity, be steadfast in the land of enemies, and fear the God of the earth and the sky, so that you may succeed in the Abode of Permanence."

In al-Bukhārī's book of Adab (Manners): "The Messenger of Allāh was asked about faith, and he said: 'Patience and magnanimity.'" This is among the most comprehensive and greatest statements in proof, and the most encompassing of the stations of faith from beginning to end. For the soul is required to do two things: to offer what it has been commanded and to give it, for which the impetus is magnanimity; and to abandon what it has been forbidden and to stay away from it, for which the impetus is patience. Allāh, Glorified and Exalted is He, has commanded in His Book beautiful patience, beautiful forbearance, and beautiful desertion. I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh sanctify his soul, say: "Beautiful patience is that in which there is no complaint, nor with it. Beautiful forbearance is that with which there is no reproach. And beautiful desertion is that with which there is no harm." Ibn 'Uyaynah said concerning His Almighty's saying: {And We made from among them leaders guiding by Our command when they were patient.} (Al-Sajdah 32:24), he said: "They took hold of the head of the matter, so He made them leaders."

Complaining to Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, does not negate patience. For Ya‘qūb, peace be upon him, promised beautiful patience, and when a prophet promises, he does not break his promise. Then he said: {I only complain of my suffering and my grief to Allāh.} (Yūsuf 12:86). Likewise, Ayyūb, Allāh informed about him that He found him patient, despite his saying: {Indeed, adversity has touched me, and you are the most merciful of the merciful.} (Al-Anbiyā’ 21:83). What negates patience is complaining about Allāh, not complaining to Allāh. As one of them saw a man complaining to another of poverty and hardship, he said, "O this one, you complain of He who is merciful to you to one who is not merciful to you." Then he recited:

If a calamity befalls you, then bear it patiently,
The patience of the noble, for He is more knowledgeable of you.
And if you complain to the son of Ādam, indeed you only Complain of the Merciful to one who does not show mercy.

Generosity (Al-Karam)

Imām al-Nawawī said in his book Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Chapter on Generosity, Munificence, and Spending in Ways of Goodness, Trusting in Allāh Almighty:

Allāh Almighty said: {And whatever you spend of anything - He will replace it.} (Saba’ 34:39). And Allāh Almighty said: {And whatever good you spend is for yourselves. And you do not spend except seeking the countenance of Allāh. And whatever good you spend will be fully repaid to you, and you will not be wronged.} (Al-Baqarah 2:272). And Allāh Almighty said: {And whatever good you spend - indeed, Allāh is Knowing of it.} (Al-Baqarah 2:273).

From Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh’s prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "There is no envy except in two cases: a man whom Allāh has given wealth and empowered him to spend it in the way of truth, and a man whom Allāh has given wisdom, and he judges by it and teaches it." (Agreed upon). Its meaning is that no one should be envied except for one of these two qualities.

From him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "To which of you is the wealth of his heir dearer than his own wealth?" They said, "O Messenger of Allāh, there is none among us except that his own wealth is dearer to him." He said, "Then his wealth is what he has sent forth, and the wealth of his heir is what he has left behind." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

From 'Adī ibn Ḥātim, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Protect yourselves from the Fire, even with half a date." (Agreed upon).

From Jābir, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, was never asked for anything and said, 'No.'" (Agreed upon).

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "There is no day on which the servants wake up but two angels descend. One of them says, 'O Allāh, give compensation to the spender.' And the other says, 'O Allāh, bring ruin to the withholder.'" (Agreed upon).

From him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Allāh Almighty said, 'Spend, O son of Ādam, and I will spend on you.'" (Agreed upon).

From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-'Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That a man asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, 'Which Islām is best?' He said, 'To feed others and to greet with salām those you know and those you do not know.'" (Agreed upon).

From him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "There are forty characteristics, the highest of which is the gift of a milking goat. There is no one who performs one of these characteristics, hoping for its reward and believing in its promise, but Allāh Almighty will admit him to Paradise thereby." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

From Abū Umāmah Ṣudayy ibn 'Ajlān, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "O son of Ādam, if you spend the surplus, it is better for you; and if you withhold it, it is worse for you. You are not blamed for (keeping) what is sufficient. And begin with those whom you support. And the upper hand is better than the lower hand." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, was never asked for anything for the sake of Islām but he gave it. A man came to him, and he gave him sheep between two mountains. He returned to his people and said, 'O my people, embrace Islām, for Muḥammad gives a gift like one who does not fear poverty.' And if a man embraced Islām wanting only the world, he would not remain long before Islām became more beloved to him than the world and all that is in it." (Narrated by Muslim).

From 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, distributed something. I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, others besides these were more deserving of it than them.' He said, 'They gave me the choice: either they would ask me importunately, and I would give them, or they would call me miserly, and I am not miserly.'" (Narrated by Muslim).

From Jubayr ibn Muṭ'īm, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "While he was traveling with the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, on his return from Ḥunayn, the Bedouins clung to him, asking him, until they forced him to a samurah tree, and it snatched his cloak. The Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, stopped and said, 'Give me back my cloak. If I had camels equal to the number of these thorny trees, I would divide them among you. Then you would not find me miserly, nor a liar, nor a coward.'" (Narrated by al-Bukhārī). "Maqfalahu" means during his return. "Al-samurah" is a tree, and "al-ʿiḍāh" are thorny trees.

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Charity does not decrease wealth. Allāh does not increase a servant in forgiveness except in honor. And no one humbles himself for Allāh except that Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, raises him." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Abū Kabshah ʿAmr ibn Saʿd al-Anmārī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, say: "There are three things for which I swear an oath, and I will narrate a ḥadīth to you, so preserve it: The wealth of a servant is not decreased by charity. No servant is wronged in an injustice and bears it patiently but Allāh increases him in honor. And no servant opens a door of begging but Allāh opens for him a door of poverty," or a similar phrase. "And I will narrate a ḥadīth to you, so preserve it. He said: 'The world is for four types of people: A servant whom Allāh has provided with wealth and knowledge, so he fears his Lord concerning it, maintains his family ties with it, and knows Allāh's right in it – this one is in the best of stations. A servant whom Allāh has provided with knowledge but not with wealth, and he is sincere in his intention, saying, 'If I had wealth, I would do with it as so-and-so does.' He is (rewarded according to) his intention, so their reward is equal. A servant whom Allāh has provided with wealth but not with knowledge, so he misuses his wealth without knowledge, not fearing his Lord concerning it, nor maintaining his family ties with it, nor knowing Allāh's right in it – this one is in the worst of stations. And a servant whom Allāh has not provided with wealth nor knowledge, and he says, 'If I had wealth, I would do with it as so-and-so does (i.e., the one in the worst station)." He is (judged by) his intention, so their burden (of sin) is equal.'" (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, sound ḥadīth).

From 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that they slaughtered a sheep. The Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "What remains of it?" She said, "Nothing remains of it except its shoulder." He said, "All of it remains except its shoulder." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a sound ḥadīth). Its meaning is: they gave it all in charity except its shoulder, so he said, "It remains for us in the Hereafter, except its shoulder."

From Asmā' bint Abī Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, may Allāh be pleased with them both, she said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said to me: "Do not tie up (your money bag), lest Allāh tie up (His blessings) from you." In another narration: "Spend, or give freely, or donate, and do not count, lest Allāh count against you. And do not hoard, lest Allāh hoard from you." (Agreed upon). "Anfiḥī" with an un-dotted ḥā' means the same as "anfiqī" (spend), and so does "anḍiḥī."

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, say: "The likeness of the miser and the spender is like that of two men wearing iron coats of mail from their chests to their collarbones. As for the spender, he does not spend anything but it expands or covers his skin until it hides his fingertips and effaces his tracks. As for the miser, he does not want to spend anything but every ring sticks in its place, so he tries to widen it, but it does not widen." (Agreed upon).

"Al-jubbah" is the coat of mail. Its meaning is that whenever the spender spends, it (the coat of mail, symbolizing blessings) expands and lengthens until it drags behind him and hides his feet and the trace of his walking and his steps.

From him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever gives in charity the equivalent of a date from good earnings – and Allāh accepts only that which is good – Allāh accepts it with His Right Hand and then nurtures it for its owner as one of you nurtures his foal, until it becomes like a mountain." (Agreed upon).

"Al-falw" with a fatḥah on the fā', a ḍammah on the lām, and a shaddah on the wāw; it is also said with a kasrah on the fā', a sukūn on the lām, and a light wāw. It means a foal.

From him, from the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "While a man was walking in a desert, he heard a voice in a cloud, 'Water the garden of so-and-so.' That cloud moved aside and emptied its water into a ḥarrah (volcanic stony tract). A channel from those channels collected all that water. He followed the water and found a man standing in his garden, diverting the water with his spade. He said to him, 'O servant of Allāh, what is your name?' He said, 'So-and-so' – the name he had heard in the cloud. He said to him, 'O servant of Allāh, why do you ask me my name?' He said, 'I heard a voice in the cloud from which this water came, saying, 'Water the garden of so-and-so" – for your name. What do you do with it?' He said, 'Since you have said this, I look at what comes out of it, give one-third in charity, my family and I eat one-third, and I reinvest one-third in it.'" (Narrated by Muslim).

"Al-ḥarrah" is land covered with black stones. "Al-sharjah" with a fatḥah on the shīn, a sukūn on the rā', and with a jīm, is a watercourse.

Contentment, Chastity, Moderation in Living, and Condemnation of Asking Without Necessity

Al-Nawawī said in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Allāh Almighty said: {And there is no creature on earth but that upon Allāh is its provision.} (Hūd 11:6). And Allāh Almighty said: {For the poor who have been restricted for the cause of Allāh, unable to move about in the land. An ignorant [person] would think them rich because of their anstinence. You know them by their mark; they do not ask people persistently.} (Al-Baqarah 2:273). And Allāh Almighty said: {And [they are] those who, when they spend, do so not excessively or sparingly but are ever, between that, [justly] moderate.} (Al-Furqān 25:67). And Allāh Almighty said: {And I did not create the jinn and mankind except to worship Me. I do not want from them any provision, nor do I want them to feed Me.} (Al-Dhāriyāt 51:56-57).

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "Richness is not in the abundance of possessions, but richness is the richness of the soul." (Agreed upon).

From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "He has succeeded who embraces Islām, is provided with sustenance that is sufficient, and Allāh makes him content with what He has given him." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Ḥakīm ibn Ḥizām, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, and he gave me. Then I asked him, and he gave me. Then I asked him, and he gave me. Then he said, 'O Ḥakīm, this wealth is green and sweet. Whoever takes it with generosity of soul, it will be blessed for him. And whoever takes it with an expectant soul, it will not be blessed for him, and he will be like one who eats but is not satisfied. And the upper hand is better than the lower hand.' Ḥakīm said, 'So I said, "O Messenger of Allāh, by Him Who sent you with the truth, I will not take anything from anyone after you until I depart from this world."'" Abū Bakr, may Allāh be pleased with him, used to call Ḥakīm to give him his share of the spoils, but he would refuse to accept anything from him. Then 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, called him to give him, but he refused to accept it. So 'Umar said, 'O assembly of Muslims, I call you to witness regarding Ḥakīm that I am offering him his right which Allāh has allotted him from this fay' (spoils), but he refuses to take it.' So Ḥakīm did not take anything from anyone after the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, until he died." (Agreed upon).

"Yarza'u" with a rā', then a zāy, then a hamzah, means he did not take anything from anyone. The origin of "al-ruz" is decrease, meaning he did not decrease anyone by taking from him. "Ishrāf al-nafs" is its looking forward to and coveting something. "Sakhāwat al-nafs" is not looking forward to something, not coveting it, not caring about it, and not being greedy for it.

From Abū Burdah, from Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "We went out with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, on an expedition, and we were six men with one camel between us, taking turns riding it. Our feet became sore, my feet became sore, and my toenails fell off. So we used to wrap rags around our feet. Thus, it was named the Expedition of Dhāt al-Riqā' (the one with rags) because of the rags we used to tie around our feet." Abū Burdah said, "So Abū Mūsā narrated this ḥadīth, then he disliked doing so and said, 'What was I doing by mentioning it?' He said, 'It was as if he disliked that any of his deeds should be disclosed.'" (Agreed upon).

From 'Amr ibn Taghlib, may Allāh be pleased with him: "That the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, was brought some wealth or captives, and he distributed it. He gave to some men and left others. It reached him that those who were left were resentful. So he praised Allāh and lauded Him, then said, 'As for what follows, by Allāh, I give to a man and leave a man, and the one I leave is more beloved to me than the one I give. But I only give to some people because of what I see in their hearts of anxiety and impatience, and I entrust other people to the richness and goodness that Allāh has placed in their hearts, among them 'Amr ibn Taghlib.'" 'Amr ibn Taghlib said, 'By Allāh, I would not love to have red camels in exchange for the words of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him.'" (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

From Ḥakīm ibn Ḥizām, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "The upper hand is better than the lower hand. Start with those whom you support. And the best charity is that which is given when one is rich (i.e., has enough for oneself). Whoever seeks to be chaste, Allāh will make him chaste. And whoever seeks to be self-sufficient, Allāh will make him self-sufficient." (Agreed upon).

From Sufyān Ṣakhr ibn Ḥarb, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Do not be importunate in asking. By Allāh, no one among you asks me for something, and his asking extracts something from me while I am unwilling to give it, that he will be blessed in what I have given him." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān 'Awf ibn Mālīk al-Ashja'ī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "We were with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, nine, or eight, or seven of us. He said, 'Will you not pledge allegiance to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him?' We had recently pledged allegiance, so we said, 'We have already pledged allegiance to you, O Messenger of Allāh.' Then he said, 'Will you not pledge allegiance to the Messenger of Allāh?' So we extended our hands and said, 'We have pledged allegiance to you, O Messenger of Allāh. Upon what shall we pledge allegiance to you?' He said, 'That you worship Allāh and do not associate anything with Him, (perform) the five prayers, and obey.' And he whispered a word softly, 'And do not ask people for anything.' I indeed saw some of those individuals; if the whip of one of them fell, he would not ask anyone to hand it to him." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Begging will not cease with one of you until he meets Allāh Almighty with no piece of flesh on his face." (Agreed upon).

"Al-muz'ah" with a ḍammah on the mīm, a sukūn on the zāy, and with an un-dotted 'ayn, means a piece.

From him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said while he was on the pulpit and mentioned charity and refraining from begging: "The upper hand is better than the lower hand." (Agreed upon). The upper hand is the one that gives, and the lower hand is the one that asks.

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever asks people to amass wealth is only asking for embers, so let him ask for little or much." (Narrated by Muslim).

From Samurah ibn Jundub, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him and his family, said: "Indeed, asking is a scratch with which a man scratches his face, unless a man asks a ruler or for something that is unavoidable." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, sound ḥadīth). "Al-kadd" means a scratch and the like.

From Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever is afflicted by poverty and refers it to people, his poverty will not be alleviated. And whoever refers it to Allāh, Allāh will soon grant him provision, sooner or later." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good ḥadīth).

From Thawbān, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever guarantees for me that he will not ask people for anything, I will guarantee for him Paradise." I said, "I will." So he never used to ask anyone for anything. (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd with a sound chain).

From Abū Bishr Qabiṣah ibn al-Mukhāriq, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I had incurred a debt (ḥamālah), so I came to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, asking him about it. He said, 'Stay until charity comes to us, and we will order some for you.' Then he said, 'O Qabīṣah, asking is not permissible except for one of three: a man who has incurred a debt (ḥamālah), so asking is permissible for him until he obtains it, then he stops. A man who is struck by a calamity that destroys his wealth, so asking is permissible for him until he obtains a means of livelihood,' or he said, 'a sufficiency of livelihood.' 'And a man who is afflicted by poverty until three intelligent men from his people say, "So-and-so has been afflicted by poverty," so asking is permissible for him until he obtains a means of livelihood,' or he said, 'a sufficiency of livelihood.' 'Anything other than these forms of asking, O Qabīṣah, is suḥt (unlawful gain), which its owner consumes as suḥt.'"

(Narrated by Muslim). "Al-ḥamālah" with a fatḥah on the ḥā' is when fighting or the like occurs between two groups, and a person reconciles between them for a sum of money which he bears and commits himself to. "Al-jā'ihah" is a calamity that affects a person's wealth. "Al-qawām" with a kasrah or fatḥah on the qāf is what sustains a person's affair, such as wealth and the like. "Al-sadād" with a kasrah on the sīn is what meets the need of the destitute and suffices him. "Al-fāqah" is poverty. "Al-ḥijā" is intellect.

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "The poor person (miskīn) is not the one who goes around to people and is turned away by a morsel or two, or a date or two. But the poor person is the one who does not find enough wealth to suffice him, nor is he recognized so that charity may be given to him, nor does he stand up and ask people." (Agreed upon).

From Abū 'Abd Allāh al-Zubayr ibn al-'Awwām, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "For one of you to take his ropes, then go to the mountain and come with a bundle of firewood on his back and sell it, so that Allāh thereby preserves his dignity, is better for him than asking people, whether they give him or refuse him." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

From al-Miqdām ibn Ma'dikarib, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said: "No one has ever eaten food better than that which he eats from the labor of his own hand. And indeed, the Prophet of Allāh Dāwūd, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, used to eat from the labor of his own hand." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

Altruism (Al-Īthār)

His Almighty's saying: {And they prefer [others] over themselves, even though they are in privation.} (Al-Ḥashr 59:9).

From Abū Hurayrah, he said: "A man came to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, and said, 'I am exhausted and in need.' So he sent to one of his wives, and she said, 'By Him Who sent you with the truth, I have nothing but water.' Then he sent to another, and she said the same, until all of them said the same: 'No, by Him Who sent you with the truth, I have nothing but water.' He said, 'Who will host this man tonight, may Allāh have mercy on him?' A man from the Anṣār stood up and said, 'I will, O Messenger of Allāh.' He went with him to his home and said to his wife, 'Do you have anything?' She said, 'No, except the food for my children.' He said, 'Distract them with something. When our guest enters, extinguish the lamp and make it seem as if we are eating. When he reaches for food, go to the lamp as if to fix it and extinguish it.' He said, 'So they sat, and the guest ate. When morning came, he went to the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, who said, 'Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, was amazed by your deed with your guest last night.'"

- Ibn 'Umar said: "A sheep's head was gifted to a man from the companions of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him. He said, 'My brother so-and-so and his family are more in need of this than us.' So he sent it to them. It continued to be sent from one to another until it circulated among seven households and returned to the first one. Then it was revealed: {And they prefer [others] over themselves}."

- Ibn 'Abbās said the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said to the Anṣār on the day of Banū al-Naḍīr: "If you wish, your homes and properties will remain yours, and we will not give you any share of the spoils." The Anṣār said, "Rather, we will share our homes and properties with our brothers and prefer them with the spoils." Then it was revealed: {And they prefer [others] over themselves}." The first narration is more authentic.
- Altruism (īthār) is to prefer others over oneself and one's worldly fortunes, out of a desire for religious rewards. This arises from strength of certainty, firm love, and patience in hardship. It is said, "āthartuhu bi kadhā," meaning "I singled him out with it and preferred him." The object of altruism is omitted, meaning they prefer them over themselves with their wealth and homes, not out of richness but despite their need for them, as previously explained.
- In Mālik's Muwaṭṭa': "It reached him from 'Ā'ishah, the wife of the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, that a poor man asked her while she was fasting, and there was nothing in her house except a loaf of bread. She said to her maidservant, 'Give it to him.' The maidservant said, 'You have nothing to break your fast with.' She said, 'Give it to him.' She said, 'So I did.' She said, 'When evening came, a household or a person who used to send us gifts sent us a sheep and its shroud.' 'Ā'ishah called me and said, 'Eat from this, for this is better than your loaf.'" Our scholars said: This is from profitable wealth and a pure deed. Then Allāh Almighty hastens from it what He wills, and that does not diminish what is stored for him. Whoever leaves something for Allāh will not find its loss. And ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, in this act of hers, is among those whom Allāh praised for preferring others over themselves despite the privation they were in, and that whoever does so has been protected from the stinginess of his soul and has succeeded with a success after which there is no loss.

- Al-Nasā’ī narrated from Nāfi‘ that Ibn ‘Umar fell ill and craved grapes. A cluster was bought for him for a dirham. A poor man came and asked, so he said, "Give it to him." Then someone else went, bought it for a dirham, and brought it to him. The asker wanted to return, but he was prevented. Had Ibn ‘Umar known it was that same cluster, he would not have tasted it, because what is given for Allāh's sake does not return to one.
- Ibn al-Mubāarak mentioned, he said Muḥammad ibn Muṭarrif informed us, he said Abū Ḥāzim narrated to us from ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Sa‘īd ibn Yarbū‘ from Mālik al-Dār that ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, took four hundred dinars, put them in a purse, then said to the boy, "Go with this to Abū ‘Ubaydah ibn al-Jarrāḥ, then linger for a while in the house until you see what he does with it." The boy went to him with it and said, "The Commander of the Faithful says, 'Use this for some of your needs.'" He said, "May Allāh connect him (with good) and have mercy on him." Then he said, "Come, O servant girl, take these seven to so-and-so, and these five to so-and-so," until he had distributed it all. The boy returned to ‘Umar and informed him, and found that he had prepared a similar amount for Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal. He said, "Go with this to Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal and linger in the house for a while until you see what he does." He went to him with it and said, "The Commander of the Faithful says, 'Use this for some of your needs.'" He said, "May Allāh have mercy on him and connect him (with good)." And he said, "O servant girl, go to the house of so-and-so with this much, and to the house of so-and-so with that much." Mu'ādh's wife looked out and said, "And we, by Allāh, are poor, so give us." Nothing remained in the cloth except two dinars, which he had brought to her. The boy returned to 'Umar with that. He said, "Indeed, they are brothers, one from another."

- Similar is narrated from 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, regarding Mu'āwiyah's gift to her, which was ten thousand, and al-Munkadir had entered upon her. If it is said: Authentic reports have come prohibiting the giving of all that one owns, it is replied: This was disliked in the case of one from whom patience in poverty is not trusted, and it is feared that he might resort to begging if he loses what he has to spend. As for the Anṣār, whom Allāh praised for preferring others over themselves, they were not of this description. Rather, they were as Allāh Almighty said: {And the patient in poverty and hardship and during battle.} Altruism in their case was better than withholding. And withholding for one who is not patient and resorts to begging is better than altruism.
- It is narrated that a man came to the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, with something like an egg of gold and said, "This is charity." He threw it at him and said, "One of you comes with all that he owns and gives it in charity, then he is sold (or sits begging) from people." And Allāh knows best.
- Ninthly, altruism with the self is above altruism with wealth, even if it benefits the self. Among the common proverbs: "And generosity with the self is the utmost limit of generosity."

- The best generosity with the self is generosity in protecting the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him. In the Ṣaḥīḥ, Abū Ṭalḥah shielded the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, on the day of Uḥud. The Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, would try to look to see the enemy, and Abū Ṭalḥah would say to him, "Do not look out, O Messenger of Allāh, lest they hit you. My neck before your neck." He protected the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, with his hand, and it became paralyzed.
- Ḥudhayfah al-ʿAdawī said: "On the day of Yarmūk, I set out looking for my cousin, and I had some water with me. I was saying, 'If he has any life left in him, I will give him water.' Then I found him. I said to him, 'Shall I give you water?' He gestured with his head, 'Yes.' Then I heard a man saying, 'Ah! Ah!' My cousin gestured to me to go to him. It was Hishām ibn al-ʿĀṣ. I said, 'Shall I give you water?' He gestured, 'Yes.' Then he heard another saying, 'Ah! Ah!' Hishām gestured for me to go to him. I went to him, and he had died. I returned to Hishām, and he had died. I returned to my cousin, and he had died."
- Abū Yazīd al-Biṣṭāmī said: "No one ever overcame me as much as a young man from Balkh who came to us on Ḥajj. He said to me, 'O Abū Yazīd, what is the definition of asceticism (zuhd) according to you?' I said, 'If we find, we eat; and if we lack, we are patient.' He said, 'Thus are the dogs of Balkh with us.' I said, 'What is the definition of asceticism according to you?' He said, 'If we lack, we are thankful; and if we find, we prefer others.'"
- It is narrated about Abū al-Ḥasan al-Anṭākī that thirty-odd men gathered at his place in a village near Rayy. They had a few loaves of bread, not enough to satisfy all of them. They broke the loaves, extinguished the lamp, and sat down to eat. When the food was removed, it was as it was; no one had eaten anything from it, preferring his companion over himself.

- His Almighty's saying: {Even though they are in privation (khaṣāṣah)}. Al-Khaṣāṣah is a need that disrupts one's condition. Its origin is from al-ikhtisāṣ, which is being singled out for something. So al-khaṣāṣah is being singled out by need, meaning even if they were in want and need.
- His Almighty's saying: {And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful.} Al-shuḥḥ and al-bukhl are the same. It is said, "rajulun shaḥīḥun bayyinu al-shuḥḥi wa al-shaḥḥi wa al-shaḥāḥah." Some linguists considered al-shuḥḥ to be more severe than al-bukhl. In al-Ṣiḥāḥ: al-shuḥḥ is miserliness with greed. It is narrated from al-Aswad from Ibn Mas'ūd that a man came to him and said, "I fear I have perished." He asked, "And what is that?" He said, "I heard Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, say, {And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful}, and I am a stingy man; I hardly let anything out of my hand." Ibn Mas'ūd said, "That is not the shuḥḥ which Allāh ta'ālā mentioned in the Qur'ān. The shuḥḥ which Allāh ta'ālā mentioned in the Qur'ān is to wrongfully consume your brother's wealth. But that is bukhl (miserliness), and what an evil thing is bukhl." So he, may Allāh be pleased with him, differentiated between shuḥḥ and bukhl. Ṭāwūs said: "Bukhl is for a person to be miserly with what is in his hand, and shuḥḥ is to be avaricious for what is in the hands of others, loving to have what is in their hands through lawful and unlawful means."

- Anas said the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "He is free from shuḥḥ who pays the zakāh, hosts the guest, and gives in times of calamity." And from him, that the Prophet, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, used to pray: "O Allāh, I seek refuge in You from the stinginess of my soul, its extravagance, and its whisperings." Abū al-Hayyāj al-Asadī said: "I saw a man in ṭawāf praying, 'O Allāh, protect me from the stinginess of my soul,' not adding anything to that. I said to him (why only this). He said, 'If I am protected from the stinginess of my soul, I will not steal, nor commit adultery, nor do (evil).'' The man was 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn 'Awf." I say: This is indicated by his, may Allāh's prayers and peace be upon him, saying: "Fear oppression, for oppression will be darkneses on the Day of Resurrection. And fear shuḥḥ (stinginess/avarice), for shuḥḥ destroyed those before you. It led them to shed their blood and violate their sanctities." We have explained this at the end of Āl 'Imrān. Kisrā said to his companions, "What thing is most harmful to the son of Ādam?" They said, "Poverty." Kisrā said, "Shuḥḥ is more harmful than poverty, because the poor person, if he finds (something), is satisfied, but the shaḥīḥ (stingy/avaricious person), if he finds (something), is never satisfied."

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said in Madārij al-Sālikīn:

Allāh Almighty said: {And they prefer [others] over themselves, even though they are in privation. And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful.} (Al-Ḥashr 59:9). Altruism (īthār) is the opposite of stinginess (shuḥḥ), for the one who prefers others over himself is abandoning what he himself needs. The stingy person (shaḥīḥ) is eager for what is not in his hand; if something comes into his hand, he is stingy with it and miserly about giving it out. So, miserliness (bukhl) is the fruit of stinginess (shuḥḥ), and shuḥḥ commands bukhl, as the Prophet said: "Beware of shuḥḥ, for shuḥḥ destroyed those before you. It commanded them to be miserly, so they were miserly, and it commanded them to sever ties, so they severed ties." The miser (bakhīl) is one who answers the call of shuḥḥ, and the altruist (mu'thir) is one who answers the call of generosity (jūd). Likewise, generosity regarding what is in the hands of people is true generosity (sakhā'), and it is better than the generosity of giving. 'Abd Allāh ibn al-Mubārak said: "Generosity of the soul concerning what is in the hands of people is better than generosity of the soul by giving."

This station is the station of munificence (jūd), generosity (sakhā'), and excellence (iḥsān). It is called the station of altruism (īthār) because it is its highest rank. For the ranks are three: First, that giving does not diminish him nor is it difficult for him; this is the station of generosity (sakhā'). Second, that he gives the majority and keeps something for himself, or keeps an amount similar to what he gave; this is munificence (jūd). Third, that he prefers another with something despite his own need for it; this is the rank of altruism (īthār).

Its opposite is selfishness (atharah), which is preferring oneself over one's brother with what he needs. This is the rank concerning which the Messenger of Allāh said to the Anṣār, may Allāh be pleased with them: "You will encounter selfishness (atharah) after me, so be patient until you meet me at the Pool (Ḥawḍ)." The Anṣār are those whom Allāh described with altruism in His saying: {And they prefer [others] over themselves, even though they are in privation.} (Al-Ḥashr 59:9). So He described them with the highest ranks of generosity, and that was well-known among them. Qays ibn Sa'd ibn 'Ubādah, may Allāh be pleased with them both, was one of the renowned generous individuals, to the extent that he once fell ill and found his brothers slow in visiting him. He asked about them, and they said, "They were ashamed because of the debt they owed you." He said, "May Allāh disgrace wealth that prevents brothers from visiting!" Then he ordered a caller to announce, "Whoever owes Qays any wealth, he is absolved of it." By evening, the threshold of his door was broken due to the multitude of those who visited him. They once said to him, "Have you seen anyone more generous than yourself?" He said, "Yes. We stayed in the desert with a woman. Her husband arrived, and she said, 'Guests have alighted with you.' He brought a she-camel and slaughtered it, saying, 'Help yourselves.' The next day, he brought another and slaughtered it. We said, 'We only ate a little from the one slaughtered yesterday.' He said, 'I do not feed my guests leftovers.' We stayed with him for two or three days, and the sky was raining, and he continued to do this. When we wanted to depart, we placed a hundred dinars in his house and said to the woman, 'Apologize to him for us.' We left. When daylight came, a man was shouting behind us, 'Stop, O vile caravan! You gave me payment for my hospitality.' Then he caught up with us and said, 'You will take it, or I will pierce you with my spear.' So we took it and departed."

Gentleness and Forbearance (Al-Rifq wa al-Hilm)

Al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said: Chapter on Forbearance, Deliberation, and Gentleness. Allāh the Exalted said: {And those who restrain anger and pardon people; and Allāh loves the doers of good.} (Āl ‘Imrān:134). And He the Exalted said: {Show forgiveness, enjoin what is good, and turn away from the ignorant.} (Al-A‘rāf:199). And He the Exalted said: {And not equal are the good deed and the evil deed. Repel [evil] by that [deed] which is better; and thereupon the one whom between you and him is enmity [will become] as though he was a devoted friend. But none is granted it except those who are patient, and none is granted it except one having a great portion [of good].} (Fuṣṣilat:34-35). And He the Exalted said: {And whoever is patient and forgives – indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination.} (Al-Shūrā:43).

- It is narrated from Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said to Ashajj ‘Abd al-Qays: "Indeed, you possess two qualities that Allāh loves: forbearance and deliberation." Reported by Muslim.

- It is narrated from 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh is Gentle and loves gentleness in all matters." Agreed upon.
- It is narrated from her that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh is Gentle and loves gentleness. He grants for gentleness what He does not grant for harshness, and what He does not grant for anything else." Reported by Muslim.
- It is narrated from her that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Gentleness is not found in anything except that it adorns it, and it is not removed from anything except that it disgraces it." Reported by Muslim.
- It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "A Bedouin urinated in the mosque, and the people stood up to deal with him. The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Leave him and pour a bucket of water or a large container of water over his urine. You have been sent to make things easy and not to make things difficult.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.
- It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Make things easy and do not make things difficult; give good tidings and do not drive people away." Agreed upon.

- It is narrated from Jarīr ibn ‘Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: 'Whoever is deprived of gentleness is deprived of all good.'" Reported by Muslim.
- It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him: "A man said to the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, 'Advise me.' He said, 'Do not become angry.' The man repeated his request several times, and he said, 'Do not become angry.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.
- It is narrated from Abū Ya‘lā Shaddād ibn Aws, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Indeed, Allāh has prescribed excellence in everything. So, if you kill, kill excellently, and if you slaughter, slaughter excellently. Let one of you sharpen his blade and spare suffering to the animal he slaughters." Reported by Muslim.
- It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: "Never was the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, given a choice between two matters except that he chose the easier of them, as long as it was not sinful. If it was sinful, he was the furthest of people from it. And never did the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, seek revenge for himself in any matter, unless a sanctity of Allāh was violated, in which case he would seek revenge for Allāh the Exalted." Agreed upon.
- It is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Shall I not inform you of whom is forbidden from the Fire, or for whom the Fire is forbidden? It is forbidden for everyone who is close [to people], lenient, gentle, and easy-going." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ḥadīth.

As mentioned in Al-Targhīb wa al-Tarhīb by al-Ḥāfiẓ al-Mundhirī, may Allāh have mercy on him:

Encouragement of Gentleness, Deliberation, and Forbearance:

- It is narrated from Jarīr ibn ‘Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, grants for gentleness what He does not grant for harshness. And if Allāh loves a servant, He bestows gentleness upon him. No household is deprived of gentleness except that they are deprived [of good]." Reported by Muslim and Abū Dāwūd.
- It is narrated from Abū al-Dardā’, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Whoever is given his share of gentleness has been given his share of good, and whoever is deprived of his share of gentleness has been deprived of his share of good." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth.
- It is narrated from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, loves gentleness, is pleased with it, and aids [one] in it more than He aids in harshness." Reported by al-Ṭabarānī.
- It is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Shall I not inform you of whom is forbidden from the Fire, or for whom the Fire is forbidden? It is forbidden for everyone who is lenient, gentle, and easy-going."

Reported by al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Ḥibbān.

- It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālīk, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Deliberation is from Allāh, and haste is from Satan. No one has more excuses [accepted by Allāh] than Allāh, and nothing is more beloved to Allāh than praise." Reported by Abū Yaʿlā, and its narrators are those of the Ṣaḥīḥ.
- It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I was walking with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and he was wearing a Najrānī cloak with a thick border. A Bedouin caught up with him and pulled his cloak so violently that I looked at the side of the neck of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and the border of the cloak had left a mark due to the severity of his pull. Then he said, 'O Muḥammad, order that I be given some of Allāh's wealth that you have.' He turned to him, smiled, and then ordered that he be given something." Reported by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.
- It is narrated from Ibn Masʿūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "It is as if I am looking at the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, narrating about a prophet from among the prophets whose people struck him and made him bleed, while he was wiping the blood from his face and saying, 'O Allāh, forgive my people, for they do not know.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.
- It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The strong man is not the one who overpowers others in wrestling; rather, the strong man is the one who controls himself when he is angry." Reported by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

Cheerfulness of Face and Kind Speech:

As mentioned in Al-Targhīb wa al-Tarhīb by al-Ḥāfiẓ al-Mundhirī:

- It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not belittle any good deed, even if it is meeting your brother with a cheerful face." Reported by Muslim.
- It is narrated from al-Ḥasan, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Part of charity is to greet people with a cheerful face." Reported by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā, and it is a mursal ḥadīth.
- It is narrated from Jābir ibn ‘Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Every good deed is charity. And indeed, part of good deeds is to meet your brother with a cheerful face, and to pour from your bucket into your brother's vessel." Reported by Aḥmad and al-Tirmidhī.
- It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Your smiling in your brother's face is charity. Your enjoining good and forbidding evil is charity. Your guiding a man in a land where he is lost is charity for you. Your removing harm, thorns, and bones from the road is charity for you. Your pouring from your bucket into your brother's bucket is charity for you."

Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who graded it ḥasan, and Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ. He added: "And your helping a man with poor eyesight is charity for you."

- It is narrated from Abū Jurayy al-Hujaymī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I came to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, we are a people from the desert, so teach us something by which Allāh may benefit us.' He said, 'Do not belittle any good deed, even if it is pouring from your bucket into the vessel of one who asks for water, or speaking to your brother with a cheerful face towards him. And beware of letting your lower garment hang down, for it is from conceit, and Allāh does not love it. If a man insults you with something he knows about you, do not insult him with what you know about him, for his reward will be for you, and its evil consequence will be upon him who said it.'" Reported by Abū Dāwūd, al-Tirmidhī, and Ibn Ḥibbān.
- It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "And a kind word is charity." Reported by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.
- It is narrated from ‘Adī ibn Ḥātim, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Protect yourselves from the Fire, even with half a date. And whoever does not find [even that], then with a kind word." Reported by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

Mercy

Imām al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Chapter on Revering the Sanctities of Muslims, Clarifying their Rights, and Showing Compassion and Mercy Towards Them:

Allāh the Exalted said: {That [is so]. And whoever honors the sacred ordinances of Allāh - it is best for him in the sight of his Lord.} (Al-Ḥajj:30). And He the Exalted said: {That [is so]. And whoever honors the symbols of Allāh - indeed, it is from the piety of hearts.} (Al-Ḥajj:32). And He the Exalted said: {And lower your wing to the believers.} (Al-Ḥijr:88).

And He the Exalted said: {Whoever kills a soul unless for a soul or for corruption [done] in the land - it is as if he had slain mankind entirely. And whoever saves one - it is as if he had saved mankind entirely.} (Al-Mā'idah:32).

It is narrated from Abū Mūsā, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A believer to another believer is like a building; each part strengthens the other." And he interlaced his fingers. Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Whoever passes through any of our mosques or markets carrying arrows should hold them by their points or grasp them with his palm, lest he should injure any of the Muslims with them.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from al-Nu'mān ibn Bashīr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The similitude of believers in their mutual love, mercy, and compassion is that of a body; when one part of it is in pain, the rest of the body joins it in restlessness and fever." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, kissed al-Ḥasan ibn 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with them both, while al-Aqra' ibn Ḥābis was with him. Al-Aqra' said, 'I have ten children, and I have never kissed any of them.' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, looked at him and said, 'Whoever does not show mercy will not be shown mercy.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: "Some Bedouins came to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and said, 'Do you kiss your children?' He said, 'Yes.' They said, 'But by Allāh, we do not kiss [them].' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'What can I do for you if Allāh has removed mercy from your hearts?'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Jarīr ibn 'Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever does not show mercy to people, Allāh will not show mercy to him." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Qatādah al-Ḥārith ibn Rib'ī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'I stand for prayer intending to prolong it, but then I hear the crying of a child, so I shorten my prayer, disliking to cause hardship to his mother.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim: he does not wrong him nor abandon him. Whoever is in need of his brother, Allāh will be in his need. Whoever relieves a Muslim of a burden, Allāh will relieve him of a burden from the burdens of the Day of Resurrection. And whoever conceals [the faults of] a Muslim, Allāh will conceal him on the Day of Resurrection." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim: he does not betray him, nor lie to him, nor forsake him."

Everything of a Muslim is sacred to another Muslim: his honor, his wealth, and his blood. Piety is here. It is sufficient evil for a man to despise his Muslim brother."

Reported by al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from him that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Do not envy one another; do not inflate prices by overbidding against one another; do not hate one another; do not turn away from one another; and do not enter into a transaction when others have already entered into it. Be servants of Allāh, brothers. A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim: he does not wrong him, nor despise him, nor forsake him. Piety is here' – and he pointed to his chest three times – 'It is sufficient evil for a man to despise his Muslim brother. Everything of a Muslim is sacred to another Muslim: his blood, his wealth, and his honor.'" Reported by Muslim.

Najash means to increase the price of a commodity.

Strength

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A strong believer is better and more beloved to Allāh than a weak believer, and in both there is good. Strive for what benefits you, seek help from Allāh, and do not lose heart. If something befalls you, do not say, 'If only I had done such and such,' but rather say, 'Allāh has decreed, and what He willed, He did,' for 'if only' opens the door to Satan's work."

Pardoning and Turning Away from the Ignorant:

Imām al-Nawawī said: Allāh the Exalted said: {Show forgiveness, enjoin what is good, and turn away from the ignorant.} (Al-A'rāf:199). And He the Exalted said: {So overlook [their faults] with gracious forgiveness.} (Al-Hijr:85). And He the Exalted said: {And let them pardon and overlook. Would you not like that Allāh should forgive you?} (Al-Nūr:22). And He the Exalted said: {And those who restrain anger and pardon people; and Allāh loves the doers of good.} (Āl ‘Imrān:134). And He the Exalted said: {And whoever is patient and forgives – indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination.} (Al-Shūrā:43). The verses on this topic are many and well-known.

It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah that she said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, never struck anything with his hand, neither a woman nor a servant, except when engaged in Jihād in the way of Allāh. And never was any harm done to him for which he took revenge from its doer, unless something of the sacred limits of Allāh the Exalted was violated, in which case he would take revenge for Allāh the Exalted." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I was walking with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and he was wearing a Najrānī cloak with a thick border. A Bedouin caught up with him and pulled his cloak so violently that I looked at the side of the Prophet's shoulder, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and the border of the cloak had left a mark due to the severity of his pull. Then he said, 'O Muḥammad, order that I be given some of Allāh's wealth that you have.' He turned to him, smiled, and then ordered that he be given something." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "It is as if I am looking at the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, narrating about a prophet from among the prophets, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them, whose people struck him and made him bleed, while he was wiping the blood from his face and saying, 'O Allāh, forgive my people, for they do not know.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The strong man is not the one who overpowers others in wrestling; rather, the strong man is the one who controls himself when he is angry." Agreed upon.

Chapter on Bearing Harm:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And those who restrain anger and pardon people; and Allāh loves the doers of good.} (Āl ‘Imrān:134). And He the Exalted said: {And whoever is patient and forgives – indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination.} (Al-Shūrā:43).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him: "A man said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, I have relatives whom I try to maintain ties with, but they sever them. I treat them well, but they treat me badly. I am forbearing towards them, but they are ignorant towards me.' He said, 'If you are as you say, then it is as if you are feeding them hot ashes, and you will continue to have a supporter from Allāh the Exalted against them as long as you continue to do so.'" Reported by Muslim.

Humility

Ibn al-Qayyim said in Madārij al-Sālikīn:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And the servants of the Most Merciful are those who walk upon the earth easily.} (Al-Furqān:63), meaning with tranquility and dignity, humble, not insolent, nor boastful, nor arrogant. Al-Ḥasan said: "Scholars who are forbearing." Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah said: "People of dignity and chastity, they do not act foolishly, and if they are treated foolishly, they show forbearance."

"Hawn" (with a fathah) in the language means gentleness and leniency, and "hūn" (with a ḍammah) means disgrace. So the one with the fathah is a characteristic of the people of faith, and the one with the ḍammah is a characteristic of the people of disbelief, and their recompense from Allāh is the Hellfire. And Allāh the Exalted said:

{O you who have believed, whoever of you should revert from his religion - Allāh will bring forth [in place of them] a people He will love and who will love Him, [who are] humble toward the believers, powerful against the disbelievers.} (Al-Mā'idah:54).

Since their humility was a humility of mercy, affection, compassion, and devotion, He used the preposition "alā" (towards/upon) implying the meanings of these actions. For He did not intend by it the humility of disgrace, whose possessor is lowly; rather, it is the humility of gentleness and compliance, whose possessor is docile. The believer is docile, as in the ḥadīth: "The believer is like a docile camel." The hypocrite and the transgressor are lowly. And four types are most intensely enamored by disgrace: the liar, the slanderer, the miser, and the tyrant. His statement, "powerful against the disbelievers," refers to the might of strength, invincibility, and dominance. 'Aṭā', may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Towards believers, they are like a parent to his child, and towards disbelievers, like a lion to its prey."

As He said in another verse: {Harsh against the disbelievers, merciful among themselves.} (Al-Fatḥ:29). This is the opposite of the state of those about whom it was said: "Arrogant towards us, and cowardly against your enemy. What wretched traits: arrogance and cowardice."

In Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, from the ḥadīth of 'Iyāḍ ibn Ḥimār, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh has revealed to me: 'Be humble so that no one boasts over another, and no one transgresses against another.'"

In Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "No one will enter Paradise who has an atom's weight of arrogance in his heart."

In the two Ṣaḥīḥs, it is reported as marfū': "Shall I not inform you of the people of Hellfire? Every cruel, greedy, arrogant person."

In the ḥadīth of the argument between Paradise and Hellfire: "Hellfire said: 'Why is it that only the tyrants and the arrogant enter me?' And Paradise said: 'Why is it that only the weak and the downtrodden among people enter me?'" This is in the Ṣaḥīḥ.

In Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, from Abū Saʿīd and Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with them both, they said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, says: 'Might is My lower garment and pride is My upper garment; whoever contends with Me regarding them, I will punish him.'"

In Jāmiʿ al-Tirmidhī, it is reported as marfūʿ from Salamah ibn al-Akwaʿ, may Allāh be pleased with him: "A man continues to be haughty until he is written in the register of the tyrants, and he will suffer what they suffered."

The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, used to pass by children and greet them. A female servant would take his hand, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and lead him wherever she wished. When he ate, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, he would lick his three fingers. He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, would be in his house in the service of his family, and he never took revenge for himself. He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, used to mend his own sandals, patch his own garment, milk the sheep for his family, feed the camel, eat with the servant, sit with the poor, walk with the widow and the orphan to fulfill their needs, initiate greetings with whomever he met, and accept the invitation of anyone who invited him, even to the simplest thing. He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, was easy to deal with, gentle in character, noble in nature, pleasant in company, cheerful-faced, always smiling, humble without being servile, generous without being extravagant, tender-hearted, merciful to every Muslim, lowering his wing to the believers, and lenient towards them.

He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Shall I not inform you of whom is forbidden from the Fire, or for whom the Fire is forbidden? It is forbidden for everyone who is close [to people], lenient, gentle, and easy-going." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said: a ḥasan ḥadīth.

He said: "If I were invited to a sheep's trotter or a shank, I would accept, and if a trotter or a shank were gifted to me, I would accept it." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, used to visit the sick, attend funerals, ride a donkey, and accept the invitation of a slave. On the day of [the campaign against Banū] Qurayḏah, he was on a donkey bridled with a rope of palm fiber, with a saddle of palm fiber on it.

Al-Fuḏayl ibn 'Iyāḏ was asked about humility, and he said: "To submit to the truth, yield to it, and accept it from whoever says it." It was said: "Humility is not to see any value in oneself. Whoever sees value in himself has no share in humility." This is the view of al-Fuḏayl and others. Junayd ibn Muḥammad said: "It is to lower the wing and be gentle-sided." Abū Yazīd al-Bisṭāmī said: "It is not to see any station or state for oneself, nor to see anyone in creation worse than oneself." Ibn 'Aṭā' said: "It is to accept the truth from whomever it comes, and honor lies in humility." Ibrāhīm ibn Shaybān said: "Nobility is in humility, honor is in piety, and freedom is in contentment." It is mentioned from Sufyān al-Thawrī, may Allāh have mercy on him, that he said: "The most honored of people are five types: a scholar who is an ascetic, a jurist who is a Sufi, a rich person who is humble, a poor person who is grateful, and a noble person who adheres to the Sunnah." 'Urwah ibn al-Zubayr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, said: "I saw 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, carrying a waterskin on his shoulder. I said: 'O Commander of the Faithful, this is not befitting for you.' He said: 'When the delegations came to me, listening and obeying, a sense of pride entered my soul, so I wanted to break it.'" Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, was appointed governor once, and he used to carry a bundle of firewood on his back, saying: "Make way for the governor."

Zayd ibn Thābit once mounted his ride, and Ibn ‘Abbās approached to take his stirrup. Zayd said: "No, O cousin of the Messenger of Allāh!" Ibn ‘Abbās said: "This is how we were commanded to treat our elders." Zayd said: "Show me your hand." He extended it to him, and Zayd kissed it, saying: "This is how we were commanded to treat the family of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace." ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, distributed garments among the Companions, may Allāh be pleased with them. He sent a valuable garment to Mu‘ādh, who sold it and bought six slaves with its price and freed them. When this reached ‘Umar, he later sent him a less valuable garment. Mu‘ādh reproached him, and ‘Umar said: "Because you sold the first one." Mu‘ādh said: "What does it matter to you? Give me my share. I have sworn to strike your head with it." ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "My head is before you. A young man may be gentle with an old man." Al-Ḥasan ibn ‘Alī passed by some children who had pieces of bread. They invited him to eat with them, so he dismounted and ate with them. Then he took them to his house, fed them, and clothed them, saying: "The favor is theirs because they had nothing other than what they fed me, and we have more than that."

It is mentioned that Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, taunted Bilāl, may Allāh be pleased with him, about his blackness, then regretted it and threw himself down, swearing: "I will not raise my head until Bilāl steps on my cheek with his foot." He did not raise his head until Bilāl did so.

Rajā’ ibn Ḥaywah said: "I valued the clothes of ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz, may Allāh be pleased with him, while he was delivering a sermon, at twelve dirhams. They consisted of a cloak, a turban, a shirt, trousers, an outer garment, two leather socks, and a cap." Muḥammad ibn Wāsi‘ saw a son of his walking in an objectionable manner and said: "Do you know for how much your mother was bought? For three hundred dirhams! And your father – may Allāh not increase the likes of him among the Muslims – is me. And you walk in this manner?"

Ḥamdūn al-Qaṣṣār said: "Humility is not to see anyone in need of you, neither in matters of religion nor in worldly affairs." Ibrāhīm ibn Adham said: "I have only been pleased in my Islām three times: I was on a ship, and there was a jester on it who would say, 'We were in the land of the Turks, and the barbarian seized [me] like this,' and he would grab my hair and shake me because there was no one on that ship more contemptible than me. Another time, I was ill in a mosque, and the muezzin entered and said, 'Get out!' I could not, so he grabbed me by my leg and dragged me outside. The third time, I was in Syria wearing a fur garment, and I looked at it and could not distinguish between its hair and the lice due to their abundance, and that pleased me." Some of them said: "I saw a man in ṭawāf (circumambulation) with attendants in front of him preventing people from ṭawāf for his sake. Then, after some time, I saw him on a bridge in Baghdad, begging for something. I was astonished at him, and he said to me: 'I was arrogant in a place where people are humble, so Allāh afflicted me with humiliation in a place where people are elevated.'" It reached ʿUmar ibn ʿAbd al-ʿAzīz, may Allāh be pleased with him, that a son of his had bought a ring for a thousand dirhams. ʿUmar wrote to him: "It has reached me that you bought a gemstone for a thousand dirhams. When my letter reaches you, sell the ring and feed a thousand stomachs with its price. And take a ring for two dirhams, make its stone of Chinese iron, and write on it: 'May Allāh have mercy on a man who knows his own worth.'" And Allāh knows best.

The first sin by which Allāh was disobeyed by the father of the two weighty creations (mankind and jinn) was arrogance and greed. Arrogance was the sin of Iblīs, the accursed, and his affair ended as it did. The sin of Ādam, upon our Prophet and upon him be peace, was from greed and desire. Its consequence was repentance and guidance. The sin of Iblīs led him to argue using predestination and to persist [in sin]. The sin of Ādam caused him to attribute it to himself, acknowledge it, and seek forgiveness. So, the people of arrogance, persistence [in sin], and argumentation using predestination are with their sheikh and leader to the Hellfire, Iblīs. And the people of desire, who seek forgiveness, repent, and acknowledge their sins, who do not argue for them using predestination, are with their father Ādam in Paradise. I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh have mercy on him, say: "Arrogance is worse than shirk (polytheism), for the arrogant person is arrogant towards worshipping Allāh the Exalted, while the polytheist worships Allāh and others." I say: That is why Allāh made Hellfire the abode of the arrogant, as Allāh the Exalted said in Sūrah Al-Zumar and in Sūrah Ghāfir: {So enter the gates of Hell, abiding eternally therein; and wretched is the residence of the arrogant.} (Al-Zumar:72). And in Sūrah Al-Naḥl: {So enter the gates of Hell, abiding eternally therein; and how wretched is the residence of the arrogant.} (Al-Naḥl:29). And in Sūrah Al-Zumar (another verse): {Is there not in Hell a residence for the arrogant?} (Al-Zumar:60). And He informed that the people of arrogance and tyranny are those upon whose hearts Allāh has sealed, as He the Exalted said: {Thus does Allāh seal over every heart [of] an arrogant, tyrant.} (Ghāfir:35). And he, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "No one will enter Paradise who has an atom's weight of arrogance in his heart." Reported by Muslim.

He, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Arrogance is rejecting the truth and despising people." And Allāh the Exalted said: {Indeed, Allāh does not forgive association with Him.} (Al-Nisā':48), indicating that He does not forgive arrogance, which is greater than shirk. And just as whoever humbles himself for Allāh, Allāh elevates him, so too whoever is arrogant towards submitting to the truth, Allāh humiliates him, debases him, belittles him, and scorns him. And whoever is arrogant towards submitting to the truth, even if it comes to him from a young person or someone he dislikes or is hostile towards, his arrogance is only towards Allāh. For Allāh is the Truth, His word is truth, His religion is truth, and truth is His attribute, from Him, and for Him. So if the servant rejects it and is arrogant towards accepting it, he has only rejected Allāh and been arrogant towards Him. And Allāh knows best.

Definition of Humility:

Humility: For the servant to be humble before the might of the truth.

Meaning: To receive the authority of the truth with submission to it, humility, compliance, and entering under its servitude, such that the truth disposes of him as a master disposes of his slave. Through this, the servant attains the characteristic of humility. This is why the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, defined arrogance by its opposite, saying: "Arrogance is rejecting the truth and despising people." Rejecting the truth means repelling it, denying it, and pushing it away like repelling an assailant. Despising people means looking down on them and scorning them. When one looks down on them and scorns them, one denies their rights, rejects them, and belittles them. Since the possessor of truth has a say and might, arrogant souls do not acknowledge his might over the might they possess, especially souls that are false, so they assault the might of the truth with their arrogance and falsehood. Thus, the reality of humility is the servant's submission to the might of the truth and his compliance with it, so he does not confront it with his own might against it.

Hearing and Obeying Legitimate Rulers in Matters Not Involving #### Disobedience:

Allāh the Exalted said: {O you who have believed, obey Allāh and obey the Messenger and those in authority among you.} (Al-Nisā':59).

It is narrated from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "It is incumbent upon a Muslim man to hear and obey in what he likes and dislikes, unless he is ordered to commit a sin. If he is ordered to commit a sin, then there is no hearing and no obedience." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that he said: "When we pledged allegiance to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, to hear and obey, he would say to us, 'In what you are able.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Whoever withdraws his hand from obedience will meet Allāh on the Day of Resurrection with no argument for himself. And whoever dies without having a pledge of allegiance on his neck dies a death of jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic ignorance)." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Hear and obey, even if an Abyssinian slave whose head is like a raisin is appointed over you." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "You must hear and obey in your hardship and your ease, in what pleases you and what displeases you, and when others are given preference over you." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "We were with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, on a journey, and we stopped at a place. Some of us were mending their tents, some were practicing archery, and some were with their grazing animals, when the herald of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, called out, 'Congregational prayer!' So we gathered around the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and he said: 'There was no prophet before me except that it was his duty to guide his nation to the best of what he knew for them and to warn them of the worst of what he knew for them. Indeed, this nation of yours, its well-being has been placed in its beginning, and its end will be afflicted with trials and matters you will find detestable. Tribulations will come, one making the other seem insignificant. A tribulation will come, and the believer will say, "This is my destruction." Then it will pass. Then another tribulation will come, and the believer will say, "This is it, this is it." So whoever wishes to be saved from the Fire and enter Paradise, let his death come to him while he believes in Allāh and the Last Day, and let him treat people as he wishes to be treated. And whoever pledges allegiance to a leader, giving him the clasp of his hand and the fruit of his heart, let him obey him if he is able. If another comes to dispute with him, then strike the neck of the other.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hunaydah Wā'il ibn Ḥujr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "Salamah ibn Yazīd al-Ju'fī asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, saying, 'O Prophet of Allāh, what if rulers rise over us who ask us for their rights but deny us our rights? What do you command us?' He turned away from him. Then he asked him again, and the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Hear and obey, for upon them is what they are charged with, and upon you is what you are charged with.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, after me there will be favoritism and matters you will find detestable." They said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what do you command for those of us who witness that?' He said, 'Fulfill the rights that are upon you, and ask Allāh for that which is for you.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever obeys me has obeyed Allāh, and whoever disobeys me has disobeyed Allāh. And whoever obeys the leader has obeyed me, and whoever disobeys the leader has disobeyed me." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever dislikes something from his leader, let him be patient, for whoever separates from the authority by a handspan dies a death of jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic ignorance)." Agreed upon.

Warning Against Bad Morals

Anas ibn Mālik said: "Indeed, a servant, through his good character, can reach the highest rank in Paradise even if he is not a [great] worshipper. And through his bad character, he can reach the lowest depth of Hellfire even if he is a [great] worshipper."

We will address a selection of bad morals to warn against them and mention some of the narrations concerning them:

Showing Off, Seeking Reputation, and Love of Prominence:

It is mentioned in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And they were not commanded except to worship Allāh, [being] sincere to Him in religion, inclining to truth.} (Al-Bayyinah:5). And He the Exalted said: {Do not invalidate your charities with reminders [of it] or injury as does one who spends his wealth only to be seen by the people.} (Al-Baqarah:264). And He the Exalted said: {They make a show [of their deeds] to the people and do not remember Allāh except a little.} (Al-Nisā':142).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Allāh the Exalted said: 'I am the most self-sufficient of partners, [needing no] association. Whoever does an action in which he associates someone else with Me, I will leave him and his association.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from him that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Indeed, the first of people to be judged on the Day of Resurrection will be a man who was martyred. He will be brought forth, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say, 'What did you do with them?' He will say, 'I fought for Your sake until I was martyred.' He [Allāh] will say, 'You have lied. Rather, you fought so that it would be said, "He is courageous," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face until he is thrown into the Fire. And a man who learned knowledge, taught it, and recited the Qur'ān. He will be brought forth, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say, 'What did you do with them?' He will say, 'I learned knowledge, taught it, and recited the Qur'ān for Your sake.' He [Allāh] will say, 'You have lied. Rather, you learned knowledge and taught it, and you recited the Qur'ān so that it would be said, "He is a reciter," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face until he is thrown into the Fire. And a man whom Allāh had blessed with wealth and given all kinds of riches. He will be brought forth, and Allāh will make him recognize His blessings, and he will recognize them. He [Allāh] will say, 'What did you do with them?' He will say, 'I left no path in which You love for wealth to be spent except that I spent in it for Your sake.' He [Allāh] will say, 'You have lied. Rather, you did it so that it would be said, "He is generous," and it was said.' Then he will be ordered, and he will be dragged on his face, then thrown into the Fire." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "Some people said to him, 'We enter upon our rulers and say to them things contrary to what we say when we leave their presence.' Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, said: 'We used to consider this hypocrisy during the time of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Jundub ibn ‘Abd Allāh ibn Sufyān, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever seeks to make his deeds heard of, Allāh will make him heard of (i.e., expose him). And whoever makes a show of his deeds for Allāh, Allāh will make a show of him." Agreed upon. Muslim also reported it from the narration of Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both. "Samma‘a" (with shaddah on the mīm) means he publicized his deeds to people for show; "samma‘a Allāhu bihi" means Allāh will expose him on the Day of Resurrection. The meaning of "man rā‘ā" (whoever makes a show) is whoever shows righteous deeds to people so that they will honor him, "rā‘ā Allāhu bihi" means Allāh will expose his inner self before all creatures.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever learns knowledge by which the countenance of Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, is sought, but learns it only to attain some worldly benefit, will not find the fragrance of Paradise on the Day of Resurrection," meaning its scent. Reported by Abū Dāwūd with an authentic chain of narration.

Chapter on What May Be Mistaken for Showing Off but Is Not:

It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that it was said to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace: "What is your view concerning a man who does a good deed and people praise him for it?" He said, "That is the immediate glad tiding for the believer." Reported by Muslim.

Self-Conceit and Arrogance:

Imām al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Chapter on the Prohibition of Arrogance and Self-Conceit:

Allāh the Exalted said: {That home of the Hereafter We assign to those who do not desire exaltedness upon the earth or corruption. And the [best] outcome is for the righteous.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:83). And He the Exalted said: {And do not walk upon the earth exultantly.} (Al-Isrā':37). And He the Exalted said: {And do not turn your cheek [in contempt] toward people and do not walk through the earth exultantly. Indeed, Allāh does not like everyone self-deluded and boastful.} (Luqmān:18). The meaning of "tuṣa'ir khaddaka li-l-nās" is to turn it and avert it from people out of arrogance towards them. And "maraḥ" means strutting. And He the Exalted said: {Indeed, Qārūn was from the people of Moses, but he tyrannized them. And We gave him of treasures whose keys would burden a band of strong men; thereupon his people said to him, "Do not exult. Indeed, Allāh does not like the exultant."} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:76) ...to His statement, the Exalted: {And We caused the earth to swallow him and his home.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:81) the verses.

It is narrated from 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "No one will enter Paradise who has an atom's weight of arrogance in his heart." A man said, "Indeed, a man loves for his garment to be beautiful and his sandal to be beautiful." He said, "Indeed, Allāh is Beautiful and loves beauty. Arrogance is rejecting the truth and despising people." Reported by Muslim. "Baṭar al-ḥaqq" means rejecting it and spurning it against its speaker, and "ghamaṭ al-nās" means despising them.

It is narrated from Salamah ibn al-Akwa', may Allāh be pleased with him: "A man ate in the presence of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, with his left hand. He said, 'Eat with your right hand.' He said, 'I cannot.' He [the Prophet] said, 'May you not be able to.' Nothing prevented him except arrogance. He [Salamah] said, 'He never raised it to his mouth again.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Ḥārithah ibn Wahb, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Shall I not inform you of the people of Hellfire? Every cruel, greedy, arrogant person." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Paradise and Hellfire argued. Hellfire said, 'In me are the tyrants and the arrogant.' Paradise said, 'In me are the weak and the destitute among people.' Allāh judged between them: 'You, Paradise, are My mercy; I show mercy through you to whomsoever I will. And you, Hellfire, are My punishment; I punish through you whomsoever I will. And for both of you, it is upon Me to fill you.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Allāh will not look on the Day of Resurrection at one who drags his lower garment out of arrogance." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Three types of people Allāh will not speak to on the Day of Resurrection, nor purify them, nor look at them, and for them is a painful punishment: an old man who commits adultery, a lying king, and an arrogant poor person."

Reported by Muslim. "Al-ʿā'il" is the poor person. It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, said: 'Might is My lower garment and pride is My upper garment. Whoever contends with Me regarding one of them, I have indeed punished him.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "While a man was walking in a garment, admiring himself, with his hair combed, strutting in his walk, Allāh caused the earth to swallow him, and he will continue to sink into the earth until the Day of Resurrection." Agreed upon. "Murajjal ra'suhu" means his hair is combed. "Yatajaljalu" (with two jīms) means he sinks and descends.

It is narrated from Salamah ibn al-Akwaʿ, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A man continues to be haughty until he is written among the tyrants, and he will suffer what they suffered." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ḥadīth. "Yadhhabu bi-nafsihi" means he elevates himself and is arrogant.

Stinginess:

Al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Chapter on the Prohibition of Stinginess and Avarice:

Allāh the Exalted said: {But as for he who withheld and considered himself self-sufficient, And denied the best [reward], We will ease him toward difficulty. And what will his wealth avail him when he plummets?} (Al-Layl:8-11). And He the Exalted said: {And whoever is protected from the stinginess of his soul - it is those who will be the successful.} (Al-Taghābun:16). And it is narrated from Jābir, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Beware of oppression, for oppression will be darknesses on the Day of Resurrection. And beware of avarice, for avarice destroyed those who were before you; it led them to shed their blood and violate their sanctities." Reported by Muslim.

Injustice/Oppression:

It is mentioned in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn by Imām al-Nawawī, may Allāh the Exalted have mercy on him:

Allāh the Exalted said: {For the wrongdoers there will be no devoted friend and no intercessor [who is] obeyed.} (Ghāfir:18). And He the Exalted said: {And for the wrongdoers there is no helper.} (Al-Ḥajj:71). As for the Ḥadīth, among them are:

It is narrated from Jābir, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Beware of oppression, for oppression will be darkneses on the Day of Resurrection. And beware of avarice, for avarice destroyed those who were before you; it led them to shed their blood and violate their sanctities." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Rights will certainly be restored to their owners on the Day of Resurrection, even the hornless sheep will be retaliated for from the horned sheep." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Ibn ʿUmar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "We used to talk about the Farewell Pilgrimage while the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, was among us, and we did not know what the Farewell Pilgrimage was until the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, praised Allāh and lauded Him, then mentioned the Antichrist (al-Masīḥ al-Dajjāl) and spoke at length about him, saying: 'Allāh has not sent any prophet except that he warned his nation about him. Noah warned about him, and the prophets after him. If he emerges among you, his matter will not be hidden from you. Indeed, your Lord is not one-eyed, but he (the Antichrist) is one-eyed in his right eye, as if his eye is a floating grape. Behold, Allāh has forbidden your blood and your wealth for you, just like the sanctity of this day of yours, in this land of yours, in this month of yours. Behold, have I conveyed (the message)?' They said, 'Yes.' He said, 'O Allāh, bear witness,' three times. 'Woe to you!' or 'Woe betide you! See that you do not revert to disbelief after me, striking the necks of one another.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī. Muslim reported part of it.

It is narrated from ʿĀʾishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever unjustly takes a handspan of land will have it encircled around his neck from seven earths." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Mūsā, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh gives respite to the oppressor, but when He seizes him, He does not let him escape." Then he recited: {"And thus is the seizure of your Lord when He seizes the cities while they are committing wrong. Indeed, His seizure is painful and severe."} (Hūd:102).

It is narrated from Mu'ādh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, sent me and said: 'Indeed, you are going to a people from the People of the Book, so call them to testify that there is no god but Allāh and that I am the Messenger of Allāh. If they obey you in that, then inform them that Allāh has obligated upon them five prayers in every day and night. If they obey you in that, then inform them that Allāh has obligated upon them charity to be taken from their wealthy and given to their poor. If they obey you in that, then beware of their most prized possessions. And beware of the supplication of the oppressed, for there is no veil between it and Allāh.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Ḥumayd 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Sa'd al-Sā'idī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, appointed a man from the Azd tribe, called Ibn al-Lutbiyyah, over the collection of charity. When he returned, he said, 'This is for you, and this was gifted to me.' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, stood on the pulpit, praised Allāh and lauded Him, then said: 'To proceed: I appoint a man from among you over a task with which Allāh has entrusted me, and he comes and says, "This is for you, and this is a gift given to me!" Why did he not sit in his father's or mother's house until it came to him, if he was truthful? By Allāh, none of you takes anything without right except that he will meet Allāh the Exalted carrying it on the Day of Resurrection. So I will not recognize any of you meeting Allāh carrying a bellowing camel, or a mooing cow, or a bleating sheep.' Then he raised his hands until the whiteness of his armpits was visible and said, 'O Allāh, have I conveyed?' three times." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Whoever has wronged his brother concerning his honor or anything else, let him seek his forgiveness today before there is no dinar and no dirham. If he has righteous deeds, some will be taken from him according to his wrongdoing. If he has no good deeds, some of the sins of his wronged companion will be taken and laden upon him." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "A Muslim is one from whose tongue and hand other Muslims are safe, and an emigrant (muhājir) is one who forsakes what Allāh has forbidden." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "There was a man in charge of the baggage of the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, called Kirkirah. He died, and the Companions of the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'So-and-so is a martyr, so-and-so is a martyr,' until they passed by a man and said, 'So-and-so is a martyr.' The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'No, indeed I saw him in the Fire because of a cloak or a garment that he pilfered.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Qatādah al-Ḥārith ibn Rib‘ī, may Allāh be pleased with him, concerning the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace: "He stood among them and mentioned to them that Jihād in the way of Allāh and faith in Allāh are the best of deeds. A man stood up and said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, if I am killed in the way of Allāh, will my sins be expiated for me?' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said to him, 'Yes, if you are killed in the way of Allāh while you are patient, seeking reward, advancing, and not retreating.' Then the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'What did you say?' He said, 'If I am killed in the way of Allāh, will my sins be expiated for me?' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'Yes, while you are patient, seeking reward, advancing, and not retreating, except for debt, for Jibrīl told me that.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Do you know who the bankrupt one is?' They said, 'The bankrupt among us is one who has no dirham and no possessions.' He said, 'Indeed, the bankrupt one from my ummah is one who comes on the Day of Resurrection with prayer, fasting, and zakāh, but he comes having insulted this one, slandered that one, consumed the wealth of this one, shed the blood of that one, and struck this one. So this one will be given from his good deeds, and that one will be given from his good deeds. If his good deeds are exhausted before he settles what is upon him, some of their sins will be taken and cast upon him, then he will be thrown into the Fire.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Umm Salamah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "I am only a human being, and you bring your disputes to me. Perhaps one of you is more eloquent in his argument than the other, so I judge in his favor according to what I hear. So, whoever I judge in favor of with something that is his brother's right, I am only cutting off a piece of the Fire for him." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A believer will continue to have leeway in his religion as long as he does not shed forbidden blood." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Khawlah bint ‘Āmir al-Anṣāriyyah, who was the wife of Ḥamzah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: "I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: 'Indeed, men unlawfully take from the wealth of Allāh; for them is the Fire on the Day of Resurrection.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.

Love of Authority and Leadership:

It is narrated from Ka‘b ibn Mālīk, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Two hungry wolves sent into a flock of sheep are not more destructive to them than a man's eagerness for wealth and honor is to his religion." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth.

Prohibition of Seeking Leadership:

Allāh the Exalted said: {That home of the Hereafter We assign to those who do not desire exaltedness upon the earth or corruption. And the [best] outcome is for the righteous.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:83).

It is narrated from Abū Sa‘īd ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Samurah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said to me: "O ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Samurah, do not ask for leadership, for if you are given it without asking, you will be aided in it. But if you are given it after asking, you will be left to manage it yourself. And if you swear an oath and then see something else better than it, then do that which is better and expiate for your oath." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said to me: "O Abū Dharr, I see that you are weak, and I love for you what I love for myself. Do not take command over two people, and do not take charge of an orphan's property."

Reported by Muslim. It is narrated from him that he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, will you not appoint me?' He struck his hand on my shoulder and then said: 'O Abū Dharr, indeed you are weak, and it is a trust. And on the Day of Resurrection, it will be a source of disgrace and regret, except for one who takes it rightfully and fulfills what is due upon him therein.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, you will be eager for leadership, and it will be a source of regret on the Day of Resurrection." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

Imām Ibn Taymiyyah, may Allāh have mercy on him, said in the book Al-Siyāsah al-Shar‘iyyah (1/15):

The first chapter concerns positions of authority. As for fulfilling trusts, there are two types. The first is positions of authority, which was the reason for the revelation of the verse: {Indeed, Allāh commands you to render trusts to whom they are due} (Al-Nisā’:58). This chapter has four sections:

The first section: Employing the most suitable. When the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, conquered Makkah and received the keys of the Ka‘bah from the Banū Shaybah, al-‘Abbās requested them from him to combine for himself the provision of water for pilgrims and the custodianship of the House. Allāh then revealed this verse, commanding the return of the keys of the Ka‘bah to the Banū Shaybah. Thus, it is obligatory for the ruler to appoint to every position among the affairs of the Muslims the most suitable person he can find for that task. The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever is entrusted with any of the affairs of the Muslims and appoints a man when he can find someone more suitable for the Muslims than him, has betrayed Allāh and His Messenger." In another narration: "Whoever appoints a man to a position over a group while he can find in that group someone more pleasing [to Allāh] than him, has betrayed Allāh, His Messenger, and the believers." Reported by al-Ḥākim in his Ṣaḥīḥ. 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Whoever is entrusted with any of the affairs of the Muslims and appoints a man due to affection or kinship between them has betrayed Allāh, His Messenger, and the Muslims." This is an obligation upon him. He must search for those deserving of positions, such as his deputies over regions, who are governors – deputies of the one in authority – and judges, commanders of armies, leaders of military units, both small and large, and those in charge of finances, such as ministers, scribes, supervisors, and collectors of land tax (kharāj), charity (ṣadaqāt), and other wealth belonging to the Muslims. Each of these must, in turn, appoint and employ the most suitable person he can find. This extends to imāms of prayer, muezzins, Qur'ān reciters, teachers, leaders of the pilgrimage, postal services, intelligence agents (who are messengers), treasurers, guards of fortresses, and gatekeepers of fortresses and cities, leaders of large and small military units, chiefs of tribes and markets, and heads of villages (who are local chiefs). It is obligatory for everyone entrusted with any affair of the Muslims, from these and others, to employ in what is under his authority, in every place, the most suitable person he can. He should not prefer a man because he sought the position or was first to apply; rather, that is a reason for refusal. For it is in the two Ṣaḥīḥs from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace: "Some people came to him and asked him for a position of authority, and he said, 'We do not appoint to this affair of ours one who seeks it.'"

He said to 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Samurah: "O 'Abd al-Raḥmān, do not ask for leadership, for if you are given it without asking, you will be aided in it. But if you are given it after asking, you will be left to manage it yourself." Reported in the two Ṣaḥīḥs. And he, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever seeks a judgeship and seeks help for it will be left to it. And whoever does not seek a judgeship and does not seek help for it, Allāh will send down an angel to him to guide him."

Reported by the compilers of Sunan.

If one deviates from the most deserving and suitable to someone else due to kinship between them, or loyalty from manumission, or friendship, or agreement in town, school of thought, methodology, or ethnicity like Arab, Persian, Turkish, or Roman, or for a bribe he takes from him in money or benefit, or other such reasons, or due to a grudge in his heart against the most deserving, or enmity between them, then he has betrayed Allāh, His Messenger, and the believers, and has entered into what is forbidden in His, the Exalted's, saying: {O you who have believed, do not betray Allāh and the Messenger or betray your trusts while you know [the consequence].}

Then He said: {And know that your properties and your children are a trial and that Allāh has with Him a great reward.} (Al-Anfāl:27-28). For a man, out of love for his child or his freed slave, may prefer him for some positions or give him wealth he does not deserve, thus betraying his trust. Likewise, he may favor him with an increase in his wealth or his portion by taking wealth he does not deserve, or by showing favoritism to one who flatters him in some positions, thus betraying Allāh, His Messenger, and his trust.

Then, the one who fulfills the trust despite opposing his own desires, Allāh will make him steadfast and preserve him in his family and wealth after him. And the one who obeys his desires, Allāh will punish him with the opposite of his intention, so his family will be humiliated and his wealth will be lost. In this regard, there is the famous story that one of the Abbasid caliphs asked a scholar to narrate to him what he had witnessed. He said: "I witnessed 'Umar ibn 'Abd al-'Azīz. It was said to him, 'O Commander of the Faithful, the mouths of your sons are deprived of this wealth, and you have left them poor with nothing.' This was during his fatal illness. He said, 'Bring them in to me.' They were brought in, and they were over ten males, none of them having reached puberty. When he saw them, his eyes welled up with tears.

Then he said: 'O my sons, by Allāh, I have not withheld from you any right that is yours, nor was I one to take people's wealth and give it to you. You are one of two types of men: either righteous, and Allāh takes care of the righteous; or not righteous, and I will not leave for him what he can use to disobey Allāh. Leave me.'

He [the narrator] said: 'I indeed saw one of his sons equipping a hundred horses for the cause of Allāh,' meaning he gave them to those who would fight on them. I say: This, and he was the caliph of the Muslims from the farthest east, the lands of the Turks, to the farthest west, the lands of Andalusia and others, and from the islands of Cyprus and the frontiers of Syria and the border fortresses like Tarsus and its like, to the farthest Yemen. And each of his sons inherited only a very small amount from his estate, said to be less than twenty dirhams. He [the narrator] said: 'And I was present with one of the [later] caliphs when his sons divided his estate, and each one of them took six hundred thousand dinars. And I indeed saw some of them begging from people,' i.e., asking them with their hands. In this chapter, there are stories and events witnessed in [our] time and heard about from before it, which contain a lesson for everyone with intellect. The Sunnah of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, has indicated that positions of authority are a trust that must be fulfilled in various instances, such as what has been mentioned and like his saying to Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, regarding leadership:

"Indeed, it is a trust, and on the Day of Resurrection, it will be a source of disgrace and regret, except for one who takes it rightfully and fulfills what is due upon him therein."

Reported by Muslim.

Al-Bukhārī reported in his Ṣaḥīḥ from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "When trust is lost, then await the Hour." It was said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and what is its loss?' He said, "When authority is entrusted to those who are not qualified for it, then await the Hour." The Muslims have unanimously agreed on the meaning of this. For the guardian of an orphan, the administrator of an endowment (waqf), and a man's agent over his property must act for him in the best and most optimal way, as Allāh the Exalted said: {And do not approach the property of an orphan, except in the way that is best.} (Al-An‘ām:152 and Al-Isrā’:34). He did not say, "except in the way that is good." This is because the ruler is a shepherd over the people, like a shepherd of sheep, as the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Each of you is a shepherd, and each of you is responsible for his flock. The imām who is over the people is a shepherd and is responsible for his flock. A woman is a shepherdess in her husband's house and is responsible for her flock. A child is a shepherd over his father's property and is responsible for his flock. A slave is a shepherd over his master's property and is responsible for his flock. Behold, each of you is a shepherd, and each of you is responsible for his flock." Reported in the two Ṣaḥīḥs. And he, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "There is no shepherd whom Allāh entrusts with a flock, who dies on the day he dies while he is deceitful towards it, except that Allāh forbids him the fragrance of Paradise." Reported by Muslim. Abū Muslim al-Khawlānī entered upon Mu‘āwiyah ibn Abī Sufyān and said: "Peace be upon you, O hired worker." They said, "Say: Peace be upon you, O Amīr (Commander/Prince)." He said, "Peace be upon you, O hired worker." They said, "Say: O Amīr." He said, "Peace be upon you, O hired worker." They said, "Say: Amīr." Mu‘āwiyah said: "Leave Abū Muslim, for he knows best what he is saying." He [Abū Muslim] said: "You are merely a hired worker whom the owner of this flock hired to tend to it. If you treat its scabies, cure its sick, and keep its foremost with its hindmost, its master will reward you. But if you do not treat its scabies, nor cure its sick, nor keep its foremost with its hindmost, its master will punish you."

This is clear by analogy. For creation are the servants of Allāh, and rulers are Allāh's deputies over His servants. They are agents of the servants over themselves, like one of two partners with the other. So they combine the meaning of guardianship and agency. Then, the guardian and agent, when he appoints a man in his affairs and leaves someone more suitable for trade or property than him, and sells a commodity for a price when he can find someone who will buy it for a better price than that, has betrayed his companion, especially if there is affection or kinship between the one he favored and himself. For his companion will detest him, blame him, and see that he has betrayed him and shown favoritism to his relative or friend.

Lying:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge.} (Al-Isrā':36). And He the Exalted said: {Man does not utter any word except that with him is an observer prepared [to record].} (Qāf:18).

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, truthfulness leads to righteousness, and righteousness leads to Paradise. A man continues to speak the truth until he is recorded with Allāh as a truthful person. And indeed, lying leads to wickedness, and wickedness leads to the Hellfire. A man continues to lie until he is recorded with Allāh as a liar." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "There are four characteristics, whoever possesses them is a pure hypocrite, and whoever possesses one of them has a characteristic of hypocrisy until he abandons it: when he is entrusted, he betrays; when he speaks, he lies; when he makes a covenant, he breaks it; and when he disputes, he behaves immorally." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Whoever claims to have seen a dream he did not see will be tasked with tying two barley grains together, and he will never be able to do it. Whoever listens to the conversation of a people who dislike him doing so, molten lead will be poured into his ears on the Day of Resurrection. And whoever creates an image will be punished and tasked with breathing a soul into it, and he will not be able to do so." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

Clarification of Permissible Lying:

Know that although lying is fundamentally forbidden, it is permissible in certain situations under conditions that I have clarified in the book Al-Adhkār. In summary, speech is a means to achieve objectives. Any praiseworthy objective that can be achieved without lying, lying therein is forbidden. If it cannot be achieved except by lying, then lying is permissible. Then, if achieving that objective is permissible, lying is permissible, and if it is obligatory, lying is obligatory. So, if a Muslim hides from an oppressor who wants to kill him or take his wealth, and his wealth is hidden, and someone is asked about him, it is obligatory to lie by concealing him. Similarly, if one has a deposit and an oppressor wants to take it, it is obligatory to lie by concealing it. The most cautious approach in all this is to use dissimulation (tawriyah). The meaning of dissimulation is to intend by one's statement a correct meaning that is not a lie in relation to oneself, even if it is a lie in the apparent wording and in relation to what the listener understands. If one abandons dissimulation and utters a clear lie, it is not forbidden in this situation. Scholars have used as evidence for the permissibility of lying in this situation the ḥadīth of Umm Kulthūm, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "He is not a liar who reconciles between people and conveys good or says good." Agreed upon. Muslim added in a narration: Umm Kulthūm said: "And I did not hear him grant concession for anything that people say [of lies] except in three cases: war, reconciliation between people, and a man's speech to his wife, and a woman's speech to her husband."

Backbiting:

Imām al-Nawawī, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And do not backbite one another. Would one of you like to eat the flesh of his brother when dead? You would detest it. And fear Allāh; indeed, Allāh is Accepting of repentance and Merciful.} (Al-Ḥujurāt:12). And He the Exalted said: {And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge. Indeed, the hearing, the sight and the heart - about all those [one] will be questioned.} (Al-Isrā':36). And He the Exalted said: {Man does not utter any word except that with him is an observer prepared [to record].} (Qāf:18).

Know that it is incumbent upon every responsible person to guard his tongue from all speech except speech in which there is a clear benefit. When speech and silence are equal in benefit, the Sunnah is to remain silent, because permissible speech may lead to forbidden or disliked speech, and this is common in practice, and safety is unparalleled by anything.

It is narrated from Abū Mūsā, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, which of the Muslims is best?' He said, 'One from whose tongue and hand other Muslims are safe.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Indeed, a servant may utter a word without thinking about it, by which he slips into the Fire further than the distance between the East and the West." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Mu'ādh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, inform me of an action that will admit me to Paradise and distance me from the Fire.' He said, 'You have asked about something great, and indeed it is easy for whom Allāh the Exalted makes it easy. Worship Allāh, associating nothing with Him, establish prayer, give zakāh, fast Ramaḍān, and perform Ḥajj to the House if you are able to find a way. Then he said, 'Shall I not guide you to the gates of goodness? Fasting is a shield. Charity extinguishes sin as water extinguishes fire. And the prayer of a man in the middle of the night.' Then he recited: {Their sides forsake their beds...} until he reached {...what they used to do.} (Al-Sajdah:16-17). Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of the head of the matter, its pillar, and its peak?' I said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.' He said, 'The head of the matter is Islām, its pillar is prayer, and its peak is Jihād.' Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of what controls all of that?' I said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.' So he took hold of his tongue and said, 'Restrain this.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, will we be held accountable for what we say?' He said, 'May your mother be bereaved of you! Are people thrown into the Fire on their faces except for the harvests of their tongues?'" Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do you know what backbiting is?" They said, 'Allāh and His Messenger know best.' He said, 'It is to mention your brother in a way that he dislikes.' It was said, 'What if what I say about my brother is true?' He said, 'If what you say about him is true, you have backbitten him. And if it is not true, you have slandered him.'" Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Bakrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said in his sermon on the Day of Sacrifice at Minā during the Farewell Pilgrimage: "Indeed, your blood, your wealth, and your honor are sacred to you, like the sanctity of this day of yours, in this month of yours, in this land of yours. Behold, have I conveyed?" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: "I said to the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, 'Ṣafiyyah is such-and-such for you.' Some narrators said she meant short. He said, 'You have said a word that, if mixed with the water of the sea, would contaminate it.' She said: 'And I imitated someone for him.' He said, 'I would not like to imitate someone even if I were to have such-and-such.'" Reported by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth. The meaning of "mazajat’hu" (contaminated it) is that it mixed with it in such a way that its taste or smell would change due to its extreme foulness and ugliness. This is one of the most eloquent deterrents from backbiting. Allāh the Exalted said: {Nor does he speak from [his own] inclination. It is not but a revelation revealed.} (Al-Najm:3-4). It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "When I was taken up on the Night Journey (Mi'rāj), I passed by a people who had fingernails of copper with which they were scratching their faces and chests. I said, 'Who are these, O Jibrīl?' He said, 'These are those who used to eat the flesh of people and attack their honor.'" Reported by Abū Dāwūd.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Everything of a Muslim is sacred to another Muslim: his blood, his honor, and his wealth." Reported by Muslim.

Chapter on the Prohibition of Listening to Backbiting and the Command for Whoever Hears Forbidden Backbiting to Refute it and Denounce its Speaker:

If he is unable or his words are not accepted, he should leave the gathering if possible. Allāh the Exalted said: {And when they hear ill speech, they turn away from it.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:55). And He the Exalted said: {And they who turn away from ill speech.} (Al-Mu'minūn:3). And He the Exalted said: {Indeed, the hearing, the sight and the heart - about all those [one] will be questioned.} (Al-Isrā':36). And He the Exalted said: {And when you see those who engage in [offensive] discourse concerning Our verses, then turn away from them until they enter into another conversion. And if Satan should cause you to forget, then do not remain after the reminder with the wrongdoing people.} (Al-An'ām:68).

It is narrated from Abū al-Dardā', may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Whoever defends the honor of his brother, Allāh will protect his face from the Fire on the Day of Resurrection."

Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ḥadīth.

Clarification of Permissible Backbiting:

Know that backbiting is permissible for a legitimate Sharī'ah purpose that cannot be achieved except through it:

It has six reasons:

- First: Seeking redress for injustice. It is permissible for the oppressed person to complain to the ruler, the judge, or others who have authority or ability to give him justice against his oppressor, by saying, "So-and-so wronged me in such-and-such a way."
- Second: Seeking help to change an evil and return a sinner to a state of correctness. One may say to someone who is hoped to have the ability to remove the evil, "So-and-so does such-and-such, so reprimand him for it," and the like. His intention must be to achieve the removal of the evil; if he does not intend that, it is forbidden.
- Third: Seeking a religious ruling (fatwā). One may say to the mufti, "My father, or my brother, or my husband, or so-and-so wronged me in such-and-such a way. Does he have the right to do that? And what is my way to be free from it, obtain my right, and repel the injustice?" and the like. This is permissible due to need, but it is more cautious and better to say, "What do you say about a man, or a person, or a husband whose situation was such-and-such?" as this achieves the purpose without specifying the individual. Nevertheless, specifying is permissible, as we will mention in the ḥadīth of Hind, if Allāh wills.

- Fourth: Warning Muslims of evil and advising them. This has several aspects, including discrediting unreliable narrators and witnesses, which is permissible by the consensus of Muslims, and indeed obligatory due to need. Another aspect is consultation regarding marrying someone, partnering with them, entrusting them with something, dealing with them, or other matters, or conversing with them. It is obligatory for the one consulted not to hide the person's condition but to mention the faults in him with the intention of giving advice. Another aspect is if one sees a student of religious knowledge frequenting an innovator or a dissolute person to learn from him, and fears that the student will be harmed by that, he must advise him by clarifying the person's condition, provided that he intends to give advice. This is a matter in which mistakes are made, and the speaker may be driven by envy, and Satan may confuse him about it and make him imagine that it is advice, so one should be alert to that. Another aspect is if someone holds a position of authority but does not fulfill it properly, either by not being suitable for it, or by being dissolute or negligent, and the like. It is obligatory to mention this to one who has general authority over him so that he may remove him and appoint someone suitable, or so that he may know this about him to deal with him according to his condition and not be deceived by him, and to strive to urge him towards righteousness or to replace him.
- Fifth: If a person openly displays his dissoluteness or innovation, such as one who openly drinks alcohol, confiscates people's property, unjustly collects taxes and levies, and undertakes false affairs. It is permissible to mention what he openly displays, but it is forbidden to mention other faults of his unless there is another permissible reason among those we have mentioned.

- Sixth: Identification. If a person is known by a nickname such as "the bleary-eyed" (al-A'mash), "the lame" (al-A'raj), "the deaf" (al-Aṣamm), "the blind" (al-A'mā), "the cross-eyed" (al-Aḥwal), and others, it is permissible to identify them by it. However, it is forbidden to use it in a derogatory manner. If it is possible to identify him by other means, that is preferable.

These are six reasons mentioned by the scholars, and most of them are agreed upon.

Malicious Gossip (Al-Namimah), which is Transmitting Speech Between People to Cause Corruption:

Allāh the Exalted said: {A slanderer, going about with malicious gossip.} (Al-Qalam:11). And He the Exalted said: {Man does not utter any word except that with him is an observer prepared [to record].} (Qāf:18).

- It is narrated from Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A malicious gossiper will not enter Paradise." Agreed upon.
- It is narrated from Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, passed by two graves and said, 'Indeed, they are being punished, and they are not being punished for a major sin. Nay, indeed it is major. As for one of them, he used to go about with malicious gossip. And as for the other, he did not protect himself from [splashes of] his urine.'" Agreed upon. The scholars said the meaning of "and they are not being punished for a major sin" is major in their own estimation, or it was said, major to abandon for them.

The Two-Faced Person:

Allāh the Exalted said: {They seek to hide from people and seek not to hide from Allāh, and He is with them when they spend the night in such as He does not approve of speech. And ever is Allāh, of what they do, encompassing.} (Al-Nisā':108)

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "You will find that people are like mines; the best of them in the Jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic ignorance) are the best of them in Islām if they gain understanding (fiqh). You will find that the best of people in this matter are those who most dislike it. And you will find that the worst of people is the two-faced person, who comes to these with one face and to those with another face." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Muḥammad ibn Zayd: "Some people said to his grandfather 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, 'We enter upon our rulers and say to them things contrary to what we say when we leave their presence.' He said: 'We used to consider this hypocrisy during the time of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.

Spreading Immorality and Corrupting Relations Among Muslims:

It is narrated from Abū al-Dardā' that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Shall I not inform you of what is better than the rank of fasting, prayer, and charity?" They said, 'Yes.' He said, 'Reconciling relations, for corrupting relations is the shaver.' Abū 'Īsā (al-Tirmidhī) said this is a ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth. It is also narrated from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said, 'It is the shaver; I do not say it shaves hair, but it shaves off religion.'"

Zayd ibn Yaḥyā al-Dimashqī narrated to us, Abū Mu'īd narrated to us, Makḥūl narrated to us from Anas ibn Mālīk who said: "It was said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, when should we stop enjoining good and forbidding evil?' He said, 'When what appeared among the Children of Israel appears among you: when immorality is among your elders, authority is among your young ones, and knowledge is among your lowly ones."

False Witness:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And avoid false statement.} (Al-Ḥajj:30). And He the Exalted said: {And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge.} (Al-Isrā':36). And He the Exalted said: {Man does not utter any word except that with him is an observer prepared [to record].} (Qāf:18). And He the Exalted said: {Indeed, your Lord is in observation.} (Al-Fajr:14). And He the Exalted said: {And [they are] those who do not testify to falsehood.} (Al-Furqān:72). It is narrated from Abū Bakrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Shall I not inform you of the greatest of major sins?" We said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.' He said, 'Associating partners with Allāh and disobeying parents.' He was reclining, then he sat up and said, 'And indeed, false speech and false witness.' He kept repeating it until we said, 'If only he would be silent.'" Agreed upon.

Obscenity and Foul Language:

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A believer is not a slanderer, nor a curser, nor obscene, nor foul-mouthed." Reported by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ḥadīth.

Cursing a Specific Person or Animal:

It is narrated from Abū Zayd Thābit ibn al-Ḍaḥḥāk al-Anṣārī, may Allāh be pleased with him, who was one of the participants in the Pledge of Ridwān, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever knowingly swears an oath by a religion other than Islām, falsely and intentionally, he is as he said. Whoever kills himself with something will be punished with it on the Day of Resurrection. A man is not bound by a vow concerning what he does not own. And cursing a believer is like killing him." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is not befitting for a truthful person (ṣiddīq) to be a frequent curser." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū al-Dardā', may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Frequent cursers will not be intercessors nor witnesses on the Day of Resurrection." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from Samurah ibn Jundub, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not curse one another with the curse of Allāh, nor with His anger, nor with the Fire." Reported by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth.

It is narrated from Abū al-Dardā', may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "When a servant curses something, the curse ascends to the heaven, and the gates of heaven are closed against it. Then it descends to the earth, and its gates are closed against it. Then it takes a right and a left turn. If it finds no target, it returns to the one who was cursed, if he deserved it; otherwise, it returns to its sayer." Reported by Abū Dāwūd.

It is narrated from 'Imrān ibn al-Ḥuṣayn, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "While the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, was on one of his journeys, a woman from the Anṣār was on a she-camel. She became annoyed and cursed it. The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, heard that and said, 'Take what is on it and leave it, for it is cursed.' 'Imrān said, 'It is as if I see it now, walking among the people, and no one interferes with it.'"

Reported by Muslim.

Insulting a Muslim Without Justification:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And those who harm believing men and believing women for [something] other than what they have earned have certainly borne slander and manifest sin.} (Al-Aḥzāb:58)

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Insulting a Muslim is dissoluteness (fusūq), and fighting him is disbelief (kufr)." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "No man accuses another man of dissoluteness or disbelief except that it returns to him if his companion is not as such." Reported by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "When two people insult each other, the sin is upon the one who initiated it, until the wronged one transgresses [in retaliation]." Reported by Muslim.

It is narrated from him that he said: "A man who had drunk [alcohol] was brought to the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. He said, 'Strike him.' Abū Hurayrah said, 'Some of us struck him with our hands, some with our sandals, and some with our garments.' When he left, some of the people said, 'May Allāh disgrace you.' He said, 'Do not say this; do not help Satan against him.'" Reported by al-Bukhārī.

Causing Harm:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And those who harm believing men and believing women for [something] other than what they have earned have certainly borne slander and manifest sin.} (Al-Aḥzāb:58)

It is narrated from ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A Muslim is one from whose tongue and hand other Muslims are safe, and an emigrant (muhājir) is one who forsakes what Allāh has forbidden." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever loves to be saved from the Fire and admitted to Paradise, let his death come to him while he believes in Allāh and the Last Day, and let him treat people as he wishes to be treated." Reported by Muslim.

Envy (Al-Ḥasad), which is Wishing for the Removal of a Blessing from its Possessor, Whether it is a Religious or Worldly Blessing:

Allāh the Exalted said: {Or do they envy people for what Allāh has given them of His bounty?} (Al-Nisā’:54).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Beware of envy, for envy consumes good deeds just as fire consumes wood," or he said, "grass." Reported by Abū Dāwūd.

Spying and Eavesdropping on Speech that Someone Dislikes to be Heard:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And do not spy.} (Al-Ḥujurāt:12). And He the Exalted said: {And those who harm believing men and believing women for [something] other than what they have earned have certainly borne slander and manifest sin.} (Al-Aḥzāb:58).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Beware of suspicion, for suspicion is the falsest of speech. Do not seek out faults, do not spy, do not compete [negatively], do not envy one another, do not hate one another, and do not turn away from one another. Be servants of Allāh, brothers, as He has commanded you. A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim: he does not wrong him, nor forsake him, nor despise him. Piety is here, piety is here' – and he pointed to his chest – 'It is sufficient evil for a man to despise his brother. Everything of a Muslim is sacred to another Muslim: his blood, his honor, and his wealth. Indeed, Allāh does not look at your bodies, nor at your forms and deeds, but He looks at your hearts.'" In another narration: "Do not envy one another, do not hate one another, do not spy, do not seek out faults, do not inflate prices by overbidding, and be servants of Allāh, brothers." In another narration: "Do not sever ties, do not turn away from one another, do not hate one another, do not envy one another, and be servants of Allāh, brothers." In another narration: "Do not abandon one another, and do not enter into a transaction when others have already entered into it." Reported by Muslim with all these narrations. Al-Bukhārī reported most of them.

It is narrated from Mu'āwiyah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "If you follow the faults of Muslims, you will corrupt them or almost corrupt them." An authentic ḥadīth reported by Abū Dāwūd with an authentic chain of narration.

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him: "A man was brought to him, and it was said, 'This is so-and-so, his beard is dripping with wine.' He said, 'We have been forbidden from spying, but if something becomes apparent to us, we will act upon it.'" A ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ ḥadīth reported by Abū Dāwūd with a chain of narration according to the conditions of al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

Having Bad Suspicion About Muslims Without Necessity:

Allāh the Exalted said: {O you who have believed, avoid much [negative] assumption. Indeed, some assumption is sin.} (Al-Ḥujurāt:12).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Beware of suspicion, for suspicion is the falsest of speech." Agreed upon.

Belittling and Despising Muslims

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {O you who have believed, let not a people ridicule [another] people; perhaps they may be better than them; nor let women ridicule [other] women; perhaps they may be better than them. And do not insult one another and do not call each other by [offensive] nicknames. Wretched is the name of disobedience after [one's] faith. And whoever does not repent – then it is those who are the wrongdoers.} (Al-Ḥujurāt: 11).

And He, the Exalted, says: {Woe to every slanderer and backbiter.} (Al-Humazah: 1).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is sufficient evil for a man to despise his Muslim brother." Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "No one who has an atom's weight of pride in his heart will enter Paradise." A man said, "Indeed, a man likes his garment to be beautiful and his sandals to be beautiful." He said, "Indeed, Allāh is Beautiful and loves beauty. Pride is rejecting the truth and looking down on people." Narrated by Muslim. Rejecting the truth means to repel it, and looking down on them means to despise them.

It is narrated from Jundub ibn 'Abdullāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A man said, 'By Allāh, Allāh will not forgive so-and-so.' Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, said: 'Who is he who swears by Me that I will not forgive so-and-so? Indeed, I have forgiven him and nullified your deeds.'" Narrated by Muslim.

Showing Malice Towards a Muslim

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {The believers are but brothers} (Al-Ḥujurāt: 10). And He, the Exalted, says: {Indeed, those who like that immorality should be spread [or publicized] among those who have believed will have a painful punishment in this world and the Hereafter} (Al-Nūr: 19).

It is narrated from Wāthilah ibn al-Asqaʿ, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not show malice towards your brother, for Allāh may have mercy on him and test you." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

Deceit and Fraud

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {And those who harm believing men and believing women for [something] other than what they have earned have certainly borne slander and manifest sin} (Al-Aḥzāb: 58).

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever bears arms against us is not one of us, and whoever deceives us is not one of us." Narrated by Muslim.

In another narration by him: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, passed by a pile of food, put his hand into it, and his fingers felt moisture. He said, 'What is this, O owner of the food?' He said, 'It was rained upon, O Messenger of Allāh.' He said, 'Why did you not put it on top of the food so that people could see it? Whoever deceives us is not one of us.'"

It is narrated from Ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace: "Forbade artificial inflation of prices by a non-buyer (najsh)." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from him that he said: "A man mentioned to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he was deceived in sales. The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'When you enter into a sale, say: No deception (lā khilābah).'" Agreed upon. Al-Khilābah, with a dotted khā' with a kasrah and a single bā', means deception.

Treachery

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {O you who have believed, fulfill [your] contracts} (Al-Mā'idah: 1). And He, the Exalted, says: {And fulfill [every] covenant. Indeed, the covenant is ever [that about which one will be] questioned} (Al-Isrā': 34).

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "There are four characteristics, whoever possesses them is a pure hypocrite, and whoever possesses one of them has a characteristic of hypocrisy until he abandons it: when he is entrusted, he betrays; when he speaks, he lies; when he makes a covenant, he is treacherous; and when he disputes, he behaves immorally." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, Ibn ‘Umar, and Anas, may Allāh be pleased with them, that they said: The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Every treacherous person will have a banner on the Day of Resurrection, and it will be said, 'This is the treachery of so-and-so.'" Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Every treacherous person will have a banner by his posterior on the Day of Resurrection, raised according to the extent of his treachery. And indeed, there is no treachery greater than that of a leader of the common people." Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Allāh, the Exalted, said: 'There are three whom I will oppose on the Day of Resurrection: a man who gives his word in My Name and then is treacherous, a man who sells a free person and consumes his price, and a man who hires a worker, benefits fully from him, and does not give him his wage.'" Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

Reminding of Favors Given

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {O you who have believed, do not invalidate your charities with reminders [of your generosity] or injury} (Al-Baqarah: 264). And He, the Exalted, says: {Those who spend their wealth in the way of Allāh and then do not follow up what they have spent with reminders [of it] or [other] injury} (Al-Baqarah: 262).

It is narrated from Abū Dharr, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "There are three whom Allāh will not speak to on the Day of Resurrection, nor look at them, nor purify them, and for them is a painful punishment." He said, The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, repeated it three times. Abū Dharr said, "They have failed and lost! Who are they, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "The one who lets his garment hang below his ankles (out of pride), the one who reminds others of his charity, and the one who sells his goods by false oaths." Narrated by Muslim.

Boasting and Transgression

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {So do not claim yourselves to be pure; He is most knowing of who fears Him} (Al-Najm: 32). And He, the Exalted, says: {The cause is only against the ones who wrong the people and tyrannize upon the earth without right. Those will have a painful punishment} (Al-Shūrā: 42).

It is narrated from ‘Iyād ibn Ḥimār, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, Allāh, the Exalted, revealed to me that you should be humble so that no one transgresses against another and no one boasts over another." Narrated by Muslim. The linguists said: Transgression (al-baghy) means overstepping bounds and behaving arrogantly.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "When a man says, 'The people are ruined,' then he is the most ruined among them." Narrated by Muslim. The well-known narration has ahlakuhum with a ḍammah on the kāf, and it has also been narrated with a fathah (ahlakahum). This prohibition is for one who says it out of self-admiration, belittling people, and exalting himself above them; this is what is forbidden. As for one who says it because of the deficiency he sees in people regarding their religion, and says it out of sorrow for them and for the religion, then there is no harm in it. This is how the scholars have interpreted and detailed it.

Abandoning Muslims for More Than Three Days, Except for an Innovator, One Who Openly Commits Immorality, or the Like

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {The believers are but brothers, so make settlement between your brothers} (Al-Ḥujurāt: 10). And He, the Exalted, says: {And do not cooperate in sin and aggression} (Al-Mā'idah: 2).

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not sever ties with one another, do not turn away from one another, do not hate one another, and do not envy one another. Be servants of Allāh, brothers. It is not permissible for a Muslim to abandon his brother for more than three days." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Ayyūb, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is not permissible for a Muslim to abandon his brother for more than three nights, such that they meet and this one turns away and that one turns away. The better of the two is the one who initiates the greeting of peace." Agreed upon.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Deeds are presented every Monday and Thursday, and Allāh forgives every person who does not associate anything with Allāh, except for a person between whom and his brother there is animosity. He says, 'Leave these two until they reconcile.'" Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Jābir, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Indeed, Satan has despaired of being worshipped by those who pray in the Arabian Peninsula, but [he strives] in instigating conflict among them." Narrated by Muslim. Instigating conflict (al-taḥrīsh) means causing corruption, changing their hearts, and causing them to sever ties.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is not permissible for a Muslim to abandon his brother for more than three days. Whoever abandons [him] for more than three days and dies, enters the Fire." Narrated by Abū Dāwūd with a chain of narration according to the conditions of al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Khirāsh Ḥadrad ibn Abī Ḥadrad al-Aslamī, also said to be al-Sulamī, the Companion, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Whoever abandons his brother for a year, it is like shedding his blood." Narrated by Abū Dāwūd with an authentic chain of narration.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is not permissible for a believer to abandon a believer for more than three days. If three days pass, he should meet him and greet him with peace. If he returns the greeting, they have both shared in the reward. If he does not return it, he has incurred the sin, and the Muslim is absolved of the abandonment." Narrated by Abū Dāwūd with a good chain of narration. Abū Dāwūd said: If the abandonment is for the sake of Allāh, the Exalted, then this does not apply.

Heart-Softening Reminders, Asceticism, and Curing Diseases of the Heart: Remembering Death and Shortening Hopes

It is mentioned in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {Every soul will taste death, and you will only be given your [full] compensation on the Day of Resurrection. So he who is drawn away from the Fire and admitted to Paradise has attained [his desire]. And what is the life of this world except the enjoyment of delusion} (Āl ‘Imrān: 185).

And He, the Exalted, says: {And no soul perceives what it will earn tomorrow, and no soul perceives in what land it will die} (Luqmān: 34).

And He, the Exalted, says: {And when their term has come, they will not remain behind an hour, nor will they precede [it]} (Al-Naḥl: 61).

And He, the Exalted, says: {O you who have believed, let not your wealth and your children divert you from remembrance of Allāh. And whoever does that – then those are the losers. And spend from what We have provided you before death comes to one of you and he says, "My Lord, if only You would delay me for a brief term so I would give charity and be among the righteous." But never will Allāh delay a soul when its time has come. And Allāh is Acquainted with what you do} (Al-Munāfiqūn: 9-11).

And He, the Exalted, says: {Until, when death comes to one of them, he says, "My Lord, send me back, that I might do righteousness in that which I left behind." No! It is only a word he is saying; and behind them is a barrier until the Day they are resurrected. So when the Horn is blown, no relationship will there be among them that Day, nor will they ask about one another. And those whose scales are heavy [with good deeds] – it is they who are the successful. And those whose scales are light – those are the ones who will have lost their souls, abiding eternally in Hellfire. The Fire will sear their faces, and they therein will have taut lips. [It will be said], "Were not My verses recited to you, and you used to deny them?"...} until His statement, the Exalted: {[Allāh] will say, "How long did you remain on earth in number of years?" They will say, "We remained a day or part of a day; ask those who keep count." He will say, "You stayed not but a little – if only you had known. Then did you think that We created you uselessly and that to Us you would not be returned?"} (Al-Mu'minūn: 99-105, 112-115). And He, the Exalted, says: {Has the time not come for those who have believed that their hearts should become humbly submissive at the remembrance of Allāh and what has come down of the truth? And let them not be like those who were given the Scripture before, and a long period passed over them, so their hearts hardened; and many of them are defiantly disobedient} (Al-Ḥadīd: 16). And the verses in this chapter are many and well-known.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, took me by the shoulder and said, 'Be in this world as if you were a stranger or a traveler.'" And Ibn 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, used to say, "When evening comes, do not expect [to live till] morning, and when morning comes, do not expect [to live till] evening. Take from your health for your illness, and from your life for your death."

Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "It is not the right of a Muslim who has something to bequeath that he should pass two nights without his will being written with him." Agreed upon. This is the wording of al-Bukhārī. In a narration by Muslim: "pass three nights." Ibn 'Umar said, "Not a night has passed for me since I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say that, except that my will is with me."

It is narrated from Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, drew a square, and drew a line in the middle extending out of it, and drew small lines towards this middle line from its side which was in the middle. He then said, 'This is man, and this is his lifespan, surrounding him, or it has surrounded him. And this which is outside is his hope, and these small lines are the afflictions. If this one misses him, that one bites him, and if that one misses him, this one bites him.'" Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Hasten to do good deeds before seven things [befall you]: Are you waiting for anything but poverty that makes you forget, or wealth that makes you transgress, or illness that corrupts, or old age that makes you senile, or sudden death, or the Antichrist – an evil awaited absent one – or the Hour? And the Hour is more calamitous and more bitter." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

It is narrated from him that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Frequently remember the destroyer of pleasures," meaning death. Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

Remembering the Resurrection, Gathering, Paradise, and Hellfire

It is mentioned in the book al-Targhīb wa al-Tarhīb by Imām al-Mundhirī, may Allāh, the Exalted, have mercy on him:

It is narrated from Abū Sa'īd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "How can I feel at ease when the Blower of the Horn has put the Horn to his lips, bent his forehead, and inclined his ear, waiting to be commanded to blow?" It was as if this weighed heavily on his Companions, so they said, "What should we do, O Messenger of Allāh?" or "What should we say?" He said, "Say: Allāh is sufficient for us, and He is the best Disposer of affairs. Upon Allāh we rely." And perhaps he said, "We rely upon Allāh." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, Ibn Ḥibbān, and Aḥmad.

It is narrated from ‘Uqbah ibn ‘Āmir, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Before the Hour, a black cloud will appear upon you from the direction of the West, like a shield. It will continue to rise in the sky and spread until it fills the sky. Then a caller will call out, 'O people, the command of Allāh has come, so do not seek to hasten it.' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, two men will be spreading a cloth and will never fold it, a man will be plastering his trough and will never water anything from it, and a man will be milking his she-camel and will never drink from it.'" Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī with a good chain of narration; its narrators are trustworthy and well-known.

It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "People will be gathered barefoot, naked, and uncircumcised." ‘Ā’ishah said, "I said, 'Men and women together, looking at one another?' He said, 'The matter will be too severe for them to be concerned with that.'" In another narration: "for them to look at one another." Narrated by al-Bukhārī, Muslim, al-Nasā’ī, and Ibn Mājah.

It is narrated from ‘Amr ibn Shu‘ayb, from his father, from his grandfather, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The arrogant will be gathered on the Day of Resurrection like tiny particles in the form of men, covered by humiliation from every side. They will be driven to a prison in Hellfire called Bu’las, and the Fire of fires will overwhelm them. They will be given to drink from the pus and blood of the people of Hell, ṭīnat al-khabāl (the discharge of the people of Hell)." Narrated by al-Nasā'ī and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

It is narrated from al-Miqdād, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "The sun will be brought near to creation on the Day of Resurrection until it is about a mile away from them." Sulaym ibn 'Āmir said, "By Allāh, I do not know what he means by the mile: the distance on land, or the stick with which kohl is applied to the eye." He said, "People will be in sweat according to their deeds. Some will be [in sweat] up to their ankles, some up to their knees, some up to their waists, and some will be bridled by sweat." And the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, gestured with his hand to his mouth. Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Sa'īd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "A day whose measure is fifty thousand years." It was said, "How long is this day!" The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, it will be lightened for the believer until it is lighter for him than an obligatory prayer." Narrated by Aḥmad, Abū Ya'lā, and Ibn Ḥibbān.

It is narrated from 'Abdullāh ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "You will be gathered on the Day of Resurrection, and it will be said, 'Where are the poor and destitute of this nation?' They will stand up, and it will be said to them, 'What did you do?' They will say, 'Our Lord, You tested us, and we were patient, and You entrusted wealth and authority to others.' Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, will say, 'You have spoken the truth.' He said, 'So they will enter Paradise before other people, and the severity of the reckoning will remain for those with wealth and authority.' They asked, 'Where will the believers be on that day?' He said, 'Thrones of light will be placed for them, and clouds will shade them. That day will be shorter for the believers than an hour of a day." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī and Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ.

It is narrated from Abū Burdah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The feet of a servant will not move on the Day of Resurrection until he is asked about four things: about his life, how he spent it; about his knowledge, what he did with it; about his wealth, from where he acquired it and on what he spent it; and about his body, how he used it." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, authentic Ḥadīth.

It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever is meticulously questioned during the reckoning will be punished." I said, "Does Allāh not say, {Then as for he who is given his record in his right hand, he will be judged with an easy reckoning and return to his people in happiness} (Al-Inshiqāq: 7-9)?" He said, "That is only the presentation [of deeds]. No one will be [meticulously] reckoned on the Day of Resurrection but will perish." Narrated by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

It is narrated from ‘Ā’ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, the wife of the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that she used to say: "The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Aim for what is right, do your best, and rejoice, for no one's deeds will admit him to Paradise.' They said, 'Not even you, O Messenger of Allāh?' He said, 'Not even I, unless Allāh envelops me with His mercy.'" Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Everything will seek recompense on the Day of Resurrection, even two sheep for how they butted each other." Narrated by Aḥmad.

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Unays, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Allāh will gather the servants on the Day of Resurrection," or he said, "the people, naked, uncircumcised, and buhman." He said, "We asked, 'What is buhman?' He said, 'They will have nothing with them.' Then He will call them with a voice that those far away will hear just as those near will hear, 'I am the Supreme Judge, I am the King. It is not fitting for anyone from the people of Hellfire to enter Hellfire while he has a right with anyone from the people of Paradise, until I exact it from him. Nor is it fitting for anyone from the people of Paradise to enter Paradise while anyone from the people of Hellfire has a right with him, until I exact it from him, even for a slap.' He said, 'We asked, 'How, when we come naked, uncircumcised, and buhman?' He said, '[With] good deeds and bad deeds.'"

Narrated by Aḥmad with a good chain of narration.

It is narrated from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The wrongdoer will come on the Day of Resurrection until, when he is on the bridge over Hellfire, between darkness and rough terrain, the wronged one will meet him, recognize him, and recognize how he wronged him. The wronged ones will not cease to exact retribution from the wrongdoers until they take what is in their hands of good deeds. If they have no good deeds, their bad deeds will be cast upon them until they are driven to the lowest depths of the Fire." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī.

And previously, in the section on backbiting, there was a Ḥadīth from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "The bankrupt one from my nation is he who comes on the Day of Resurrection with prayer, fasting, and obligatory charity, but he has insulted this one, slandered that one, consumed the wealth of this one, shed the blood of that one, and struck this one. So this one will be given from his good deeds, and that one from his good deeds. If his good deeds are exhausted before what is upon him is settled, some of their sins will be taken and cast upon him, then he will be thrown into the Fire." Narrated by Muslim and others.

It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said:
"While the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, was sitting, we saw him laugh until his molars became visible. 'Umar said to him, 'What made you laugh, O Messenger of Allāh, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you?' He said, 'Two men from my nation knelt before the Lord of Might. One of them said, 'O Lord, take my right from my brother.' Allāh said, 'What will you do with your brother, when nothing remains of his good deeds?' He said, 'O Lord, let him bear some of my burdens.' The eyes of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, filled with tears. Then he said, 'Indeed, that is a momentous day when people will need others to bear their burdens for them.'" He then mentioned the Ḥadīth. Narrated by al-Ḥākim, who said it is authentic.

It is narrated from him, may Allāh be pleased with him, concerning the Prophet's, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, statement regarding His words: {On the Day We will call every people with their leader} (Al-Isrā': 71), he said: "One of them will be called, given his book in his right hand, his body will be extended to sixty cubits, his face will be whitened, and a crown of radiant pearls will be placed on his head. He will go to his companions, and they will see him from afar and say, 'O Allāh, bless us in this,' until he comes to them and says, 'Rejoice, for every man among you will have the like of this.' As for the disbeliever, he will be given his book in his left hand, his face blackened, his body extended to sixty cubits in the form of Adam, and a crown of fire will be placed on his head. His companions will see him and say, 'O Allāh, disgrace him.' He will say, 'May Allāh cast you away, for every man among you will have the like of this.'" Narrated by al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ.

It is narrated from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Allāh has promised me that seventy thousand from my nation will enter Paradise without reckoning." Yazīd ibn al-Akhnas said, "By Allāh, those in your nation are but like the reddish fly among flies." The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, "He has promised me seventy thousand, with each thousand, seventy thousand, and He has given me three more handfuls." He asked, "What is the breadth of your Basin, O Prophet of Allāh?" He said, "Like [the distance] between Aden and Oman, and wider, and wider," gesturing with his hand. He said, "In it are two spouts of gold and silver." He asked, "And the water of your Basin, O Prophet of Allāh?" He said, "Whiter than milk, sweeter than honey, and more fragrant than musk. Whoever drinks a sip from it will never thirst thereafter, and his face will never be blackened." Narrated by Aḥmad, and its narrators are relied upon in the Ṣaḥīḥ, and Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ.

It is narrated from Abū Umāmah al-Bāhilī, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "My Basin is like [the distance] between Aden and Oman. In it are cups as numerous as the stars in the sky. Whoever drinks from it will never thirst thereafter. Indeed, among those from my nation who will come to it are those with disheveled hair and soiled clothes, who do not marry the women of luxury nor attend the thresholds, meaning the doors of rulers." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī, and its chain of narration is good.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "While I am standing at the Basin, a group [will approach]. When I recognize them, a man will emerge from between me and them and say, 'Come!' I will say, 'Where to?' He will say, 'To the Fire, by Allāh!' I will say, 'What is their matter?' He will say, 'They apostatized, turning back on their heels.' Then another group [will approach]. When I recognize them, a man will emerge from between me and them and say to them, 'Come!' I will say, 'Where to?' He will say, 'To the Fire, by Allāh!' I will say, 'What is their matter?' He will say, 'They apostatized, turning back on their heels.' I do not think any will be saved from them except the like of stray camels." Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, told me, he said: "I will be standing, waiting for my nation to cross, when Jesus, peace be upon him, will come. He said, 'He will say, "These are the Prophets who have come to you, O Muḥammad, asking," or he said, "gathering to you, supplicating to Allāh to disperse the gathering of nations to wherever He wills, due to the greatness of their state." The creation will be bridled in sweat. As for the believer, it will be like a cold for him, and as for the disbeliever, death will overwhelm him.' He said, 'O Jesus, wait until I return to you.' He said, 'The Prophet of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, went and stood beneath the Throne and received what no chosen angel nor sent prophet had received. Allāh revealed to Gabriel, peace be upon him, "Go to Muḥammad and say to him: Raise your head, ask and you will be given, intercede and your intercession will be accepted." He said, "So I interceded for my nation that one out of every ninety-nine people be brought out." He said, "I did not cease to go back and forth to my Lord, and I did not stand in any position except that I interceded, until Allāh gave me from that, saying: 'Admit from your nation whomever from Allāh's creation testified that there is no god but Allāh for one day, sincerely, and died upon that.'" Narrated by Aḥmad, and its narrators are relied upon in the Ṣaḥīḥ.

It is narrated from Kulayb ibn Ḥazn, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Seek Paradise with all your effort, and flee from the Fire with all your effort. For the seeker of Paradise does not sleep, and the fleer from the Fire does not sleep. Indeed, the Hereafter today is surrounded by hardships, and the world is surrounded by pleasures and desires, so let them not distract you from the Hereafter." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī.

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, if you saw what I saw, you would laugh little and weep much." They said, "And what did you see, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "I saw Paradise and the Fire." Narrated by Muslim and Abū Yaʿlā.

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Zubayr, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, passed by a group of people who were laughing. He said, 'You laugh while Paradise and the Fire are mentioned before you?' He said, 'So none of them was seen laughing until he died.' He said, 'And it was revealed concerning them: {"Inform My servants that it is I who am the Forgiving, the Merciful, And that My punishment is the painful punishment."} (Al-Ḥijr: 49-50)." Narrated by al-Bazzār, and there is no one abandoned or accused in its chain of narration.

It is narrated from Ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he delivered a sermon and said: "Do not forget the two great things: Paradise and the Fire." Then he wept until his tears flowed down or wet the sides of his beard. Then he said, "By Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad, if you knew what I know about the matter of the Hereafter, you would walk to the highlands and pour dust upon your heads." Narrated by Abū Ya‘lā.

It is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The Fire will be brought on the Day of Resurrection with seventy thousand reins, and with each rein, seventy thousand angels will be dragging it." Narrated by Muslim and al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "This fire of yours which the children of Adam kindle is one part out of seventy parts of the fire of Hellfire." They said, "By Allāh, it would have been sufficient." He said, "It surpasses it by sixty-nine parts, each of them like its heat." Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Seek refuge with Allāh from Jubb al-Ḥuzn (the Pit of Sorrow) or Wādī al-Ḥuzn (the Valley of Sorrow)." It was said, "O

Messenger of Allāh, what is Jubb al-Ḥuzn or Wādī al-Ḥuzn?" He said, "A valley in Hellfire from which Hellfire itself seeks refuge seventy times every day. Allāh has prepared it for the ostentatious reciters [of the Qur'ān]." Narrated by al-Bayhaqī with a good chain of narration.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Seek refuge with Allāh from Jubb al-Ḥuzn." They said, "O Messenger of Allāh, what is Jubb al-Ḥuzn?" He said, "A valley in Hellfire from which Hellfire itself seeks refuge four hundred times every day." It was said, "O Messenger of Allāh, who will enter it?" He said, "It is prepared for the reciters who are ostentatious with their deeds. And indeed, among the most detestable reciters to Allāh are those who visit oppressive rulers." Narrated by Ibn Mājah, and the wording is his, and al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Ḥārith ibn Jaz’ al-Zubaydī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, in the Fire are snakes like the necks of Bactrian camels. One of them will sting a sting, and its heat will be felt for seventy autumns. And indeed, in the Fire are scorpions like saddled mules. One of them will sting a sting, and its venom will be felt for forty years." Narrated by Aḥmad, al-Ṭabarānī, and al-Ḥākim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Indeed, scalding water will be poured over their heads, and the scalding water will penetrate until it reaches their insides, and it will melt what is in their insides until it passes out from their feet. This is al-ṣahr (melting). Then it will be restored as it was." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī and al-Bayhaqī. However, he said: "It will penetrate the skull until it reaches his insides." They narrated it through the chain of Abū al-Samḥ, who is Darrāj, from Ibn Ḥujayrah. Al-Tirmidhī said it is a good, strange, authentic Ḥadīth.

Al-Ḥamīm (scalding water) is that which is mentioned in the Qur'ān in His statement, the Exalted: {And they will be given to drink scalding water that will sever their intestines} (Muḥammad: 15). It is narrated from Ibn 'Abbās and others that al-Ḥamīm is hot water that burns. Al-Ḍaḥḥāk said: Al-Ḥamīm has been boiling since Allāh created the heavens and the earth until the day they drink it, and it is poured on their heads. It is said that it is what collects from the tears of their eyes in the basins of the Fire, and they drink it. And other things have been said. And in His statement, the Exalted: {And he is given to drink of purulent water. He will gulp it} (Ibrāhīm: 16-17). He said: It will be brought near to his mouth, and he will detest it. When it is brought near to him, it will scald his face, and the skin of his head will fall off. When he drinks it, it will sever his intestines until it comes out from his rectum. Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, says: {And they will be given to drink scalding water that will sever their intestines} and He says: {And if they call for relief, they will be relieved with water like molten brass, which scalds [their] faces. Wretched is the drink} (Al-Kahf: 29).

It is narrated from Abū Sa'īd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "If a bucket of ghassāq (a filthy, ice-cold liquid from Hell) were poured into the world, it would cause all the inhabitants of the world to stink." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "The most prosperous person of the world from among the people of the Fire will be brought and dipped once into the Fire. Then it will be said to him, 'O son of Adam, did you ever see any good? Did you ever experience any bliss?' He will say, 'No, by Allāh, O Lord.' And the most miserable person in the world from among the people of Paradise will be brought and dipped once into Paradise. Then it will be said to him, 'O son of Adam, did you ever see any misery? Did you ever experience any hardship?' He will say, 'No, by Allāh, O Lord, I never experienced any misery, nor did I ever see any hardship.'" Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Suwayd ibn Ghafalah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "When Allāh intends for the people of the Fire to be forgotten, a chest of fire, proportioned to the man, will be made for him. Not a vein will throb in him but will have a nail of fire in it. Then the fire will be kindled in it, then it will be locked with a lock of fire. Then that chest will be placed in a chest of fire, then fire will be kindled between them, then it will be locked with a lock of fire. Then that chest will be placed in a chest of fire, then fire will be kindled between them, then it will be locked. Then it will be cast or thrown into the Fire. That is His statement: {'Over them will be layers of fire and beneath them layers. By that Allāh threatens His servants. O My servants, then fear Me!'} (Al-Zumar: 16). And that is His statement: {'For them therein is heavy sighing, and they therein will not hear.} (Al-Anbiyā': 100). He said, 'So he thinks that there is no one else in the Fire but him.'" Narrated by al-Bayhaqī with a good chain of narration, as a statement of Suwayd (mawquf).

Remembering Paradise

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, the first group to enter Paradise will be in the image of the moon on the night it is full. Those who follow them will be like the brightest shining star in the sky. They will not urinate, nor defecate, nor blow their noses, nor spit. Their combs will be of gold, their sweat will be musk, and their censers will be of aloeswood. Their spouses will be the ḥūr al-ʿīn (fair-skinned women with beautiful, large eyes). Their character will be that of a single man, in the form of their father Adam, sixty cubits tall in the sky."

In a narration: "...Each one of them will have two wives; the marrow of their shins will be visible from behind the flesh due to their beauty. There will be no disagreement among them, nor any animosity. Their hearts will be as one heart. They will glorify Allāh morning and evening." Narrated by al-Bukhārī and Muslim (this wording is from both), al-Tirmidhī, and Ibn Mājah.

It is narrated from al-Mughīrah ibn Shu‘bah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace: "That Moses, peace be upon him, asked his Lord about the lowest in rank among the people of Paradise. He said, 'A man who will come after the people of Paradise have entered Paradise, and it will be said to him, "Enter Paradise." He will say, "My Lord, how, when people have taken their places and received their portions?" It will be said to him, "Would you be pleased to have the like of the kingdom of one of the kings of the world?" He will say, "I am pleased, my Lord." He will say to him, "You will have that, and its like, and its like, and its like." He said on the fifth time, "I am pleased, my Lord." He will say, "This is for you, and ten times its like, and you will have whatever your soul desires and your eye delights in." He will say, "I am pleased, my Lord." He asked, "My Lord, and what about the highest among them in rank?" He said, "Those are the ones whom I intended. I planted their honor with My Own Hand and sealed it. No eye has seen, no ear has heard, and it has not occurred to the heart of any human."" Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, about this verse: {On the Day We will gather the God-fearing to the Most Merciful as a delegation...} (Maryam: 85). He said, "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what is a delegation if not riders?' The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: 'By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, when they emerge from their graves, they will be met by white she-camels with wings, upon them saddles of gold. The straps of their sandals will be of radiant light. Each step of theirs will be like the extent of one's sight. They will reach the gate of Paradise, and there will be a ring of red ruby on plates of gold. And there will be a tree at the gate of Paradise from whose base two springs will flow. When they drink from one of them, the radiance of bliss will flow in their faces. And when they perform ablution from the other, their hair will never become disheveled. They will strike the ring with the plate. If you were to hear the ringing of the ring, O ‘Alī! It will reach every ḥūrī that her husband has arrived, and she will be overcome with eagerness. She will send her *attendant, who will open the gate for him. Were it not that Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, had made him known to himself, he would have prostrated to him from the light and splendor he sees. He will say, "I am your attendant who was entrusted with your affair." He will follow him, and he will trace his footsteps. He will come to his wife, and she will be overcome with eagerness. She will emerge from the tent, embrace him, and say, "You are my beloved, and I am your beloved. I am the pleased one, and I will never be displeased. I am the blissful one, and I will never be wretched. I am the eternal one, and I will never depart." He will enter a house whose foundation to its roof is one hundred thousand cubits, built on a pavement of pearl and ruby, with green paths and yellow paths, no path resembling its counterpart. He will come to the couch, and upon it will be a bed, and on the bed seventy mattresses, and on each mattress seventy spouses, and each spouse will have seventy garments. The marrow of her shin will be visible from beneath the garments. He will consummate relations with them in the span of one night. Flowing beneath them will be rivers: rivers of water, pure, not altering, with no murkiness; rivers of purified honey, not from the bellies of bees; rivers of wine, a delight for the drinkers, not pressed by men with their feet; and rivers of milk whose taste does not change, not from the bellies of livestock. When they desire food, white birds will come to them, raise their wings, and they will eat from their sides whatever colors they wish. Then they will fly away. And in it are hanging fruits. When they desire them, the branch will bend towards them, and they will eat from whichever fruits they wish, whether standing or reclining. And that is His statement, "And the fruit of the two gardens is near." (Al-Raḥmān: 54). And before them are servants like scattered pearls.'" Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā in the book Ṣifat al-Jannah from al-Ḥārith, who is al-Aʿwar, from ʿAlī, as a narration traced back to the Prophet (marfūʿ) in this manner. It was also narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā, al-Bayhaqī, and others from ʿĀṣim ibn Ḍamrah, from ʿAlī, as a statement of ʿAlī himself (mawqūf) with a similar meaning, and this version is more sound and more famous.*

The wording of Ibn Abī al-Dunyā is: "He said, 'Those who feared their Lord will be driven to Paradise in groups. When they reach one of its gates, they will find a tree at it, from beneath whose trunk two springs flow. They will proceed to one of them, as if commanded to do so, and drink from it, and it will remove whatever harm, impurity, or affliction was in their stomachs. Then they will proceed to the other and purify themselves with it, and the radiance of bliss will flow upon them, and their complexions will never change thereafter, nor will their hair ever become disheveled, as if they were anointed with oil. Then they will reach the keepers of Paradise, who will say, "Peace be upon you; you have become pure; so enter it to abide eternally." (Al-Zumar: 73).' He said, 'Then the youths will meet them, or they will meet the youths, circling around them as the youths of the people of the world circle around a dear one who returns from absence, saying, "Rejoice in the honor Allāh has prepared for you." He said, 'Then a youth from among those youths will go to one of his wives from the ḥūr al-ʿīn and say, "So-and-so has come," by the name he was called in the world. She will say, "Did you see him?" He will say, "I saw him, and he is following me." One of them will be so overcome with joy that she will stand at the threshold of her door. When he reaches his dwelling, he will look at the foundation upon which it is built, and it will be a pavement of pearl, above which is a structure of green, yellow, red, and every color. Then he will raise his head and look at its ceiling, and it will be like lightning. Were it not that Allāh had decreed for him that pain should depart, his sight would have been lost. Then he will lower his head and look at his spouses, and cups placed, and cushions arranged, and carpets spread out. (Al-Ghāshiyah: 13-16). They will look at that bliss, then recline and say, "Praise to Allāh, who has guided us to this; and we would never have been guided if Allāh had not guided us." (Al-Aʿrāf: 43). Then a caller will call out, "You will live and never die; you will reside and never depart; you will be healthy," I think he said, "and never fall ill.""

It is narrated from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, the people of Paradise will see the inhabitants of the chambers above them as you see a brilliant star remaining in the horizon from the east or the west, due to the difference in rank between them." They said, "O Messenger of Allāh, are those the dwellings of the Prophets, which no one else can reach?" He said, "Nay, by Him in Whose Hand is my soul, they are men who believed in Allāh and testified to the truthfulness of the Messengers." Narrated by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, in Paradise there are one hundred levels which Allāh has prepared for those who engage in Jihād in the way of Allāh. The distance between two levels is like the distance between the heaven and the earth." Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "We said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, tell us about Paradise, what is its structure?' He said, 'A brick of gold and a brick of silver, its mortar is musk, its pebbles are pearls and rubies, and its soil is saffron. Whoever enters it will be blissful and not wretched, and will abide eternally and not die. His clothes will not wear out, nor will his youth fade.'" Narrated by Aḥmad and others.

It is narrated from Kurayb that he heard Usāmah ibn Zayd, may Allāh be pleased with him, say, The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Is there anyone who will strive earnestly for Paradise? For Paradise has no prohibition. By the Lord of the Ka'bah, it is a radiant light, a swaying fragrant plant, a lofty palace, a flowing river, ripe fruit, a beautiful, fair wife, abundant garments, an eternal abode in a secure dwelling, fruit, greenery, joy, and bliss in a high, splendid place." They said, "Yes, O Messenger of Allāh, we are the ones who will strive earnestly for it." He said, "Say, 'If Allāh wills.'" The people said, "If Allāh wills." Narrated by Ibn Mājah, Ibn Abī al-Dunyā, al-Bazzār, Ibn Ḥibbān in his Ṣaḥīḥ, and al-Bayhaqī.

It is narrated from Abū Mūsā al-Ash‘arī, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Indeed, for the believer in Paradise there is a tent of a single hollowed pearl, its height in the sky is sixty miles. The believer will have families therein; the believer will go around to them, and they will not see one another." Narrated by al-Bukhārī, Muslim, and al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "Every Muslim will have a chosen one (khīrah), and every chosen one will have a tent, and every tent will have four doors. From each door, a gift, a present, and an honor that was not there before will enter upon her. There will be no boisterousness, no foul odor, no mockery, and no longing gazes. They are ḥūr al-‘īn, as if they were well-protected eggs." Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā.

It is narrated from Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "Ḥūr (fair-skinned women with beautiful eyes) confined in pavilions." (Al-Raḥmān: 72). He said, "The pavilion is of a hollowed pearl, its length is a parasang (league), and it has a thousand doors of gold. Around it is an enclosure whose circumference is fifty parasangs. A king with a gift from Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, enters upon him from each of its doors." Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā as a statement of Ibn ‘Abbās (mawqūf). In a narration by him and al-Bayhaqī: "The pavilion is a hollowed pearl, a parasang by a parasang, with four thousand door-leaves of gold." And the chain of narration for this one is more authentic.

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Al-Kawthar is a river in Paradise, its banks are of gold, and its course is over pearls and rubies. Its soil is more fragrant than musk, and its water is sweeter than honey and whiter than snow." Narrated by Ibn Mājah and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good, authentic Ḥadīth.

It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, in Paradise there is a tree under whose shade a rider can travel for one hundred years without traversing it. If you wish, recite: {"And shade extended, And water poured out."} (Al-Wāqī'ah: 30-31)." Narrated by al-Bukhārī and al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Allāh says, 'I have prepared for My righteous servants what no eye has seen, no ear has heard, and has not occurred to the heart of any human.' Recite if you wish: {"And shade extended."} (Al-Wāqī'ah: 30). And a space in Paradise the size of a whip is better than the world and what is in it. Recite if you wish: {"So he who is drawn away from the Fire and admitted to Paradise has attained [his desire]."} (Āl 'Imrān: 185)." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, al-Nasā'ī, and Ibn Mājah. Al-Bukhārī and Muslim narrated part of it.

It is narrated from Jarīr ibn 'Abdullāh, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said: "We stopped at al-Şifāh, and there was a man sleeping under a tree, and the sun had almost reached him. He said, 'So I said to the boy, "Go with this leather mat and shade him." He said, 'So he went and shaded him. When he woke up, it was Salmān, may Allāh be pleased with him. I went to him to greet him with peace. He said, "O Jarīr, be humble before Allāh, for whoever is humble before Allāh in this world, Allāh will raise him on the Day of Resurrection. O Jarīr, do you know what the darknesses of the Day of Resurrection are?" I said, "I do not know." He said, "The injustices of people among themselves." Then he took a small twig that I could barely see between his fingers and said, "O Jarīr, if you were to seek the like of this in Paradise, you would not find it." I said, "O Abā 'Abdullāh, then where are the palm trees and trees?" He said, "Their roots are pearl and gold, and their tops are dates."'" Narrated by al-Bayhaqī with a good chain of narration.

It is narrated from al-Barā' ibn 'Āzib, may Allāh be pleased with him, regarding His statement: "And its clusters are hanging low." (Al-Insān: 14). He said, "Indeed, the people of Paradise eat from the fruits of Paradise standing, sitting, and reclining." Narrated by al-Bayhaqī and others as a statement of al-Barā' (mawquf) with a good chain of narration.

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, in Paradise there is a tree whose trunks are of gold and whose branches are of chrysolite and pearl. A wind will blow upon it, and they will rustle, and no listeners have ever heard a sound more delightful than it." Narrated by Abū Nu'aym in Ṣifat al-Jannah.

It is narrated from Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that he said: "The palm trees of Paradise, their trunks are of green emerald, their spathes are of red gold, and their fronds are clothing for the people of Paradise, from which are their garments and robes. Their fruits are like large jars and buckets, whiter than milk, sweeter than honey, and softer than butter, with no pits in them." Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā as a statement of Ibn 'Abbās (mawquf) with a good chain of narration, and al-Ḥākim, who said it is authentic according to the conditions of Muslim.

It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "A morning or an evening [spent] in the way of Allāh is better than the world and what is in it. And the space of the bow of one of you, or the place of his whip, in Paradise is better than the world and what is in it. And if a woman from the women of the people of Paradise were to look down upon the earth, she would fill what is between them with fragrance, and she would illuminate what is between them, and the scarf on her head is better than the world and what is in it." Narrated by al-Bukhārī and Muslim.

It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, told me, he said:

"Gabriel, peace be upon him, told me, he said, 'A man will enter upon a ḥūrī, and she will greet him with an embrace and a handshake.' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'With what fingertips does she touch him? If some of her fingertips were to appear, their light would overcome the light of the sun and the moon. And if a lock of her hair were to appear, it would fill what is between the East and the West with its sweet fragrance. While he is reclining with her on his couch, a light will shine upon him from above, and he will think that Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, has looked upon His creation. Then a ḥūrī will call out to him, "O friend of Allāh, do we not have a turn with you?" He will say, "Who are you?" She will say, "I am from among those of whom Allāh, Blessed and Exalted is He, said: {"And with Us is more."} (Qāf: 35).' He will turn to her, and with her will be beauty and perfection that was not with the first one. While he is reclining with her on his couch, another ḥūrī will call out to him, "O friend of Allāh, do we not have a turn with you?" He will say, "Who are you?" She will say, "I am from among those of whom Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, said: {"And no soul knows what has been hidden for them of comfort for eyes as reward for what they used to do."} (Al-Sajdah: 17).' And he will not cease to turn from one wife to another." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in Al-Awsaṭ.

It is narrated from Umm Salamah, the wife of the Prophet, may Allāh bless her and grant her peace, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she said: "I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, tell me about the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic: {"Ḥūr īn."} (Al-Wāqī'ah: 22).' He said, 'Ḥūr are white, īn means large-eyed. The eyelashes of the ḥūrī are like the wing of an eagle.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, then tell me about the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic: {"As if they were rubies and coral."} (Al-Raḥmān: 58).' He said, 'Their purity is like the purity of the pearl in the oyster shell, which no hands have touched.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, then tell me about the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic: {"In them are women good and beautiful."} (Al-Raḥmān: 70).' He said, 'Good in character, beautiful in face.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, then tell me about the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic:

{ "As if they were eggs well-protected." } (Al-Şāffāt: 49). ' He said, 'Their delicacy is like the delicacy of the membrane inside the egg, next to the shell.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, then tell me about the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic: { "Loving [their husbands], of equal age." } (Al-Wāqī'ah: 37). ' He said, 'They are those who died in the worldly abode as old women, with rheumy eyes and white hair. Allāh created them after old age and made them virgins, loving, affectionate, of equal age, born at the same time.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, are the women of this world better, or the ḥūr al-ʿīn?' He said, 'The women of this world are better than the ḥūr al-ʿīn, like the superiority of the outer garment over the lining.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and why is that?' He said, 'Because of their prayer, their fasting, and their worship of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic. Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, has clothed their faces with light and their bodies with silk. They are white in color, with green garments and yellow jewelry. Their censers are of pearl, and their combs are of gold. They say, "Indeed, we are the eternal ones, we will never die. Indeed, we are the blissful ones, we will never be wretched. Indeed, we are the residents, we will never depart. Indeed, we are the pleased ones, we will never be displeased. Glad tidings to him for whom we are and who is for us." ' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, a woman among us marries two, three, or four husbands in this world, then she dies and enters Paradise, and they enter with her. Who will be her husband among them?' He said, 'O Umm Salamah, she will choose, and she will choose the best of them in character. She will say, "O Lord, this one was the best of them in character with me in the worldly abode, so marry me to him." ' O Umm Salamah, good character has taken the best of this world and the Hereafter. ' "

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said, "Indeed, in Paradise there is a river the length of Paradise. On its banks are virgins, standing opposite each other, singing with the most beautiful voices the creation has ever heard, such that they do not think there is any pleasure in Paradise like it." We said, "O Abā Hurayrah, and what is that singing?" He said, "If Allāh wills:

glorification, praise, sanctification, and lauding the Lord, the Mighty and Majestic." Narrated by al-Bayhaqī as a statement of Abū Hurayrah (mawqūf).

Chapter on the Market of Paradise

It is narrated from Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, in Paradise there is a market which they will visit every Friday. A north wind will blow and scatter [fragrance] on their faces and clothes, and they will increase in beauty and loveliness. They will return to their families, having increased in beauty and loveliness, and their families will say to them, 'By Allāh, you have increased in beauty and loveliness after us.' And they will say, 'And you too, by Allāh, have increased in beauty and loveliness after us.'" Narrated by Muslim.

It is narrated from Saʿīd ibn al-Musayyib: "That he met Abū Hurayrah, and Abū Hurayrah said, 'I ask Allāh to unite me and you in the market of Paradise.' Saʿīd said, 'Is there a market in it?' He said, 'Yes, the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, informed me, he said, "Indeed, when the people of Paradise enter it, they will settle therein according to the merit of their deeds. Then permission will be given to them for the duration of a Friday of the days of the world, and they will visit Allāh. His Throne will be brought forth for them, and He will manifest Himself to them in a garden of Paradise. Pulpits of light, pulpits of pearl, pulpits of ruby, pulpits of chrysolite, pulpits of gold, and pulpits of silver will be placed for them. And the lowest among them – and there is no lowly one among them – will sit on mounds of musk and camphor. They will not see that the occupants of the chairs are better seated than them." Abū Hurayrah said, 'I said, "O Messenger of Allāh, will we see our Lord?" He said, "Yes. Do you doubt in seeing the sun and the moon on the night of a full moon?" We said, "No." He said, "Likewise, you will not doubt in seeing your Lord, the Mighty and Majestic. And no one will remain in that gathering but Allāh will speak to him directly, until He says to a man among you, 'Do you not remember, O so-and-so, the day you did such-and-such?' reminding him of some of his treacheries in the world. He will say, 'O Lord, did You not forgive me?' He will say, 'Yes, and by the vastness of My forgiveness you have reached this rank of yours.' While they are thus, a cloud will cover them from above and rain upon them a fragrance, the like of whose scent they have never found. Then our Lord, Blessed and Exalted is He, will say, 'Arise to what I have prepared for you of honor, and take what you desire.' He said, 'So we will come to a market surrounded by angels, in which is what no eyes have seen, nor ears have heard, nor has occurred to the hearts [of men]. He said, 'And what we desire will be brought to us. Nothing is sold therein, nor bought. And in that market, the people of Paradise will meet one another.' He said, 'Then a man of high rank will approach and meet one below him – and there is no lowly one among them – and he will be amazed by the garments he sees on him. His speech will not end until a better one than it appears on him. That is because it is not fitting for anyone to grieve therein.' He said, 'Then we will depart to our dwellings, and our spouses will meet us and say, "Welcome and greetings! You have come, and there is more beauty and fragrance upon you than when you left us." He will say, "We sat today with our Lord, the Compeller, the Mighty and Majestic, and it is our right to return with the like of what we returned with."'"

Narrated by al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Mājah.

It is narrated from 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he said, I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Indeed, in Paradise there is a tree from whose top garments emerge, and from its bottom, horses of gold, saddled and bridled with pearl and ruby. They do not drop dung nor urinate. They have wings, and their stride is the extent of one's sight. The people of Paradise will ride them, and they will fly with them wherever they wish. Those below them in rank will say, 'O Lord, by what means did Your servants attain all this honor?' He said, 'It will be said to them, "They used to pray at night while you were sleeping, they used to fast while you were eating, they used to spend while you were being miserly, and they used to fight while you were being cowardly."'" Narrated by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā.

It is narrated from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī and Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "When the people of Paradise enter Paradise, a caller will call out, 'Indeed, it is for you to be healthy and never fall ill; indeed, it is for you to live and never die; indeed, it is for you to be young and never grow old; and indeed, it is for you to be blissful and never be wretched.' And that is the statement of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic: {\"And it will be announced to them, 'This is Paradise, which you have been made to inherit for what you used to do.'\"} (Al-Aʿrāf: 43).\" Narrated by Muslim and al-Tirmidhī.

It is narrated from Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Death will be brought in the form of a salt-colored ram, and a caller will call out, 'O people of Paradise!' They will crane their necks and look. He will say, 'Do you recognize this?' They will say, 'Yes, this is Death.' And all of them will have seen it. Then a caller will call out, 'O people of the Fire!' They will crane their necks and look. He will say, 'Do you recognize this?' They will say, 'Yes, this is Death.' And all of them will have seen it. It will be slaughtered between Paradise and the Fire. Then he will say, 'O people of Paradise, eternity and no death! O people of the Fire, eternity and no death!' Then he recited: {\"And warn them of the Day of Regret, when the matter has been decided; and they are in heedlessness, and they do not believe.\"} (Maryam: 39). And he gestured with his hand towards the world.\" Narrated by al-Bukhārī, Muslim, al-Nasāʿī, and al-Tirmidhī.

Vigilance and Self-Accountability

Ibn al-Qayyim, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Allāh, the Exalted, says: {And know that Allāh knows what is within yourselves, so beware of Him} (Al-Baqarah: 235). And He, the Exalted, says: {And ever is Allāh, over all things, an Observer} (Al-Aḥzāb: 52). And He, the Exalted, says: {And He is with you wherever you are} (Al-Ḥadīd: 4). And He, the Exalted, says: {Does he not know that

Allāh sees?} (Al-‘Alaq: 14). And He, the Exalted, says: {Indeed, you are under Our eyes} (Al-Ṭūr: 48). And He, the Exalted, says: {He knows that which deceives the eyes and what the breasts conceal} (Ghāfir: 19). And other such verses.

In the Ḥadīth of Gabriel, peace be upon him, he asked the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, about excellence (iḥsān), and he told him: "It is to worship Allāh as if you see Him, and if you do not see Him, then indeed He sees you."

Vigilance (murāqabah) is the servant's constant knowledge and certainty of the True One's, Glorified and Exalted is He, awareness of his outward and inward state. His perpetuation of this knowledge and certainty is vigilance. It is the fruit of his knowledge that Allāh, Glorified is He, is watchful over him, looking at him, hearing his words, and He is aware of his actions at every time, every moment, every breath, and every blink of an eye. The one who is heedless of this is far removed from the state of the people of beginnings, so how much more so from the state of the aspirants, and how much more so from the state of the gnostics. Al-Jurayrī said: "Whoever does not establish piety and vigilance between himself and Allāh, the Exalted, will not reach unveiling and witnessing." It was said: "Whoever is vigilant of Allāh in his thoughts, He will protect him in the movements of his limbs." It was said to one of them: "When does the shepherd drive his flock with his staff away from a pasture of perdition?" He said: "When he knows that there is a watcher over him." Al-Junayd said: "One who is realized in vigilance fears missing a moment from his Lord, nothing else." Dhū al-Nūn said: "The sign of vigilance is preferring what Allāh has revealed, magnifying what Allāh has magnified, and belittling what Allāh has belittled."

It was said: "Hope incites to obedience, fear distances from disobedience, and vigilance leads you to the path of realities." It was said: "Vigilance is the heart's observance of the True One's awareness with every thought and step." Al-Jurayrī said: "This affair of ours is built on two principles: that you commit yourself to vigilance of Allāh, and that knowledge is manifest in your outward conduct."

Ibrāhīm al-Khawwāṣ said: "Vigilance is the sincerity of the secret and the public for Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic." It was said: "The best thing a person can commit himself to on this path is self-accountability, vigilance, and managing his actions with knowledge." Abū Ḥafṣ said to Abū 'Uthmān al-Naysābūrī: "When you sit with people, be an admonisher to your heart and your self, and do not be deceived by their gathering around you, for they observe your outward, and Allāh observes your inward."

The masters of the spiritual path are unanimous that vigilance of Allāh, the Exalted, in one's thoughts is a cause for their protection in the movements of the outward actions. So, whoever is vigilant of Allāh in his secret, Allāh will protect him in his movements in his secret and his public. Vigilance is worshiping by His names: the Watchful (al-Raqīb), the Guardian (al-Ḥafīẓ), the All-Knowing (al-'Alīm), the All-Hearing (al-Samī'), the All-Seeing (al-Baṣīr). Whoever understands these names and worships according to their implications will attain vigilance, and Allāh knows best. I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyah, may Allāh sanctify his soul, say: "If you do not find sweetness in your heart and expansiveness for an action, then suspect it, for the Lord, the Exalted, is Appreciative (Shakūr). Meaning, He must reward the doer for his action in this world with a sweetness he finds in his heart, strength of expansiveness, and comfort of the eye. So, where he does not find that, his action is flawed. The intent is that joy in Allāh, nearness to Him, and comfort of the eye in Him incite to an increase in His obedience and urge to diligence in the journey."

Imām al-Ghazālī, in the book Al-Murāqabah wa al-Muḥāsabah (Vigilance and Self-Accountability) from his book Iḥyā' 'Ulūm al-Dīn (The Revival of the Religious Sciences) (we will quote excerpts from it), said:

Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And We place the scales of justice for the Day of Resurrection, so no soul will be treated unjustly at all. And if there is [any deed even] the weight of a mustard seed, We will bring it forth. And sufficient are We as accountant.} (Al-Anbiyā': 47). And He, the Exalted, said: {And the record [of deeds] will be placed [open], and you will see the criminals fearful of that within it, and they will say, "Oh, woe to us! What is this book that leaves nothing small or great except that it has enumerated it?" And they will find what they did present [before them]. And your Lord does injustice to no one.} (Al-Kahf: 49). And He, the Exalted, said: {On the Day when Allāh will resurrect them all and inform them of what they did. Allāh has enumerated it, while they have forgotten it. And Allāh is, over all things, Witness.} (Al-Mujādilah: 6). And He, the Exalted, said: {That Day, the people will depart separated [into categories] to be shown their deeds. So whoever does an atom's weight of good will see it, And whoever does an atom's weight of evil will see it.} (Al-Zalzalah: 6-8). And He, the Exalted, said: "Then every soul will be fully compensated for what it earned, and they will not be wronged." And He, the Exalted, said: {On the Day every soul will find what it has done of good present [before it] and what it has done of evil, it will wish that between itself and that [evil] was a great distance. And Allāh warns you of Himself.} (Āl 'Imrān: 30). And He, the Exalted, said: {And know that Allāh knows what is within yourselves, so beware of Him.} (Al-Baqarah: 235).

The people of insight among the servants knew that Allāh, the Exalted, was watching them, and that they would be meticulously questioned in the reckoning and held accountable for even an atom's weight of thoughts and glances. They realized that nothing would save them from these dangers except adhering to self-accountability, true vigilance, holding the self accountable for every breath and movement, and scrutinizing it for every thought and glance. Whoever takes himself to account before he is taken to account, his reckoning will be light on the Day of Resurrection, his answer will be ready at the time of questioning, and his outcome and destination will be good. And whoever does not take himself to account, his regrets will be prolonged, his standing in the plains of Resurrection will be lengthy, and his misdeeds will lead him to disgrace and wrath. When this became clear to them, they knew that nothing would save them from it except obedience to Allāh. He commanded them to be patient and steadfast, saying, Mighty is the Speaker: {O you who have believed, persevere and endure and remain stationed and fear Allāh that you may be successful.} (Āl ‘Imrān: 200). So they first engaged in steadfastness with themselves through stipulation, then through vigilance, then through self-accountability, then through self-reproach, then through striving, then through admonishment. Thus, they had six stations in steadfastness. It is necessary to explain them, clarify their reality and virtue, and detail the actions therein. The basis of all this is self-accountability, but every accounting comes after stipulation and vigilance, and is followed, in case of loss, by admonishment and reproach. Let us explain these stations, and with Allāh is success:

The First Stage of Steadfastness: Stipulation

Know that the demand of traders in partnerships over goods, at the time of accounting, is the soundness of the profit. Just as a merchant seeks the help of his partner, entrusts him with capital to trade, and then holds him accountable, so too is the intellect the merchant on the path to the Hereafter. Its demand and profit is the purification of the self, because therein lies its success. Allāh, the Exalted, said: {He has succeeded who purifies it, And he has failed who instills it [with corruption].} (Al-Shams: 9-10). Its success is only through righteous deeds. The intellect seeks the help of the self in this trade, as it employs it and utilizes it in what purifies it, just as a merchant seeks the help of his partner and his servant who trades with his capital. And just as the partner can become a disputing adversary who contends with him over the profit, requiring him first to stipulate conditions, secondly to be vigilant, thirdly to hold him accountable, and fourthly to reproach or admonish him, so too does the intellect need first to stipulate conditions with the self. It assigns it duties, imposes conditions upon it, guides it to the path of success, and firmly directs it to follow those paths. Then, it does not neglect to be vigilant over it for a moment, for if it were to neglect it, it would see nothing but treachery and the squandering of capital, like a treacherous servant when the coast is clear and he is alone with the money. Then, after completion, it should hold it accountable and demand fulfillment of what was stipulated, for this is a trade whose profit is the highest Paradise and reaching the Lote-tree of the Farthest Boundary with the prophets and the martyrs. Therefore, meticulous accounting in this with the self is far more important than meticulous accounting for worldly profits, which are insignificant compared to the bliss of the Hereafter. Then, however they may be, their fate is to perish and end. There is no good in a good that does not last; rather, an evil that does not last is better than a good that does not last, because the evil that does not last, when it ceases, the joy of its cessation remains forever, and the evil has passed. And the good that does not last, regret over its cessation remains forever, and it has passed. So it is incumbent upon every resolute person who believes in Allāh and the Last Day not to neglect accounting with his self and being strict with it in its movements and stillness, its thoughts and steps. For every breath of life is a precious, irreplaceable jewel with which a treasure of inexhaustible, eternal bliss can be bought. So the loss of these breaths, wasted or spent on what brings perdition, is a tremendous, colossal loss that no rational mind would permit. When the servant wakes up and finishes the morning obligatory prayer, he should free his heart for an hour to stipulate conditions with the self, just as a merchant, when handing over goods to the working partner, clears the meeting for stipulation. He should say to the self: "I have no capital but life. When it is exhausted, the capital is gone, and hope for trade and seeking profit is lost. This new day, Allāh has granted me respite in it, extended my term, and blessed me with it. Had He taken my soul, I would have wished that He return me to the world for a single day to do righteous deeds. So consider yourself as having died and then been returned. Beware, beware of wasting this day, for every breath is a priceless jewel."

He should say to his self: "Strive today to fill your treasury and do not leave it empty of your treasures, which are the means of your dominion. Do not incline towards laziness, comfort, and rest, lest you miss out on the high ranks that others attain, and you are left with a regret that never leaves you, even if you enter Paradise. The pain of deprivation and its regret is unbearable, even if it is less than the pain of the Fire." Some have said: "Suppose the sinner is forgiven; has he not missed the reward of the doers of good?" He was referring to deprivation and regret. Allāh, the Exalted, said: {The Day He will gather you for the Day of Gathering – that is the Day of Deprivation.} (Al-Taghābun: 9). This is his counsel to his self regarding its time. Then he should renew his counsel to it regarding its seven limbs: the eye, the ear, the tongue, the stomach, the private parts, the hand, and the foot, and entrusting them to it, for they are subjects serving the self in this trade, and through them the works of this trade are completed. Hellfire has seven gates; for each gate is an assigned portion. Those gates are only designated for those who disobey Allāh, the Exalted, with these limbs. So he should enjoin it to protect them from their sins. As for the eye, he should protect it from looking at the face of one who is not a maḥram (unmarriageable kin) to him, or at the private parts of a Muslim, or looking at a Muslim with contempt, but rather from every superfluous thing that can be dispensed with, for Allāh, the Exalted, will ask His servant about superfluous looking just as He will ask him about superfluous speech. Then, if he diverts it from this, he should not be content until he occupies it with what constitutes its trade and profit, which is what it was created for: looking at the wonders of Allāh's creation with a discerning eye, looking at good deeds to emulate, and looking into the Book of Allāh and the Sunnah of His Messenger, and studying books of wisdom for admonition and benefit. Thus, he should detail the matter for it, limb by limb, especially the tongue and the stomach. As for the tongue, it is naturally unrestrained, there is no effort in its movement, and its offense is great through backbiting, lying, slander, self-praise, condemnation of creation, [complaining about] foods, cursing, supplicating against enemies, argumentation in speech, and other things we mentioned in the book Āfāt al-Lisān (The Vices of the Tongue). It is prone to all of that, even though it was created for remembrance and reminding, repeating knowledge and teaching, guiding the servants of Allāh to the path of Allāh, reconciling differences, and all other good deeds. So he should stipulate to himself not to move the tongue throughout the day except in remembrance.

The speech of the believer is remembrance, his gaze is a lesson, and his silence is reflection. {He utters no word except that with him is an observer prepared [to record].} (Qāf: 18). As for the stomach, he should task it with abandoning gluttony, reducing the consumption of lawful food, avoiding doubtful matters, restraining it from desires, limiting himself to the extent of necessity, and stipulating to himself that if it violates any of this, he will punish it by depriving it of the desires of the stomach, so that it misses out on more than it gained through its desires. Thus, he should stipulate for it regarding all limbs. A full account of this would be lengthy, and the sins and acts of obedience of the limbs are not hidden. Then he should renew his counsel to it regarding the duties of obedience that are repeated for him day and night, then the supererogatory acts he is capable of and can increase, and he should arrange their details and manner, and how to prepare for them with their means. These are conditions that are needed every day. But if a person accustoms himself to stipulating this to his self for some days, and his self obeys him in fulfilling all of them, he can dispense with stipulating them. If it obeys in some, the need remains to renew the stipulation for what remains. However, no day is free from a new important matter and a new occurrence that has a new ruling, and Allāh has a right upon him in that. This is frequent for one who is engaged in some worldly work, such as governance, trade, or teaching, as hardly a day passes without a new situation requiring him to fulfill Allāh's right in it. So he must stipulate to himself to be upright in it and to submit to the truth in its course, and warn it of the consequence of negligence, and admonish it as a runaway, rebellious slave is admonished. For the self is naturally rebellious against acts of obedience and recalcitrant against servitude, but admonition and discipline affect it. {And remind, for indeed, the reminder benefits the believers.} (Al-Dhāriyāt: 55). This, and what is similar to it, is the first station of steadfastness with the self, which is accountability before action.

Accountability is sometimes after the action and sometimes before it, for warning. Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And know that Allāh knows what is within yourselves, so beware of Him.} (Al-Baqarah: 235). This is for the future. Every consideration of quantity and measure to know increase and decrease is called accountability. So, considering what is before the servant in his day to know his increase from his decrease is part of accountability. Allāh, the Exalted, has said: {O you who have believed, when you go forth [to fight] in the cause of Allāh, investigate.} (Al-Nisā': 94). And He, the Exalted, said: {O you who have believed, if there comes to you a disobedient one with information, investigate.} (Al-Hujurāt: 6). And He, the Exalted, said: {And We have already created man and know what his soul whispers to him.} (Qāf: 16). He mentioned that as a warning and an alert to be cautious of it in the future. 'Ubādah ibn al-Ṣāmit narrated that the Prophet, peace be upon him, said to a man who asked him to advise and admonish him: "When you intend a matter, ponder its outcome. If it is right, then proceed with it, and if it is wrong, then refrain from it." Some wise men said: "If you want the intellect to overcome desire, do not act upon the dictates of passion until you consider the outcome, for the duration of regret in the heart is longer than the duration of the lightness of passion." Luqmān said: "Indeed, when the believer perceives the outcome, he is safe from regret." Shaddād ibn Aws narrated from him, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: \"The wise person is one who takes himself to account and works for what is after death, and the foolish person is one who follows his desires and wishes from Allāh [without effort]."* *He took himself to account (dāna nafsahu) means he held it accountable. And the Day of Judgment (yawm al-dīn) is the Day of Reckoning. And His statement, "Are we to be recompensed?" (Al-Ṣāffāt: 53) means, are we to be held accountable? 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Take yourselves to account before you are taken to account, weigh yourselves before you are weighed, and prepare for the Great Presentation." He wrote to Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī: "Take yourself to account in times of ease before the accounting of hardship." He said to Ka'b, "How do you find it in the Book of Allāh?" He said, "Woe to the judge of the earth from the Judge of Heaven." So he struck him with the whip and said, "Except for one who takes himself to account." Ka'b said, "O Commander of the Believers, it is next to it in the Torah, with not a letter between them: 'Except for one who takes himself to account.'" All of this is an indication of accountability for the future, as he said, "One who takes himself to account works for what is after death." Its meaning is to weigh matters first, assess them, consider them, and ponder them, then embark upon them and undertake them.

The Second Steadfastness: Vigilance

If a person counsels his self and stipulates to it what we have mentioned, nothing remains but to be vigilant over it when engaging in actions and to observe it with a watchful eye, for if it is left, it will transgress and become corrupt. Let us mention the virtue of vigilance, then its degrees. As for its virtue, Gabriel, peace be upon him, asked about excellence (iḥsān), and he said: "It is to worship Allāh as if you see Him." This is an agreed-upon Ḥadīth. And he, peace be upon him, said: "Worship Allāh as if you see Him, and if you do not see Him, then indeed He sees you." Allāh, the Exalted, has said: {Then is He who is Overseer over every soul, [knowing] all that it has earned?} (Al-Ra'd: 33). And He, the Exalted, said: {Does he not know that Allāh sees?} (Al-ʿAlaq: 14). And Allāh, the Exalted, said: {Indeed, Allāh was, over you, an Observer.} (Al-Nisā': 1). And He, the Exalted, said: {And they who are to their trusts and their promises attentive. And they who carefully maintain their testimonies.} (Al-Mu'minūn: 8, Al-Ma'ārij: 32-33). Ibn al-Mubārak said to a man, "Be vigilant of Allāh, the Exalted." The man asked him for its interpretation, and he said, "Be always as if you see Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic." ʿAbd al-Wāḥid ibn Zayd said: "If my Master is watchful over me, then I do not care about anyone else." Abū ʿUthmān al-Maghribī said: "The best thing a person can commit himself to on this path is self-accountability, vigilance, and managing his actions with knowledge." Ibn 'Aṭā' said: "The best of acts of obedience is vigilance of the True One at all times." Al-Jurayrī said: "This affair of ours is built on two foundations: that you commit yourself to vigilance of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, and that knowledge is manifest in your outward conduct." Abū 'Uthmān said: "Abū Ḥafṣ said to me, 'When you sit with people, be an admonisher to yourself and your heart, and do not be deceived by their gathering around you, for they observe your outward, and Allāh is watchful over your inward.'" A man said to al-Junayd, "How can I seek help in lowering my gaze?" He said, "By your knowledge that the Gazer's gaze upon you precedes your gaze upon the object gazed at." Al-Junayd said: "Only one who fears missing his share from his Lord, the Mighty and Majestic, truly realizes vigilance." Muḥammad ibn 'Alī al-Tirmidhī said: "Make your vigilance for One from Whose gaze upon you you are never absent. Make your gratitude to One Whose blessings upon you never cease. Make your obedience to One from Whom you can never be independent. And make your submission to One from Whose dominion and sovereignty you can never depart." Sahl said: "The heart has not been adorned with anything better or nobler than the servant's knowledge that Allāh is his witness wherever he may be."

Some were asked about the statement of Allāh, the Exalted: {Allāh being pleased with them and they with Him. That is for whoever has feared his Lord.} (Al-Bayyinah: 8). He said, "Its meaning is: that is for whoever has been vigilant of his Lord, the Mighty and Majestic, taken himself to account, and prepared for his return." Dhū al-Nūn was asked, "How does a servant attain Paradise?" He said: "With five things: steadfastness without deviation, striving without heedlessness, vigilance of Allāh, the Exalted, in secret and in public, awaiting death by preparing for it, and taking yourself to account before you are taken to account." Ḥumayd al-Ṭawīl said to Sulaymān ibn 'Alī, "Admonish me." He said, "If, when you disobey Allāh in private, you thought He sees you, you have indeed dared a grave matter. And if you thought

He does not see you, you have indeed disbelieved." Sufyān al-Thawrī said: "Upon you is vigilance of One from Whom no secret is hidden. Upon you is hope in One Who possesses fulfillment. And upon you is caution of One Who possesses punishment." Farqad al-Sinjī said: "Indeed, the hypocrite looks, and if he sees no one, he enters an evil place. He only watches people and does not watch Allāh, the Exalted." ‘Abdullāh ibn Dīnār said: "I went out with ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, to Makkah, and we rested on a part of the road. A shepherd came down from the mountain. He said to him, 'O shepherd, sell me a sheep from this flock.' He said, 'I am a slave.' He said, 'Tell your master the wolf ate it.' He said, 'Then where is Allāh?' ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with him, wept. Then he went to the slave in the morning, bought him from his master, and freed him, saying, 'This statement has freed you in this world, and I hope it will free you in the Hereafter.'"

Clarification of the Reality of Vigilance and Its Degrees

Know that the reality of vigilance is the observation of the Watcher and the direction of concern towards Him. So, whoever refrains from a matter due to someone else is said to be vigilant of so-and-so and mindful of his side. What is meant by this vigilance is a state of the heart that is produced by a type of knowledge, and that state produces actions in the limbs and in the heart. As for the state, it is the heart's observance of the Watcher, its preoccupation with Him, its attention to Him, its observation of Him, and its turning towards Him. As for the knowledge that produces this state, it is the knowledge that Allāh is aware of the innermost thoughts, knowledgeable of secrets, watchful over the actions of servants, and Overseer of every soul with what it has earned, and that the secret of the heart is exposed to Him just as the outward skin is exposed to creation, rather even more so. This knowledge, when it becomes certainty – meaning it is free from doubt – and then subsequently overwhelms the heart, it subjugates it. For there may be knowledge in which there is no doubt that does not overwhelm the heart, like the knowledge of death. When it overwhelms the heart, it draws the heart to observe the side of the Watcher and diverts its concern to Him. Those who are certain of this knowledge are the close ones (muqarrabūn), and they are divided into the truthful (ṣiddīqīn) and the companions of the right (aṣḥāb al-yamīn). So their vigilance is of two degrees:

The First Degree: The vigilance of the close ones among the truthful. It is the vigilance of magnification and glorification, which is when the heart becomes engrossed in observing that majesty and is broken under awe, so that no room remains in it for turning to anything else at all. This is a vigilance whose detailed actions we will not elaborate on, for it is confined to the heart. As for the limbs, they cease to turn to permissible things, let alone forbidden ones. And if they move in acts of obedience, they are as if employed by them, so they do not need management and affirmation to keep them on the path of righteousness. Rather, the subjects are guided aright by the one who possesses the entirety of the shepherd, and the heart is the shepherd. So when it becomes engrossed in the Worshipped One, the limbs become employed, proceeding on righteousness and uprightness without effort. This is the one whose concerns have become a single concern, so Allāh suffices him for all other concerns.

The Second Degree: The vigilance of the pious among the companions of the right. They are a people whose certainty of Allāh's awareness of their outward and inward states, and of their hearts, has overcome them, but the observation of majesty has not bewildered them. Rather, their hearts have remained in a state of moderation, with scope for turning to states and actions. While engaged in actions, they are not devoid of vigilance. Yes, shyness before Allāh has overcome them, so they do not proceed or hold back except after careful consideration, and they refrain from everything by which they would be disgraced on the Day of Resurrection. For they see Allāh in this world as aware of them, so they do not need to wait for the Resurrection. Whoever is in this degree needs to be vigilant of all his movements and stillness, his thoughts and glances, and in sum, all his choices. And he has two considerations in them: a consideration before the action and a consideration during the action. As for before the action, he should consider whether what has appeared to him and his thought has moved him to do is for Allāh alone, or is it for the desire of the self and following Satan. So he should pause in it and be deliberate until that becomes clear to him by the light of truth. If it is for Allāh, the Exalted, he should proceed with it. If it is for other than Allāh, he should be shy before Allāh and refrain from it, then blame his self for its desire for it, its inclination towards it, and its leaning towards it. He should make it aware of its evil action and its pursuit of its own disgrace, and that it is its own enemy if Allāh does not rectify it with His protection. This pausing at the beginning of matters until clarification is a binding, unavoidable duty for everyone. Al-Ḥasan said: "One of them, when he wanted to give charity, would look and consider, and if it was for Allāh, he would proceed." Al-Ḥasan said: "May Allāh, the Exalted, have mercy on a servant who stops at his inclination; if it is for Allāh, he proceeds, and if it is for other than Him, he holds back."

Muḥammad ibn ‘Alī said: The believer is cautious and deliberate, pausing at his concerns, not like one who gathers firewood at night. This is the first consideration in this self-monitoring. One cannot be saved from this except through sound knowledge and true understanding of the secrets of deeds, the depths of the soul, and the snares of Satan. If one does not know himself, his Lord, and his enemy Iblīs, and does not know what aligns with his desires, nor distinguishes between it and what Allāh loves and is pleased with in his intention, resolve, thoughts, stillness, and movement, he will not be safe in this self-monitoring. Indeed, most people commit acts of ignorance in matters Allāh ta‘ālā dislikes, while they think they are doing good. Do not assume that the ignorant person who is capable of learning is excused. Far from it! Rather, seeking knowledge is an obligation upon every Muslim. For this reason, two units of prayer from a knowledgeable person are better than a thousand units from one who is not knowledgeable, because the knowledgeable person knows the afflictions of the soul, the snares of Satan, and the points of delusion, so he guards against them. The ignorant person does not know them, so how can he be cautious? Thus, the ignorant person remains in hardship, and Satan rejoices and gloats over him. We seek refuge in Allāh from ignorance and heedlessness, for it is the head of all misery and the foundation of all loss. Allāh ta‘ālā has decreed that every servant should monitor himself when he intends to act and strives with his limbs. He should pause from the intention and the striving until it becomes clear to him, through the light of knowledge, whether it is for Allāh ta‘ālā, in which case he proceeds, or if it is for the desires of the soul, in which case he avoids it and restrains his heart from thinking about it or intending it. For the first step towards falsehood, if not repelled, gives rise to desire; desire gives rise to intention; intention gives rise to firm resolve; resolve gives rise to action; and action gives rise to ruin and abhorrence. Therefore, the root of evil should be cut off from its very source, which is the fleeting thought, for all that follows it stems from it. Whenever this becomes obscure to the servant and the situation darkens such that it is not clear to him, he should reflect upon it with the light of knowledge and seek refuge in Allāh from the deception of Satan through desire.

If he is incapable of independent reasoning and reflection, he should seek illumination from the light of religious scholars. He should flee from misleading scholars who are engrossed in worldly pursuits, fleeing from them as he would from Satan, or even more intensely. For Allāh ta‘ālā revealed to David (peace be upon him): "Do not ask about Me from a scholar intoxicated by the love of the world, lest he cut you off from My love. Such are highway robbers to My servants." Hearts darkened by the love of the world, intense greed, and covetousness for it are veiled from the light of Allāh ta‘ālā. The source of the heart's illumination is the Divine Presence. How then can one be illuminated by it who has turned his back on it, approached its enemy, and adored what it detests and abhors, namely, worldly desires? The primary concern of the aspirant should be, first, to master knowledge or to seek a scholar who is averse to the world, or has little inclination towards it if one devoid of such inclination cannot be found. Whoever does not pause at ambiguities is a follower of his own desires, conceited in his opinion, and among those described by the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ when he said: "When you see avarice obeyed, desire followed, and everyone pleased with his own opinion, then take care of your own self." Anyone who delves into doubtful matters without verification has opposed the saying of Allāh ta'ālā: {And do not pursue that of which you have no knowledge} (Qur'ān 17:36). And his (peace be upon him) saying: "Beware of conjecture, for conjecture is the falsest of speech." He meant by this, conjecture without evidence, just as some common folk consult their hearts in matters that are unclear to them and follow their conjecture. Due to the difficulty and gravity of this matter, the supplication of al-Ṣiddīq (may Allāh ta'ālā be pleased with him) was: "O Allāh, show me the truth as truth and grant me the ability to follow it, and show me falsehood as falsehood and grant me the ability to avoid it, and do not make it ambiguous to me, lest I follow desire." Jesus (peace be upon him) said: "Matters are of three kinds: a matter whose right guidance is clear, so follow it; a matter whose misguidance is clear, so avoid it; and a matter that is ambiguous to you, so entrust it to one who knows it." The greatest blessing of Allāh upon His servants is knowledge and the unveiling of truth. Faith (īmān) is a type of unveiling and knowledge. Therefore, Allāh ta'ālā said, bestowing favor upon His servant: {And ever great is the Grace of Allāh upon you} (Qur'ān 4:113), and by this He meant knowledge. And Allāh ta'ālā said: {So ask the people of remembrance if you do not know} (Qur'ān 16:43). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {Indeed, upon Us is guidance} (Qur'ān 92:12). And He said: {Then, indeed, upon Us is its clarification} (Qur'ān 75:19). And He said: {And upon Allāh is the direction of the right path} (Qur'ān 16:9).

‘Alī (may Allāh ennoble his face) said: "Desire is a partner to blindness. Part of success is to pause when in doubt. Certainty is an excellent expeller of worry. The outcome of lying is regret, and in truthfulness lies safety. A distant person may be closer than a near one, and a stranger is one who has no beloved. A true friend is one whose sincerity is proven in one's absence. You will not be without a beloved who harbors ill thoughts. Excellent character is generosity. Modesty is a cause for all that is beautiful. The firmest handhold is piety (taqwā). The firmest bond you can take hold of is the bond between you and Allāh ta'ālā. All you have from your worldly life is what you use to improve your eternal abode. Sustenance is of two kinds: sustenance you seek and sustenance that seeks you; if you do not go to it, it will come to you. If you are distressed by what you have lost from your possessions, do not grieve over what has not reached you. Infer what has not been from what has been, for matters are similar. A person is pleased by attaining what he was not meant to miss, and is displeased by missing what he was not meant to attain. So, whatever you gain from your worldly life, do not rejoice excessively in it, and whatever you miss from it, do not let your soul pursue it with regret. Let your joy be in what you have sent forth (for the Hereafter), your regret for what you have left behind, your preoccupation with your Hereafter, and your concern for what comes after death."

Our purpose in quoting these words is his statement, "Part of success is to pause when in doubt." Therefore, the first consideration for the one engaged in self-monitoring is to examine his intention and action: is it for Allāh or for desire? The Prophet ﷺ said: "Three qualities, if found in a person, complete his faith: he does not fear the blame of any blamer in matters concerning Allāh, he does not perform any of his deeds for show, and if two matters are presented to him, one for this world and the other for the Hereafter, he chooses the Hereafter over this world." Most often, what becomes clear to him in his actions is that they are permissible but do not concern him, so he leaves them, due to the saying of the Prophet ﷺ: "Part of the excellence of a person's Islām is his leaving what does not concern him."

The second consideration for self-monitoring is at the commencement of an action. This involves examining the manner of the action to fulfill Allāh's right therein, to have a good intention in completing it, to perfect its form, and to undertake it in the most complete way possible. This is incumbent upon him in all his states, for he is never free from movement or stillness in all his states. If he monitors Allāh ta‘ālā in all of this, he will be able to worship Allāh ta‘ālā therein through intention, good action, and observance of etiquette. For instance, if he is sitting, he should sit facing the qiblah, due to the saying of the Prophet ﷺ: "The best of gatherings are those in which the qiblah is faced." He should not sit cross-legged, as kings are not sat with in that manner, and the King of kings is observing him. Ibrāhīm ibn Adham (may Allāh have mercy on him) said: "I once sat cross-legged and heard a voice say, 'Is this how you sit with kings?' I never sat cross-legged after that." If he sleeps, he should sleep on his right side, facing the qiblah, along with the other etiquettes we have mentioned in their place. All of this falls under self-monitoring. Indeed, even if he is relieving himself, his observance of its etiquettes is a fulfillment of self-monitoring. Therefore, the servant is either in a state of obedience, disobedience, or a permissible act. His self-monitoring in obedience is through sincerity, completion, observance of etiquette, and guarding it from defects. If he is in a state of disobedience, his self-monitoring is through repentance, regret, abstention, modesty, and preoccupation with reflection. If he is in a state of a permissible act, his self-monitoring is by observing etiquette, then by witnessing the Bestower in the blessing and by being grateful for it. The servant, in all his states, is not free from an affliction for which he must have patience, or a blessing for which he must be grateful. All of this is part of self-monitoring. Indeed, the servant is never, in any state, free from an obligation to Allāh ta‘ālā upon him: either an action he must perform, a prohibition he must avoid, a recommended act he is urged to hasten towards for Allāh's forgiveness and to compete with Allāh's servants, or a permissible act that benefits his body and heart and aids him in his obedience.

Each of these has limits that must be observed through constant self-monitoring. {And whoever transgresses the limits of Allāh has certainly wronged himself} (Qur’ān 65:1). The servant should examine himself at all times in these three categories. If he is free from obligatory duties and capable of performing supererogatory acts, he should seek the best of deeds to engage in, for whoever misses out on additional profit while being able to attain it is certainly at a loss. Profits are gained through the merits of virtuous deeds. Thus, the servant takes from his worldly life for his Hereafter, as Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And do not forget your share of the world} (Qur’ān 28:77). All of this is possible only with an hour's patience. For hours are three: an hour that has passed, in which there is no burden on the servant, however it passed, whether in hardship or ease; a future hour that has not yet come, and the servant does not know if he will live to see it or not, nor does he know what Allāh will decree in it; and the present hour, in which he should strive against his soul and monitor his Lord. If the second hour does not come to him, he will not regret missing this hour. If the second hour comes, he will take his due from it just as he took from the first. He should not extend his hope for fifty years, making the resolve for self-monitoring therein lengthy for him. Rather, he should be a son of his time, as if he is in his last breaths, for perhaps it is his last breath and he does not know. If it is possible that it is his last breath, he should be in a state such that he would not dislike death to overtake him while in that state. All his conditions should be confined to what Abū Dharr (may Allāh ta‘ālā be pleased with him) narrated from the Prophet ﷺ: "A believer is only traveling for three purposes: provisioning for the Hereafter, mending his livelihood, or [seeking] pleasure in what is not forbidden." And what was also narrated from him in the same meaning: "A wise person should have four hours: an hour in which he privately converses with his Lord, an hour in which he calls himself to account, an hour in which he reflects on the creation of Allāh ta‘ālā, and an hour he sets aside for food and drink."

For in this hour is an aid for him for the remaining hours. Then, these hours in which his limbs are occupied with food and drink should not be devoid of an act that is among the best of deeds, which is remembrance (dhikr) and reflection (fikr). For example, the food he consumes contains wonders that, if he reflected upon them and understood them, it would be better than many deeds of the limbs. People are of different categories in this regard: A group looks at it with the eye of insight and consideration, reflecting on the wonders of its creation, how the sustenance of animals is linked to it, how Allāh has ordained its causes, created the desires that motivate towards it, and created the faculties subservient to desire for it, as we have detailed some of this in the book of gratitude. This is the station of people of understanding. A group looks at it with the eye of aversion and dislike, noticing the aspect of necessity in it, wishing they could do without it, but seeing themselves compelled in it, subservient to its desires. This is the station of the ascetics. A group sees the Maker in the made, and ascends from it to the attributes of the Creator, so witnessing that becomes a cause for remembering avenues of reflection that open up to them because of it. This is the highest of stations and one of the stations of the gnostics (‘ārifīn) and signs of the lovers (muḥibbīn), for when a lover sees the handiwork of his beloved, his writing, and his composition, he forgets the handiwork and his heart becomes preoccupied with the Maker. Everything the servant encounters is the handiwork of Allāh ta‘ālā, so he has ample scope in looking from it to the Maker if the gates of the spiritual realm (malakūt) are opened for him, and that is very rare.

A fourth group looks at it with the eye of desire and greed, lamenting what they missed of it and rejoicing in what they have of it. They disparage what does not suit their desires and find fault with it, and they blame its doer, so they blame the cooking and the cook, not knowing that the doer of the cooking and the cook, and of his power and knowledge, is Allāh ta‘ālā, and that whoever disparages anything of Allāh's creation without permission has disparaged Allāh. That is why the Prophet ﷺ said: "Do not revile time, for Allāh is Time."

The Third Garrison: Calling the Soul to Account After Action

Let us mention the virtue of self-accounting, then its reality. As for its virtue, Allāh ta‘ālā has said: {O you who have believed, fear Allāh. And let every soul look to what it has put forth for tomorrow} (Qur’ān 59:18). This is an indication of accounting for past deeds. And Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And turn to Allāh in repentance, all of you, O believers, that you might succeed} (Qur’ān 24:31). Repentance is reflecting on an action after its completion with regret for it. The Prophet ﷺ said: "Indeed, I seek Allāh's forgiveness and repent to Him one hundred times a day." Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Indeed, those who fear Allāh - when an impulse from Satan touches them, they remember [Him] and at once they have insight} (Qur’ān 7:201). It is reported from ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with him) that when night fell, he would strike his feet with a whip and say to himself: "What did you do today?" Maimūn ibn Mihrān said: "A servant will not be among the pious (muttaqīn) until he calls his soul to account more severely than he would his partner." And partners call each other to account after work. It was narrated from ‘Ā’ishah (may Allāh ta‘ālā be pleased with her) that Abū Bakr (may Allāh be pleased with him) said to her at the time of his death: "No one among people is dearer to me than ‘Umar." Then he asked her, "What did I say?" She repeated what he had said. He then said, "No one is more precious to me than ‘Umar." Look how he reflected after uttering the word, deliberated on it, and replaced it with another word. And the Ḥadīth of Abū Ṭalḥah, when a bird distracted him in his prayer; he reflected on that and made his garden charity for Allāh ta‘ālā out of regret and hope for compensation for what he had missed. In the Ḥadīth of Ibn Salām, he carried a bundle of firewood and was told, "O Abū Yūsuf, your sons and servants could have spared you this." He replied, "I wanted to test my soul to see if it would disapprove." Al-Ḥasan said: "The believer is a vigilant guardian over his soul, calling it to account for Allāh. The reckoning was light for a people who called themselves to account in this world, and the reckoning on the Day of Resurrection will be severe for a people who took this matter without self-accounting." Then he explained self-accounting, saying: "The believer is surprised by something he likes, and he says, 'By Allāh, you please me, and you are one of my needs, but alas, a barrier has been placed between me and you.' This is accounting before action." Then he said, "And if something slips from him, he returns to his soul and says: 'What did I intend by this? By Allāh, I have no excuse for this. By Allāh, I will never return to this again, if Allāh wills.'"

Anas ibn Mālik said: "I heard 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb (may Allāh ta'ālā be pleased with him) one day when he went out, and I went out with him until he entered an enclosure. I heard him say, while there was a wall between me and him and he was in the enclosure: 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, Commander of the Faithful! Well, well! By Allāh, you will fear Allāh, or He will surely punish you.'" Al-Ḥasan said regarding the saying of Allāh ta'ālā: {And I swear by the reproaching soul} (Qur'ān 75:2), "The believer is always found reproaching himself: What did I intend with my word? What did I intend with my meal? What did I intend with my drink? Whereas the wicked person proceeds heedlessly, not reproaching himself."

Mālik ibn Dīnār (may Allāh ta'ālā have mercy on him) said: "May Allāh have mercy on a servant who said to his soul: 'Are you not the companion of such-and-such? Are you not the companion of such-and-such?' Then he condemned it, then bridled it, then committed it to the Book of Allāh ta'ālā, and it became his guide." Maimūn ibn Mihrān said: "The pious person is more severe in accounting with his soul than a tyrannical ruler and a greedy partner." Ibrāhīm al-Taymī said: "I imagined myself in Paradise, eating its fruits, drinking from its rivers, and embracing its virgins. Then I imagined myself in Hellfire, eating from its zaqqūm, drinking from its pus, and struggling with its chains and shackles. I said to my soul, 'O soul, what do you want?' It said, 'I want to return to the world and do righteous deeds.' I said, 'You are in the realm of wishes, so act.'" Mālik ibn Dīnār said: "I heard al-Ḥajjāj delivering a sermon, saying: 'May Allāh have mercy on a man who calls his soul to account before the accounting is passed to another. May Allāh have mercy on a man who takes the reins of his actions and considers what he intends by them. May Allāh have mercy on a man who looks at his measure. May Allāh have mercy on a man who looks at his balance.' He continued saying this until he made me weep." A companion of al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays narrated: "I used to accompany him, and most of his prayer at night was supplication. He would come to the lamp, place his finger in it until he felt the fire, then say to himself, 'O Ḥunayf, what made you do what you did on such-and-such a day? What made you do what you did on such-and-such a day?'"

Explanation of the Reality of Self-Accounting After Action: Know that just as the servant has a time at the beginning of the day when he makes a pact with his soul, enjoining it to truth, he should also have an hour at the end of the day when he demands an account from his soul and scrutinizes all its movements and stillness, just as merchants do in worldly affairs with their partners at the end of every year, month, or day, out of their eagerness for the world and fear of missing out on something that, if they missed it, it would have been better for them to miss it. Even if they obtained it, it would only last for a few days. So how can a rational person not call his soul to account in matters related to the danger of eternal misery or happiness? This negligence stems only from heedlessness, abandonment, and lack of divine facilitation. We seek refuge in Allāh from that.

The meaning of accounting with a partner is to look at the capital, profit, and loss, to ascertain the increase or decrease. If there is a surplus, he collects it and is grateful for it. If there is a loss, he demands compensation for it and obliges him to make amends in the future. Similarly, the servant's capital in his religion is the obligatory duties, and his profit is the supererogatory acts and virtues.

His loss is disobedience. The season for this trade is the entire day, and his transaction is with his soul that incites to evil. He first calls it to account for the obligatory duties. If it performed them properly, he thanks Allāh ta'ālā for it and encourages it to do likewise. If it missed them entirely, he demands that it make them up. If it performed them deficiently, he obliges it to compensate with supererogatory acts. If it committed a sin, he busies himself with punishing, chastising, and reproaching it, to exact from it what will rectify what he neglected, just as a merchant does with his partner. And just as he meticulously checks the worldly accounts for every tiny grain and carat, guarding the avenues of increase and decrease so that he is not cheated in any of it, he should guard against the deception and cunning of the soul, for it is deceitful, misleading, and crafty. He should first demand from it a correct account of everything he said throughout his day. He should take upon himself the accounting that others will undertake on the plain of Resurrection. And so on, regarding his gaze, and even his thoughts, ideas, standing, sitting, eating, drinking, and sleeping, even his silence – why he was silent, and his stillness – why he was still. When he knows the sum of what is obligatory upon the soul and it is clear to him the extent to which the obligation has been fulfilled, that amount will be counted for him. Then what remains due from the soul will become apparent to him. Let him record it against it and write it on the tablet of his heart, just as he writes what is due from his partner on his heart and in his ledger.

It is narrated from Wahb ibn Munabbih that a man worshipped for a long time, then a need arose for him from Allāh ta‘ālā. He stood [in prayer] for seventy weeks, eating eleven dates each week. Then he asked for his need, but it was not granted. He returned to himself and said, "It is from you that I have been afflicted; if there were any good in you, your need would have been granted." An angel descended to him and said, "O son of Adam, this hour of yours is better than your past worship, and Allāh has granted your need." ‘Abdullāh ibn Qays said: "We were on a military expedition, and the enemy appeared. A cry went up among the people, and they stood in ranks on a very windy day. Suddenly, a man in front of me was addressing his soul, saying, 'O my soul, did I not witness such-and-such a battle, and you said to me, "Your family and children," so I obeyed you and returned? Did I not witness such-and-such battles, and you said to me, "Your family and children," so I obeyed you and returned? By Allāh, today I will present you to Allāh; He may take you or leave you.' I said to myself, 'I will watch him today.' I watched him. The people charged at their enemy, and he was among the foremost. Then the enemy charged at the people, and they were routed, but he remained in his position. This happened several times, with them being routed while he stood firm, fighting. By Allāh, that remained his way until I saw him slain. I counted on him and his mount sixty or more than sixty wounds."

It is narrated from Mujammi‘ that he raised his head to the roof and his gaze fell upon a woman. He resolved upon himself not to raise his head to the sky as long as he lived in this world. Al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays was never without a lamp at night. He would place his finger on it and say to his soul, "What made you do such-and-such on that day?" Wuhayb ibn al-Ward disapproved of something in himself, so he plucked hairs from his chest until his pain became severe. Then he began to say to his soul, "Woe to you! I only intend good for you." Muḥammad ibn Bishr saw Dāwūd al-Ṭā’ī eating bread without salt at his ifṭār and said to him, "If only you ate it with salt." He replied, "My soul has been calling me to salt for a year, and Dāwūd has not tasted salt as long as he lives in this world." Such was the punishment of the resolute for their souls. It is strange that you punish your slave, your maidservant, your family, and your child for their bad behavior and shortcomings, fearing that if you overlooked them, they would get out of control and rebel against you. Then you neglect your own soul, which is your greatest enemy and more tyrannical towards you, and the harm from its tyranny is greater than the harm from the tyranny of your family. For their utmost harm is to disturb your worldly life. If you were rational, you would know that the true life is the life of the Hereafter, and in it is everlasting bliss that has no end. Your soul is what spoils your life in the Hereafter, so it is more deserving of punishment than others.

The Fourth Garrison: Striving (Mujāhadah)

This is when, if he calls his soul to account and finds that it has committed a sin, he should punish it with the aforementioned punishments. And if he sees it becoming lax due to laziness in some virtue or a regular devotional practice (wird), he should discipline it by increasing the burden of devotional practices upon it and obliging it to perform various duties as compensation for what was missed and to rectify what was neglected. This is how the workers for Allāh ta‘ālā used to act. ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb punished himself when he missed the ‘Aṣr prayer in congregation by giving in charity a piece of land he owned, valued at two hundred thousand dirhams. Ibn ‘Umar, if he missed a prayer in congregation, would revive that night in prayer. One night, he delayed the Maghrib prayer until two stars appeared, so he freed two slaves. Ibn Abī Rabī‘ah missed the two rak‘ahs of Fajr, so he freed a slave. Some of them would obligate themselves to fast for a year, or perform Ḥajj on foot, or give all their wealth in charity. All of this was to garrison the soul and hold it accountable for what leads to its salvation. If you say, "My soul does not obey me in striving and persevering in devotional practices, so what is the way to treat it?" I say, your way in this is to make it hear the narrations about the virtue of those who strive. One of the most beneficial means of treatment is to seek the companionship of a servant of Allāh who strives in worship, observe his words, and emulate him. One of them used to say, "Whenever a period of lethargy in worship overcame me, I would look at the state of Muḥammad ibn Wāsi‘ and his striving, and I would act upon that for a week." However, this treatment has become difficult, as in this age, those who strive in worship as the early generations did are lost. Therefore, one should turn from direct observation to hearing. Nothing is more beneficial than hearing about their states, reading their accounts, and the intense effort they were in. Their toil has ended, and their reward and bliss remain for eternity, uninterrupted. How great is their kingdom, and how severe is the regret of one who does not emulate them, enjoying himself for a few days with troubled desires, then death comes to him, and a barrier is placed between him and all that he desires for eternity. We seek refuge in Allāh ta‘ālā from that. We will mention some of the descriptions and virtues of those who strive, which will stir the aspirant's desire to strive in emulation of them.

Al-Ḥasan said that worship exhausted them. Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And they who give what they give while their hearts are fearful} (Qur’ān 23:60). Al-Ḥasan said: "They performed whatever good deeds they did and feared that these would not save them from Allāh's punishment." The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Glad tidings to him whose life is long and whose deeds are good."

It is narrated that Allāh ta‘ālā says to His angels: "What is wrong with My servants, striving so hard?" They say, "Our God, You have made them fear something, so they fear it, and You have made them long for something, so they long for it." Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, says, "How would it be if My servants saw Me? They would be even more diligent in their striving."

Al-Ḥasan said: "I met people and accompanied groups of them who did not rejoice at any worldly gain that came to them, nor did they grieve over any worldly loss. The world was more insignificant in their eyes than this dust you tread upon with your feet. One of them would live his entire life without ever having a garment folded for him, nor did he ever order his family to prepare food, nor did he ever place anything between himself and the ground. I found them acting according to the Book of their Lord and the Sunnah of their Prophet. When night enveloped them, they would stand on their feet, their faces touching the ground, their tears flowing down their cheeks, supplicating to their Lord for the freeing of their necks. When they did a good deed, they rejoiced in it, persevered in gratitude for it, and asked Allāh to accept it. When they committed a bad deed, it saddened them, and they asked Allāh ta‘ālā to forgive them. By Allāh, they remained in that state, and by Allāh, they were not safe from sins, nor were they saved except by forgiveness."

It is narrated that a group of people visited ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz when he was ill. Among them was a young man with a frail body. ‘Umar said to him, "O young man, what has brought you to this state I see?" He replied, "O Commander of the Faithful, sicknesses and diseases." ‘Umar said, "I ask you by Allāh to tell me the truth." He said, "O Commander of the Faithful, I tasted the sweetness of the world and found it bitter. Its splendor and sweetness became insignificant to me, and its gold and stones became equal in my sight. It is as if I am looking at the Throne of my Lord and people being driven to Paradise and Hellfire. For this, I have made my days thirsty and my nights sleepless. All that I am in is little and insignificant compared to Allāh's reward and punishment." Abū Nu‘aym said that Dāwūd al-Ṭā’ī used to drink crumbled bread (fatīt) and not eat bread. When asked about it, he said, "Between chewing bread and drinking fatīt is the recitation of fifty verses."

A man once entered upon him and said, "There is a broken beam in the ceiling of your house." He replied, "O son of my brother, I have been in this house for twenty years and have not looked at the ceiling." They used to dislike superfluous looking just as they disliked superfluous talk. Muḥammad ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz said: "We sat with Aḥmad ibn Razīn from morning until afternoon, and he did not turn right or left. When asked about it, he said, 'Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, created the eyes for the servant to look at the greatness of Allāh ta‘ālā with them. Whoever looks without reflection, a sin is written against him.'" The wife of Masrūq said, "Masrūq was never found except with his legs swollen from prolonged prayer." She said, "By Allāh, I used to sit behind him and weep out of pity for him." Abū al-Dardā’ said, "Were it not for three things, I would not have loved to live for a single day: thirsting for Allāh during hot days (by fasting), prostrating to Allāh in the depths of the night, and sitting with people who select the choicest words just as one selects the choicest fruits." Al-Aswad ibn Yazīd used to exert himself in worship and fast in the heat until his body turned green and yellow. ‘Alqamah ibn Qays would say to him, "Why do you torment yourself?" He would reply, "I desire its honor." He used to fast until his body turned green and pray until he collapsed. Anas ibn Mālik and al-Ḥasan visited him and said to him, "Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, has not commanded you to do all this." He replied, "I am merely a owned slave; I will not leave any form of humility without performing it." One of the diligent worshippers used to pray a thousand rak'ahs every day until his legs gave out, then he would pray a thousand rak'ahs sitting. When he prayed 'Aṣr, he would sit with his knees drawn up and then say, "I am amazed at creation, how it desired something other than You instead of You. I am amazed at creation, how it found intimacy with other than You. Nay, I am amazed at creation, how its heart found illumination in the remembrance of other than You." Thābit al-Bunānī loved prayer so much that he used to say, "O Allāh, if You have permitted anyone to pray to You in his grave, then permit me to pray in my grave." Al-Junayd said, "I have not seen anyone more devoted in worship than al-Sarī. Eighty-eight years passed over him, and he was never seen lying down except during his final illness."

It is narrated from Abū Muḥammad al-Maghāzilī who said: Abū Muḥammad al-Jarīrī stayed in Makkah for a year during which he did not sleep, speak, lean against a pillar or wall, nor stretch out his legs. Abū Bakr al-Kattānī passed by him, greeted him, and said, "O Abū Muḥammad, by what means were you able to maintain this retreat (i'tikāf)?" He replied, "He knew the sincerity of my inner self, so He aided my outer self." Al-Kattānī lowered his head and walked away, pondering. It was said to Dāwūd al-Ṭā'ī, "If only you combed your beard." He replied, "Then I would indeed be idle." Uways al-Qaranī used to say, "This is the night of bowing (rukū')," and he would spend the entire night in one bowing. When the next night came, he would say, "This is the night of prostration (sujūd)," and he would spend the entire night in one prostration. It was said that when 'Utbah al-Ghulām repented, he could not enjoy food or drink. His mother said to him, "If only you were gentle with yourself." He said, "It is gentleness I seek. Leave me to tire myself a little and enjoy bliss for a long time." Masrūq performed Ḥajj and never slept except in prostration. Sufyān al-

Thawrī used to say: "At dawn, the night-travelers are praised, and at death, the pious are praised." ‘Abdullāh ibn Dāwūd said: "When one of them reached forty years of age, he would fold his bedding," meaning he would not sleep throughout the night. Kahmas ibn al-Ḥasan used to pray a thousand rak‘ahs every day, then say to himself, "Arise, O abode of all evil!" When he weakened, he limited himself to five hundred, then he would weep and say, "Half of my deeds are gone."

It is narrated from a man from the companions of ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (may Allāh ta‘ālā be pleased with him) that he said: I prayed Fajr behind ‘Alī (may Allāh ta‘ālā be pleased with him). When he finished, he turned to his right, and sadness was upon him. He remained so until the sun rose, then he turned his hand and said: "By Allāh, I have seen the companions of Muḥammad ﷺ, and I do not see anything today that resembles them. They used to wake up disheveled, dusty, and pale, having spent the night prostrating and standing for Allāh, reciting the Book of Allāh, alternating between their feet and their foreheads. When Allāh was mentioned, they would sway like trees on a windy day, and their eyes would overflow until their clothes were wet. It was as if the people [around him] had spent the night heedlessly." Abū Muslim al-Khawlānī had hung a whip in the mosque of his house with which he would frighten himself. He used to say to himself, "Get up! By Allāh, I will drag you along until the weariness is from you, not from me." When a period of lethargy set in, he would take his whip and strike his leg with it, saying, "You are more deserving of being struck than my riding animal." He used to say, "Do the companions of Muḥammad ﷺ think they can have him exclusively to themselves, without us? No, by Allāh, we will crowd them for him intensely, until they know that they have left men behind them." Ṣafwān ibn Sulaym's legs had become knotted from prolonged standing. He reached such a level of exertion that if it were said to him, "The Resurrection is tomorrow," he would not have found anything more to do. When winter came, he would lie on the roof so that the cold would affect him, and in summer, he would lie inside the houses to feel the heat, so he would not sleep. He died while prostrating. He used to say, "O Allāh, I love to meet You, so love to meet me." Al-Qāsim ibn Muḥammad said: "I went out early one day, and whenever I went out early, I would start by visiting ‘Ā’ishah (may Allāh be pleased with her) to greet her. So I went to her early one day, and she was praying the Ḍuḥā prayer, reciting: {So Allāh conferred favor upon us and protected us from the punishment of the Scorching Fire} (Qur’ān 52:27), weeping, supplicating, and repeating the verse. I stood until I grew weary, and she remained as she was. When I saw that, I went to the market, saying to myself, 'I will finish my errands and then return.' I finished my errands and then returned, and she was still as she was, repeating the verse, weeping, and supplicating." Muḥammad ibn Ishāq said: "When ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn al-Aswad came to us for Ḥajj, one of his feet became ill. He stood praying on one foot until he prayed Fajr with the ablution of ‘Ishā’."

Some of them said, "I do not fear death except in that it prevents me from standing in night prayer." ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib (may Allāh ennoble his face) said: "The signs of the righteous are pale complexions from sleeplessness, bleary eyes from weeping, and withered lips from fasting. Upon them is the dust of the humble." It was said to al-Ḥasan, "Why do those who pray at night have the most beautiful faces?" He replied, "Because they secluded themselves with the Most Merciful, so He clothed them with a light from His light." ‘Āmir ibn ‘Abd Qays used to say: "My God, You created me without consulting me, You will cause me to die without informing me, You created an enemy with me and made him flow through me like blood, and made him see me while I do not see him. Then You said to me, 'Hold fast!' My God, how can I hold fast if You do not hold me? My God, in this world there are worries and sorrows, and in the Hereafter, punishment and reckoning. So where is rest and joy?" It is narrated from al-Qāsim ibn Rāshid al-Shaybānī who said: Zam‘ah was staying with us at al-Muḥaṣṣab. He had a family and daughters. He would stand and pray for a long part of the night. When it was pre-dawn (saḥar), he would call out in his loudest voice, "O resting caravan, do you sleep all this night? Will you not get up and depart?" They would then jump up, and you would hear from here one weeping, from there one supplicating, from here one reciting, and from here one performing ablution. When dawn broke, he would call out in his loudest voice, "At morning, the night-travelers are praised." One of the wise men said: "Indeed, Allāh has servants upon whom He bestowed blessings, so they knew Him; He expanded their chests, so they obeyed Him; they relied on Him, so they entrusted creation and command to Him. Their hearts became mines of pure certainty, houses of wisdom, caskets of greatness, and treasuries of power. Among creation, they are receptive and guiding, while their hearts roam in the spiritual realm (malakūt) and seek refuge in the veiled clouds, then return with portions of subtle benefits and what no describer can describe. In their inner affairs, they are like brocade in beauty, while outwardly they are like accessible handkerchiefs for whoever wants them, out of humility." This is a path not reached by affectation; rather, it is the grace of Allāh, which He bestows upon whom He wills. So, if you are among those who garrison and monitor their souls, you must study the states of men and women who were diligent in worship, so that your activity may be aroused and your eagerness increased. Beware of looking at the people of your time, for {if you were to obey most of those on earth, they would mislead you from the way of Allāh} (Qur'ān 6:116). The accounts of the diligent are innumerable, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for one who reflects.

The Fifth Garrison: Reproaching and Admonishing the Soul

Know that your worst enemy is your own soul, which is between your sides. It has been created prone to incite to evil, inclined towards shar (evil), and fleeing from khayr (good). You have been commanded to purify it, straighten it, lead it with the chains of coercion to the worship of its Lord and Creator, prevent it from its desires, and wean it from its pleasures. If you neglect it, it will bolt and run wild, and you will not be able to control it thereafter. If you constantly reproach, admonish, blame, and rebuke it, your soul will be the "reproaching soul" (al-nafs al-lawwāmah) by which Allāh swore, and you may hope that it will become the "soul at peace" (al-nafs al-muṭma'innah), invited to enter among the ranks of Allāh's servants, pleased and well-pleasing. Do not be heedless for an hour from reminding and admonishing it, and do not busy yourself with exhorting others as long as you have not first busied yourself with exhorting your own soul. Allāh ta'ālā revealed to Jesus (peace be upon him): "O son of Mary, admonish yourself. If it takes heed, then admonish the people; otherwise, be ashamed before Me." And Allāh ta'ālā said: {And remind, for indeed, the reminder benefits the believers} (Qur'ān 51:55). Your way is to turn to it and establish with it its ignorance and foolishness, for it always boasts of its intelligence and guidance, and its pride and disdain intensify if it is attributed with folly.

These are the ways of the people in their intimate discourse with their Master and in admonishing their souls. Their aim in intimate discourse is to seek His pleasure, and their purpose in admonishment is to alert and draw attention. Whoever neglects admonishment and intimate discourse has not been mindful of his soul, and it is likely that Allāh ta'ālā will not be pleased with him. Peace, and praise be to Allāh alone, and His blessings and peace be upon our master Muḥammad, his family, and his companions.

Fear of Allāh Ta'ala

Al-Nawawī (may Allāh have mercy on him) said in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

Allāh ta'ālā said: {and fear Me alone} (Qur'ān 2:40). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {Indeed, the vengeance of your Lord is severe} (Qur'ān 85:12). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {And such is the seizure of your Lord when He seizes the cities while they are committing wrong. Indeed, His seizure is painful and severe. Indeed, in that is a sign for those who fear the punishment of the Hereafter. That is a Day for which the people will be gathered, and that is a Day witnessed. And We do not delay it except for a limited term. The Day it comes, no soul will speak except by His permission. And among them will be the wretched and the prosperous. As for those who were wretched, they will be in the Fire. For them therein is exhalation and inhalation} (Qur'ān 11:102-106). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {And Allāh warns you of Himself} (Qur'ān 3:28). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {The Day when a man will flee from his brother, And his mother and his father, And his wife and his children. For every man, that Day, will be a matter adequate for him} (Qur'ān 80:34-37). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {O mankind, fear your Lord. Indeed, the convulsion of the Hour is a terrible thing. On the Day you see it, every nursing mother will be distracted from that [child] she was nursing, and every pregnant woman will abort her pregnancy, and you will see the people [appearing] intoxicated while they are not intoxicated; but the punishment of Allāh is severe} (Qur'ān 22:1-2). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {But for him who feared the position of his Lord are two gardens} (Qur'ān 55:46). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {And they will approach one another, inquiring of each other. They will say, "Indeed, we were previously among our people, fearful [of Allāh]. So Allāh conferred favor upon us and protected us from the punishment of the Scorching Fire. Indeed, we used to supplicate Him before. Indeed, it is He who is the Beneficent, the Merciful"} (Qur'ān 52:25-28). The verses on this subject are very numerous and well-known, and the purpose is to refer to some of them, which has been achieved.

As for the Ḥadīth, they are also very numerous, so we will mention a selection of them, and with Allāh is success:

"On the authority of Ibn Mas'ūd (may Allāh be pleased with him) who said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, who is the truthful and the believed, told us: 'The creation of one of you is gathered in his mother's womb for forty days as a nutfah (drop of sperm), then he becomes an 'alaqah (clot) for a similar period, then he becomes a mudghah (piece of flesh) for a similar period. Then an angel is sent, and he breathes the soul into him and is commanded with four words: to write his provision, his lifespan, his deeds, and whether he will be wretched or happy. By Him, other than Whom there is no god, one of you may do the deeds of the people of Paradise until there is but a cubit between him and it, then the decree overtakes him, and he does the deeds of the people of Hellfire and enters it. And one of you may do the deeds of the people of Hellfire until there is but a cubit between him and it, then the decree overtakes him, and he does the deeds of the people of Paradise and enters it.' (Agreed upon)."

"And on his authority, he said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'Hellfire will be brought on that Day with seventy thousand reins, and with each rein will be seventy thousand angels dragging it.' (Narrated by Muslim)."

"On the authority of al-Nu'mān ibn Bashīr (may Allāh be pleased with them both) who said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: 'The least tormented of the people of Hellfire on the Day of Resurrection will be a man under the arches of whose feet two embers will be placed, from which his brain will boil. He will not think that anyone is more severely tormented than him, yet he will be the least of them in torment.' (Agreed upon)."

We quote (in summary) some of what has been mentioned in this chapter from what Ibn al-Qayyim (may Allāh have mercy on him) said in his book Madārij al-Sālikīn:

The Station of Fear:

It is one of the most significant and beneficial stations on the path for the heart. It is an obligation upon everyone. Allāh ta'ālā said: {So fear them not, but fear Me, if you are [indeed] believers} (Qur'ān 3:175). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {So fear Me alone} (Qur'ān 16:51, not Āl 'Imrān as stated in the source). And He said: {So fear not the people but fear Me} (Qur'ān 5:44). He praised its people in His Book and lauded them, saying: {Indeed, they who are apprehensive from fear of their Lord... to His saying ... Those are the ones who hasten to good deeds, and they are foremost in them} (Qur'ān 23:57-61). In the Musnad and Tirmidhī, on the authority of 'Ā'ishah (may Allāh be pleased with her), she said: ["I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, concerning Allāh's saying {And they who give what they give while their hearts are fearful}

(Qur'ān 23:60), is it the one who commits adultery, drinks alcohol, and steals?' He said: 'No, O daughter of al-Ṣiddīq, but it is the man who fasts, prays, gives charity, and fears that it will not be accepted from him.'" Al-Ḥasan said: "By Allāh, they performed acts of obedience and strove in them, and they feared that they would be rejected. Indeed, the believer combines excellence (iḥsān) and fear (khashyah), while the hypocrite combines wrongdoing and a sense of security." Wajal (apprehension), khawf (fear), khashyah (awe/fear), and rahbah (dread) are similar but not synonymous terms. Abū al-Qāsim al-Junayd said: "Fear is anticipating punishment with every breath." It was said: "Fear is the heart's agitation and movement from remembering what is feared." It was said: "Fear is the strength of knowledge concerning the course of decrees." This is a cause of fear, not fear itself. It was said: "Fear is the heart's flight from the occurrence of what is disliked upon sensing it." Khashyah is more specific than khawf, for khashyah is for those who have knowledge of Allāh. Allāh ta'ālā said: {Only those fear Allāh, from among His servants, who have knowledge} (Qur'ān 35:28). So it is fear coupled with knowledge. The Prophet ﷺ said: "Indeed, I am the most God-fearing among you and the most intense in my khashyah of Him." Fear is movement, while khashyah is a gathering, contraction, and stillness. For one who sees an enemy, a flood, or the like, has two states: one is movement to escape from it, which is the state of fear. The second is his stillness and remaining in a place where it cannot reach him, which is khashyah. As for rahbah, it is persistence in fleeing from what is disliked, and it is the opposite of raghbah (desire), which is the heart's journey in seeking what is desired.

Between rahb (dread) and harab (flight) there is a similarity in lafẓ (wording) and ma'nā (meaning) which is brought together by the intermediate etymological derivation, which is the connection of the word's permutations to a comprehensive meaning. As for wajal, it is the trembling of the heart and its cracking at the mention of one whose authority and punishment are feared, or at seeing him. As for haybah (awe/reverence), it is fear coupled with glorification and veneration, and it mostly occurs with love and knowledge. Ijlāl (veneration) is glorification coupled with love. So, khawf is for the generality of believers, khashyah for the knowledgeable Gnostics, haybah for the lovers, and ijlāl for those brought near. The degree of fear and khashyah is commensurate with the degree of knowledge and understanding, as the Prophet ﷺ said: "Indeed, I am the most knowledgeable of you about Allāh and the most intense in my khashyah of Him." In another narration, "khawfan" (fear). He also said: "If you knew what I know, you would laugh little and weep much, and you would not enjoy women in beds, and you would go out to the open roads, crying out to Allāh ta'ālā." So, the possessor of khawf resorts to flight and restraint, while the possessor of khashyah resorts to seeking refuge in knowledge. Their example is like that of one who has no knowledge of medicine and that of a skilled physician. The former resorts to diet and flight, while the physician resorts to his knowledge of medicines and diseases. Abū Ḥafṣ said: "Fear is Allāh's whip with which He disciplines those who stray from His door." He also said: "Fear is a lamp in the heart by which one sees the good and evil within it." Everyone you fear, you flee from, except Allāh, Mighty and Majestic; for when you fear Him, you flee to Him. So the fearful one is fleeing from his Lord to his Lord.

Abū Sulaymān said: "Fear has never departed a heart except that it became ruined." Ibrāhīm ibn Sufyān said: "When fear settles in hearts, it burns away the places of desires from them and expels the world from them." Dhū al-Nūn said: "People are on the path as long as fear does not depart from them. If fear departs from them, they stray from the path." Ḥātim al-Aṣamm said: "Do not be deceived by a righteous place, for no place is more righteous than Paradise, yet Adam encountered what he encountered there. Do not be deceived by abundant worship, for Iblīs, after lengthy worship, encountered what he encountered. Do not be deceived by abundant knowledge, for Bal'am ibn Bā'ūrā' encountered what he encountered, and he knew the Greatest Name. Do not be deceived by meeting the righteous and seeing them, for no person is more righteous than the Prophet ﷺ, yet his enemies and the hypocrites did not benefit from meeting him." Fear is not an end in itself but a means to an end. This is why it ceases when the object of fear ceases, for the people of Paradise will have no fear upon them, nor will they grieve. Fear is related to actions, while love is related to the Essence and Attributes. This is why the love of believers for their Lord multiplies when they enter the Abode of Bliss, and no fear afflicts them there. This is why the station of love and its rank are higher and more elevated than the station of fear and its rank. Praiseworthy, sincere fear is that which comes between its possessor and the prohibitions of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic. If it exceeds that, despair and hopelessness are feared from it. Abū ‘Uthmān said: "Sincere fear is scrupulousness regarding sins, both outwardly and inwardly." I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allāh sanctify his soul) say: "Praiseworthy fear is what restrains you from Allāh's prohibitions." The author of al-Manāzil said: "Fear is to be dislodged from the tranquility of security by contemplating the divine report," meaning, to depart from the stillness of security by bringing to mind what Allāh has reported of promise and threat.

Hope (Rajā’)

Ibn al-Qayyim (may Allāh have mercy on him) said:

Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Those whom they invoke seek means of access to their Lord, [striving as to] which of them would be nearest, and they hope for His mercy and fear His punishment} (Qur’ān 17:57). Seeking means of access to Him is seeking nearness to Him through servitude and love. Thus, He mentioned the three pillars of faith upon which it is built: love, fear, and hope. Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Whoever should hope for the meeting with Allāh - indeed, the term decreed by Allāh is coming} (Qur’ān 29:5). And He said: {So whoever would hope for the meeting with his Lord - let him do righteous work and not associate in the worship of his Lord anyone} (Qur’ān 18:110). And Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Those are the ones who hope for the mercy of Allāh. And Allāh is Forgiving and Merciful} (Qur’ān 2:218).

"In Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim, it is narrated from Jābir (may Allāh be pleased with him) who said: 'I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say three days before his death: "Let none of you die except while he has good expectations of his Lord."'"

"And in the Ṣaḥīḥ from him: 'Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, says: "I am as My servant expects Me to be, so let him expect of Me what he wills."'"

Hope is a driver that urges hearts towards the land of the Beloved, which is Allāh and the Hereafter, and it makes the journey pleasant for them. It is said that it is rejoicing in the generosity and grace of the Lord, Blessed and Exalted, and finding comfort in contemplating His nobility, Glorified is He. It is said: It is trust in the generosity of the Lord ta'ālā. The difference between it and wishful thinking (tamannī) is that wishful thinking occurs with laziness and does not lead its possessor on the path of seriousness and effort. Hope occurs with the exertion of effort and good reliance (tawakkul). The first is like the state of one who wishes he had land to sow and reap its harvest. The second is like the state of one who ploughs his land, cultivates it, sows it, and hopes for the crop to grow. This is why the Gnostics are unanimous that hope is not valid except with action. Shāh al-Kirmānī said: "The sign of sound hope is good obedience." Hope is of three types: two are praiseworthy, and one is blameworthy delusion. The first two are the hope of a man who acts in obedience to Allāh, guided by light from Allāh, so he hopes for His reward; and a man who committed sins then repented from them, so he hopes for Allāh's forgiveness ta'ālā, His pardon, His beneficence, His generosity, His forbearance, and His nobility. The third is a man who persists in negligence and sins, hoping for Allāh's mercy without action. This is delusion, wishful thinking, and false hope.

The wayfarer (sālik) has two perspectives: a perspective on himself, his faults, and the defects of his actions, which opens the door of fear for him. And a perspective on the vastness of his Lord's grace, His generosity, and His benevolence, which opens the door of hope for him. This is why it was said in defining hope: "It is looking at the vastness of Allāh's mercy." Abū 'Alī al-Rūdhabārī said: "Fear and hope are like the two wings of a bird. If they are equal, the bird is balanced and its flight is complete. If one of them is deficient, deficiency occurs in it. If both are gone, the bird is on the verge of death." Aḥmad ibn 'Āṣim was asked: "What is the sign of hope in a servant?" He said: "It is that when beneficence surrounds him, he is inspired to gratitude, hoping for the completion of Allāh's favor upon him in this world and the Hereafter, and the completion of His pardon for him in the Hereafter." They differed as to which hope is more complete: the hope of the muḥsin (good-doer) for the reward of his good deeds, or the hope of the repentant sinner for the forgiveness and pardon of his Lord. One group favored the hope of the good-doer due to the strength of the reasons for hope with him. Another group favored the hope of the sinner because his hope is free from the defect of seeing his own deeds and is coupled with the humility of seeing his sin. Yaḥyā ibn Mu'ādh said: "My hope in You despite my sins almost overcomes my hope in You with my deeds, because I find myself relying on sincerity in my deeds, and how can I purify and preserve them when I am known for defects? And I find myself relying on Your pardon in my sins, and how can You not forgive them when You are described by generosity?" He also said: "My God, the sweetest of gifts in my heart is hope in You, the most delightful words on my tongue are Your praise, and the most beloved of times to me is the time when I meet You."

Repentance (Tawbah)

Al-Nawawī said in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

The scholars have said that repentance is obligatory from every sin. If the disobedience is between the servant and Allāh ta'ālā and does not pertain to the right of a human being, it has three conditions: first, that he desists from the disobedience; second, that he regrets committing it; and third, that he resolves never to return to it. If one of these three is missing, his repentance is not valid.

If the disobedience pertains to a human being, its conditions are four: these three, and that he absolves himself from the right of its owner. If it was wealth or the like, he returns it to him. If it was a prescribed punishment for slander or the like, he enables him [to carry it out], or seeks his pardon. If it was backbiting, he seeks his forgiveness for it. It is obligatory to repent from all sins. If he repents from some of them, his repentance is valid according to the people of truth for that sin, and the rest remain upon him.

The evidences from the Qur'ān, the Sunnah, and the consensus of the Ummah have overwhelmingly established the obligation of repentance. Allāh ta'ālā said: {And turn to Allāh in repentance, all of you, O believers, that you might succeed} (Qur'ān 24:31). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {Seek forgiveness of your Lord and then repent to Him} (Qur'ān 11:3). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {O you who have believed, repent to Allāh with sincere repentance} (Qur'ān 66:8).

"On the authority of Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) who said: 'I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "By Allāh, I seek Allāh's forgiveness and repent to Him more than seventy times a day." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī)."

"On the authority of al-Agharr ibn Yasār al-Muzanī (may Allāh be pleased with him) who said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "O people, repent to Allāh and seek His forgiveness, for I repent one hundred times a day." (Narrated by Muslim)."

"On the authority of Abū Ḥamzah Anas ibn Mālik al-Anṣārī, the servant of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ (may Allāh be pleased with him), who said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Allāh is more pleased with the repentance of His servant than one of you who was upon his camel in a desert, and it escaped from him, carrying his food and drink. He despaired of it, came to a tree, and lay down in its shade, having despaired of his camel. While he was in that state, behold, it was standing before him. He took hold of its rein and then said out of extreme joy, 'O Allāh, You are my servant and I am Your Lord,' making a mistake out of extreme joy." (Agreed upon). In a narration by Muslim: "Allāh is more intensely pleased with the repentance of His servant when he repents to Him than one of you who was on his mount in a desert, and it escaped from him, carrying his food and drink. He despaired of it, came to a tree, and lay down in its shade, having despaired of his mount. While he was in that state, behold, it was standing before him. He took hold of its rein and then said out of extreme joy, 'O Allāh, You are my servant and I am Your Lord,' making a mistake out of extreme joy.""

"On the authority of Abū Mūsā 'Abdullāh ibn Qays al-Ash'arī (may Allāh be pleased with him) from the Prophet ﷺ who said: "Indeed, Allāh ta'ālā extends His hand at night for the sinner of the day to repent, and extends His hand during the day for the sinner of the night to repent, until the sun rises from its place of setting." (Narrated by Muslim)."

"On the authority of Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) who said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever repents before the sun rises from its place of setting, Allāh will accept his repentance." (Narrated by Muslim)."

"On the authority of Abū 'Abd al-Raḥmān 'Abdullāh ibn 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb (may Allāh be pleased with them both) from the Prophet ﷺ who said: "Indeed, Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, accepts the repentance of a servant as long as the death rattle has not reached his throat." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī)."

It is mentioned in Madārij al-Sālikīn, from which we quote in summary:

We will mention some points related to the rulings of repentance, for which there is a pressing need, and it is not befitting for a servant to be ignorant of them, including:

That hastening to repent from a sin is an immediate obligation, and it is not permissible to delay it. Whenever one delays it, he sins by the delay. So, if he repents from the sin, another repentance remains upon him, which is his repentance from delaying repentance. This rarely crosses the mind of the penitent; rather, he thinks that if he repents from the sin, nothing else remains upon him, whereas repentance from delaying repentance still remains upon him.

Nothing saves from this except a general repentance for the sins he knows and those he does not know. For the sins a servant does not know are more numerous than those he knows. His ignorance of them does not benefit him in avoiding accountability if he was able to acquire knowledge, for he is disobedient by abandoning knowledge and action, so the disobedience in his case is more severe.

In Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Ḥibbān, it is narrated that the Prophet ﷺ said: "Shirk in this Ummah is more hidden than the crawling of an ant." Abū Bakr said, "How can one be saved from it, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said: "By saying: 'O Allāh, I seek refuge in You from knowingly associating partners with You, and I seek Your forgiveness for what I do not know.'" This is a request for forgiveness for what Allāh knows to be a sin but the servant does not know. And in the Ṣaḥīḥ from him ﷺ, he used to supplicate in his prayer: "O Allāh, forgive me my sin, my ignorance, my extravagance in my affairs, and what You know better than I. O Allāh, forgive me my serious [sins] and my jests, my mistakes and my deliberate [sins], and all of that is with me. O Allāh, forgive me what I have sent forth and what I have left behind, what I have concealed and what I have declared, and what You know better than I. You are my God; there is no god but You." In another Ḥadīth: "O Allāh, forgive me all my sins, the minor and the major, the mistaken and the deliberate, the secret and the public, the first and the last." This generalization and comprehensiveness is so that repentance covers the sins the servant knows and those he does not know.

This becomes clear by mentioning sincere repentance (tawbah naṣūḥ) and its reality. Allāh ta'ālā said: {O you who have believed, repent to Allāh with sincere repentance. Perhaps your Lord will remove from you your misdeeds and admit you to gardens beneath which rivers flow} (Qur'ān 66:8). So He made the protection from the evil of misdeeds, which is their expiation by the removal of what the servant dislikes, and the entry into gardens, which is the attainment of what the servant loves, conditional upon achieving sincere repentance. The word "naṣūḥ" is on the pattern of "fa'ūl," which is altered from "fā'il" for the purpose of emphasis, like "shakūr" (very grateful) and "ṣabūr" (very patient). The root of the word "naṣūḥ" is the purification of something from adulteration and foreign impurities, and it is related in the broader etymology to "naṣaḥa" (to be pure, sincere). So, sincerity (naṣḥ) in repentance, worship, and consultation is to purify them from all adulteration, deficiency, and corruption, and to perform them in the most complete manner. "Naṣḥ" is the opposite of "ghish" (deceit). The Salaf differed in their expressions about it, but their meanings converge to one thing. 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb and Ubayy ibn Ka'b (may Allāh be pleased with them) said:

"Sincere repentance is to repent from a sin and then never return to it, just as milk never returns to the udder." Al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī said: "It is for the servant to be remorseful for what has passed and to resolve not to return to it." Al-Kalbī said: "It is to seek forgiveness with the tongue, regret with the heart, and restrain the body."

Scrupulousness (Wara')

Ibn al-Qayyim (may Allāh have mercy on him) said:

Allāh ta'ālā said: {O messengers, eat from the good things and work righteousness. Indeed, I, of what you do, am Knowing} (Qur'ān 23:51). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {And your clothing purify} (Qur'ān 74:4). Qatādah and Mujāhid said: "[It means] purify your soul from sin," so He used "clothing" as a metonym for the soul. This is the opinion of Ibrāhīm al-Nakha'ī, al-Ḍaḥḥāk, al-Sha'bī, al-Zuhrī, and the verifying scholars of tafsīr. Ibn 'Abbās said: "Do not wear it [your soul/self] in disobedience or treachery." Then he said, "Have you not heard the saying of Ghaylān ibn Salamah al-Thaqafi:

And I, by Allāh's praise, have not worn the garment of a traitor, Nor am I cloaked in treachery."

The Arabs, in describing a man with truthfulness and loyalty, say "ṭāhir al-thiyāb" (of pure garments), and they say of the treacherous and wicked, "danis al-thiyāb" (of soiled garments). Ubayy ibn Ka'b said: "Do not wear it in treachery, oppression, and sin, but wear it while you are righteous and pure." Al-Ḍaḥḥāk said: "Your deeds, so rectify them." The point is that scrupulousness purifies the filth and impurity of the heart, just as water purifies the filth and impurity of a garment. The Prophet ﷺ summarized all of scrupulousness in one phrase, saying: "Part of the excellence of a person's Islām is his leaving what does not concern him." This encompasses leaving what does not concern one in speech, sight, hearing, striking, walking, thinking, and all other outward and inward movements. This phrase is sufficient and healing in [defining] scrupulousness.

Ibrāhīm ibn Adham said: "Scrupulousness is leaving every doubtful matter, and leaving what does not concern you is leaving excesses." In al-Tirmidhī, it is narrated as marfū' (attributed to the Prophet ﷺ): "O Abū Hurayrah, be scrupulous, and you will be the most devout of people." Al-Shiblī said: "Scrupulousness is to be scrupulous about everything other than Allāh." Ishāq ibn Khalaf said: "Scrupulousness in speech is more severe than in gold and silver, and asceticism in leadership is more severe than in gold and silver, because they (gold and silver) are spent in seeking leadership." Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī said: "Scrupulousness is the beginning of asceticism, just as contentment is the beginning of satisfaction." Yaḥyā ibn Mu'adh said: "Scrupulousness is adhering to the limit of knowledge without interpretation." He also said: "Scrupulousness is of two types: outward scrupulousness and inward scrupulousness. Outward scrupulousness is that one does not move except for Allāh, and inward scrupulousness is that nothing other than Him enters your heart." He also said: "Whoever does not scrutinize the minute details of scrupulousness will not reach the great 'aṭā' (gift/bounty)." It was said: "Scrupulousness is abandoning desires and leaving evil deeds." It was said: "Whoever is meticulous in his scrupulousness or his insight in this world, his standing (khaṭar) will be great in the Hereafter." Yūnus ibn 'Ubayd said: "Scrupulousness is abandoning every doubtful matter and calling the soul to account at every blink of an eye." Sufyān al-Thawrī said: "I have not seen anything easier than scrupulousness: whatever troubles your conscience, leave it." Sahl said: "The ḥalāl is that in which Allāh is not disobeyed, and the pure (ṣāfi) of it is that in which Allāh is not forgotten." Al-Ḥasan asked a boy, "What is the foundation of religion?" He replied, "Scrupulousness." He asked, "And what is its bane?" He replied, "Greed." Al-Ḥasan was amazed by him. Al-Ḥasan said: "An atom's weight of scrupulousness is better than a thousand measures of fasting and prayer." Abū Hurayrah said: "The companions of Allāh tomorrow will be the people of scrupulousness and asceticism." One of the Salaf said: "A servant does not reach the reality of taqwā until he leaves what is unobjectionable out of caution for what is objectionable." Some of the Companions said: "We used to leave seventy doors of ḥalāl for fear of falling into one door of ḥarām."

Fear yields scrupulousness. Seeking help and shortening hope [yield results]. Strong faith in the meeting [with Allāh] yields asceticism. Knowledge yields love. Fear, hope, and contentment yield satisfaction. Remembrance yields life of the heart. Faith in predestination (qadar) yields reliance (tawakkul). Constant contemplation of the Names and Attributes yields knowledge. Scrupulousness also yields asceticism. Repentance also yields love. Constant remembrance yields it, and satisfaction yields gratitude. Resolution and patience yield all states and stations. Sincerity and truthfulness, each yields and necessitates the other. Knowledge yields good character, and reflection yields resolution. Self-monitoring yields the fruitful use of time and preservation of days. Modesty, awe, turning in repentance, mortification of the soul, humbling it, and breaking it lead to the life of the heart, its honor, and its mending. Knowing the self and despising it leads to modesty before Allāh, Mighty and Majestic. Considering one's [good deeds] from Him as abundant and one's [good deeds] from oneself in obedience as insignificant, erasing the trace of claims from the heart and tongue, and soundness of insight yield certainty. Good contemplation of the witnessed and recited signs that you see and hear yields soundness of insight. The foundation of all this is two things: first, that you transfer your heart from the homeland of the world and settle it in the homeland of the Hereafter. Then, you turn with all of it to the meanings of the Qur'ān, seeking to clarify them, contemplate them, understand what is intended by them and for what purpose it was revealed, and take your share and portion from every verse of its verses, applying it to the ailment of your heart. This is a short, near, easy path leading to the Highest Companion, safe, such that its traveler is not afflicted by fear, destruction, hunger, or thirst, nor does it have any of the afflictions of other paths at all. And upon it from Allāh is a guardian and protector who looks after those who travel it, protects them, and defends them. No one knows the value of this path except one who knows the paths of people, their perils, their afflictions, and their highway robbers. And Allāh is the One whose help is sought.

Humility (Khushū')

Allāh ta'ālā said: {Has the time not come for those who have believed that their hearts should become humbly submissive at the remembrance of Allāh and what has come down of the truth?} (Qur'ān 57:16). Ibn Mas'ūd (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: "It was only four years between our acceptance of Islām and Allāh admonishing us with this verse." Ibn 'Abbās said: "Allāh found the hearts of the believers slow [to humble themselves], so He admonished them at the head of thirteen years after the revelation of the Qur'ān." And Allāh ta'ālā said: {Certainly will the believers have succeeded: They who are during their prayer humbly submissive} (Qur'ān 23:1-2). Khushū' in its original linguistic meaning is lowness, humility, and stillness. Allāh ta'ālā said: {And [all] voices will be hushed for the Most Merciful} (Qur'ān 20:108), meaning they will be still, humbled, and submissive.

From this is the description of the earth as having khushūʿ, which is its dryness, lowness, and lack of elevation with irrigation and vegetation. Allāh taʿālā said: {And of His signs is that you see the earth barren and desolate, but when We send down upon it rain, it quivers and grows} (Qurʾān 41:39).

Khushūʿ is the heart's standing before the Lord with submission, humility, and focus on Him. It is said that khushūʿ is submission to the truth. This is one of the requirements of khushūʿ, for among its signs is that when the servant is opposed and the truth is presented to him, he accepts it with acceptance and submission. It is said that khushūʿ is the extinguishing of the fires of desire, the calming of the smoke of the chests, and the shining of the light of glorification in the heart. Al-Junayd said: "Khushūʿ is the humbling of hearts to the Knower of the unseen." The Gnostics are unanimous that the place of khushūʿ is the heart, and its fruit is on the limbs, which manifest it. The Prophet ﷺ saw a man fidgeting with his beard in prayer and said: "If his heart had khushūʿ, his limbs would have khushūʿ." The Prophet ﷺ said: "Taqwā is here," and he pointed to his chest three times. One of the Gnostics said: "Good outward etiquette is an indication of inward etiquette." Some of them saw a man with stooped shoulders and body and said: "O so-and-so, khushūʿ is here," pointing to his chest, "not here," pointing to his shoulders. One of the Companions (may Allāh be pleased with them), Ḥudhayfah, used to say: "Beware of the khushūʿ of hypocrisy." He was asked, "What is the khushūʿ of hypocrisy?" He said: "That you see the body with khushūʿ, but the heart does not have khushūʿ." ʿUmar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb (may Allāh be pleased with him) saw a man lowering his neck in prayer and said: "O owner of the neck, raise your neck! Khushūʿ is not in the necks; khushūʿ is in the hearts." ʿĀʾishah (may Allāh be pleased with her) saw young men walking and feigning weakness in their gait and said to her companions: "Who are these?" They said, "Ascetics (nussāk)." She said: "'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, when he walked, he walked briskly; when he spoke, he made himself heard; when he struck, he caused pain; and when he fed, he satisfied. He was the true ascetic." Al-Fuḍayl ibn ʿIyād said: "It was disliked for a man to show more khushū' than what was in his heart." Ḥudhayfah (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: "The first thing you will lose from your religion is khushū', and the last thing you will lose from your religion is prayer. And there may be one who prays in whom there is no good. Soon you will enter the congregational mosque and not see anyone with khushū' among them." Sahl said: "Whoever's heart has khushū', Satan will not come near him."

Asceticism (Zuhd)

Imām Ibn al-Qayyim said in Madārij al-Sālikīn 2/8:

Among the Stations of *{It is You we worship and You we ask for help}

Allāh ta'ālā said: {Whatever you have will end, but what Allāh has is lasting} (Qur'ān 16:96). And Allāh ta'ālā said: {Know that the life of this world is but amusement and diversion and adornment and boasting to one another and competition in increase of wealth and children - like the example of a rain whose [resulting] plant growth pleases the tillers; then it dries and you see it turned yellow; then it becomes scattered debris. And in the Hereafter is severe punishment and forgiveness from Allāh and approval. And what is the worldly life except the enjoyment of delusion} (Qur'ān 57:20).

The Qur'ān is full of discouragement from the world, informing of its baseness, its insignificance, its transience, and the speed of its passing, and encouragement towards the Hereafter, informing of its nobility and permanence. When Allāh wills good for a servant, He establishes in his heart a witness by which he perceives the reality of this world and the Hereafter, and he prefers from them what is more worthy of preference. People have spoken extensively on asceticism, and each has alluded to his own experience and spoken from his state and observation, for most of the expressions of the people are from their experiences and states. Speaking with the tongue of knowledge is more comprehensive than speaking with the tongue of experience and closer to proof and evidence. I heard Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah (may Allāh sanctify his soul) say: "Asceticism is leaving what does not benefit in the Hereafter, and scrupulousness is leaving what you fear will harm in the Hereafter." This expression is one of the best and most comprehensive things said about asceticism and scrupulousness. Sufyān al-Thawrī said: "Asceticism in the world is shortening hope, not eating coarse food or wearing a cloak." Al-Junayd said: "I heard Sarī say: 'Indeed, Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, has withheld the world from His awliyā' (friends/saints), protected His chosen ones from it, and removed it from the hearts of the people of His love because He was not pleased with it for them.'" He said: "Asceticism is in His ta'ālā saying: {...so that you not despair over what has eluded you and not exult [in pride] over what He has given you. And Allāh does not like every self-deluded and boastful person} (Qur'ān 57:23). So the ascetic does not rejoice over any existing thing from the world, nor does he grieve over anything lost from it."

Yaḥyā ibn Mu'ādh said: "Asceticism begets generosity with possessions, and love begets generosity with the soul." Ibn al-Jallā' said: "Asceticism is looking at the world with the eye of transience, so it becomes insignificant in your eyes, and turning away from it becomes easy for you." Ibn Khafīf said: "Asceticism is finding comfort in departing from possessions." He also said: "Asceticism is the heart's detachment from means and shaking the hands free from ownership." It was said: "It is the heart's aversion to the world without affectation." Al-Junayd said: "Asceticism is the heart's emptiness of what the hand is empty of." Imām Aḥmad said: "Asceticism in the world is shortening hope." Another narration from him is that it is not rejoicing at its arrival nor grieving at its departure. He was asked about a man who has a thousand dinars, "Can he be an ascetic?" He replied, "Yes, on the condition that he does not rejoice if it increases nor grieve if it decreases." 'Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak said: "It is trust in Allāh along with love of poverty." This is the saying of Shaqīq and Yūsuf ibn Asbāṭ. 'Abd al-Wāḥid ibn Zayd said: "Asceticism... asceticism is in the dinar and the dirham." Abū Sulaymān al-Dārānī said: "[It is] leaving what distracts from Allāh." This is the saying of al-Shiblī. Ruwaym asked al-

Junayd about asceticism, and he said: "Belittling the world and erasing its traces from the heart." He once said: "It is the hand's freedom from ownership and the heart's freedom from pursuit." Yaḥyā ibn Mu'ādh said: "No one reaches the reality of asceticism until he possesses three qualities: action without attachment, speech without greed, and honor without leadership." He also said: "The ascetic offers you vinegar and mustard, while the Gnostic perfumes you with musk and ambergris." It was said its reality "is asceticism in the self." This is the saying of Dhū al-Nūn al-Miṣrī. It was said: "Asceticism is preferring others when one is self-sufficient, and chivalry (futūwah) is preferring others when one is in need. Allāh ta'ālā said: {And they give [them] preference over themselves, even though they are in privation} (Qur'ān 59:9)."

A man said to Yaḥyā ibn Mu'ādh, "When can I enter the shop of reliance (tawakkul), wear the robe of the ascetics, and sit with them?" He replied, "When you reach a point in disciplining yourself such that if Allāh were to cut off your sustenance for three days, your soul would not weaken. As long as you have not reached this degree, your sitting on the carpet of the ascetics is ignorance, and then I would not feel secure for you from being disgraced." Imām Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal said: "Asceticism is of three types: First, leaving the ḥarām, which is the asceticism of the common folk. Second, leaving superfluous ḥalāl, which is the asceticism of the elite. Third, leaving what distracts from Allāh, which is the asceticism of the Gnostics." This statement from Imām Aḥmad encompasses all the preceding statements of the Shaykhs, with the addition of detailing and clarifying its degrees. It is one of the most comprehensive statements and indicates that he (may Allāh be pleased with him) held the highest position in this knowledge. Al-Shāfi'ī (may Allāh have mercy on him) testified to his leadership in eight matters, one of which was asceticism. What the Gnostics have agreed upon is that asceticism is the heart's journey from the homeland of the world and its settling in the stations of the Hereafter. Based on this, the early scholars compiled books on asceticism, such as "Al-Zuhd" by ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak, Imām Aḥmad, Wakī‘, Hannād ibn al-Sarī, and others. It pertains to six things, and a servant does not deserve the name of ascetic until he is ascetic in them: wealth, images (or forms/appearances), leadership, people, the self, and everything other than Allāh.

The intention is not to reject them from ownership, for Solomon and David (peace be upon them both) were among the most ascetic people of their time, yet they had what they had of wealth, kingdom, and women. Our Prophet ﷺ was the most ascetic of mankind absolutely, and he had nine wives. ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf, al-Zubayr, and ‘Uthmān (may Allāh be pleased with them) were among the ascetics, despite the wealth they possessed. Al-Ḥasan ibn ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him) was among the ascetics, even though he was one of the Ummah who most loved women and married them, and was one of the wealthiest. ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak was one of the ascetic Imāms, despite having much wealth, as was al-Layth ibn Sa‘d, one of the Imāms of asceticism, who had capital and used to say, "Were it not for it, these people would have made us destitute (lit. wiped their hands on us)." One of the best things said about asceticism is the statement of al-Ḥasan or someone else: "Asceticism in the world is not forbidding the ḥalāl nor wasting wealth, but rather that you are more confident in what is in Allāh's hand than in what is in your hand, and that you are more desirous of the reward for a calamity if it befalls you than you would be of it if it had not befallen you." This is one of the most comprehensive and best statements on asceticism, and it has been narrated as marfū‘.

People have differed as to whether asceticism is possible in these times or not. Abū Ḥaṣṣ said: "Asceticism can only be in the ḥalāl, and there is no ḥalāl in the world, so there is no asceticism." People opposed him in this and said, "Rather, ḥalāl exists in it, and ḥarām is abundant in it. And even if we assume there is no ḥalāl in it, this is even more reason to be ascetic in it and to take from it what one in dire necessity takes, like taking from a dead animal, blood, and pork." Yūsuf ibn Asbāṭ said: "If it reached me that a man reached the station of asceticism of Abū Dharr, Abū al-Dardā', Salmān, al-Miqdād, and their likes among the Companions (may Allāh be pleased with them), I would not call him an ascetic, because asceticism can only be in pure ḥalāl, and pure ḥalāl is not found in our time. As for ḥarām, if you commit it, Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, will punish you."

Degrees of Asceticism:

The First Degree: "Asceticism in doubtful matters after abandoning the ḥarām, by being cautious of reproach, disdaining deficiency, and disliking to associate with the dissolute (fussāq)." As for asceticism in doubtful matters, it is leaving what is ambiguous to the servant as to whether it is ḥalāl or ḥarām, as in the Ḥadīth of al-Nu'mān ibn Bashīr (may Allāh be pleased with them both) from the Prophet ﷺ: "The ḥalāl is clear and the ḥarām is clear, and between them are ambiguous matters which many people do not know. So whoever avoids ambiguous matters has protected [himself with regard to] the ḥarām, and whoever falls into ambiguous matters falls into the ḥarām, like a shepherd who grazes around a sanctuary, he is liable to graze in it. Verily, every king has a sanctuary, and verily, Allāh's sanctuary is His prohibitions. Verily, in the body there is a piece of flesh; if it is sound, the entire body is sound, and if it is corrupt, the entire body is corrupt. Verily, it is the heart." So, ambiguous matters are a barrier between the ḥalāl and the ḥarām.

His statement "after abandoning the ḥarām" means that abandoning doubtful matters only occurs after abandoning the ḥarām. His statement "by being cautious of reproach" means that the reason for his abandoning doubtful matters is caution against Allāh's reproach being directed at him. His statement "and disdaining deficiency" means that he disdains for himself his deficiency before his Lord and his falling from His sight, not his disdain for his deficiency before people and his falling from their sight, although that is not blameworthy but also praiseworthy. However, what is blameworthy is for all his disdain to be from people while he does not disdain [falling short] before Allāh. His statement "and disliking to associate with the dissolute" means that the dissolute crowd around places of desire in the world, and those situations are thronged with them. The ascetic disdains to share with them in those situations and elevates himself above them due to the baseness of his partners therein. As it was said to one of them, "What made you ascetic in the world?" He said, "Its lack of loyalty, its abundance of harshness, and the baseness of its partners." If I did not leave water out of piety, I would leave it due to the multitude of partners in it:

If a fly lands on food,
I lift my hand, though my soul desires it.

And lions avoid approaching water
If dogs are lapping in it.

The Second Degree:

"Asceticism in superfluities, which is what exceeds the basic sustenance and provision for the journey, by seizing the opportunity of being free for the cultivation of time, calming the agitation of the heart, and adorning oneself with the adornment of the Prophets and the truthful ones (ṣiddīqīn)." Superfluities are what exceed the measure of need. Basic sustenance (al-muskah) is what sustains the soul in terms of food, drink, clothing, shelter, and marriage if needed. Provision for the journey (al-balāgh) is the sufficiency of that with which a traveler sustains himself in the stages of a journey. So, one is ascetic in what is beyond that, seizing the opportunity of being free for the cultivation of his time. Because when the asceticism of those in the first degree was out of fear of reproach and caution against deficiency, the asceticism of those in this degree is higher and more elevated, which is seizing the opportunity of leisure to cultivate their time with Allāh. For if one is occupied with worldly superfluities, he misses his share of seizing the opportunity of time. Time is a sword; if you do not cut it, it will cut you. Cultivating time is to be engaged in all its moments in what brings one closer to Allāh or aids in that, such as food, drink, marriage, or sleep.

As for calming the agitation of the heart (ḥasm al-ja'sh), it is cutting off the heart's turmoil related to worldly causes – desire, fear, love, hatred, and striving. Asceticism is not sound for a servant until he cuts off this turmoil from his heart by not paying attention to them nor being attached to them, both when he is directly involved with them and when he leaves them. For asceticism is the asceticism of the heart, not the asceticism of abandoning with the hand and other limbs; it is the heart's detachment from them, not the hand's emptiness of them. As for adorning oneself with the adornment of the Prophets and the truthful ones, they are truly the people of asceticism in the world, as they are striving towards a standard that has been raised for them, other than it [the world]. So they are ascetics even if they are directly involved with it.

The Third Degree: "Asceticism in asceticism, which is through three things: belittling what you were ascetic in, the equality of states regarding it in your view, and departing from witnessing the acquisition [of merit], looking towards the valley of realities." The Shaykh has explained his meaning of "asceticism in asceticism" with three things. First, belittling what one was ascetic in. For one whose heart is filled with the love and glorification of Allāh does not see that what he left for His sake from the world deserves to be made an offering, because the entire world, in its entirety, is not equal to the wing of a gnat in Allāh's sight. So the Gnostic does not see his asceticism in it as a great matter to be considered and celebrated. Thus, one for whom asceticism is sound becomes ashamed to assign any value to what he left for Allāh, by noticing his asceticism in it. Rather, he becomes oblivious to his asceticism in it, just as he became oblivious to it [the world itself], and he is ashamed to mention it with his tongue or witness it with his heart. As for the equality of states regarding it in his view, it is that he sees leaving what he was ascetic in and taking it as equal in his view, as it has no value for him. This is one of the subtleties of the jurisprudence of asceticism. So he is ascetic when taking it just as he is ascetic when leaving it, as his aspiration is too high to notice it, whether taking or leaving, due to its insignificance in his eyes. As for departing from witnessing the acquisition [of merit], its meaning is that whoever belittles the world in his heart and the states of taking it and leaving it are equal in his view, does not see that he has acquired any degree with Allāh by leaving it at all, because it is too insignificant in his eyes for him to see that he acquired degrees by leaving it. There is another meaning, which is to witness Allāh's, Mighty and Majestic, sole agency in giving and withholding, so he does not see that he left anything or took anything, but Allāh alone is the Giver and Withholder. So what he took, it is Allāh's bestowal upon him flowing, like the flow of water in a river. And what he left for Allāh, it is Allāh, Glorified and Exalted, who withheld it from him. Thus, by witnessing the sole Doer, he departs from witnessing his own acquisition and abandonment. When he looks at things with the eye of unification (jamʿ) and treads the valley of reality (ḥaqīqah), he becomes absent from witnessing his acquisition. This is the meaning of his statement "looking towards the valley of realities." This is the more fitting of the two meanings to his words. This is the asceticism of the elite. The poet said:

If fear of ruin made me ascetic in desire,
It revealed to me a face that makes one ascetic in asceticism.

The Virtue of Asceticism in the World, Encouragement to Take Little from It, and the Virtue of Poverty:

It is stated in Riyāḍ al-Ṣāliḥīn:

- "On the authority of Anas (may Allāh be pleased with him) that the Prophet ﷺ said: "O Allāh, there is no life except the life of the Hereafter." (Agreed upon)."
- "And on his authority, from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ who said: "Three things follow the deceased: his family, his wealth, and his deeds. Two return, and one remains. His family and wealth return, and his deeds remain." (Agreed upon)."

And on his authority, he said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "On the Day of Resurrection, the most affluent person of this world from among the people of Hellfire will be brought and dipped once into the Fire. Then it will be said: O son of Adam, did you ever see any good? Did you ever experience any pleasure? He will say: No, by Allāh, O Lord. And the most miserable person of this world from among the people of Paradise will be brought and dipped once into Paradise. Then it will be said to him: O son of Adam, did you ever see any misery? Did you ever experience any hardship? He will say: No, by Allāh, I never experienced any misery, nor did I ever see any hardship." Narrated by Muslim.

Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Look at those who are beneath you and do not look at those who are above you, for that is more likely to prevent you from belittling the blessings of Allāh upon you." Agreed upon. This is Muslim's wording. In al-Bukhārī's narration: "When one of you looks at someone who has been favored over him in wealth and appearance, let him look at someone who is beneath him."

And on his authority, the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Wretched is the slave of the dīnār and the dirham, of velvet and silk brocade. If he is given, he is pleased, and if he is not given, he is not pleased." Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

And on his authority (may Allāh be pleased with him), he said: "I saw seventy of the People of the Bench (Ahl al-Ṣuffah), not one of whom had a cloak; either a lower garment (izār) or a single piece of cloth (kisā') which they had tied around their necks. Some of these garments reached halfway down their shins, and some reached their ankles, and they would gather it with their hands for fear that their private parts might be exposed." Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

And on his authority, he said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: “The world is a prison for the believer and a paradise for the disbeliever.” Narrated by Muslim.

Ibn ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with them both) said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) took me by the shoulder and said: “Be in this world as if you were a stranger or a wayfarer.” And Ibn ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with them both) used to say: “When evening comes, do not expect to see the morning, and when morning comes, do not expect to see the evening. Take from your health for your illness, and from your life for your death.” Narrated by al-Bukhārī.

In explaining this Ḥadīth, scholars have said its meaning is: do not incline towards the world, nor take it as a permanent home, nor tell yourself you will remain in it for long, nor be preoccupied with it. Do not attach yourself to anything from it except what a stranger attaches himself to in a land other than his own. Do not busy yourself in it with what a stranger, who intends to return to his family, would not busy himself. And with Allāh is the granting of success.

Abū al-‘Abbās Sahl ibn Sa‘d al-Sā‘idī (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: A man came to the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) and said: “O Messenger of Allāh, direct me to an action which, if I do it, Allāh will love me and people will love me.” He said: “Be abstemious in the world, Allāh will love you; and be abstemious in what people possess, people will love you.” A good (ḥasan) Ḥadīth, narrated by Ibn Mājah and others with good chains of narration.

Al-Nu‘mān ibn Bashīr (may Allāh be pleased with them both) said: ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb (may Allāh be pleased with him) mentioned what people had acquired of worldly possessions and said: “I saw the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) spend a whole day twisting and turning, not finding even inferior dates

Khabbāb ibn al-Aratt (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: "We emigrated with the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) seeking the countenance of Allāh the Exalted, so our reward became due from Allāh. Among us were those who died without having consumed any of their reward, such as Muṣ'ab ibn 'Umayr (may Allāh be pleased with him). He was killed on the day of Uḥud and left only a striped woolen garment (namirah). When we covered his head with it, his feet were exposed, and when we covered his feet with it, his head was exposed. So the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) ordered us to cover his head and put some idhkhīr (a type of fragrant grass) over his feet. And among us are those whose fruits have ripened, and they are harvesting them." Agreed upon.

Sahl ibn Sa'd al-Sā'idī (may Allāh be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "If the world were equivalent to a mosquito's wing in the sight of Allāh, He would not have given a disbeliever a sip of water from it." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī.

Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) said he heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) say: "Indeed, the world is cursed, and what is in it is cursed, except for the remembrance of Allāh the Exalted, what is beloved to Him, a scholar, or a learner." Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

‘Abdullāh ibn al-Shikhhīr (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: "I came to the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) while he was reciting: {Competition in worldly increase diverts you}. He said: 'The son of Adam says: My wealth, my wealth! But do you have, O son of Adam, any of your wealth except what you ate and consumed, or what you wore and wore out, or what you gave in charity and thus sent forward (for yourself)?'" Narrated by Muslim.

‘Abdullāh ibn Mughaffal (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: A man said to the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): “O Messenger of Allāh, by Allāh, I truly love you.” He said: “Consider what you are saying.” The man said: “By Allāh, I truly love you,” three times. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) then said: “If you truly love me, then prepare a shield for poverty, for poverty comes faster to one who loves me than a flood to its destination.” Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: “The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) slept on a reed mat, and when he stood up, it had left marks on his side. We said: O Messenger of Allāh, if only we had made a soft bedding for you. He said: ‘What have I to do with the world? I am in the world only like a rider who seeks shade under a tree, then departs and leaves it behind.’” Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good and sound (ḥasan ṣaḥīḥ) Ḥadīth.

Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: “The poor will enter Paradise five hundred years before the rich.” Narrated by al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a sound Ḥadīth.

Ibn ‘Abbās and ‘Imrān ibn al-Ḥuṣayn (may Allāh be pleased with them) narrated from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) who said: “I looked into Paradise and saw that most of its inhabitants were the poor. And I looked into Hellfire and saw that most of its inhabitants were women.” Agreed upon.

Usāmah ibn Zayd (may Allāh be pleased with them both) narrated from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) who said: “I stood at the gate of Paradise, and most of those who entered it were the destitute. The people of wealth were detained, except for the people of Hellfire, who had already been ordered to the Fire.” Agreed upon.

The Virtue of Hunger, Coarse Living, Limiting Oneself to Little Food, Drink, Clothing, and Other Pleasures of the Self, and Abandoning Desires

Allāh the Exalted said: {Then, there has succeeded them a posterity who have neglected ṣalāh (prayer) and have followed lusts. So they will be thrown in Hell. Except those who repent and believe (in the Oneness of Allāh and His Messenger, Muḥammad), and work righteousness. Such will enter Paradise and they will not be wronged in aught.} (Sūrah Maryam, 19:59-60). And He the Exalted said: {So he went forth before his people in his pomp. Those who were desirous of the life of the world, said: "Ah, would that we had the like of what Qārūn (Korah) has been given! Verily! He is the owner of a great fortune." And those who had been given knowledge said: "Woe to you! The Reward of Allāh (in the Hereafter) is better for those who believe and do righteous good deeds} (Sūrah al-Qaṣaṣ, 28:79-80). And He the Exalted said: {Then, on that Day, you shall be asked about the delights (you indulged in, in this world)!} (Sūrah al-Takāthur, 102:8). And He the Exalted said: {Whoever desires the quick-passing (transitory enjoyment of this world), We readily grant him what We will for whom We like. Then, afterwards, We have appointed for him Hell, he will burn therein disgraced and rejected.} (Sūrah al-Isrā', 17:18). The verses on this topic are numerous and well-known.

‘Urwah narrated from ‘Ā’ishah (may Allāh be pleased with her) that she used to say: "By Allāh, O son of my sister, we would see the new moon, then the new moon, then the new moon – three new moons in two months – and no fire would be lit in the houses of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him)." I said: "O aunt, what sustained you?" She said: "The two black ones: dates and water. However, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) had some neighbors from the Anṣār who had milch animals, and they used to send some of their milk to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), and he would give it to us to drink." Agreed upon.

Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) said: "The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) went out one day or one night, and he came across Abū Bakr and ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with them both). He said: 'What has brought you out of your houses at this hour?’ They said: ‘Hunger, O Messenger of Allāh.’ He said: ‘And I, by Him in Whose Hand is my soul, what brought you out is what brought me out. Get up!’ So they got up with him, and he came to a man from the Anṣār, but he was not in his house. When the man’s wife saw him, she said: ‘Welcome and greetings!’ The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said to her: ‘Where is so-and-so?’ She said: ‘He has gone to fetch fresh water for us.’ Just then, the Anṣārī man came, looked at the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) and his two companions, then said: ‘Praise be to Allāh, no one today has more honorable guests than I!’ He went and brought them a cluster of dates containing unripe, ripe, and fresh dates, and said: ‘Eat.’ He then took a knife. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said to him: ‘Beware of (slaughtering) a milch animal.’ So he slaughtered a sheep for them. They ate from the sheep and from that cluster of dates, and drank. When they had eaten their fill and quenched their thirst, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said to Abū Bakr and ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with them both): ‘By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, you will surely be questioned about this blessing on the Day of Resurrection. Hunger brought you out of your homes, and you did not return until this blessing befell you.’” Narrated by Muslim.

Khālīd ibn ‘Umar al-‘Adawī said: “‘Utbah ibn Ghazwān, who was the governor of Baṣrah, delivered a sermon to us. He praised Allāh and lauded Him, then said: ‘To proceed: Indeed, the world has announced its departure and has turned away swiftly. Nothing remains of it except a dreg, like the dreg in a vessel that its owner sips. You are moving from it to an abode that has no end, so move with the best of what you have. It has been mentioned to us that a stone is thrown from the brink of Hellfire and falls into it for seventy years without reaching its bottom. By Allāh, it will be filled. Are you astonished? And it has been mentioned to us that the distance between two panels of the gates of Paradise is a journey of forty years, and a day will come when it will be crowded with throngs. I saw myself as the seventh of seven with the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him); we had no food except the leaves of trees until our mouths became sore. I picked up a cloak, tore it between myself and Sa'd ibn Mālik; I used half of it as a lower garment, and Sa'd used the other half. Today, not one of us has become anything less than a governor of one of the provinces. And I seek refuge in Allāh from being great in my own estimation but small in the sight of Allāh." Narrated by Muslim.

Ibn Mas'ūd (may Allāh be pleased with him) narrated that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Whoever is afflicted with poverty and refers it to people, his poverty will not be alleviated. And whoever refers it to Allāh, Allāh will soon grant him provision, sooner or later." Narrated by Abū Dāwūd and al-Tirmidhī, who said it is a good Ḥadīth.

Diseases of the Heart and Their Cure

Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah said in his book "Amrāḍ al-Qulūb" (Diseases of the Hearts):

Allāh the Exalted says about the hypocrites in Sūrah al-Baqarah: {In their hearts is a disease (of doubt and hypocrisy) and Allāh has increased their disease} (Sūrah al-Baqarah, 2:10). And He the Exalted says in Sūrah al-Ḥajj: {That He (Allāh) may make what is thrown in by Shayṭān (Satan) a trial for those in whose hearts is a disease (of hypocrisy and disbelief) and whose hearts are hardened.} (Sūrah al-Ḥajj, 22:53). And He says in Sūrah al-Aḥzāb: {If the hypocrites, and those in whose hearts is a disease (evil desire for adultery, etc.), and those who spread false news in the city, cease not, We shall certainly let you overpower them, then they will not be able to stay in it as your neighbours but a little while.} (Sūrah al-Aḥzāb, 33:60). And He says in Sūrah al-Muddaththir: {And that those who were given the Scripture (Jews and Christians) and the believers may not doubt, and that those in whose hearts is a disease (hypocrisy) and the disbelievers may say: "What Allāh intends by this example?"} (Sūrah al-Muddaththir, 74:31). And Allāh the Exalted says in Sūrah Yūnus: {O mankind! There has come to you a good advice from your Lord (i.e. the Qur'ān, ordering all that is good and forbidding all that is evil), and a healing for that (disease of ignorance, doubt, hypocrisy and differences, etc.) in your breasts, - a guidance and a mercy (explaining lawful and unlawful things, etc.) for the believers.} (Sūrah Yūnus, 10:57). And He says in Sūrah al-Isrā': {And We send down from the Qur'ān that which is a healing and a mercy to those who believe (in Islāmic Monotheism and act on it), and it increases the Zālimūn (polytheists and wrong-doers) nothing but loss.} (Sūrah al-Isrā', 17:82). And He says in Sūrah al-Tawbah: {And heal the breasts of a believing people, And remove the anger of their (believers') hearts.} (Sūrah al-Tawbah, 9:14-15).

Physical illness is a disruption of its health and soundness; it is a corruption within it that impairs its perception and natural movement. Its perception may either be lost, like blindness and deafness, or it may perceive things contrary to their reality, as when one perceives sweetness as bitterness, or imagines things that have no external reality. As for the corruption of its natural movement, it is like when its digestive strength weakens, or when it loathes foods it needs and loves things that harm it, and suffers pain accordingly. Yet, despite this illness, it has not died nor perished, but still possesses some strength for general volitional movement and perception. This generates pain in the body, either due to a quantitative or qualitative imbalance. The first is either due to a deficiency of substance, requiring nourishment, or due to its excess, requiring evacuation. The second is like an imbalance of heat or cold beyond moderation, which is then treated. Similarly, the disease of the heart is a type of corruption that befalls it, impairing its perception and will. Its perception is impaired by specious arguments (shubuhāt) that present themselves to it, so that it either does not see the truth or sees it contrary to its reality. Its will is impaired such that it loathes beneficial truth and loves harmful falsehood. This is why disease is sometimes interpreted as doubt and uncertainty, as Mujāhid and Qatādah interpreted His saying in Sūrah al-Baqarah {In their hearts is a disease} as doubt. And it is interpreted as the desire for illicit relations, as His saying in Sūrah al-Aḥzāb {lest he in whose heart is a disease should be moved with desire} (Sūrah al-Aḥzāb, 33:32) has been interpreted.

Disease is less than death. The heart dies from absolute ignorance and becomes diseased from a type of ignorance. So it has death, disease, life, and cure. Its life, death, disease, and cure are greater than the life, death, disease, and cure of the body. Therefore, when a doubt or desire afflicts a diseased heart, its disease intensifies. If wisdom and admonition reach it, they become causes for its soundness and cure. Allāh the Exalted says in Sūrah al-Ḥajj: {That He (Allāh) may make what is thrown in by Shayṭān (Satan) a trial for those in whose hearts is a disease} because that engendered doubt in them, {and whose hearts are hardened} due to their rigidity. The hearts of the former were weak due to disease, so what Satan cast became a trial for them. The hearts of the latter were hardened against faith, so it became a trial for them. And He says in Sūrah al-Aḥzāb: {If the hypocrites, and those in whose hearts is a disease, and those who spread false news in the city, cease not}, just as He said in Sūrah al-Muddaththir: {And that those in whose hearts is a disease may say}. Their hearts have not died like the hearts of the disbelievers and hypocrites, nor are they sound and righteous like the sound hearts of the believers; rather, they contain a disease of doubt and desires. Likewise, in Sūrah al-Aḥzāb: {lest he in whose heart is a disease should be moved with desire}, which is the disease of desire. For a sound heart, if a woman were to present herself to it, would not pay her any attention, unlike the heart diseased with desire, which, due to its weakness, inclines towards what is presented to it according to the strength or weakness of the disease. So if they (women) speak softly, he in whose heart is a disease is moved with desire. The Qurʾān is a healing for what is in the breasts. Whoever has in his heart diseases of doubts and desires, will find in it clear proofs that distinguish truth from falsehood, thereby removing the diseases of doubt that corrupt knowledge, perception, and understanding, so that he sees things as they are. And in it is wisdom and good admonition through encouragement and warning, and stories that contain lessons, which bring about the soundness of the heart. So the heart desires what benefits it and is averse to what harms it. Thus, the heart remains loving guidance and hating misguidance, after having desired misguidance and hated guidance. The Qur'ān removes the diseases that cause corrupt intentions, until the heart becomes sound, its will becomes sound, and it returns to the natural disposition (fiṭrah) upon which it was created, just as the body returns to its natural state. The heart is nourished by faith and the Qur'ān with what purifies and strengthens it, just as the body is nourished by what makes it grow and strengthens it. For the purification (zakāh) of the heart is like the growth of the body, and zakāh in language means growth and increase in soundness.

It is said that something has "zakā" (purified/grown) when it grows in soundness. The heart needs to be nurtured so that it grows and increases until it is perfected and sound, just as the body needs to be nurtured with beneficial foods. Along with that, harmful things must be prevented. The body does not grow except by being given what benefits it and being prevented from what harms it. Likewise, the heart does not purify itself, grow, and achieve complete soundness except by obtaining what benefits it and repelling what harms it. Similarly, crops do not flourish except by this. Since charity (ṣadaqah) extinguishes sin as water extinguishes fire, the heart is purified by it. Its purification is a meaning additional to its cleansing from sin. Allāh the Exalted says in Sūrah al-Tawbah: {Take ṣadaqah (alms) from their wealth in order to purify them and sanctify them with it} (Sūrah al-Tawbah, 9:103). Likewise, abandoning immoral acts purifies the heart, as does abandoning sins, for they are like harmful substances in the body and like weeds in crops. When the body is cleansed of harmful substances, such as by removing excess blood, the natural strength is liberated and refreshed, and the body grows. Similarly, when the heart repents from sins, it is a cleansing from its adulterations, where it mixed a righteous deed with something else. When it repents from sins, the heart's strength and its will for righteous deeds are liberated, and the heart finds rest from those corrupting occurrences that were in it. So, the purification of the heart means that it grows and is perfected. Allāh the Exalted says: {And had it not been for the Grace of Allāh and His Mercy on you, not one of you would ever have been pure from sins.} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:21). And He the Exalted says: {And if you are asked to go back, go back, for it is purer for you.} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:28). And He says: {Tell the believing men to lower their gaze (from looking at forbidden things), and protect their private parts (from illegal sexual acts, etc.). That is purer for them. Verily, Allāh is All-Aware of what they do.} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:30). And He the Exalted says: {Indeed whosoever purifies himself (by avoiding polytheism and accepting Islāmic Monotheism) shall achieve success, And remembers (glorifies) the Name of his Lord (worships none but Allāh), and prays (five compulsory prayers and nawāfil - additional prayers).} (Sūrah al-A'lā, 87:14-15). And He the Exalted says: {Indeed he succeeds who purifies his ownself (i.e. obeys and performs all that Allāh ordered, by following the true Faith of Islāmic Monotheism and by doing righteous good deeds). And indeed he fails who corrupts his ownself (i.e. disobeys what Allāh has ordered by rejecting the true Faith of Islāmic Monotheism or by following polytheism, or by doing every kind of evil wicked deeds).} (Sūrah al-Shams, 91:9-10).

Purification (al-tazkiyah), although its origin is growth, blessing, and increase in goodness, is only achieved by removing evil. Therefore, purification encompasses both aspects. And He said: {And woe to Al-Mushrikūn (the disbelievers in the Oneness of Allāh, polytheists, idolaters, etc.). Those who give not the Zakāt} (Sūrah Fuṣṣilat, 41:6-7), which is Tawhīd and faith, by which the heart is purified. For it entails negating the divinity of anything other than the Truth from the heart, and affirming the divinity of the Truth in the heart, which is the reality of "Lā ilāha illā Allāh" (There is no god but Allāh). This is the foundation by which hearts are purified.

Allāh the Exalted says: {And those who disbelieved in Our Āyāt (proofs, evidences, verses, lessons, signs, revelations, etc.) are deaf and dumb in darkness.} (Sūrah al-An'ām, 6:39). And He (Glory be to Him) mentioned the verse of light and the verse of darkness, saying: {Allāh is the Light of the heavens and the earth. The parable of His Light is as (if there were) a niche and within it a lamp, the lamp is in glass, the glass as it were a brilliant star, lit from a blessed tree, an olive, neither of the east (i.e. neither it gets sun-rays only in the morning) nor of the west (i.e. nor it gets sun-rays only in the afternoon, but it is exposed to the sun all day long), whose oil would almost glow forth (of itself), though no fire touched it. Light upon Light!} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:35). This is the parable of the light of faith in the hearts of the believers. Then He said: {As for those who disbelieve, their deeds are like a mirage in a desert. The thirsty one thinks it to be water, until he comes up to it, he finds it to be nothing, but he finds Allāh with him, Who will pay him his due (Hell). And Allāh is Swift in taking account. Or [the state of a disbeliever] is like the darkness in a vast deep sea, overwhelmed with waves topped by waves, topped by dark clouds, (layers of) darkness upon darkness: if a man stretches out his hand, he can hardly see it! And he for whom Allāh has not appointed light, for him there is no light.} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:39-40). The first is a parable for corrupt beliefs and the actions that follow them; their possessor thinks them to be something beneficial, but when he comes to them, he finds them to be of no benefit. So Allāh pays him his account for those deeds. The second is a parable for simple ignorance and the absence of faith and knowledge. Its possessor is in darkness, layer upon layer, unable to see anything. For sight is only by the light of faith and knowledge. Allāh the Exalted says: {Verily, those who are Al-Muttaqūn (the pious), when an evil thought comes to them from Shayṭān (Satan), they remember (Allāh), and (indeed) they then see (aright).} (Sūrah al-Aʿrāf, 7:201). And He the Exalted says: {And indeed she did desire him and he would have inclined to her desire, had he not seen the evidence of his Lord.} (Sūrah Yūsuf, 12:24). This is the evidence of faith that was in his heart, by which Allāh averted from him what he had intended, and a full good deed was recorded for him, and no sin was recorded against him, as he did good and did not do evil.

Those whom Allāh has guided from this nation, until they became from among the pious allies of Allāh, one of the greatest reasons for that was their supplication to Allāh with this prayer in every ṣalāh, along with their knowledge of their constant need and dependence on Allāh to guide them to the Straight Path. Through the persistence of this supplication and dependence, they became from among the pious allies of Allāh. Sahl ibn ‘Abdullāh al-Tustarī said: "There is no path for the servant to his Lord closer to Him than dependence." Whatever guidance was obtained in the past, he needs to obtain guidance in it in the future. This is the reality of the statement of one who says: "Establish us and guide us to adhere to the Path," and the statement of one who says: "Increase us in guidance," which encompasses what has preceded. But all of this is guidance from Him in the future to the Straight Path. For acting in the future according to knowledge has not yet occurred, and one is not guided until one acts in the future according to knowledge. Knowledge may not be obtained in the future, but rather may depart from the heart. And if it is obtained, action may not occur. So all people are compelled to make this supplication. That is why Allāh enjoined it upon them in every ṣalāh. They are not in greater need of any supplication than this one. If guidance to the Straight Path is obtained, victory, provision, and all other forms of happiness that souls seek will be obtained. And Allāh knows best.

Imām Abū Ḥāmid al-Ghazālī discussed the issue of hearts, their diseases, and their treatment in his book "Iḥyā’ ‘Ulūm al-Dīn" (The Revival of the Religious Sciences), from which we will quote – in summary –:

The Status of the Heart

The honor of man and his virtue, by which he surpasses many kinds of creation, is his preparedness for the knowledge of Allāh (Glory be to Him), which in this world is his beauty, his perfection, and his pride, and in the Hereafter, his provision and his treasure. He is prepared for knowledge only through his heart, not through any of his limbs. The heart is the knower of Allāh, the one that draws near to Allāh, the one that acts for Allāh, the one that strives towards Allāh, and the one to whom is revealed what is with Allāh and in His presence. The limbs are merely followers, servants, and tools that the heart uses and employs, like a master uses a slave, a shepherd uses his flock, or an artisan uses a tool. The heart is the one accepted by Allāh if it is free from other than Allāh, and it is veiled from Allāh if it becomes engrossed in other than Allāh. It is the one addressed, the one called to account, and the one reproached. It is the one that finds happiness in nearness to Allāh and prospers if he purifies it, and it is the one that is disappointed and becomes wretched if he corrupts and debases it. It is the one that truly obeys Allāh the Exalted, and the acts of worship that spread to the limbs are but its lights. It is the one that disobeys and rebels against Allāh the Exalted, and the immoralities that spread to the organs are but its effects. Through its darkness and its illumination, the beauties and ugliness of the outward manifest, for every vessel exudes what it contains. It is that which, if a person knows it, he has known himself, and if he knows himself, he has known his Lord. It is that which, if a person is ignorant of it, he has been ignorant of himself, and if he is ignorant of himself, he has been ignorant of his Lord. And whoever is ignorant of his heart is more ignorant of other things. Indeed, most of creation is ignorant of their hearts and themselves, and a barrier has been placed between them and themselves. For Allāh comes between a man and his heart. His coming between them is by preventing him from observing it, monitoring it, knowing its attributes, and how it turns between two of the Fingers of the Most Merciful, and how it sometimes plummets to the lowest of the low, descending to the horizon of devils, and how at other times it rises to the highest of the high, ascending to the world of the angels brought near. Whoever does not know his heart to monitor it, tend to it, and watch for what appears upon it and in it from the treasures of the spiritual kingdom (malakūt), is among those about whom Allāh the Exalted said: {They forgot Allāh, so He made them forget themselves. Those are the Fāsiqūn (rebellious, disobedient to Allāh).} (Sūrah al-Ḥashr, 59:19). So, knowledge of the heart and the reality of its attributes is the foundation of religion and the basis of the path of the wayfarers (sālikīn).

The White Heart and the Black Heart

If the king is good, his soldiers will be good. She said: Thus I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) say. And ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him) said, in describing hearts: "Indeed, Allāh the Exalted has vessels on His earth, and they are the hearts. The most beloved of them to Him the Exalted are the most tender, the purest, and the firmest." Then he explained it, saying: "The firmest in religion, the purest in certainty (yaqīn), and the most tender towards brethren." This is an allusion to His saying, the Exalted: {severe against disbelievers, merciful among themselves} (Sūrah al-Faṭḥ, 48:29), and His saying, the Exalted: {The parable of His Light is as (if there were) a niche and within it a lamp} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:35). Ubayy ibn Ka‘b (may Allāh be pleased with him) said its meaning is the likeness of the light of the believer and his heart. And His saying, the Exalted: {Or [the state of a disbeliever] is like the darkness in a vast deep sea} (Sūrah al-Nūr, 24:40) is the likeness of the hypocrite's heart. Zayd ibn Aslam said regarding His saying, the Exalted: {In Lawḥin Maḥfūẓ (a Preserved Tablet)} (Sūrah al-Burūj, 85:22) that it is the heart of the believer. Sahl said the likeness of the heart and the breast is like the Throne and the Footstool. These are parables of the heart.

If the matter were reversed and all (all attributes and instincts in man) were subjugated under the governance of the lordly attribute, then lordly attributes such as knowledge, wisdom, certainty, comprehension of the realities of things, knowledge of matters as they are, and dominance over all through the power of knowledge and insight would be established in the heart. It would deserve precedence over creation due to the perfection and majesty of its knowledge. It would become independent of the servitude to desire and anger. From the control of the "pig of desire" and its restriction to the bounds of moderation, noble attributes such as chastity, contentment, asceticism (zuhd), scrupulousness (wara'), piety (taqwā), cheerfulness, good appearance, modesty (ḥayā'), refinement, and helpfulness, and their likes, would spread to it. And from the control of the power of anger, its subjugation, and its restriction to the bounds of what is obligatory, attributes such as courage, generosity, valor, self-control, patience, forbearance, endurance, forgiveness, steadfastness, nobility, magnanimity, dignity, and others would be attained in it. The heart is like a mirror surrounded by these things that affect it. These effects continuously reach the heart. As for the praiseworthy effects we mentioned, they increase the mirror of the heart in clarity, radiance, light, and brilliance, until the manifest truth shines in it and the reality of the matter sought in religion is unveiled therein.

This heart is where remembrance (dhikr) settles. Allāh the Exalted said: {Verily, in the remembrance of Allāh do hearts find rest.} (Sūrah al-Ra'd, 13:28). As for the blameworthy effects, they are like dark smoke ascending to the mirror of the heart, and it continues to accumulate on it time after time until it becomes black and dark, and entirely veiled from Allāh the Exalted. This is the "ṭab'" (sealing) and the "rān" (rust). Allāh the Exalted said: {Nay! But on their hearts is the Rān (covering of sins and evil deeds) which they used to earn.} (Sūrah al-Muṭaffifin, 83:14). And He, the Mighty and Majestic, said: {And if We had willed, We would have seized them for their sins, and We would have set a seal on their hearts so they would not hear.} (Sūrah al-A'rāf, 7:100). So He linked the lack of hearing to the sealing due to sins, just as He linked hearing to piety (taqwā), saying: {And fear Allāh; and hear} (Sūrah al-Mā'idah, 5:108), and {So fear Allāh; and Allāh teaches you.} (Sūrah al-Baqarah, 2:282).

Whenever sins accumulate, a seal is placed on the hearts. At that point, the heart becomes blind to perceiving the truth and the soundness of religion, and it belittles the matter of the Hereafter and magnifies the matter of this world, becoming solely focused on it. If the matter of the Hereafter and its dangers reach its ears, it enters one ear and exits the other, not settling in the heart nor moving it to repentance and rectification. {Those have despaired of the Hereafter, just as the disbelievers have despaired of those (buried) in graves.} (Sūrah al-Mumtaḥanah, 60:13). This is the meaning of the blackening of the heart by sins, as stated in the Qur'ān and Sunnah. Maymūn ibn Mihrān said: "When a servant commits a sin, a black spot is made on his heart. If he desists and repents, it is polished. If he returns (to sin), it is increased until it covers his heart, and that is the rān." The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "The heart of the believer is polished, and in it is a shining lamp. The heart of the disbeliever is black and inverted." The Ḥadīth "The heart of the believer is polished, and in it is a shining lamp" was reported by Aḥmad and al-Ṭabarānī in al-Ṣaghīr from Abū Sa'īd, and it is part of the Ḥadīth that follows it. Obedience to Allāh (Glory be to Him) by opposing desires polishes the heart, and His disobedience blackens it. So whoever turns to disobedience, his heart becomes black. Whoever follows a bad deed with a good deed and erases its trace, his heart will not become dark, but its light will diminish, like a mirror that is breathed upon then wiped, then breathed upon then wiped; it will not be free from some dullness. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Hearts are of four types: a polished heart in which is a shining lamp – that is the heart of the believer; a black, inverted heart – that is the heart of the disbeliever; a covered heart, tied over its covering – that is the heart of the hypocrite; and a layered heart in which there is both faith and hypocrisy." The Ḥadīth "Hearts are four: a polished heart in which is a shining lamp..." was reported by Aḥmad and al-Ṭabarānī in al-Ṣaghīr from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī, as mentioned previously. The likeness of faith in it is like a plant nourished by good water, and the likeness of hypocrisy in it is like an ulcer nourished by pus and festering matter. Whichever of the two substances overcomes it, it is judged by it. In another narration: "it is taken by it." Allāh the Exalted said: {Verily, those who are Al-Muttaqūn (the pious), when an evil thought comes to them from Shayṭān (Satan), they remember (Allāh), and (indeed) they then see (aright).} (Sūrah al-A'rāf, 7:201). So He informed that the clarity and vision of the heart are attained through remembrance, and that only those who are pious (muttaqūn) can achieve it. Thus, piety is the door to remembrance, remembrance is the door to unveiling (kashf), and unveiling is the door to the greatest success, which is the success of meeting Allāh the Exalted.

A Detailed Explanation of Satan's Entrances to the Heart and Their Impact

Know that the heart is like a fortress, and Satan is an enemy who wants to enter the fortress, possess it, and take control of it. The fortress cannot be protected from the enemy except by guarding its gates, entrances, and breaches. One who does not know the gates cannot guard them. Therefore, protecting the heart from Satan's whispers is obligatory; it is an individual obligation (farḍ 'ayn) on every accountable servant. That without which an obligation cannot be fulfilled is also obligatory. Satan cannot be repelled except by knowing his entrances. Thus, knowing his entrances has become obligatory. Satan's entrances and gates are the servant's attributes, and they are many. However, we will point to the major gates that are like thoroughfares, not too narrow for Satan's numerous troops. Among his major gates are anger and desire. Anger is the ghou of the intellect, and when the army of the intellect weakens, the army of Satan attacks. Whenever a person becomes angry, Satan plays with him as a child plays with a ball. It is narrated that Iblīs met Moses (peace be upon him) and said to him: "O Moses, you are the one whom Allāh chose for His message and spoke to directly. I am a creature from Allāh's creation; I have sinned and I want to repent, so intercede for me with my Lord that He may accept my repentance." Moses said: "Yes." When Moses ascended the mountain and spoke to his Lord, the Mighty and Majestic, and was about to descend, his Lord said to him: "Fulfill the trust." Moses said: "O Lord, Your servant Iblīs wants You to accept his repentance." Allāh the Exalted revealed to Moses: "O Moses, I have granted your request. Order him to prostrate to Adam's grave so that his repentance may be accepted." Moses met Iblīs and said to him: "Your request has been granted. You are ordered to prostrate to Adam's grave so that your repentance may be accepted."

Iblīs became angry and arrogant and said: "I did not prostrate to him when he was alive, shall I prostrate to him when he is dead?" Then he said to him: "O Moses, you have a claim upon me for interceding for me with your Lord. So remember me in three situations, and I will not destroy you in them: Remember me when you are angry, for my spirit is in your heart, my eye is in your eye, and I flow through you like blood. Remember me when you are angry, for when a person is angry, I inflate his nose, and he does not know what he is doing. Remember me when you meet the advancing enemy, for I come to the son of Adam when he meets the advancing enemy and remind him of his wife, his child, and his family until he flees. And beware of sitting with a woman who is not a maḥram (a relative one is forbidden to marry), for I am her messenger to you and your messenger to her. I will not cease until I tempt you with her and tempt her with you." With this, he pointed to desire, anger, and greed, for fleeing from the advancing enemy is greed for this world, and his refusal to prostrate to Adam when he was dead is envy. This is one of his greatest entrances. It is mentioned that one of the awliyā' (saints) said to Iblīs: "Show me how you overcome the son of Adam." He said: "I take him during anger and during passion." It is narrated that Iblīs appeared to a monk, and the monk said to him: "Which of the characteristics of the sons of Adam is most helpful to you?" He said: "Sharpness (ḥiddah). For if a servant is sharp-tempered, we turn him over as boys turn over a ball." It is said that Satan says: "How can the son of Adam overcome me? When he is pleased, I come until I am in his heart, and when he is angry, I fly until I am in his head." Among his major gates are envy and greed. Whenever a servant is greedy for anything, his greed blinds him and deafens him, as the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Your love for a thing blinds and deafens." The Ḥadīth "Your love for a thing blinds and deafens" was reported by Abū Dāwūd from Abū al-Dardā' with a weak chain. The light of insight is what recognizes Satan's entrances. If envy and greed cover it, he will not see. Then Satan finds an opportunity and makes attractive to the greedy person everything that leads him to his desire, even if it is reprehensible and outrageous. It is narrated that when Noah (peace be upon him) boarded the Ark, he took on board a pair of every species, as Allāh the Exalted had commanded him. He saw an old man in the Ark whom he did not recognize. Noah said to him: "What brought you in?" He said: "I entered to afflict the hearts of your companions, so their hearts will be with me and their bodies with you." Noah said to him: "Get out of here, O enemy of Allāh, for you are accursed." Iblīs said to him: "I have five things with which I destroy people, and I will tell you about three of them, but not about two." Allāh the Exalted revealed to Noah: "You have no need for the three; let him tell you about the two." Noah said to him: "What are the two?" He said: "They are the two that do not belie me, they are the two that do not fail me; with them I destroy people: greed and envy. Through envy, I was cursed and made a rejected Satan. As for greed, Paradise was permitted to Adam entirely except for the tree, and I achieved my need from him through greed." Among his major gates is satiety from food, even if it is lawful and pure. For satiety strengthens desires, and desires are Satan's weapons. It is narrated that Iblīs appeared to Yaḥyā ibn Zakariyyā (peace be upon them both), and he saw on him hooks of every kind. Yaḥyā said to him: "O Iblīs, what are these hooks?" He said: "These are the desires with which I afflict the son of Adam." Yaḥyā asked: "Is there anything for me in them?" He said: "Perhaps you eat your fill, and we make you heavy for prayer and remembrance." Yaḥyā asked: "Is there anything else?" He said: "No." Yaḥyā said: "By Allāh, I will never fill my stomach with food again." Iblīs said to him: "And by Allāh, I will never advise a Muslim again."

It is said that in excessive eating there are six blameworthy traits: first, the fear of Allāh departs from his heart; second, mercy for creation departs from his heart because he thinks they are all satiated; third, he becomes heavy for acts of obedience; fourth, when he hears words of wisdom, he does not find any tenderness in them; fifth, when he speaks with admonition and wisdom, it does not fall into people's hearts; and sixth, diseases are stirred up in him. Among his gates is the love of adornment in furniture, clothes, and housing. For if Satan sees this dominating a person's heart, he lays his eggs and hatches his young in it. He continuously calls him to build up the house, adorn its ceilings and walls, and expand its buildings. He calls him to adorn himself with clothes and mounts, and enslaves him in this throughout his life. If he causes him to fall into this, he has no need to return to him a second time, for some of that leads to more, and he continues to lead him from one thing to another until his appointed time comes to him, and he dies while on the path of Satan and following his whims. From this, a bad end with disbelief is feared, we seek refuge in Allāh from it. Among his major gates is coveting what people possess. For when covetousness dominates the heart, Satan does not cease to make attractive to him affectation and adornment for the one he covets, with various types of ostentation (riyāʾ) and deception, until the one coveted is like his idol. He constantly thinks of ways to endear himself and gain affection from him, and enters every entrance to achieve that. The least of his states is praising him for what is not in him and flattering him by abandoning enjoining good and forbidding evil. It is narrated that Ṣafwān ibn Sulaym said that Iblīs appeared to ʿAbdullāh ibn Ḥanḏalah and said to him: "O Ibn Ḥanḏalah, memorize something from me that I will teach you." He said: "I have no need for it." Iblīs said: "Consider it; if it is good, take it, and if it is evil, reject it. O Ibn Ḥanḏalah, do not ask anyone other than Allāh with a question of desire. And watch how you are when you are angry, for I possess you when you are angry." Among his major gates is haste and abandoning deliberation in matters. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Haste is from Satan, and deliberation is from Allāh the Exalted." The Ḥadīth "Haste is from Satan, and deliberation is from Allāh" was reported by al-Tirmidhī from Sahl ibn Saʿd with the wording "deliberation" and he said it is good (ḥasan). Allāh the Mighty and Majestic said: {Man is created of haste.} (Sūrah al-Anbiyāʾ, 21:37). And He the Exalted said: {And man is ever hasty.} (Sūrah al-Isrāʾ, 17:11). And He said to His Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): {And be not in haste with the Qurʾān before its revelation is completed to you.} (Sūrah Ṭā Hā, 20:114). This is because actions should be after insight and knowledge, and insight requires reflection and deliberation, and haste prevents that. During haste, Satan promotes his evil to man from where he does not perceive. It is narrated that when Jesus son of Mary (peace be upon him) was born, the devils came to Iblīs and said: "The idols have been overturned." He said: "This is an event, stay in your places." He flew until he reached the two horizons of the earth but found nothing. Then he found Jesus (peace be upon him) had been born, and the angels were surrounding him. He returned to them and said: "A prophet was born last night. No female has ever conceived or given birth except that I was present, except for this one. So despair of idols being worshipped after this night. But approach the sons of Adam through haste and levity." Among his major gates are dirhams and dīnārs, and all other kinds of wealth, such as goods, animals, and property. For everything that exceeds the amount of sustenance and need is a stronghold for Satan. For whoever has his sustenance is free-hearted. If he were to find a hundred dīnārs, for example, on the road, desires would arise from his heart, each of which would require another hundred dīnārs, so what he found would not suffice him; rather, he would need another nine hundred. Before finding the hundred, he was self-sufficient. Now that he has found a hundred, he thinks he has become rich by it, but he has become in need of nine hundred to buy a house to build, to buy a slave girl, to buy household furniture, and to buy luxurious clothes. Each of these things necessitates something else appropriate to it, and there is no end to that. So he falls into an abyss whose end is the depth of Hellfire, for there is no end to it other than that. Thābit al-Bunānī said: "When the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) was sent, Iblīs said to his devils: 'An event has occurred, go and see what it is.' They went until they were exhausted, then they came back and said: 'We do not know.' He said: 'I will bring you the news.' He went, then came back and said: 'Allāh has sent Muḥammad (peace and blessings be upon him).' He said: So he began sending his devils to the companions of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), but they would return disappointed, saying: 'We have never accompanied a people like these. We afflict them, then they stand for their prayers, and that is erased.' Iblīs said to them: 'Go easy on them. Perhaps Allāh will open the world for them, and we will achieve our need from them.'" The Ḥadīth of Thābit, "When (peace and blessings be upon him) was sent, Iblīs said to his devils: 'An event has occurred...'" was reported by Ibn Abī al-Dunyā in "Makāyid al-Shayṭān" (Satan's Plots) as mursal (a Ḥadīth where a successor narrates directly from the Prophet without mentioning the companion). It is narrated that Jesus (peace be upon him) once used a stone as a pillow. Iblīs passed by him and said: "O Jesus, you have desired the world." Jesus (peace and blessings be upon him) took it and threw it from under his head, saying: "This is for you, along with the world." In reality, whoever owns a stone to use as a pillow when sleeping has possessed from the world what can be a tool for Satan against him. For one who stands at night for prayer, for example, if there is a stone near him that he can use as a pillow, Satan will continuously call him to sleep and to use it as a pillow. If that were not there, it would not cross his mind, nor would his desire to sleep be stirred. This is regarding a stone, so how about one who owns soft cushions, comfortable beds, and pleasant resorts? When will he be active for the worship of Allāh the Exalted? Among his major gates is miserliness and fear of poverty. For that is what prevents spending and giving charity, and calls to hoarding and treasuring, and the painful torment, which is promised to those who amass wealth, as stated in the Noble Qur'ān. Khaythamah ibn 'Abd al-Raḥmān said: "Satan says: 'The son of Adam has not overcome me in anything, but he will not overcome me in three things: that I command him to take wealth from other than its rightful source, to spend it in other than its rightful purpose, and to withhold it from its rightful due.'" Sufyān said: "Satan has no weapon like the fear of poverty. If he accepts that from him, he engages in falsehood, is prevented from the truth, speaks out of whim, and thinks ill of his Lord." Among the afflictions of miserliness is the eagerness to frequent markets to accumulate wealth, and markets are the nests of devils.

Among his major gates is partisanship for schools of thought (madhāhib) and whims, harboring hatred for opponents, and looking at them with an eye of disdain and contempt. This is what destroys both the pious and the impious. For slandering people and busying oneself with mentioning their faults is an attribute ingrained in the natural disposition from the predatory attributes. If Satan deludes him that this is the truth, and it aligns with his disposition, its sweetness overcomes his heart, and he occupies himself with it with all his determination, being joyful and pleased with it, thinking that he is striving in religion while he is striving in following devils. So you see one of them being fanatical for Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq (may Allāh be pleased with him), while he consumes unlawful things, lets his tongue loose with idle talk and lies, and engages in various kinds of corruption. If Abū Bakr were to see him, he would be his foremost enemy, since the allies of Abū Bakr are those who take his path, follow his way, and guard what is between their jaws. It was from his way (may Allāh be pleased with him) that he would place a pebble in his mouth to restrain his tongue from speaking about what did not concern him. So how can this meddler claim loyalty and love for him while not following his way? And you see another meddler being fanatical for ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him). Part of ‘Alī's asceticism and way was that during his caliphate, he wore a garment he bought for three dirhams and cut the ends of the sleeves to the wrist. Yet we see the impious person wearing silk garments and adorning himself with wealth acquired from unlawful means, while he professes love for ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him) and claims it, though ‘Alī will be his foremost adversary on the Day of Resurrection. Would that I knew, if someone took a beloved child of a person, who is the apple of his eye and the life of his heart, and began to beat him, tear him apart, pluck his hair, and cut him with scissors, while at the same time claiming love and loyalty for his father, what would be his father's state towards him? It is known that religion and Sharī'ah were more beloved to Abū Bakr, 'Umar, 'Uthmān, 'Alī, and all the Companions (may Allāh be pleased with them) than their families and children, indeed, than their own selves. Those who plunge into transgressions of the Sharī'ah are the ones who tear apart the Sharī'ah and cut it with the scissors of desires, and thereby endear themselves to the enemy of Allāh, Iblīs, and the enemy of His allies. So consider what their state will be on the Day of Resurrection before the Companions and before the allies of Allāh. Nay, if the veil were lifted and these people knew what the Companions loved for the nation of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), they would be ashamed to even mention their names on their tongues with the ugliness of their actions. Then Satan deludes them into thinking that whoever dies loving Abū Bakr and 'Umar, the Fire will not come near him. And he deludes another into thinking that if he dies loving 'Alī, he will have no fear. Yet this is the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) saying to Fāṭimah (may Allāh be pleased with her), who is a part of him – the Ḥadīth "Fāṭimah is a part of me" is agreed upon from the Ḥadīth of al-Miswar ibn Makhramah – "Work, for I cannot avail you anything against Allāh." The Ḥadīth "I cannot avail you anything against Allāh" which he said to Fāṭimah, is agreed upon from the Ḥadīth of Abū Hurayrah. This is an example we have cited from among the whims. Such is the case of those fanatical for al-Shāfi'ī, Abū Ḥanīfah, Mālik, Aḥmad, and other Imāms. Everyone who claims the madhhab of an Imām while not following his way, that Imām will be his adversary on the Day of Resurrection, as he will say to him: "My madhhab was action, not mere talk with the tongue. Talk with the tongue was for the sake of action, not for the sake of idle chatter. So why did you oppose me in action and way, which is my madhhab and my path that I followed and trod towards Allāh the Exalted, and then falsely claim my madhhab?" This is a major entrance for Satan by which he has destroyed most of the world. The schools have been handed over to people whose fear of Allāh is little, whose insight in religion is weak, whose desire for the world is strong, and whose eagerness for followership is intense. They could not achieve followership and establish prestige except through fanaticism. So they harbored this in their breasts and did not alert them to Satan's plots in it. Rather, they acted on behalf of Satan in executing his plot. So people continued upon it and forgot the fundamentals of their religion. They have perished and caused others to perish. May Allāh the Exalted grant repentance to us and to them. Al-Ḥasan said: "It has reached us that Iblīs said: 'I tempted the nation of Muḥammad (peace and blessings be upon him) with sins, but they broke my back with seeking forgiveness (istighfār). So I tempted them with sins for which they do not seek Allāh's forgiveness, and these are the whims (ahwā').'" The accursed one spoke the truth, for they do not know that these are among the causes that lead to sins, so how can they seek forgiveness for them? Among Satan's great plots is to busy a person from himself with the differences that occur among people in madhhabs and disputes. ʿAbdullāh ibn Masʿūd said: "A group of people sat remembering Allāh the Exalted. Satan came to them to remove them from their gathering and to separate them, but he could not. So he went to another group who were talking about worldly matters and corrupted their relations, so they stood up fighting each other, though he did not intend them. Then those who were remembering Allāh stood up and busied themselves with them, separating them. Thus, they dispersed from their gathering, and that was Satan's aim from them." Among his gates is to lead the common folk, who have not practiced knowledge nor delved deeply into it, to reflect on the essence of Allāh the Exalted and His attributes, and on matters that their intellects cannot reach, until he casts doubt in them about the foundation of religion or makes them imagine things about Allāh the Exalted from which Allāh is far exalted, by which one of them becomes a disbeliever or an innovator, while he is joyful, pleased, and delighted with what has occurred in his breast, thinking that it is knowledge and insight, and that it was unveiled to him due to his intelligence and increased intellect. The most foolish of people are those strongest in their belief in their own intellect, and the most sound-minded of people are those most critical of themselves and most frequent in asking scholars. ‘Ā’ishah (may Allāh be pleased with her) said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: “Indeed, Satan comes to one of you and says: Who created you? He says: Allāh, the Blessed and Exalted. He then says: So who created Allāh? If any of you finds that, let him say: I believe in Allāh and His Messenger, for that will make it go away from him.” Reported by Aḥmad, al-Bazzār, and Abū Ya‘lā in their Musnads, and its narrators are trustworthy. It is agreed upon from the Ḥadīth of Abū Hurayrah. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) did not command research into treating this whisper, for this is a whisper that common people experience, not scholars. The duty of the common folk is to believe, submit, busy themselves with their worship and livelihoods, and leave knowledge to the scholars. If a common person were to commit adultery and steal, it would be better for him than to speak about knowledge, for whoever speaks about Allāh and His religion without mastering knowledge falls into disbelief from where he does not perceive, like one who rides into the depths of the sea without knowing how to swim. Satan's plots related to beliefs and madhhabs are innumerable. We only intended by what we cited to give an example. Among his gates is having a bad opinion of Muslims. Allāh the Exalted said: {O you who believe! Avoid much suspicion, indeed some suspicions are sins.} (Sūrah al-Ḥujurāt, 49:12). So whoever judges another with evil based on suspicion, Satan incites him to lengthen his tongue with backbiting about him, thereby perishing, or to fall short in fulfilling his rights, or to be lax in honoring him, and to look at him with an eye of contempt, seeing himself as better than him. All of these are destructive. For this reason, the Sharī‘ah forbade exposing oneself to accusations. It is narrated from ‘Alī ibn Ḥusayn that Ṣafiyyah bint Ḥuyayy ibn Akḥṭab informed him that the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) was in i‘tikāf (seclusion for worship) in the mosque. She said: "I came to him and spoke with him. When evening came, I departed, and he stood up to walk with me. Two men from the Anṣār passed by, greeted him, and then departed. He called them and said: ‘She is Şafiyyah bint Huyayy. They said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, we do not think anything of you but good.' He said: 'Indeed, Satan flows through the son of Adam like blood through the body, and I feared that he might instill something into you.'" Agreed upon. Look how he (peace and blessings be upon him) was concerned for their religion and guarded them, and how he was concerned for his nation and taught them the way to guard against accusation, so that a pious scholar known for his religion does not become complacent in his affairs, saying, "Someone like me is not suspected of anything but good," out of self-admiration. For the most pious, God-fearing, and knowledgeable of people are not viewed by all people with a single eye, but with an eye of approval by some and an eye of disapproval by others. That is why the poet said:

"The eye of contentment is blind to every fault,
But the eye of discontent reveals the flaws."

So one must guard against ill suspicion and against the accusation of evil people, for evil people do not think of all people except evil. Whenever you see a person who thinks ill of people, seeking out faults, know that he is corrupt inwardly, and that this corruption seeps out from him. He only sees others from his own perspective. For the believer seeks excuses, and the hypocrite seeks faults. The believer has a sound heart towards all creation. These are some of Satan's entrances to the heart. If I wanted to enumerate all of them, I would not be able to. In this amount, there is enough to alert to others. There is no blameworthy attribute in a human being except that it is a weapon for Satan and one of his entrances. If you say: What is the treatment for repelling Satan? Is the remembrance of Allāh the Exalted and a person saying "Lā ḥawla wa lā quwwata illā billāh" (There is no might nor power except with Allāh) sufficient for that? Know that the treatment for the heart in this regard is to block these entrances by purifying the heart from these blameworthy attributes. This is something whose discussion would be lengthy, and our purpose in this quarter of the book is to explain the treatment of destructive attributes, and each attribute requires a separate book, as will be explained. Yes, if the roots of these attributes are cut off from the heart, Satan will have passages and fleeting thoughts in the heart, but he will not have a permanent hold. The remembrance of Allāh the Exalted prevents him from passing through, because the reality of remembrance cannot be established in the heart except after the heart is cultivated with piety (taqwā) and purified from blameworthy attributes. Otherwise, remembrance will be mere thoughts of the self, having no authority over the heart, and thus it will not repel Satan's authority. That is why Allāh the Exalted said: {Verily, those who are Al-Muttaqūn (the pious), when an evil thought comes to them from Shayṭān (Satan), they remember (Allāh), and (indeed) they then see (aright).} (Sūrah al-A'rāf, 7:201). He specified this for the pious. The likeness of Satan is like that of a hungry dog approaching you. If you do not have bread or meat in front of you, it will be deterred by you saying "Begone!" to it; the mere sound repels it. But if you have meat in front of you and it is hungry, it will pounce on the meat and will not be deterred by mere words. The heart that is empty of Satan's sustenance is deterred from him by mere remembrance. As for desire, if it overcomes the heart, it pushes the reality of remembrance to the peripheries of the heart, so it cannot establish itself in its core, and Satan settles in the core of the heart. As for the hearts of the pious, which are free from whims and blameworthy attributes, Satan approaches them not due to desires but due to their being empty of remembrance through heedlessness. When remembrance returns, Satan retreats. The evidence for this is His saying, the Exalted: {So seek refuge in Allāh from Shayṭān (Satan), the outcast (the cursed one).} (Sūrah al-Naḥl, 16:98), and all other narrations and verses regarding remembrance. Abū Hurayrah said: "The Satan of a believer met the Satan of a disbeliever. The Satan of the disbeliever was sleek, fat, and well-dressed, while the Satan of the believer was emaciated, disheveled, dusty, and naked. The Satan of the disbeliever said to the Satan of the believer: 'What is wrong with you, so emaciated?' He replied: 'I am with a man who, when he eats, says "Bismillāh" (In the Name of Allāh), so I remain hungry. When he drinks, he says "Bismillāh," so I remain thirsty. When he dresses, he says "Bismillāh," so I remain naked. And when he anoints himself, he says "Bismillāh," so I remain disheveled.' The other said: 'But I am with a man who does none of that, so I share in his food, his drink, and his clothing.'" Muḥammad ibn Wāsi' used to say every day after the dawn prayer: "O Allāh, You have set over us an enemy who is perceptive of our faults, he and his tribe see us from where we do not see them. O Allāh, make him despair of us as You made him despair of Your mercy, and make him lose hope in us as You made him lose hope in Your pardon, and distance us from him as You distanced him from Your mercy. Indeed, You are capable of all things." It is said that Iblīs appeared to him one day on the way to the mosque and said to him: "O Ibn Wāsi', do you know me?" He said: "And who are you?" He said: "I am Iblīs." He asked: "And what do you want?" He said: "I want you not to teach anyone this incantation (ruqyah)."

So, if you hope that Satan will be repelled from you by mere remembrance, as he was repelled from 'Umar (may Allāh be pleased with him), it would be impossible. You would be like one who hopes to drink medicine before abstaining (from harmful foods), while the stomach is occupied with coarse foods, and hopes that it will benefit him as it benefited the one who drank it after abstaining and emptying the stomach. Remembrance is the medicine, and piety (taqwā) is abstinence, which is emptying the heart of desires. When remembrance descends upon a heart empty of other than remembrance, Satan is repelled, just as illness is repelled by the descent of medicine into a stomach empty of food. Allāh the Exalted said: {Verily, therein is indeed a reminder for him who has a heart} (Sūrah Qāf, 50:37). And He the Exalted said: {It is written upon him (Satan) that whoever takes him as an ally, then surely, he will mislead him and will guide him to the torment of the Fire.} (Sūrah al-Ḥajj, 22:4). Whoever assists Satan with his actions is his ally, even if he remembers Allāh with his tongue. If you say that the Ḥadīth has come in general terms that remembrance expels Satan – the Ḥadīth that states remembrance, O 'Umar, expels

Satan has been mentioned – and you do not understand that most general statements in the Shari‘ah are specified by conditions transmitted by the scholars of religion, then look at yourself, for hearing is not like seeing. Reflect that the culmination of your remembrance and worship is ṣalāh. Observe your heart when you are in your ṣalāh, how Satan pulls it towards the markets, the accounts of the worlds, and the responses to adversaries. And how he makes you pass through the valleys of the world and its perils, to the extent that you do not remember what you have forgotten of worldly superfluities except in your ṣalāh, and Satan does not crowd upon your heart except when you pray. So ṣalāh is the touchstone of hearts; by it, their beauties and flaws are revealed. Prayer is not accepted from hearts laden with worldly desires. Therefore, it is no surprise that Satan is not repelled from you; rather, the whispers may even increase upon you, just as medicine before abstinence may increase your harm. If you want salvation from Satan, then first practice abstinence through piety, then follow it with the medicine of remembrance; Satan will flee from you as he fled from ‘Umar (may Allāh be pleased with him).

Therefore, Wahb ibn Munabbih said: "Fear Allāh and do not curse Satan publicly while you are his friend in secret," meaning you obey him. Some of them said: "How wondrous is he who disobeys the Beneficent after knowing His beneficence, and obeys the accursed one after knowing his tyranny." And just as Allāh the Exalted said: {Call upon Me; I will respond to you.} (Sūrah Ghāfir, 40:60), and you call upon Him but He does not respond to you, so too you remember Allāh but Satan does not flee from you due to the absence of the conditions of remembrance and supplication. It was said to Ibrāhīm ibn Adham: "What is wrong with us that we supplicate but are not answered, though Allāh the Exalted has said: {Call upon Me; I will respond to you.}?" He said: "Because your hearts are dead." It was asked: "And what killed them?" He said: "Eight traits: You knew the right of Allāh but did not fulfill His right. You read the Qur’ān but did not act according to its limits. You said, 'We love the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him),' but did not act according to his Sunnah. You said, 'We fear death,' but did not prepare for it. Allāh the Exalted said: {Surely, Shayṭān (Satan) is an enemy to you, so take him as an enemy.} (Sūrah Fāṭir, 35:6), but you colluded with him in disobedience. You said, 'We fear the Fire,' but you exhausted your bodies in it. You said, 'We love Paradise,' but did not work for it. And when you rise from your beds, you cast your faults behind your backs and spread the faults of people before you. So you angered your Lord; how then can He respond to you?"

The Swift Fluctuation of the Heart and the Division of Hearts Regarding Change and Steadfastness

Know that the heart, as we have mentioned, is surrounded by the attributes we described, and effects and states pour into it from the gates we depicted. It is as if it were a target constantly being hit from every side. If something afflicts it and it is affected by it, something opposing it afflicts it from another side, and its state changes. If Satan descends upon it and calls it to whims, an angel descends upon it and diverts it. If one devil pulls it towards evil, another devil pulls it towards something else. If one angel pulls it towards good, another pulls it towards something else. So sometimes it is contested between two angels, sometimes between two devils, and sometimes between an angel and a devil; it is never neglected. This is alluded to in His saying, the Exalted: {And We shall turn their hearts and their eyes away (from guidance)} (Sūrah al-An'ām, 6:110). Due to the Messenger of Allāh's (peace and blessings be upon him) awareness of the wondrous creation of Allāh the Exalted in the wonders of the heart and its fluctuations, he used to swear by it, saying: "No, by the Turner of hearts." Reported by al-Bukhārī. He would often say: "O Turner of hearts, make my heart firm upon Your religion." They said: "Do you fear, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said: "And what would make me feel secure when the heart is between two of the Fingers of the Most Merciful, He turns it however He wills?" Reported by al-Tirmidhī and al-Ḥākim. Muslim has from the Ḥadīth of 'Abdullāh ibn 'Amr: "O Allāh, Director of hearts, direct our hearts to Your obedience.” Al-Nasā’ī, Ibn Mājah, and al-Ḥākim have from the Ḥadīth of al-Nawwās ibn Sam‘ān: “There is no heart except that it is between two of the Fingers of the Most Merciful; if He wills, He makes it upright, and if He wills, He makes it deviate.”

These fluctuations and the wonders of Allāh the Exalted's creation in their turning, from where knowledge cannot guide, are known only by those who monitor and observe their states with Allāh the Exalted. Hearts, in terms of steadfastness in good and evil and wavering between them, are of three types:

A heart cultivated with piety (taqwā), purified through spiritual discipline (riyāḍah), and cleansed from vile morals. Thoughts of good flash into it from the treasures of the unseen and the entrances of the spiritual kingdom (malakūt). The intellect then turns to reflect on what has occurred to it to understand the subtleties of good therein and to perceive the secrets of its benefits. Its aspect is unveiled to it by the light of insight, and it judges that it must be done. So it urges it and calls it to act upon it. The angel looks at the heart and finds it good in its essence, pure through its piety, illuminated by the light of the intellect, and cultivated with the lights of knowledge. He sees it fit to be a dwelling and a landing place for him. At that point, he supports it with unseen armies and guides it to other good deeds, so that good leads to good. This continues perpetually, and his support by encouraging good, facilitating matters for it, is endless. This is alluded to in His saying, the Exalted: {As for him who gives (in charity) and keeps his duty to Allāh and fears Him, And believes in Al-Ḥusnā. We will make smooth for him the path of ease (goodness).} (Sūrah al-Layl, 92:5-7). In such a heart, the light of the lamp shines from the niche of Lordship, so that even hidden polytheism (shirk), which is more hidden than the crawling of a black ant on a dark night, is not concealed. No hidden matter is concealed from this light, and none of Satan's plots deceive it. Rather, Satan stands by and inspires specious words as a delusion, but it pays no attention. This heart, after its purification from destructive things, becomes, in nearness, cultivated with salvific things, which we will mention, such as gratitude, patience, fear, hope, poverty, asceticism, love, contentment, longing, reliance, reflection, self-accountability, and others. It is the heart towards which Allāh the Mighty and Majestic has turned His countenance. It is the tranquil heart intended in His saying, the Exalted: {Verily, in the remembrance of Allāh do hearts find rest} (Sūrah al-Ra'd, 13:28), and in His saying, the Mighty and Majestic: {O (you) the one in (complete) rest and satisfaction!} (Sūrah al-Fajr, 89:27).

The second heart is the forsaken heart, filled with whims, defiled by blameworthy morals and vile things, in which the gates of devils are opened and the gates of angels are closed. The beginning of evil in it is that a thought of whim flashes into it and whispers within it. The heart looks to the judge, the intellect, to seek its ruling and to discover the right course. The intellect, however, has become accustomed to serving whims, is familiar with them, and has persisted in devising stratagems for them and assisting whims. So the self (nafs) gains dominance and supports it. The breast then expands with whims, and its darkness spreads due to the restraint of the intellect's forces from repelling it. The authority of Satan strengthens due to the expansion of his domain through the spread of whims. He then approaches it with adornment, delusion, and false hopes, and inspires thereby specious words as a delusion. The authority of faith in the promise and the threat weakens, and the light of certainty in the fear of the Hereafter dims, as dark smoke rises from whims to the heart, filling its sides until its lights are extinguished. The intellect becomes like an eye whose eyelids are filled with smoke, unable to see. This is what the dominance of desire does to the heart, until the heart has no capacity for pause and insight. Even if an admonisher were to enlighten it and make it hear what is true, it becomes blind to understanding and deaf to hearing. Desire rages within it, Satan assaults, and the limbs move according to whims. Thus, disobedience appears in the realm of the manifest from the realm of the unseen, by the decree and predestination of Allāh the Exalted. Such a heart is alluded to in His saying, the Exalted: {Have you (O Muḥammad) seen him who has taken as his ilāh (god) his own desire? Would you then be a Wakīl (a disposer of his affairs or a watcher) over him? Or do you think that most of them hear or understand? They are only like cattle; nay, they are even farther astray from the Path. (i.e. even worse than cattle).} (Sūrah al-Furqān, 25:43-44), and in His saying, the Mighty and Majestic: {Indeed the Word (of punishment) has proved true against most of them, so they will not believe.} (Sūrah Yā-Sīn, 36:7), and in His saying: {Whether you warn them or do not warn them, they will not believe.} (Sūrah al-Baqarah, 2:6). And many a heart is in this state with regard to some desires, like one who refrains from some things but, if he sees a beautiful face, cannot control his eye or his heart, his intellect becomes reckless, and the control of his heart collapses. Or like one who cannot control himself in matters of prestige, leadership, and pride, and no restraint remains with him to be firm when their causes appear. Or like one who cannot control himself when angry, whenever he is belittled or a fault of his is mentioned. Or like one who cannot control himself when able to take a dirham or a dīnār, but rather rushes for it like a mad, infatuated person, forgetting in it manliness and piety. All of this is due to the rising of the smoke of whims to the heart until it darkens and its lights are extinguished, so the light of modesty, manliness, and faith is extinguished, and he strives to achieve Satan's desires.

The third heart is one in which thoughts of whim appear, calling it to evil, then a thought of faith follows, calling it to good. The self (nafs) with its desire rises to support the thought of evil, so desire strengthens and beautifies enjoyment and pleasure. Then the intellect rises to support the thought of good, pushes back against desire, decries its action, attributes it to ignorance, and likens it to an animal or a beast in its rush towards evil and its lack of concern for consequences. The self then inclines towards the counsel of the intellect. Satan then launches an attack on the intellect, strengthening the call of whim, saying: "What is this cold restraint? Why do you refrain from your whim and thus harm yourself? Do you see anyone from your era opposing his whim or abandoning his purpose? Will you leave them the pleasures of the world to enjoy, and confine yourself until you remain deprived, wretched, and weary, laughed at by the people of the time? Do you want your position to exceed that of so-and-so and so-and-so, who have done what you desired and did not refrain? Do you not see that so-and-so scholar does not guard against such things? If that were evil, he would have refrained." The self then inclines towards Satan and turns to him. The angel then launches an attack on Satan, saying: "Is there anyone for you but he who follows the pleasure of the moment and forgets the consequence? Are you content with a fleeting pleasure and abandon the pleasure of Paradise and its bliss for ever and ever? Or do you find heavy the pain of patience from your desire, but do not find heavy the pain of the Fire? Are you deceived by people's heedlessness of themselves, their following of their whims, and their assistance to Satan, even though the torment of the Fire will not be lightened for you by the disobedience of others? Suppose you were on a severely hot summer day, and all the people stood in the sun, and you had a cool house; would you assist the people or seek salvation for yourself? So how can you oppose people for fear of the sun's heat but not oppose them for fear of the Fire's heat?" At that, the self complies with the angel's word. It continues to waver between the two armies, pulled between the two parties, until what is more fitting for the heart prevails. If the dominant attributes in the heart are the satanic attributes we mentioned, Satan prevails, and the heart inclines towards its kind from Satan's party, turning away from Allāh's party and His allies, and assisting Satan's party and his enemies. What is a cause for its distance from Allāh the Exalted then flows through its limbs by prior decree. If the dominant attributes in the heart are angelic, the heart does not listen to Satan's enticement and his incitement of it towards the transient, and his belittling of the matter of the Hereafter. Rather, it inclines towards Allāh's party, and obedience appears through its limbs according to what was predestined. The heart of a believer is between two Fingers of the Most Merciful, meaning between the pulling of these two armies. Fluctuation and transition from one party to another is what is dominant. As for permanent steadfastness with the party of angels or with the party of Satan, it is rare on both sides. These acts of obedience and disobedience emerge from the treasures of the unseen into the realm of the manifest through the treasury of the heart, for it is one of the treasures of the spiritual kingdom (malakūt). They, too, when they appear, are signs by which the people of hearts know the prior decree. Whoever is created for Paradise, the means of obedience are facilitated for him. Whoever is created for Hellfire, the means of disobedience are facilitated for him, evil companions are set upon him, and Satan's judgment is cast into his heart. For by various judgments, he deceives fools, saying: "Allāh is Merciful, so do not worry," and "All people do not fear Allāh, so do not oppose them," and "Life is long, so be patient until you repent tomorrow." {He (Satan) makes promises to them, and arouses in them false desires; and Shayṭān's (Satan) promises are nothing but deceptions.} (Sūrah al-Nisā', 4:120). He promises them repentance and arouses in them false hopes of forgiveness, thereby destroying them by Allāh's permission with these tricks and what resembles them. He expands their hearts to accept delusion and constricts them from accepting the truth. All of this is by the decree and predestination of Allāh. {And whomsoever Allāh wills to guide, He opens his breast to Islām, and whomsoever He wills to send astray, He makes his breast closed and constricted, as if he is climbing up to the sky.} (Sūrah al-An'ām, 6:125). {If Allāh helps you, none can overcome you; and if He forsakes you, who is there after Him that can help you?} (Sūrah Āl 'Imrān, 3:160).

He is the Guide and the Misguider; He does what He wills and judges what He desires. There is no repeller of His judgment and no averter of His decree. He created Paradise and created inhabitants for it, so He employed them in obedience. He created Hellfire and created inhabitants for it, so He employed them in disobedience. He informed creation of the sign of the people of Paradise and the people of Hellfire, saying: {Verily, the Abrār (pious, who fear Allāh and avoid evil) will be in delight (Paradise); And verily, the Fujjār (the wicked, disbelievers, sinners and evil-doers) will be in the blazing Fire (Hell).} (Sūrah al-Infīṭār, 82:13-14). Then He the Exalted said, as narrated from His Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him):

“These are for Paradise, and I do not care, and these are for Hellfire, and I do not care.”
Reported by Aḥmad and Ibn Ḥibbān. Exalted is Allāh, the True King. {He cannot be questioned as to what He does, while they will be questioned.} (Sūrah al-Anbiyā’, 21:23).

Disciplining the Self, Refining Morals, and Treating Diseases of the Heart

Good character is the attribute of the Master of Messengers and the best of deeds of the truthful ones (ṣiddīqīn). It is, in truth, half of religion, the fruit of the struggle of the pious (muttaqīn), and the spiritual discipline of the worshippers (muta‘abbidīn). Bad morals are lethal poisons, overwhelming destroyers, scandalous disgraces, blatant vices, and vile traits that distance one from the vicinity of the Lord of the Worlds and enroll their possessor in the ranks of devils. They are the open gates to the Fire of Allāh, kindled, which leaps up to the hearts. Just as beautiful morals are the open gates from the heart to the bliss of Paradise and the vicinity of the Most Merciful. Vile morals are diseases of the hearts and ailments of the souls, but it is a disease that forfeits eternal life. How far from it is the disease that only forfeits the life of the body! However much physicians intensify their care in regulating the laws of treatment for bodies, while their illness only involves the loss of a transient life, then care in regulating the laws of treatment for diseases of the heart, whose illness involves the loss of an eternal life, is more deserving. Learning this type of medicine is obligatory for every person of intellect, as no heart is free from ailments which, if neglected, accumulate, and illnesses become successive and manifest together. The servant needs meticulousness in knowing their science and causes, then diligence in their treatment and reform. Treating them is what is intended by His saying, the Exalted: {Indeed he succeeds who purifies his ownself} (Sūrah al-Shams, 91:9), and neglecting them is what is intended by His saying: {And indeed he fails who corrupts his ownself} (Sūrah al-Shams, 91:10).

An Explanation of the Means by Which Good Character is Generally Attained

You have known that good character returns to the moderation of the power of intellect and the perfection of wisdom, and to the moderation of the power of anger and desire, and their being obedient to the intellect and also to the Shari‘ah. This moderation is achieved in one of two ways. The first is by divine bestowal and innate perfection, such that a person is created and born with a perfect intellect and good character, having been spared the dominance of desire and anger; rather, they are created moderate, submissive to the intellect and the Shari‘ah. Thus, he becomes knowledgeable without teaching and well-mannered without discipline, like Jesus son of Mary and Yaḥyā son of Zakariyyā (peace be upon them both), and likewise all the Prophets (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them all). It is not far-fetched that there may be in one's nature and innate disposition what can be attained through acquisition. Perhaps a child is created truthful, generous, and courageous, and perhaps he is created otherwise, and this is then achieved in him through habituation and associating with those who possess these morals. Perhaps it is achieved through learning. The second way is the acquisition of these morals through struggle (mujāhadah) and spiritual discipline (riyāḍah). By this, I mean compelling the self to perform the actions required by the desired character. For example, whoever wants to acquire the character of generosity for himself, his path is to make an effort to perform the act of the generous, which is spending wealth. He continues to demand this of himself and perseveres in it with effort, struggling against himself, until it becomes a natural trait for him and becomes easy for him, thereby becoming generous. Likewise, whoever wants to acquire the character of humility for himself, while pride has overcome him, his path is to persevere in the actions of the humble for an extended period, during which he struggles against himself and makes an effort, until it becomes a character trait and a natural disposition for him, and it becomes easy for him. All praiseworthy morals according to the Shari‘ah are attained through this path. Its ultimate goal is that the action emanating from him becomes delightful. The generous person is one who finds pleasure in spending the wealth he gives, not one who gives it reluctantly. The humble person is one who finds pleasure in humility. Religious morals will not be firmly rooted in the self unless the self becomes accustomed to all good habits, abandons all bad actions, and perseveres in it with the perseverance of one who yearns for beautiful actions and finds pleasure in them, and dislikes ugly actions and feels pain from them, as the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "And the delight of my eye was made in ṣalāh." The Ḥadīth "And the delight of my eye was made in ṣalāh" was reported by al-Nasā'ī from Anas, as mentioned previously. As long as acts of worship and abandoning prohibitions are done with reluctance and a feeling of burden, it is a deficiency, and perfect happiness is not attained by it. Yes, persevering in them through struggle is good, but in comparison to abandoning them, not in comparison to performing them willingly. That is why Allāh the Exalted said: {And indeed it is_ a_ burdensome (thing) except for Al-Khāshī'īn (the truly submissive to Allāh).} (Sūrah al-Baqarah, 2:45). And the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Worship Allāh in contentment; if you cannot, then in patience with what you dislike there is much good." The Ḥadīth "Worship Allāh in contentment; if you cannot, then in patience with what you dislike there is much good" was reported by al-Ṭabarānī. Then, for the attainment of the promised happiness through good character, there should not be finding pleasure in obedience and disliking disobedience at one time but not another; rather, this should be constant and throughout life. The longer the life, the more firmly rooted and complete the virtue. That is why when the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) was asked about happiness, he said: "A long life in obedience to Allāh the Exalted." The Ḥadīth "He was asked about happiness, and he said: A long life in the worship of Allāh" was reported by al-Quḍā'ī in Musnad al-Shihāb and Abū Maṣ'ūr al-Daylamī in Musnad al-Firdaws from Ibn 'Umar with a weak chain. Al-Tirmidhī has from Abū Bakrah, and he authenticated it: "Who among people is best?" He said: "He whose life is long and whose deeds are good." That is why the Prophets and the awliyā' disliked death, for the world is the farm of the Hereafter. The more acts of worship there are due to a long life, the greater the reward, the purer and cleaner the self, and the stronger and more firmly rooted the morals. The purpose of acts of worship is their effect on the heart, and their effect is confirmed only by abundant perseverance in acts of worship. The ultimate goal of these morals is that the love of the world is cut off from the self, and the love of Allāh the Exalted is firmly rooted in it, so that nothing is more beloved to him than meeting Allāh the Mighty and Majestic. He then uses all his wealth only in the way that leads him to Him, and his anger and desire are subjugated to him, so he uses them only in the way that leads him to Allāh the Exalted. This is by being weighed by the scale of the Sharī'ah and the intellect. Then, after that, he is joyful with it and finds pleasure in it. It should not be considered far-fetched that ṣalāh can reach a point where it becomes the delight of the eye, and acts of worship become delightful. For habit creates in the self wonders more strange than that. We may see kings and the affluent in constant sorrow, and we see the gambler overcome by joy and pleasure in his gambling and what he is in, to the extent that he finds the joy of people in other than gambling burdensome, even though gambling may rob him of his wealth, ruin his home, and leave him bankrupt. Yet, he loves it and finds pleasure in it. That is due to his long familiarity with it and his devotion to it for a period. Likewise, one who plays with pigeons may stand all day in the heat of the sun on his feet, yet he does not feel its pain due to his joy with the birds, their movements, their flight, and their soaring in the sky. Indeed, we see the profligate rogue boasting of the beatings, cuttings, and endurance of lashes he receives, and of being brought forward for crucifixion, while he is exultant in himself and his strength in enduring that, until he sees it as a source of pride for himself. One of them may be cut piece by piece to make him confess to what he or another did, yet he insists on denial and does not care about the punishments, joyful in what he believes to be perfection, courage, and manliness. So his states, despite the exemplary punishment in them, have become the delight of his eye and a cause for his boasting. Indeed, there is no state meaner or uglier than the state of the effeminate man in his imitation of females by plucking hair, tattooing the face, and mingling with women. Yet you see the effeminate man joyful in his state and proud of his perfection in his effeminacy, boasting of it among other effeminate men, to the extent that boasting and vainglory occur between barbers and sweepers just as it occurs between kings and scholars. All of that is the result of habit and perseverance in one pattern constantly for an extended period, and observing that in associates and acquaintances. If the self, through habit, finds pleasure in falsehood and inclines towards it and towards ugliness, then how can it not find pleasure in truth if it were returned to it for a period and committed to persevering in it? Rather, the inclination of the self to these shameful matters is unnatural and resembles the inclination to eat clay, which may overcome some people through habit. As for its inclination to wisdom, the love of Allāh the Exalted, His knowledge, and His worship, it is like the inclination to food and drink, for it is a requirement of the heart's nature, as it is a lordly matter. Its inclination to the requirements of desire is foreign to its essence and incidental to its nature. The nourishment of the heart is wisdom, knowledge, and the love of Allāh the Mighty and Majestic. However, it has turned away from the requirement of its nature due to an illness that has befallen it, just as illness may befall the stomach, so it does not desire food and drink, though they are the causes of its life. Every heart that inclines to the love of anything other than Allāh the Exalted is not free from a disease proportionate to its inclination, unless it loved that thing because it assists it in the love of Allāh the Exalted and in His religion. In that case, it does not indicate illness.

So, you have definitely known by this that these beautiful morals can be acquired through spiritual discipline (riyāḍah), which is to initially make an effort to perform the actions emanating from them, so that they eventually become natural. This is from the wondrous relationship between the heart and the limbs, meaning the self and the body. For every attribute that appears in the heart, its effect inevitably flows to the limbs, so that they do not move except in accordance with it. And every action that occurs on the limbs, an effect from it may rise to the heart. The matter is cyclical and is known by an example: Whoever wants proficiency in writing to become a psychological attribute for him, so that he becomes a writer by nature, has no way except to perform with his hand what a proficient writer performs, and to persevere in it for a long time, imitating good handwriting. For the action of the writer is good handwriting. So he imitates the writer with effort, then continues to persevere in it until it becomes a firmly rooted attribute in his self, and in the end, good handwriting emanates from him naturally, just as it emanated from him with effort in the beginning. So it was good handwriting that made his handwriting good, but the first was with effort, yet an effect from it rose to the heart, then descended from the heart to the limb, so he began to write good handwriting naturally. Likewise, whoever wants to become a jurist of the self (faqīh al-nafs) has no way except to perform the actions of jurists, which is repetition of jurisprudence (fiqh), until an attribute of jurisprudence is impressed upon his heart from it, and he becomes a jurist of the self. Likewise, whoever wants to become generous, chaste of self, forbearing, and humble, must make an effort to perform the actions of these people until it becomes natural for him. There is no treatment for him except that. Just as a student of jurisprudence of the self does not despair of attaining this rank by neglecting one night, nor does he attain it by repeating for one night, so too a seeker of purification of the self, its perfection, and its adornment with good deeds does not attain it by one day's worship, nor is he deprived of it by one day's disobedience. This is the meaning of our statement that one major sin does not necessitate eternal wretchedness, but negligence on one day calls to its like, then it gradually leads on until the self becomes accustomed to laziness and abandons attainment altogether, thereby missing the virtue of jurisprudence. Likewise, minor sins lead one to another until the foundation of happiness is lost by the destruction of the foundation of faith at the end of life. Just as the repetition of one night does not make its effect felt in the jurisprudence of the self, but rather the jurisprudence of the self appears little by little, gradually, like the growth of the body and the increase in height, so too one act of obedience does not make its effect felt in the purification of the self and its cleansing immediately. However, one should not belittle a small act of obedience, for a large number of them are effective, and the whole is composed of individual parts, so each one has an effect. There is no act of obedience except that it has an effect, even if hidden, and it has a reward, undoubtedly, for the reward is commensurate with the effect. Likewise, disobedience.

How many a jurist takes lightly the neglect of a day and a night, and so, consecutively, he procrastinates day after day until his disposition becomes incapable of accepting jurisprudence. Likewise, one who takes minor sins lightly and consecutively postpones repentance until death snatches him suddenly, or the darkness of sins accumulates upon his heart and repentance becomes unattainable for him. For a little calls to much, and the heart becomes shackled by chains of desires from whose clutches it cannot be freed. This is what is meant by the sealing of the door of repentance, and it is intended by His ta‘ālā saying: {And We have put before them a barrier and behind them a barrier} (Yā Sīn:9). Therefore, may Allāh ta‘ālā be pleased with him, he said: "Indeed, faith appears in the heart as a white spot. The more faith increases, the more that whiteness increases. When the servant perfects faith, the entire heart becomes white. And indeed, hypocrisy appears in the heart as a black spot. The more hypocrisy increases, the more that blackness increases. When hypocrisy is perfected, the entire heart becomes black." If you understand that good morals are sometimes by nature and innate disposition (fiṭrah), sometimes by habituating beautiful actions, and sometimes by observing those who perform beautiful actions and accompanying them – and they are the companions of good and the brethren of righteousness, for nature steals from nature, both evil and good – then whoever combines these three aspects, becoming virtuous by nature, habit, and learning, is at the pinnacle of virtue. And whoever is vile by nature, and evil companions happen to him, so he learns from them and the means of evil are facilitated for him until he becomes accustomed to them, he is at the utmost distance from Allāh ‘azza wa jall. Between these two ranks are those in whom these aspects differ, and for each, there is a degree of nearness and distance according to what his form and state dictate. {So whoever does an atom's weight of good will see it, And whoever does an atom's weight of evil will see it.} (Az-Zalzalah:7-8). {And Allāh did not wrong them, but they were wronging themselves.} (Āl ‘Imrān:117, An-Nahl:33, At-Tawbah:70, Al-‘Ankabūt:40, Ar-Rūm:9).

Clarifying the Detailed Path to Refining Morals

You have known before that moderation in morals is the health of the soul, and deviation from moderation is its sickness and disease, just as moderation in the body's temperament is its health, and deviation from moderation is its disease. Let us take the body as an example and say: The example of the soul, in its treatment by eradicating vices and base morals from it and cultivating virtues and beautiful morals in it, is like the example of the body in its treatment by eradicating illnesses from it and acquiring health for it and bringing it thereto. Just as the predominant state of the original temperament is moderation, and harm only afflicts the stomach due to incidental factors of food, air, and conditions, so too is every newborn born moderate and sound in natural disposition (fiṭrah); it is only his parents who make him a Jew, a Christian, or a Zoroastrian – meaning, by habituation and teaching, vices are acquired. Just as the body is not created complete in the beginning but is perfected and strengthened by growth and nurturing with food, so too is the soul created deficient but capable of perfection, and it is only perfected by upbringing, refinement of morals, and nourishment with knowledge. Just as if the body is healthy, the physician's role is to lay down the principles that preserve health, and if it is sick, his role is to restore health to it, so too with your soul: if it is pure, chaste, and refined, you should strive to preserve it, bring more strength to it, and acquire increased purity for it. If it lacks perfection and purity, you should strive to bring that to it. Just as the ailment that alters the body's moderation and causes illness is only treated by its opposite – if it is from heat, then by coolness, and if from coolness, then by heat – so too is vice, which is a disease of the heart, treated by its opposite. The disease of ignorance is treated by learning, the disease of miserliness by generosity, the disease of arrogance by humility, and the disease of gluttony by refraining from desires with effort. Just as one must endure the bitterness of medicine and the hardship of patience in abstaining from desires to treat sick bodies, so too must one endure the bitterness of striving and patience to treat the disease of the heart – indeed, more so. For the disease of the body ends with death, but the disease of the heart – and we seek refuge in Allāh ta‘ālā – is a disease that endures after death, for ever and ever. Just as not every coolant is suitable for an ailment caused by heat unless it is of a specific measure, and this varies in intensity, weakness, duration, and quantity, and it must have a standard by which the beneficial amount is known, for if its standard is not maintained, corruption increases, so too do the opposites by which morals are treated require a standard. Just as the standard for medicine is derived from the standard of the ailment, so that the physician does not treat unless he knows whether the ailment is from heat or coolness, and if it is from heat, he ascertains its degree – is it weak or strong? When he knows this, he considers the conditions of the body, the conditions of the time, the patient's profession, his age, and all his other conditions, then treats accordingly. Likewise, the guiding shaykh who treats the souls of the disciples and the hearts of the seekers should not rush them into spiritual exercises and obligations in a specific art or a specific path until he knows their morals and their diseases. Just as if a physician were to treat all patients with a single remedy, he would kill most of them, so too if the shaykh were to advise the disciples with a single type of spiritual exercise, he would destroy them and kill their hearts. Rather, he should look into the disciple's illness, his condition, his age, his temperament, and what his constitution can bear of spiritual exercises, and base his exercises on that. If the disciple is a beginner, ignorant of the limits of the Sharī'ah, he first teaches him purification, prayer, and the outward aspects of worship. If he is engaged in unlawful wealth or committing a sin, he first orders him to abandon it. When his outward appearance is adorned with acts of worship and his limbs are purified from outward sins, he looks into his inner self through circumstantial evidence to discern his morals and heart's diseases. If he sees him with wealth exceeding his necessary amount, he takes it from him and directs it to good deeds, and empties his heart of it so that he does not pay attention to it. If he sees that recklessness, arrogance, and pride are dominant in him, he orders him to go to the markets to beg and ask, for pride and desire for leadership are not broken except by humiliation, and there is no humiliation greater than the humiliation of asking. He tasks him with persisting in this for a period until his arrogance and pride are broken, for arrogance is one of the destructive diseases, as is recklessness. If he sees that cleanliness of the body and clothes is dominant in him, and sees his heart inclined to it, happy with it, and attentive to it, he employs him in maintaining and cleaning the latrine, sweeping dirty places, and staying in the kitchen and smoky areas, so that his recklessness in cleanliness is disturbed. For those who clean and adorn their clothes and seek clean patched garments and colored prayer mats are no different from a bride who adorns herself all day. There is no difference between a person worshipping himself or worshipping an idol. Whatever one worships other than Allāh ta'ālā, he is veiled from Allāh. Whoever pays attention to anything in his garment other than its being lawful and pure, an attention to which his heart turns, is preoccupied with himself. Among the subtleties of spiritual discipline, if the disciple does not completely abandon recklessness or another trait, and does not readily accept its opposite, he should be moved from the blameworthy trait to another blameworthy trait that is less severe, like one who washes blood with urine, then washes the urine with water if water does not remove the blood. Just as a child in the Qur'ān school is encouraged with playing ball and polo and the like, then he is moved from play to adornment and fine clothes, then he is moved from that by encouragement towards leadership and seeking status, then he is moved from status by encouragement towards the Hereafter. Likewise, one whose self does not readily abandon status all at once should be moved to a lesser status, and so with other traits. Similarly, if he sees gluttony dominant in him, he obliges him to fast and reduce food. Then he tasks him with preparing delicious foods and presenting them to others while he himself does not eat from them, so that his self is strengthened thereby, he becomes accustomed to patience, and his gluttony is broken. Likewise, if he sees him as a young man yearning for marriage while unable to afford it, he orders him to fast. Perhaps his desire is not calmed by that, so he orders him to break his fast one night with water without bread, and another night with bread without water, and prevents him from meat and rich food altogether, until his self is humbled and his desire is broken. For in the beginning of the path of seeking, no treatment is more beneficial than hunger. If he sees anger dominant in him, he obliges him to be forbearing and silent, and subjects him to someone with bad character who provokes him, and obliges him to serve one with bad character until he trains himself to endure him. As it is narrated about one of them that he used to accustom himself to forbearance and remove severe anger from himself, so he would hire someone to insult him in public, and force himself to be patient and suppress his anger until forbearance became a habit for him, such that he became proverbial for it. Some of them felt cowardice and weakness of heart within themselves and wanted to acquire the trait of courage, so they would sail the sea in winter when the waves were turbulent. The ascetics of India treat laziness in worship by standing all night in one posture. Some shaykhs, at the beginning of their seeking, were lazy about standing [in prayer], so they obliged themselves to stand on their heads all night to make standing on their feet voluntary. Some treated the love of wealth by selling all their property and throwing it into the sea, fearing the recklessness of generosity and showing off in giving if they distributed it among people. These examples show you the way to treat hearts. Our purpose is not to mention the cure for every disease, for that will come in the remaining books. Our purpose now is to point out that the general path in this is to follow the course opposite to everything the self desires and inclines to. Allāh has gathered all of that in His Noble Book in a single phrase, when He ta‘ālā said: {But as for he who feared the position of his Lord and prevented the soul from [unlawful] inclination, Then indeed, Paradise will be [his] refuge.} (An-Nāzi‘āt:40-41). The important principle in striving is to fulfill one’s resolve. If one resolves to abandon a desire and its means become available, and this is a trial and test from Allāh ta‘ālā, he should be patient and persist. For if he accustoms his self to abandoning resolve, it will become familiar with that and become corrupt. If he happens to break a resolve, he should impose a punishment on his self for it, as we mentioned in punishing the self in the book of self-accountability and vigilance. If the self is not intimidated by punishment, it will overcome him and make the indulgence of desire seem good to him, thereby completely corrupting the spiritual discipline.

Proposed Educational Program and Counsels for the Mujāhid

In the Field of Worship, Asceticism, Conduct, and Morals

- (1) Work on renewing faith and correcting intention and sincerity to Allāh ta‘ālā at all times.
- (2) Be keen on performing prayer well by adhering to prayers at their earliest times. Be keen on performing them in congregation – if possible – and completing their bowing and prostration, and adhering to their preceding and succeeding sunnahs. Be mindful of humility in them and completing them in the most perfect way, and exert effort in continuously improving their performance.
- (3) Adhere to the known remembrances and glorifications after every prayer and do not leave the prayer gathering until after performing them. Supplicate to Allāh and ask Him for the good of this world and the Hereafter after performing the glorifications.

(4) Be keen on giving Zakāh – for whoever has wealth upon which Zakāh is due – and strive to accurately calculate what is due and pay it with a content heart. Seek out the righteous, needy, and deserving recipients for it, especially relatives and kin, and families affected in the cause of Allāh from among the mujāhidīn and emigrants in the cause of Allāh, particularly the families of martyrs and prisoners held by enemies.

(5) Strive to fast Ramaḍān with faith and expecting reward in the best way, yearn for it, and increase acts of obedience in it, especially its night prayer (Tarāwīḥ prayer), reading the Qur’ān, and abundant charity for those who can.

(6) Perform the obligation of Ḥajj immediately upon having the Sharī‘ah-defined ability. Try to perform it at a young age.

(7) Adhere to the morning remembrances (between Fajr prayer and sunrise) and evening remembrances (between ‘Aṣr prayer and Maghrib). Include in them a portion of seeking forgiveness 100 times daily. Adhere to the remembrances before sleep. Strive for the last words before sleep to be the repetition of the two testimonies of faith.

(8) Adhere to the sunnah of Ḍuḥā prayer (from when the sun has risen until just before its zenith), two, four, or eight rak‘ahs.

(9) Adhere to a daily portion of the Qur’ān by reading one juz’ daily, and completing it at least once every lunar month. Adhere to reading Sūrat al-Kahf every Friday, between Fajr and just before Maghrib.

(10) Adhere to night prayer (Qiyām al-Layl) daily, with a portion that the brother estimates according to his ability, praying it in the last third of the night if he can, otherwise let him pray what he can before sleep and then pray Witr. The prophetic Sunnah in this is eleven rak'ahs. Increase seeking forgiveness at dawn.

(11) Adhere to a portion of voluntary fasting, the minimum being three days each month, which are the White Days (13th, 14th, 15th) of each lunar month. The intermediate is fasting Mondays and Thursdays, and the best fasting is the fasting of David (peace be upon him), fasting one day and breaking fast one day.

(12) Adhere to an amount of financial charity weekly or monthly according to ability.

(13) Adhere to a session for reflection and self-accountability at the end of the day before sleep, reviewing the harvest of daily good and bad deeds. Attend to it with seeking forgiveness, and intensify self-accountability regarding sources of income, ensuring it is purely lawful, returning rights to their owners, and giving in charity whatever is doubtful from unlawful earnings. Seek pardon from anyone the brother has harmed in any way. Cultivate vigilance of Allāh in secret and in public.

(14) Strive for parents' pleasure and be dutiful to them while they are alive through good connection and treatment, and after their death by performing Ḥajj on their behalf if they did not perform it, by giving charity for them, by maintaining ties with their friends after their departure, and by frequently seeking forgiveness and asking for mercy for them.

(15) Strive to maintain ties of kinship, visit them, be dutiful to them, and be good to them, attending to them with connection and gifts, and with charity if they are in need.

(16) Strive for good character in dealing with people, being good to them, being patient with their mistreatment, seeking forgiveness for them, and supplicating for Muslims in their absence.

(17) Strive to follow the Sunnah of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) in all movements and stillness, and strive to follow his words and actions, and what he established as sunnah and legislated, in eating, drinking, clothing, sleeping, wakefulness, dealing with family, good companionship with neighbors, maintaining ties of kinship, and striving for his noble character (peace and blessings be upon him) in every matter. Seek help from books that have tracked this, such as Zād al-Ma'ād by Imām Ibn al-Qayyim (may Allāh have mercy on him).

Political Understanding and Jurisprudence of Reality

The process of political education and raising an individual's level of jurisprudence of reality is complex and takes a long time. While it may be considered recommended for the ordinary mujāhid, it is obligatory for the leaders and cadres of the resistance, as it is the basis for the movement's legitimate political decisions and the calculation of their consequences. A minimum level of it must also be available to individuals so they can appreciate the reasons that led their leadership to take a particular decision, based on calculations of benefits, harms, and implications.

In any case, the qualification process varies according to the individual's level of understanding, sharpness of intelligence, and comprehension, and by the cognitive quantity of information the person can acquire. Beyond general information, it requires continuous follow-up of current affairs, interaction with life and people, following news and events, and a high level of general culture in various fields of science and knowledge.

Among the necessary information for a resistance mujāhid to comprehend what is happening around him, and to be able to assess the benefits and harms resulting from his actions, according to logical judgments, is a set of basic knowledge, the most important of which includes the following:

1. Historical Information:

He should have a general idea of the history of civilization and human existence, leading up to the stage of the launch of the call of Islām. Then, an idea about the history of Muslims, and the succession of their states and governments, starting from the Prophetic mission, through the Rightly Guided Caliphs, then the Umayyad phase, then the Abbasid, then the Taifa states, then the Ottoman phase, leading to the final fall of the Caliphate in 1924, and then the phase of our countries' subjugation to European colonialism from that time until our present day, especially the period of major crises in the history of Muslims. We have summarized a useful overview of this in the third chapter of the first part, Allāh willing.

He must also know an overview of the history of our enemy and its various states and their development, leading up to the contemporary Roman states: America and NATO Europe. A glimpse of this was also covered in the third chapter.

Through this, he must know an overview of important events, historical figures, and the history of the conflict between Islām and Muslims on one hand, and the Romans and their civilization on the other.

I have provided a summary of this due to its importance in understanding what is happening today, across the third and fourth chapters.

2. Geographical Information:

History and conflicts take place on land, and within the geography of different kingdoms and countries. The educated Jihādī cadre must have a basic foundation and knowledge of geography in this world, and its political divisions and entities, so that he can understand news and events, and connect them to their locations and the history of those locations.

3. Information in Economics:

Most of these ongoing conflicts today have major or fundamental economic dimensions; they are conflicts over interests in a fundamental aspect of their dimensions. The mujāhid must acquire a portion of economic knowledge, such as an idea about resources, types of economies in different countries and their systems, income levels of individuals and peoples, their economic activities, the cycle of money and economy and its relation to politics and wars, etc. This is basic information for understanding the conflict, and understanding the points of strength and weakness in our ranks and the enemy's ranks, and the vulnerabilities from which they can be attacked.

4. Information in Human Geography:

Human geography is the set of information related to populations; their characteristics, ethnicities, religions, sects, customs, civilizations... because humans are the active, moving element in these conflicts, and the difference in their religious, ethnic, and civilizational composition is a fundamental aspect of the conflict.

5. Information in Politics and Political Geography:

What is meant is general information in political science and its origin, ancient and contemporary political doctrines, their currently existing doctrines, and their roots in nationalism, democracy, socialism, communism, liberalism... and so on. Also, an idea about global political conflicts and their axes between major powers, existing alliances between them, aspects of competition between these alliances, and within a single alliance and its constituent states. Then, the political geography of major states, especially those hostile to us, their components, and internal contradictions. Because all of this is useful for clarifying perceptions of the confrontation.

Political geography is the map of forces in a certain place or gathering, whether they are states, parties, entities, or personalities, and the relationships between them in all their various forms. Among the important political information is knowledge of the aspects and axes of the conflict, its history and present, between us and the enemy, and the conspiracies against the Islāmic world, their form, and history.

It is necessary, especially for cadres guiding groups and cells in the resistance brigades, to combine a good amount of understanding of political language and its terminology, and the meanings of those terminologies which are renewed and expanded daily.

6. General Information and Culture:

This is a vast and broad domain. General culture, as indicated by the two words forming the term, is the collection of general knowledge and information in every field and art.

The broader the knowledge, the greater the ability to understand. Consequently, thinking expands, resulting in the ability to draw plans and predict the course of events.

The levels of general political understanding pass through four stages:

The first is knowing the news, the second is understanding the news, the third is analyzing the dimensions of the news, and the fourth is predicting the areas of this news's impact on the future and thus extrapolating the future of events.

These matters progress from the level of ordinary understanding to genius, which has been defined in many ways, one of the most precise being "the ability to analyze and synthesize." When you have information, the mind processes it and reassembles it into concepts and perceptions. Language consists of twenty-eight letters; people's level of using them varies, from an imbecile muttering meaningless words, to a poet producing eloquence like magic, to a philosopher formulating it as wisdom and knowledge.

All of this, as I mentioned, depends on talent, aptitude, understanding, intelligence, and perception on one hand, and on acquired knowledge on the other, without which a person does not benefit from his talents and perceptions, which atrophy due to ignorance and intellectual stagnation. Likewise, acquired knowledge and perceptions raise the level of the ignorant to become a knowledgeable and perceptive person, but they do not elevate him to the level of genius and creativity, except with aptitude, talent, understanding, intelligence, and wisdom. And this is a gift from Allāh ta‘ālā. It has been narrated from him (peace and blessings be upon him): "Knowledge is only attained by learning (so learning is possible). And forbearance is only attained by striving for forbearance (and this likewise). And whoever strives for patience, Allāh will make him patient." So these are acquired knowledge and behaviors. But Allāh ta‘ālā said: {He gives wisdom to whom He wills} (Al-Baqarah:269). So it is a gift, {He gives sovereignty to whom He wills} (Āl ‘Imrān:26), {And We gave him wisdom and decisive speech} (Şād:20). And that is the grace of Allāh; He gives it to whom He wills. And we ask Him from His vast grace, generosity, mercy, and bounty. For He is the Owner of Sovereignty, Glorified is He.

If knowledge and information are important for the mujāhid in every aspect and art, they become more important the closer they are to the arena of conflict in which he operates, and the forces that clash in this conflict.

So, there must be extensive knowledge of ourselves, our numbers, and our equipment, and of the arena of conflict and the network of forces and influences within it.

A Sharī‘ah ruling is not correct except with jurisprudence of reality and the application of Sharī‘ah knowledge, texts, and fatwas to it. To the extent of ignorance of reality, the legitimate political fatwa deviates from its context.

A military decision is not correct except with knowledge of reality, otherwise the fighter might make a decision that leads to his doom. And say the same about everything in the domains of the movement.

All our discussion here is in the realm of means that must be adopted according to Sharī‘ah. Otherwise, the fundamental principle is Allāh’s guidance, opening, and victory. He ta‘ālā said: {And those who strive for Us - We will surely guide them to Our ways. And indeed, Allāh is with the doers of good.} (Al-‘Ankabūt:69). And He ta‘ālā said: {Those who have believed - their Lord guides them by their faith.} (Yūnus:9).

What we are talking about is knowledge; as for Allāh's guidance, it is light, spirit, and support. And we ask Allāh for His great grace.

I have mentioned in the first part of this book, and in the dimensions of political theory in the second part, and throughout various chapters, an overview of much of this information and knowledge that helps in understanding the conflict, its parties, and its data. But that is not sufficient except on a foundation of the general knowledge mentioned. For this reason...

I advise the guides and every mujāhid capable of reading and learning to raise their level by reading accessible books in the following areas as examples of some fields of knowledge; otherwise, the field is vast, very, very broad. Specific book titles do not come to my mind now, and they are increasing every day. Information networks have opened enormous doors. So, it is beneficial for the mujāhid, especially cadres and leaders, to be familiar with some of the following knowledge:

- In Historical Sciences:

- History of ancient civilizations.
- History of the ancient Romans.
- History of contemporary Europe since the fall of Constantinople and the rise of European kingdoms.
- History of Europe in the period of the two World Wars.
- History of America, its emergence, and its relationship with Europe and the world since World War II.
- History of Arabs before Islām.
- History of Islām in its various stages, starting from the era of Prophethood (upon our Prophet be the best of prayers and peace) up to the fall of the Ottoman Caliphate in 1924.
- Modern history of Arabs and Muslims from 1924 to the present, especially the history of the country in which he lives and intends to perform Jihād.

- In Geography:

- A book on the physical geography of the world, as well as the geography of resources and economy, and the distribution of wealth therein.
- A book on the physical geography of the Islāmic world, as well as the distribution of wealth and resources.
- A book on the human geography of the Islāmic and Arab world: ethnicities, nationalities, religions and sects, aspects of cultures and population activity.

In Political Science and Economics:

- A general concise book on political science.
- An accessible book on contemporary political doctrines, their emergence, and principles.
- An accessible book on economics and its contemporary schools.
- Various economic statistical studies.
- A book about the economic conflict over the Arab and Islāmic world.
- A book about contemporary economic power axes and the conflict between them (especially the economic conflict between America, Europe, Japan, East Asia, and China).
- Modern colonial ambitions and the struggle for influence in the Arab and Islāmic world.
- Knowledge of the political map of the place where the mujāhid lives, its components, and data.
- History of the Arab-Israeli conflict and its stages, modern normalization projects and their conspiracies.
- International conflict and its history over oil, energy, and resources in the Arab and Islāmic world.
- Contemporary Islāmic awakening schools, their doctrines, and figures.

- History of the awakening in the country to which the mujāhid belongs and works in.
- Among the very important books are the memoirs of leaders, decision-makers, and politicians in the world and in our countries, from various persuasions and doctrines.
- Another important matter: an accessible book on media, its schools, and contemporary means.
- A concise book on administration.
- A book on how to manage time and benefit from it.

General Information and Culture:

- Proficiency in the English language, which has unfortunately become today the means of global communication and the tool for accessing much science and knowledge.
- Proficiency in computer use and benefiting from the Internet.
- General knowledge of natural sciences, health sciences and first aid, electrical science, and whatever is accessible to him from every science, art, and culture.

I draw attention to the fact that following global and local news, and general cultural television programs, is extremely important and influential in forming political and general knowledge and culture, while being aware of the negative influences of media, especially satellite channels and the Internet, which spread misguided and deviant ideas propagated by the enemy to change the religious and intellectual identity of Muslims, as well as areas of corruption, shackles, and prohibitions spread by these media, whose good has mixed with their evil in a way that only Allāh, Glorified and Exalted is He, can save from or help with, and He is the Guide.

Likewise, reading political, intellectual, and literary newspapers and magazines is important in following events, living through them, and understanding reality.

I conclude by drawing attention to the works of Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, which contain a large aspect of the jurisprudence of reality and the contemporary conditions of Muslims. They are scattered in his books and writings, which have been collected in the Mawsū‘at adh-Dhakhā’ir al-‘Izām fīmā Uthira ‘an ash-Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām (Encyclopedia of Great Treasures of what was Narrated from Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām). For the topic of this paragraph (Political Understanding), I specifically mention his books: Al-Manārah al-Mafqūdah (The Lost Minaret), in which he discussed the fall of the Ottoman Caliphate; Aḍwā’ ‘alā al-Qawmiyyah al-‘Arabiyyah (Lights on Arab Nationalism); Al-Saraṭān al-Aḥmar (The Red Cancer), in which he discussed communism and its spread among Arabs and Muslims during the sixties and seventies; Al-Islām wa Mustaqbal al-Bashariyyah (Islām and the Future of Humanity); Mubashshirāt an-Naṣr (Harbingers of Victory); and Khatt at-Taḥawwul at-Tārīkhī (The Line of Historical Transformation), which is a very important, small, and concise book, but of great benefit and rich content. I believe that every guide for the mujāhid youth should adopt it in the methodology of contemporary political awareness regarding the conditions of Muslims.

I have quoted important passages from these aforementioned books and interspersed them in their appropriate places in this book. May Allāh have mercy on the martyred Shaykh, grant him abundant reward, forgive him, and gather us and him with the righteous.

Military Education and Jihādī Preparation

I will leave the details of this chapter here, considering that we will dedicate a special chapter to it in this section, which is "The Theory of Training and Preparation in the Call of the Global Islāmic Resistance," Allāh willing.

Practical Education through Performing the Obligation of Jihād

Al-Bukhārī narrated from Abū Ishāq who said: I heard al-Barā' (may Allāh be pleased with him) say:

"A man masked in iron came to the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) and said: O Messenger of Allāh, shall I fight and then embrace Islām? He said: Embrace Islām, then fight. The narrator said: Then he fought and was killed. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: He did little and was rewarded much."

And from Abū Hurayrah: "Amr ibn Uqaysh had an outstanding claim of interest from the pre-Islāmic era, and he disliked embracing Islām until he had collected it. On the day of Uḥud, he came and asked: Where are my cousins? They said: At Uḥud. He asked: Where is so-and-so? They said: At Uḥud. He asked: Where is so-and-so? They said: At Uḥud. So he put on his armor, mounted his horse, and headed towards them. When the Muslims saw him, they said: Stay away from us, O 'Amr! He said: I have indeed believed. He fought until he was wounded and was carried to his family injured. Sa'd ibn Mu'ādh came and said to his ('Amr's) sister: Ask him: Was it out of zeal for your people, or anger on their behalf, or anger for Allāh? He said: Rather, out of anger for Allāh and His Messenger. He died and entered Paradise. He had not prayed a single prayer to Allāh."

Since permission to fight was granted by His ta'ālā saying: {Permission [to fight] has been given to those who are being fought, because they were wronged. And indeed, Allāh is competent to give them victory} (Al-Ḥajj:39), the approach of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) for himself and in guiding his companions has always been Jihād in the cause of Allāh and activity in it, both defensively and offensively, regardless of the level of Sharī'ah knowledge, general understanding, and the preparation commanded by Sharī'ah, and regardless of their seniority or the extent of their individual upbringing. Jihād is an obligation, and when its time comes, the Muslim performs it irrespective of his level in religion, knowledge, or anything else. The Muslim's development in increasing his faith, jurisprudence, knowledge, morals, conduct, understanding of his reality, and his Jihādī preparatory capabilities are matters that progress with him from his inception until his death. However, no one among the predecessors or successors has said that a low level in any aspect of religion nullifies the Sharī'ah obligation of fighting, which is only nullified by legitimate Sharī'ah excuses.

{There is no blame upon the blind nor any blame upon the lame nor any blame upon the ill} (An-Nūr:61). {There is no blame upon the weak nor upon the ill nor upon those who do not find anything to spend, when they are sincere to Allāh and His Messenger. There is no way [of blame] against the doers of good. And Allāh is Forgiving and Merciful} (At-Tawbah:91).

As for the other eight excuses, and what branches from them, which were called the excuses of the hypocrites – and they are the excuses of those who sit back in every time and place – the noble verse has encompassed them with astounding conciseness, leaving no fabricated excuse except that it falls under them or branches from them.

He ta'ālā said: {Say, [O Muḥammad], "If your fathers, your sons, your brothers, your wives, your relatives, wealth which you have obtained, commerce wherein you fear decline, and dwellings with which you are pleased are more beloved to you than Allāh and His Messenger and Jihād in His cause, then wait until Allāh executes His command. And Allāh does not guide the defiantly disobedient people."} (At-Tawbah:24). But those who sit back, their shaykhs, and their cowardly, failing leadership in this era, have invented new, flimsy, strange excuses.

They say: We will engage in Jihād, but we are in the stage of behavioral education and correcting the religion. Others said: We will engage in Jihād, but when creeds are corrected and the banner is purified. A third group said: We will engage in Jihād, but when the organizational structures and pillars of the group are complete, and we do not rush the fruit... until the Meccan stage is over!

Then came the twenty-first century. America came with its cavalry and infantry and declared a world war on Islām and Muslims under the pretext of terrorism.

The people finally declared: We do not engage in Jihād, for this is terrorism, and we are advocates of moderation. Jihād was to break barriers for the call (da‘wah). Now da‘wah is available through peaceful and democratic means, via internet networks, satellite channel lectures, and seminars.

They said: We will engage in Jihād, but in parliament and through "legitimate" (their new legitimacy, of course!) ways. We are in a state of law, and we must renounce violence. They finally disclosed what they had concealed in their souls, and Allāh the Great spoke the truth: {Or do those in whose hearts is a disease think that Allāh will never expose their [feelings of] hatred?} (Muḥammad:29). As for our method of education, it is the antithesis of that. Its fifth and fundamental pillar in education is that we call for performing the individual obligation of defensive Jihād immediately and with whatever is available, each according to his capacity. Allāh does not burden a soul beyond its scope. Every Muslim must engage in Jihād with himself to repel the aggressor by fighting, immediately and at once, as a binding obligation, which he sins by abandoning. The enemy has settled in the heartland – in every heartland of Muslim lands! The Sharī‘ah ruling and its evidence for this have already been explained.

We call for proceeding with the educational process in integrated aspects as much as possible, and according to each circumstance and individual ability, striving to increase faith, consolidate creed, understand the rulings of religion, purify the soul, elevate morals and conduct, and raise the level of political and realistic understanding. But in the manner of "Embrace Islām, then fight." As long as the Muslim is a Muslim, defensive Jihād is an obligation for him, like prayer and fasting, differing from them only in that it is a more severe obligation, as we have explained.

From Abū Hurayrah: "Amr ibn Uqaysh had an outstanding claim of interest from the pre-Islāmic era, and he disliked embracing Islām until he had collected it. On the day of Uḥud, he came and asked: Where are my cousins? They said: At Uḥud. He asked: Where is so-and-so? They said: At Uḥud. He asked: Where is so-and-so? They said: At Uḥud. So he put on his armor, mounted his horse, and headed towards them. When the Muslims saw him, they said: Stay away from us, O 'Amr! He said: I have indeed believed. He fought until he was wounded and was carried to his family injured. Sa'd ibn Mu'ādh came and said to his ('Amr's) sister: Ask him: Was it out of zeal for your people, or anger on their behalf, or anger for Allāh and His Messenger? He said: Out of anger for Allāh and His Messenger. He died and entered Paradise. He had not prayed a single prayer to Allāh." (Narrated by the group).

There is a subtle point that those who sit back do not realize and will not understand by reading it here. We point it out, perhaps it will arouse their curiosity and draw those with resolve to the method of "He who tastes, knows."

It is "education through the practice of fighting." Education under the gleam of swords, the whizzing of bullets, the roar of cannons, and the drone of planes. I do not mean military education and practical training here, no, but rather education in every aspect.

Correcting creed in the battlefield. Yes, there, where the believer perceives the Most Beautiful Names of Allāh and His Lofty Attributes, and their lights shine in his heart, so his creed is corrected, and he perceives and understands in a wondrous divine way that Allāh is the Creator, He is the Provider, He alone is the Giver of life and death, He is the Strong, the Able, He is the Compeller, He is the Avenger. And he perceives that Allāh is with him, hearing him, seeing him, supporting him, and managing his affair. There, where creed and its essence are planted in the depths of his soul and spirit, by witnessing an hour in the ranks with sincerity. And he perceives the meaning of his (peace and blessings be upon him) saying: "Whoever fights in the way of Allāh for the time it takes to milk a camel... Paradise is obligatory for him!" And can Paradise be obligatory for one with a corrupt creed?

In the station of the front line, and the hour of fighting, his soul is purified, and he learns noble ethics, because he has sold himself to Allāh and detached himself from the world. So his character improves, and his worries and anxieties disappear, and you see him easy-going, gentle, worshipping, humble. There, when death appears to him, and he sees it in the nooks and crannies, and expects with every small shell that explodes with death and fire spreading with shrapnel that his end is in it, he remembers his sins as death looms, and says: I seek forgiveness from Allāh the Great, once. The meanings of seeking forgiveness spread through all the cells of his body. Perhaps it is better than repeating it hundreds of times with elegant prayer beads, made of precious stones, on a luxurious foreign prayer mat, over opulent European carpet, in an elegant, dimly lit salon, after a heavy dinner, when the children have gone to bed and the wife has slept, and this pampered worshipper has retired to his corner to pray tahajjud. I say, perhaps that seeking of forgiveness has a deeper effect on the soul and reaches [its destination] faster. Perhaps, and sincerity and acceptance are a gift from Allāh ta‘ālā.

And so with every moral, every understanding, and every insight, there on the frontiers where Allāh opens [doors] for the sincere. Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal and his peers among the Salaf were truthful when they used to say: "If a matter becomes obscure to you, refer it to the people of the frontiers, for Allāh has guaranteed guidance for them due to His ta‘ālā saying: {And those who strive for Us - We will surely guide them to Our ways. And indeed, Allāh is with the doers of good.} (Al-‘Ankabūt:69)."

So, fighting and engaging in it is not merely worship – though it is that, and this is its basis, an act of obedience and worship for which one is rewarded for performing and sins by abandoning – but it is a means of education in our method, and it is the shortest path. It is a "concentrated course" for correcting creed, refining conduct, understanding reality, and direct, summarized military preparation. He who tastes, knows. What wretches are those who do not know this nor understand it, wretches! Nay, but on their hearts is the Rān (covering of sins and evil deeds) which they used to earn. So that is the grace of Allāh; He gives it to whom He wills. And that is His banquet, Blessed and Exalted is He; He admits some people and turns away others, and He accepts some people and honors them, and He rejects others, and He chooses whom He wills from among the martyrs and postpones others. {And your Lord creates what He wills and chooses; not for them was the choice. Exalted is Allāh and high above what they associate with Him.} (Al-Qaṣaṣ:68).

And although we believe in and call for the practice of Jihād side by side with work in other aspects of education, especially when the obligation of defensive Jihād becomes individually incumbent, as is its case today, Jihād is an integrated whole. For the servant to be steadfast in it, patient, and firm, he needs to engage in Jihād in all its aspects, levels, and types.

Quotation from Ibn al-Qayyim on the Levels and Types of Jihād

Imām Ibn al-Qayyim says in Az-Zād:

Levels of Jihād:

Since Jihād is the pinnacle of Islām, its dome, and the stations of its people are the highest stations in Paradise, just as they have eminence in this world – for they are the highest in this world and the Hereafter – the Messenger of Allāh was at its highest peak and mastered all its types. He performed Jihād in Allāh’s cause, a true Jihād, with the heart, the soul, da‘wah, elucidation, the sword, and the spear. His hours were dedicated to Jihād with his heart, his tongue, and his hand. Therefore, he was the most exalted of all creation in remembrance and the greatest of them in rank before Allāh. Allāh ta‘ālā commanded him with Jihād from the time He sent him and said: {And if We had willed, We could have sent to every city a warner. So do not obey the disbelievers, and strive against them with it [the Qur’ān] a great striving.}

(Al-Furqān:51-52). This is a Meccan sūrah in which He commanded Jihād against the disbelievers with argument, elucidation, and conveying the Qur'ān. Likewise, Jihād against the hypocrites is only by conveying the proof; otherwise, they are under the subjugation of the people of Islām. Allāh ta'ālā said: {O Prophet, strive against the disbelievers and the hypocrites and be harsh upon them. And their refuge is Hell, and wretched is the destination.} (At-Tawbah:73).

Jihād against the hypocrites is more difficult than Jihād against the disbelievers. It is the Jihād of the elite of the Ummah and the heirs of the Messengers. Those who undertake it are few in the world, and those who participate in it and assist in it, though they are the fewest in number, are the greatest in rank before Allāh. Since one of the best forms of Jihād is speaking the truth despite severe opposition, such as speaking it in the presence of one whose power and harm you fear, the Messengers (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them) had the greatest share of that, and our Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) had the most complete and perfect Jihād in that regard.

Since Jihād against Allāh's enemies externally is a branch of the servant's Jihād against his own self for Allāh's sake, as the Prophet said: "The mujāhid is one who strives against his self in obedience to Allāh, and the muhājir (emigrant) is one who forsakes what Allāh has forbidden," Jihād against the self takes precedence over Jihād against the external enemy and is its foundation. For unless he first strives against his self to do what it is commanded and leave what it is forbidden, and fights it for Allāh's sake, he cannot perform Jihād against his external enemy. How can he perform Jihād against his enemy and seek justice from him when his enemy within his own flanks overpowers him, dominates him, and he has not striven against it nor fought it for Allāh's sake? Indeed, he cannot go out to his enemy until he strives against his self to go out. So these are two enemies with whose Jihād the servant has been tested. And between them is a third enemy, against whom he cannot fight the other two except by fighting it. It stands between them, discouraging the servant from fighting them, letting him down, and unnerving him. It constantly makes him imagine the hardships involved in fighting them, the abandonment of fortunes, and the loss of pleasures and desires. He cannot fight those two enemies except by fighting it, and that is Satan. Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Indeed, Satan is an enemy to you; so take him as an enemy.} (Fāṭir:6). The command to take him as an enemy is an alert to exert utmost effort in fighting and striving against him, as if he were an enemy who never tires or falls short in fighting the servant with every breath.

So these are three enemies the servant is commanded to fight and strive against. He has been afflicted with fighting them in this world, and they have been set upon him as a trial and test from Allāh. Allāh has given the servant aid, equipment, helpers, and weapons for this Jihād, and He has given his enemies aid, equipment, helpers, and weapons. He has tested one group with the other and made some of them a trial for others, to test their affairs and examine who allies with Him and His Messengers versus who allies with Satan and his party, as Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And We have made some of you as a trial for others - will you have patience? And ever is your Lord, Seeing.} (Al-Furqān:20). And Allāh ta‘ālā said: {That [is so]. And if Allāh had willed, He could have taken vengeance upon them [Himself], but [He ordered armed struggle] to test some of you by means of others.} (Muḥammad:4). And Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And We will surely test you until We make known those among you who strive and the patient, and We will test your affairs.} (Muḥammad:31). So He gave His servants hearing, sight, intellect, and strength, sent down His Books to them, sent His Messengers to them, aided them with His angels, and said to them: {Indeed, I am with you, so strengthen those who have believed.} (Al-Anfāl:12). He commanded them with what is among the greatest aids for them in fighting their enemy, and informed them that if they comply with what He commanded them, they will remain victorious over His enemy and their enemy, and that if He gives power to the enemy over them, it is because they abandoned some of what they were commanded and for their disobedience to Him. Then He did not make them despair or lose hope, but commanded them to face their situation, treat their wounds, and return to confronting their enemy, and He would grant them victory over them and make them triumphant. He informed them that He is with the pious among them, with the doers of good, with the patient, and with the believers, and that He defends His believing servants from what they cannot defend themselves against. Indeed, it is by His defense of them that they are victorious over their enemy. Were it not for His defense of them, their enemy would have snatched them away and annihilated them. This defense of them is according to their faith and proportionate to it. If faith is strong, the defense is strong. So whoever finds good, let him praise Allāh, and whoever finds otherwise, let him blame no one but himself.

He commanded them to strive in His cause a true striving, just as He commanded them to fear Him as He ought to be feared. Just as fearing Him as He ought to be feared means that He is obeyed and not disobeyed, remembered and not forgotten, and thanked and not shown ingratitude, so too, striving in His cause a true striving means that the servant strives against his self so that his heart, tongue, and limbs submit to Allāh, so that he is entirely for Allāh and by Allāh, not for himself nor by himself. And he strives against his Satan by belying his promise, disobeying his command, and [avoiding] what he prohibits. For Satan promises false hopes, deludes with vanity, promises poverty, commands indecency, and prohibits piety, guidance, chastity, patience, and all the morals of faith. So he strives against him by belying his promise and disobeying his command. From these two Jihāds arise strength, authority, and equipment with which he strives against the enemies of Allāh externally, with his heart, tongue, hand, and wealth, so that the word of Allāh is supreme. The expressions of the Salaf regarding true Jihād differed. Ibn ‘Abbās said: "It is to exert one's full energy in it and not to fear the blame of any blamer in Allāh's cause." Muqātil said: "Work for Allāh a true work and worship Him a true worship." ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak said: "It is striving against the self and desires."

Once this is known, Jihād has four levels:

- Jihād against the self.
- Jihād against Satan.
- Jihād against the disbelievers.
- Jihād against the hypocrites.

As for Jihād against the self:

Jihād against the self also has four levels:

First, to strive against it to learn guidance and the religion of truth, without which there is no success or happiness for it in its worldly life or its afterlife. If it misses this knowledge, it will be wretched in both abodes.

Second, to strive against it to act upon this knowledge after acquiring it. Otherwise, mere knowledge without action, if it does not harm it, will not benefit it.

Third, to strive against it to call to this knowledge and teach it to those who do not know it. Otherwise, one would be among those who conceal what Allāh has revealed of guidance and clear proofs, and his knowledge will neither benefit him nor save him from Allāh's punishment.

Fourth, to strive against it to be patient with the hardships of calling to Allāh and the harm from people, and to endure all of that for Allāh's sake.

When one perfects these four levels, he becomes one of the Rabbāniyyīn (devout scholars). For the Salaf are unanimous that a scholar does not deserve to be called Rabbānī until he knows the truth, acts upon it, and teaches it. So whoever knows, acts, and teaches, he is called great in the kingdom of the heavens.

As for Jihād against Satan:

Jihād against Satan has two levels:

First, striving against him to repel the doubts and suspicions he casts upon the servant that undermine faith.

Second, striving against him to repel the corrupt desires and lusts he casts upon him.

The first Jihād results in certainty (yaqīn), and the second results in patience (ṣabr). Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And We made from among them leaders guiding by Our command when they were patient and [when] they were certain of Our signs.} (As-Sajdah:24). So He informed that leadership in religion is attained through patience and certainty. Patience repels lusts and corrupt desires, and certainty repels doubts and suspicions.

As for Jihād against the Disbelievers:

The punishments brought by the Sharī‘ah for those who disobey Allāh and His Messenger are of two types. The first is the punishment for one who is under control, whether an individual or a group, as mentioned before. The second is the punishment for a defiant group that cannot be subdued except by decisive fighting. This is the Jihād against the disbelievers, the enemies of Allāh and His Messenger. Everyone to whom the call of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) to the religion of Allāh with which He sent him has reached, and who has not responded to it, must be fought until there is no fitnah (persecution, turmoil) and the religion is entirely for Allāh. When Allāh sent His Prophet and commanded him to call creation to His religion, He did not permit him to kill anyone for that, nor to fight them, until he migrated to Medina. Then He permitted him and the Muslims, by His ta‘ālā saying: *{Permission [to fight] has been given to those who are being fought, because they were wronged. And indeed, Allāh is competent to give them victory. * Those who have been evicted from their homes without right - only because they say, "Our Lord is Allāh." And if Allāh had not checked some people by means of others, there would have been demolished monasteries, churches, synagogues, and mosques in which the name of Allāh is much mentioned. And Allāh will surely support those who support Him. Indeed, Allāh is Powerful and Exalted in Might. * [And they are] those who, if We give them authority in the land, establish prayer and give Zakāh and enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. And to Allāh belongs the outcome of [all] matters.}* (Al-Ḥajj:39-41). Then, after that, He made fighting obligatory upon them by His ta‘ālā saying: {Fighting has been enjoined upon you while it is hateful to you. But perhaps you hate a thing and it is good for you; and perhaps you love a thing and it is bad for you. And Allāh Knows, while you know not.} (Al-Baqarah:216). He emphasized the obligation and magnified the matter of Jihād in most of the Medinan sūrahs, and He condemned those who abandoned it, describing them with hypocrisy and diseased hearts. Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Say, [O Muḥammad], "If your fathers, your sons, your brothers, your wives, your relatives, wealth which you have obtained, commerce wherein you fear decline, and dwellings with which you are pleased are more beloved to you than Allāh and His Messenger and Jihād in His cause, then wait until Allāh executes His command. And Allāh does not guide the defiantly disobedient people."} (At-Tawbah:24).

Allāh ta‘ālā said: {The believers are only those who have believed in Allāh and His Messenger and then doubt not but strive with their properties and their lives in the cause of Allāh. It is those who are the truthful.} (Al-Ḥujurāt:15). Allāh ta‘ālā said: *{And those who believe say, "Why has a sūrah not been sent down?" But when a decisive sūrah is sent down and fighting is mentioned therein, you see those in whose hearts is a disease looking at you with a look of one overcome by death. So it is more appropriate for them. * Obedience and good words. And when the matter [of fighting] is determined, if they had been true to Allāh, it would have been better for them. * So would you perhaps, if you turned away, cause corruption on earth and sever your [ties of] kinship?}* (Muḥammad:20-22). This is frequent in the Qur’ān. Likewise, its magnification and the magnification of its people in Sūrat Aṣ-Ṣaff, in which He says: *{O you who have believed, shall I guide you to a transaction that will save you from a painful punishment? * [It is that] you believe in Allāh and His Messenger and strive in the cause of Allāh with your wealth and your lives. That is best for you, if you should know. * He will forgive for you your sins and admit you to gardens beneath which rivers flow and pleasant dwellings in gardens of perpetual residence. That is the great attainment. * And [you will obtain] another [favor] that you love - victory from Allāh* and an imminent conquest; and give good tidings to the believers.} (Aṣ-Ṣaff:10-13). And like His ta‘ālā saying: *{Have you made the providing of water for the pilgrim and the maintenance of al-Masjid al-Ḥarām equal to [the deeds of] one who believes in Allāh and the Last Day and strives in the cause of Allāh? They are not equal in the sight of Allāh. And Allāh does not guide the wrongdoing people. * Those who have believed and emigrated and striven in the cause of Allāh with their wealth and their lives are greater in rank in the sight of Allāh. And it is those who are the attainers [of success]. * Their Lord gives them good tidings of mercy from Him and approval} {and of gardens for them wherein is enduring pleasure. * Abiding therein forever. Indeed, Allāh has with Him a great reward.}* (At-Tawbah:19-22). And His ta‘ālā saying: {O you who have believed, whoever of you should revert from his religion - Allāh will bring forth [in place of them] a people He will love and who will love Him, [who are] humble toward the believers, powerful against the disbelievers; they strive in the cause of Allāh and do not fear the blame of a critic. That is the favor of Allāh; He bestows it upon whom He wills. And Allāh is all-Encompassing and Knowing.} (Al-Mā'idah:54). And Allāh ta‘ālā said: *{That is because they are not afflicted by thirst or fatigue or hunger in the cause of Allāh, nor do they tread on any ground that enrages the disbelievers, nor do they inflict upon an enemy any infliction but that is registered for them as a righteous deed. Indeed, Allāh does not allow to be lost the reward of the doers of good. * Nor do they spend an expenditure, small or large, nor do they cross a valley but that it is registered for them that Allāh may reward them for the best of what they were doing.}* (At-Tawbah:120-121).

He mentioned what their actions generate and the actions they undertake. The command for Jihād and the mention of its virtues in the Book and the Sunnah are too numerous to be counted. Therefore, it was the best voluntary act a person could perform, and it was, by the consensus of scholars, better than Ḥajj and ‘Umrah, and than voluntary prayer and voluntary fasting, as indicated by the Book and the Sunnah. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) even said: "The head of the matter is Islām, its pillar is prayer, and its topmost part is Jihād." He also said: "Indeed, in Paradise there are one hundred levels; the distance between one level and another is like the distance between the heaven and the earth, which Allāh has prepared for the mujāhidīn in His cause." (Agreed upon). He said: "Whoever's feet become dusty in the cause of Allāh, Allāh will forbid him to the Fire." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī). The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Guarding the frontier for a day and a night is better than fasting for a month and praying [its nights]. If he dies, his deeds which he used to do will continue to be recorded for him, his provision will continue, and he will be safe from the Fattan (tempter in the grave)." (Narrated by Muslim). In the Sunan: "Guarding the frontier for a day in the cause of Allāh is better than a thousand days spent in other places." The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Two eyes will not be touched by the Fire: an eye that wept from fear of Allāh, and an eye that spent the night guarding in the cause of Allāh." (At-Tirmidhī said: ḥadīth ḥasan). In the Musnad of Imām Aḥmad: "Guarding for one night in the cause of Allāh is better than a thousand nights, its nights spent in prayer and its days in fasting." In the Ṣaḥīḥayn: "A man said: O Messenger of Allāh, tell me of something that is equivalent to Jihād in the cause of Allāh. He said: You cannot do it. He said: Tell me. He said: Can you, when the mujāhid goes out, fast without breaking it and pray without resting? He said: No. He said: That is what is equivalent to Jihād." In the Sunan, he (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Every nation has its tourism (siyāḥah), and the tourism of my Ummah is Jihād in the cause of Allāh."

This is a vast subject; nothing has been narrated regarding the reward and virtue of actions like what has been narrated about it. This is evident upon consideration, for the benefit of Jihād is general, for its doer and for others, in religion and in worldly life. It encompasses all types of inward and outward acts of worship, for it includes love of Allāh ta'ālā, sincerity to Him, reliance upon Him, surrendering one's self and wealth to Him, patience, asceticism, remembrance of Allāh, and all other types of deeds, in a way that no other deed does. The one who undertakes it, whether an individual or the Ummah, is always between one of two good outcomes: either victory and triumph, or martyrdom and Paradise. Then, creation must inevitably live and die, so in Jihād, their life and death are utilized for their utmost happiness in this world and the Hereafter. In abandoning it, there is the loss of both happinesses or their diminishment. Some people desire strenuous deeds in religion or worldly life despite their little benefit. Jihād is more beneficial in both than any strenuous deed. One may desire to elevate himself until death meets him; the death of a martyr is easier than any other death, and it is the best of deaths. If the basis of legitimate fighting is Jihād, and its objective is that the religion be entirely for Allāh and that the word of Allāh be supreme, then whoever prevents this is fought by the consensus of Muslims. As for those who are not capable of resistance and fighting, such as women, children, monks, the elderly, the blind, the chronically ill, and the like, they are not killed according to the majority of scholars, unless they fight with their words or actions, although some of them permit the killing of everyone merely for disbelief, except for women and children, as they are property for the Muslims.

The most emphatic obligatory Jihād is against the disbelievers and those who refuse some aspects of the Sharī‘ah, such as those who withhold Zakāh, the Khawārij, and their like. It is obligatory both offensively and defensively. If it is offensive, it is a communal obligation (farḍ ‘alā al-kifāyah); if some undertake it, the obligation is lifted from the rest, and the merit belongs to those who undertook it, as Allāh ta‘ālā said: {Not equal are those believers who sit (at home) and receive no injurious harm.} (An-Nisā’:95).

However, if the enemy intends to attack the Muslims, then repelling them becomes an individual obligation (wājib ‘alā) on all those targeted, and on those not targeted to assist them, as Allāh ta‘ālā said: {And if they seek help of you for the religion, then you must help, except against a people between yourselves and whom is a treaty.} (Al-Anfāl:72). And as the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) commanded to help a Muslim. It does not matter whether the man is a paid soldier for fighting or not. This is obligatory according to ability on everyone, with his person and his wealth, whether few or many, walking or riding. As was the case with the Muslims when the enemy attacked them in the year of the Trench, Allāh did not permit anyone to abandon it. He permitted abandoning offensive Jihād to seek the enemy, in which He divided them into those who stayed behind and those who went out, but He condemned those who sought permission from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), {saying, "Indeed, our houses are exposed [i.e., unprotected]," while they were not exposed. They did not intend except to flee.} (Al-Aḥzāb:13). This is defense of religion, honor, and lives, and it is fighting out of necessity. That (offensive Jihād) is fighting of choice for the increase of religion, its elevation, and for intimidating the enemy.

As for Jihād against the Hypocrites:

Jihād against the hypocrites is only by conveying the proof; otherwise, they are under the subjugation of the people of Islām. Allāh ta‘ālā said: {O Prophet, strive against the disbelievers and the hypocrites and be harsh upon them. And their refuge is Hell, and wretched is the destination.} (At-Tawbah:73). Jihād against the hypocrites is more difficult than Jihād against the disbelievers. It is the Jihād of the elite of the Ummah and the heirs of the Messengers. Those who undertake it are few in the world, and those who participate in it and assist in it, though they are the fewest in number, are the greatest in rank before Allāh. Since one of the best forms of Jihād is speaking the truth despite severe opposition, such as speaking it in the presence of one whose power and harm you fear, the Messengers (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them) had the greatest share of that, and our Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) had the most complete and perfect Jihād in that regard.

Jihād against the disbelievers and hypocrites has four levels: with the heart, the tongue, wealth, and the self. Jihād against the disbelievers is more specific to the hand, and Jihād against the hypocrites is more specific to the tongue.

As for his (the Prophet's) conduct with the hypocrites, he was commanded to accept their outward declarations and entrust their secrets to Allāh, and to strive against them with knowledge and proof. He was commanded to turn away from them and be harsh upon them, and to convey the eloquent word to their souls. He was forbidden to pray over them or to stand at their graves, and he was informed that if he sought forgiveness for them, Allāh would not forgive them. This was his conduct with his enemies, the disbelievers and the hypocrites. End quote.

Excerpts from the legacy of Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām on Education and its Fields

We conclude this chapter (the topic of education and its fields) with words on education from a man who lived the experience of Jihādī education himself as a learner, teacher, educator, and mujāhid, until he met his Lord as a martyr on that path. May Allāh have mercy on him and accept him among the righteous. We excerpt some summaries from his great heritage, from the martyred mujāhid Shaykh, Abū Muḥammad ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, may Allāh have mercy on him:

Characteristics of the Solid Mujāhid Base:

To reach a Muslim society, vanguards are needed to bear the costs of the path. These vanguards must realize that those who step forward to save humanity are not ordinary people, but rather examples who deem everything cheap for the sake of their call. They must possess qualities, at the forefront of which are:

1. To be Lordly (Rabbāniyyīn):

{rather, be Rabbaniyyin (learned men of religion who practice what they know and also preach others), because you are teaching the Scripture and because you are studying it.} (Āl ‘Imrān:79). The Rabbānī is the knowledgeable doer. Sa‘īd ibn Jubayr said: "Rabbāniyyīn: i.e., wise and pious." Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafīyyah said on the day Ibn ‘Abbās died: "Today, the Rabbānī of this Ummah has died." {And how many a prophet [fought and] with him fought many Ribbiyyūn (religious scholars and worshippers). But they never lost heart for what afflicted them in the cause of Allāh, nor did they weaken or submit. And Allāh loves the steadfast.} (Āl ‘Imrān:146). The Ribbī, as al-Ḥasan al-Baṣrī said: "The patient scholars. And the Ribbī is the Rabbānī because he recognized the Lordship of Allāh, worshipped Him, and was patient in what befell him."

He must be Rabbānī in terms of his movement, his call, his demeanor, his patience, his knowledge, and his action. Meaning, it should not be absent from his mind for a moment that Allāh is capable of all things, that He is the source of honor, and that He is his sufficiency and protector, who guards and watches over him. *{Is not Allāh sufficient for His Servant [Prophet Muḥammad]? And [yet], they try to frighten you with those [they worship] besides Him. And whomsoever Allāh sends astray, for him there is no guide. * And whomsoever Allāh guides, for him there is no misleader. Is not Allāh Exalted in Might, Possessor of Retribution? * And if you asked them, "Who created the heavens and the earth?" they would surely say, "Allāh." Say, "Then have you considered what you invoke besides Allāh? If Allāh intended me harm, are they removers of His harm; or if He intended me mercy, are they withholders of His mercy?" Say, "Sufficient for me is Allāh; upon Him [alone] rely the [wise] reliers.}* (Az-Zumar:36-38).

{And if Allāh should touch you with adversity, there is no remover of it except Him. And if He should touch you with good - then He is over all things competent.} (Al-An‘ām:17).

The caller must keep in mind that Allāh is capable of all things, and then declare to the ignorant masses: *{Say, [O Muḥammad], "Call upon your 'partners' and then conspire against me and give me no respite. * Indeed, my protector is Allāh, who has sent down the Book; and He is an ally to the righteous.}"}* (Al-A‘rāf:195-196).

One must derive his help, his honor, and his inspiration from Allāh. Whoever steps forward to save people must be stronger than them through Allāh. Whoever steps forward to purify people must be purer than them. And whoever steps forward to elevate people must be higher than them.

2. Detachment in Da‘wah from Worldly Benefits and their Immediate, Close Fruits:

For all the Prophets came saying: {And I do not ask you for it any payment. My payment is only from the Lord of the worlds.} (Ash-Shu‘arā’:145). This verse was repeated many times on the tongues of the Messengers (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them) in Sūrat Ash-Shu‘arā’.

Therefore, when the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) presented Islām to Banū ‘Āmir ibn Ṣa‘ṣa‘ah, Buḥayrah ibn Firās, one of its men, said to him: "Tell me, if we pledge allegiance to you in your affair, and then Allāh gives you victory over those who oppose you, will the authority be ours after you?" The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Authority belongs to Allāh; He places it where He wills." So they refused him.

The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) did not know that he would be victorious, or that this religion would be made manifest by Allāh in his lifetime and at his hands. Rather, his Lord addressed him saying: *{So, whether We take you away [in death], indeed, We will take retribution upon them. * Or We show you that which We have promised them, indeed, We are over them competent.}* (Az-Zukhruf:41-42).

But the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) believed that this religion would triumph, and he would not promise or take a pledge from any Muslim except for Paradise. He said this to the persecuted and tormented: "Patience, O family of Yāsir, for your appointment is Paradise."

And he (peace and blessings be upon him) said on the day of the Second Pledge of al-‘Aqabah to the Anṣār: "I take your pledge that you will protect me as you protect your women and children." They said: "Then what is for us, O Messenger of Allāh, if we fulfill [this]?" He said: "Paradise." So the pledge and the transaction are with Allāh for Paradise, and the pledge in this world is for working towards Paradise.

{Indeed, Allāh has purchased from the believers their lives and their properties [in exchange] for that they will have Paradise. They fight in the cause of Allāh, so they kill and are killed. [It is] a true promise [binding] upon Him in the Torah and the Gospel and the Qur’ān. And who is truer to his covenant than Allāh? So rejoice in your transaction which you have contracted. And it is that which is the great attainment.}
(At-Tawbah:111).

3. Building the Solid Base:

Attention must be paid to cultivating exemplary individuals, not to increasing numbers, because people are only changed by the actions of exemplary individuals and unique figures.

We must focus on quality, not quantity. A patient and truthful group, even if small, will be victorious by Allāh’s permission. {How many a small company has overcome a large company by permission of Allāh. And Allāh is with the patient.} (Al-Baqarah:249).

This solid base is what restored the entire Arabian Peninsula to Islām during the days of the Apostasy (Ridda), because among its examples was Abū Bakr, who cried out when they informed him of the tribes' apostasy: "By Allāh, if they withheld from me a young female goat – a kid – that they used to give to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), I would fight them for it or perish in the attempt." Then he said: "Will the religion diminish while I am alive?" In another narration: "If they withheld from me a ‘iqāl – the rope used to tie a camel."

Abū Bakr insisted on dispatching Usāmah's army, and he replied to those who tried to persuade him to delay it, saying: "By Him besides Whom there is no other god, if dogs were to drag the feet of the wives of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), I would not recall an army dispatched by the Messenger of Allāh." In another narration: "If I thought that wild beasts would snatch me away, I would still dispatch Usāmah's mission." In this decisive moment after the death of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), Allāh provided a resolute man – Abū Bakr – to save an entire nation from extinction and ruin with his stance.

It is necessary to cultivate solid exemplary individuals who are resistant to temptation and do not accept being bought or sold by enemies or friends. It is necessary to cultivate unique individuals who do not accept dissolution in the acids of the Jāhilī (ignorant) society, nor do they become effeminate in its imbalanced conditions; solid elements that carry the society and the call on their shoulders. We want solid branches that do not bend with the winds of society, nor do they sway with its desires.

The Islamic army's crossing of the Tigris River during the conquest of Iraq and Persia while it was flooding was one of the issues that astonished historians and puzzled them in its interpretation: the army crossing the Tigris without losing a single individual from its numbers. But the more amazing issue is that this army waded through the seas of the two greatest civilizations – the Romans and the Persians – without losing anything of its character or its religion.

Salmān al-Fārisī sat on Kisrā's throne after Allāh had humiliated him and toppled his throne. Kisrā used to weep and say: "I have only a thousand cooks left, how can I live with only this number?" Meanwhile, Salmān – the Muslim emir of Persia – spent only one dirham each day.

4. The Callers Building Themselves with True Knowledge and Sincere Worship:

The caller must connect himself, or his shaykh must connect him, to the Noble Qur'ān through recitation, proper articulation (tajwīd), interpretation (tafsīr), and knowledge of its rulings. The Muslim must build himself within the corridors of mosques, where there is tranquility, mercy, angels, and spiritual retreat (i'tikāf).

He should choose good companionship that guides him to Allāh. And you, my brother, should strive to connect with those whose state guides you to Allāh, and whose speech reminds you of the Hereafter. Do not forget the night prayer (qiyām al-layl), for it has a profound effect on building the Muslim personality and purifying the soul. Night prayer was the practice of the righteous, as was voluntary fasting, especially on Mondays and Thursdays.

There must be constant remembrance (dhikr) to revive the heart, protect it from Satan and his whispers, and fortify the soul against overwhelming desires and inclinations.

Likewise, accustoming the soul to gratitude in times of ease, patience in times of affliction, seeking forgiveness for sins and mistakes, and training the soul to be patient with the hardships of the path, the sacrifices of the creed, and the difficulties of the journey.

Time must be utilized for beneficial reading, or worship and work. It is not permissible for us to kill our lives with empty gatherings and nights devoid of benefit.

You must ensure the development of a correct perception of ourselves through the Book of Allāh, the Sīrah of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), and the lives of the righteous predecessors. End quote. (Al-Dhakhā'ir, vol. 1, p. 773).

The Effect of Sins on the Muslim:

Whoever finds Allāh, finds everything; and whoever loses Allāh, loses everything. Whoever knows Allāh tastes the happiness of both abodes, and whoever forgets Allāh, He makes him forget himself. {And be not like those who forgot Allāh, so He made them forget themselves. Those are the defiantly disobedient.} (Al-Ḥashr:19).

The Ninth Truth: The Law of Sins and Calamities – People’s calamities are of two types: calamities of the Prophets – and they are infallible from sins – to raise their ranks, and calamities of non-Prophets – those who are not infallible – to expiate their evil deeds and then raise their ranks.

The law states: Sins lead to calamities.

Calamities + Patience = Forgiveness of sins.

This law is inscribed in the Book of the Lord of the Worlds: {And whatever strikes you of disaster - it is for what your hands have earned; but He pardons much.} (Ash-Shūrā:30).

This law was summarized by our master ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him) in his saying: "No calamity descends except due to a sin, and no calamity is lifted except by repentance."

Al-Ḥasan said: It has reached us that no one is scratched by a stick, nor stumbles, nor has a vein throb except due to a sin, and what Allāh pardons is more. Al-Qurṭubī said: Al-Ḥasan said: When this verse was revealed, the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said... and he mentioned the ḥadīth.

In the authentic ḥadīth: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, no fatigue, nor illness, nor anxiety, nor sorrow befalls a believer, but Allāh expiates some of his sins thereby, even the thorn that pricks him."

In the two Ṣaḥīḥs, from Abū Sa‘īd and Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with them both), from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): "No Muslim is afflicted with fatigue, nor illness, nor anxiety, nor sorrow, nor harm, nor grief, even the thorn that pricks him, but Allāh expiates some of his sins thereby."

Ibn Khayrah – one of the companions of ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with him) – said: "Part of [the consequence of] sin is: weakness in worship, hardship in livelihood, and difficulty in pleasure." It was asked: "In pleasure?" He said: "He does not encounter a lawful pleasure but someone comes to spoil it for him."

Mālik ibn Dīnār says: "If you see hardness in your heart, weakness in your body, and deprivation in your sustenance, know that you have spoken about what does not concern you."

This law encompasses all aspects of life: physical and psychological illnesses, straitened sustenance, hardship in living, intensity in life, withholding of rain, desolation on earth, and drought in crops – all of this is due to sins.

It is mentioned in the authentic ḥadīth narrated by Ibn Mājah and al-Ḥākim from Ibn ‘Umar, traced back to the Prophet (marfū‘): *"I was the tenth of ten Muhājirīn with the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him). The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) turned his face towards us and said: O company of Muhājirīn, there are five traits, I seek refuge in Allāh that you should witness them:

1. Immorality never appears among a people to the extent that they commit it openly, but they will be afflicted with plagues and diseases that were not known among their predecessors who passed away.
2. A people never reduce [their measures in] the bushel, but they will be afflicted with years [of drought], severity of provisions, and the tyranny of the ruler.
3. A people never withhold the Zakāh of their wealth, but rain will be withheld from the sky; were it not for the animals, they would not receive rain.

4. A people never break a covenant, but Allāh will set an enemy against them from other than themselves, who will take some of what is in their hands.
5. Their leaders never fail to rule according to what Allāh has revealed in His Book, but He will make their violence among themselves severe."*

Aḍ-Ḍaḥḥāk said: No man learns the Qur'ān and then forgets it except due to a sin.

Murrah al-Hamadānī said: I saw a sore on the back of Shurayḥ's hand, so I said: O Abā Umayyah, what is this? He said: This is for what your hands have earned, and He pardons much.

Ibn 'Awn said: "When Muḥammad ibn Sīrīn was overcome by debt, he became grieved because of it. He said: I do not know [the cause of] this grief; this is due to a sin I committed forty years ago."

'Ikrimah said: No calamity afflicts a servant, great or small, except due to a sin for which Allāh would not have forgiven him except through it, or to attain a rank he would not have reached except through it.

This statement of 'Ikrimah is the essence of the law of calamities: they are either due to a sin, so the calamity comes to expiate it, or because Allāh loves the person and wants to raise his rank with Him, so He afflicts him with calamity. However, this also happens to the righteous whom Allāh wants to elevate in rank, due to their sins and lapses.

The Companions (may Allāh be pleased with them) understood this law, so you see them interpreting events through it. Al-Ḥasan said: We visited 'Imrān ibn al-Ḥuşayn, and a man said: I must ask you about the pain I see in you. 'Imrān said: My brother, do not do that. By Allāh, I love the pain, and whoever loves it is among the most beloved people to Allāh. Allāh ta'ālā said: {And whatever strikes you of disaster - it is for what your hands have earned; but He pardons much.} (Ash-Shūrā:30). So this is for what my hands have earned, and my Lord's pardon for what remains is greater.

Aḥmad ibn Abī al-Ḥawārī said to Abū Sulaymān ad-Dārānī: Why do wise people remove blame from those who wrong them? He said: Because they know that Allāh ta‘ālā only afflicted them due to their sins.

This law (sins are the cause of calamities) is mentioned in many verses and Ḥadīth, and on the tongues of the noble Companions and the righteous Salaf, as we have cited glimpses from their light previously. In the Noble Book: {Corruption has appeared throughout the land and sea by [reason of] what the hands of people have earned so He may let them taste part of [the consequence of] what they have done that perhaps they will return [to righteousness].} (Ar-Rūm:41).

You perceive through the noble composition the vast mercy of Allāh, in that the corruption was a punishment for some of the people's sins. But if Allāh were to hold the creatures accountable for all their sins, He would not leave upon its surface any creature. {And if Allāh were to impose blame on the people for their wrongdoing, He would not have left upon it [the earth] any creature. But He defers them for a specified term. And when their term has come, they will not remain behind an hour, nor will they precede [it].} (An-Naḥl:61).

Imām Aḥmad narrated from ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb: "Villages are on the verge of ruin while they are prosperous? He said: When their wicked ones rise above their righteous ones, and the tribe is led by its foolish ones."

Imām Aḥmad narrated from Ṣafiyyah who said: Medina was shaken by an earthquake during ‘Umar’s time. He said: O people, what is this? How quickly you have innovated! If it returns, you will not find me in it. So ‘Umar interpreted the cause of the earthquake as the sins that had been newly committed in Medina.

One might say: The cause of an earthquake is a geological matter of the earth, from contractions in the earth’s crust or otherwise. We believe in this apparent cause with him, but what is the real cause that resulted in Allāh commanding the earthquake? It is sins, and sins only.

Imām Aḥmad narrated with his chain from ‘Umar that he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) say: "When people become miserly with the dīnār and the dirham, and they engage in ʿīnah transactions (a type of transaction involving subterfuge to earn interest), and they follow the tails of cattle (i.e., become engrossed in agriculture at the expense of other duties), and they abandon Jihād in the way of Allāh, Allāh will send down a calamity upon them, and He will not lift it until they return to their religion." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd with an authentic chain of narration).

Ibn al-Qayyim said: Indeed, the calamities resulting from sins encompass animals, insects, and beetles in their holes. Allāh ʿazza wa jall says: {Indeed, those who conceal what We sent down of clear proofs and guidance after We made it clear for the people in the Scripture - those are cursed by Allāh and cursed by those who curse.} (Al-Baqarah:159-160).

The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Those who curse: the creatures of the earth." (Narrated by Ibn Mājah with a ḥasan isnād).

Mujāhid and ‘Ikrimah said: They are the insects and animals that are afflicted by drought due to the sins of evil scholars who conceal knowledge, so they (the creatures) curse them.

Ibn Mas‘ūd said: The beetle is almost punished in its hole due to the sin of the son of Adam.

Abū Hurayrah said: By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, the houbara bustard dies... in its nest due to the oppression of the oppressor.

‘Ikrimah said: The creatures of the earth and its vermin, even dung beetles and scorpions, say: We are denied rain due to the sins of the children of Adam.

Indeed, the destruction of previous nations, the ruin of their civilizations, the devastation of their produce, and the crushing of their children were due to deviation from Allāh's path and their denial of Him. {And We had already destroyed generations before you when they wronged} (Yūnus:13). {But those who do not believe in the Hereafter are in punishment and distant error.} (Saba':8).

Those whose insights were blinded, who denied their natural disposition (fiṭrah), and denied their Hereafter, are in continuous torment, perpetual misery, ongoing wandering, and settled Hellfire in this world and in the Hereafter. Otherwise, tell me, by your Lord, what drowned the earth with its living beings, its trees, and its people in the time of Noah (peace be upon him) except turning away from Allāh's path?

What destroyed 'Ād of Iram, with lofty pillars, making it like uprooted palm trunks, except distancing from Allāh's religion? What sent the shriek upon Thamūd, so they became like the dry stubble of an enclosure-builder, except turning away from Allāh's path? Is this sufficient for you? Or must you pass by the ruins of Madyan, and the ruins of the Companions of the Wood (Aṣḥāb al-Aykah) to realize that the consequence of turning away from Allāh's religion is dire, and its end is perilous? We will see in detail through the coming pages how sins cause straitened sustenance, defeat in battle, and forgetfulness of knowledge.

Regarding sustenance: "Indeed, a man is deprived of sustenance by a sin he commits." (Narrated by Aḥmad). The wording of Ibn Mājah from Thawbān is: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Nothing increases lifespan except righteousness, and nothing repels fate except supplication, and indeed, a man is deprived of sustenance by a sin he commits." (Az-Zawā'id states its chain of narration is ḥasan).

It is mentioned in the ḥadīth narrated by al-Ḥākim, who said its chain of narration is authentic, from Abū Hurayrah, from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): "A prophet from among the prophets went out to pray for rain, and he saw an ant raising its legs to the sky. He said: Go back, for your supplication has been answered because of the ant." In some of its narrations: "O Allāh, we are a creation from Your creation, so do not hold us accountable for [the sins of] the children of Adam."

As for defeat in battle, the saying of Allāh ta‘ālā: {Indeed, those of you who turned back on the day the two armies met [at Uhud], it was Satan who caused them to slip because of some [blame] they had earned. But Allāh has already forgiven them. Indeed, Allāh is Forgiving and Forbearing.} (Āl ‘Imrān:155). So, defeat in battle was a result of some sins. As for knowledge, it is narrated from Ibn Mas‘ūd, traced back to the Prophet (marfū‘): "Indeed, a man commits a sin and is thereby deprived of something of sustenance, and indeed, he commits a sin and thereby forgets a chapter of knowledge he had learned, and indeed, he commits a sin and is thereby prevented from qiyām al-layl (night prayer)."

We will see all this in detail as we knock on the doors of human happiness one by one, and we realize the impact of obedience to Allāh on happiness, and the result of sins being the occurrence of calamities, tribulations, misery, and ruin. The truth is that this principle is the sum of the entire matter in this religion; indeed, the essence of Allāh's religion is this principle. Therefore, man cannot give it its due right, even if he is among the great scholars and their masters, so how can a small, ignorant servant like myself do so? And if we give examples, they are merely to clarify the principle, not to be exhaustive, for the examples are many from Qur’ānic evidence and prophetic Ḥadīth. Let us see some examples that bear witness to this great principle. This passage is cited from al-Dhakhā’ir, volume 1, pages 779-785.

Sheikh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, may Allāh have mercy on him, wrote in a letter to one of his friends:

"Set aside the internal and external circumstances our brothers are going through, and their preoccupation with matters; there are many things greater than these, more exalted in mention, and more cherished in status. As for the zeal of the brothers, I hope to Allāh that it serves as a bridge between the believers, and that sanctities are preserved, honors protected, and dignities maintained.

My own person is of no concern to me, nor are the hardships I encounter for the sake of Allāh and in seeking His pleasure, as I strive to restore the absent obligation to the lives of Muslims and to ensure that the interpretations of the texts on combat are not perverted, nor reduced to pre-programmed phrases and neatly arranged sentences, penned by someone with an idle mind, lounging on a sofa in air-conditioned comfort. We want Jihād to return to the lives of Muslims. We want to breathe as we wish. We want our hearts not to have their beats counted, and our mouths to speak as they wish and when they wish, not to live with muzzled mouths, tied hands, and shackled feet. Working for Islām has become a fiery sermon, an elegantly bound book, or someone sitting behind a desk contemplating how Islām should be, while people view Islām from their ivory towers, moving in a vacuum, working in a vacuum, and producing nothing but a vacuum. There must be a group of Muslims to spearhead the process of transferring Islām from paper to the ground, and we ask Allāh that we be among them. There must be a vanguard that sacrifices all it possesses and lives for, for the cause of fighting—not Jihād with the pen and tongue. There must be an elite that bears the costs of reviving Jihād in people's reality after it has become a forgotten matter. Thus, we have taken our stand here, seizing the most precious opportunity of our lives, attempting to unite Muslims upon this profound understanding. We have stood, striving to fulfill the covenant established between us and the Lord of the Worlds: {Indeed, Allāh has purchased from the believers their lives and their properties [in exchange] for that they will have Paradise. They fight in the cause of Allāh, so they kill and are killed. [It is] a true promise [binding] upon Him in the Torah and the Gospel and the Qur'ān. And who is truer to his covenant than Allāh? So rejoice in your transaction which you have contracted. And it is that which is the great attainment.} (Al-Tawbah: 111)." This concludes the letter from Sheikh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, as cited in al-Dhakhā’ir, volume 1, page 793.

At the end of this chapter on the theory of integrated education, I return to say:

Indeed, Jihād today is an individual obligation upon every Muslim. Yes, this is what we say and to this we call. However, our mission as advocates of Jihād and resistance does not end here; rather, it begins here. We must educate those who have answered the call to Jihād and provide them with the means for integrated education.

Through what Allāh has blessed me with, by way of engaging with Jihādī experiences and accompanying numerous mujāhidīn across various causes and arenas, I have observed a significant disparity, a vast difference, between a mujāhid who has received a portion of education and one who has missed out on this benefit. I saw a huge disparity between a mujāhid who understood his combat doctrine, knowing who he is and what he wants, and another brought by emotion and enthusiasm. I observed a clear distinction between a mujāhid who has received a share of behavioral and moral education, and whom Allāh has blessed with a portion of worship and devotion, and others who were deprived of that. The same can be said for the difference between a mujāhid who comprehends the events unfolding around him and another who is oblivious to the workings of the world. Similarly, in combat and on the battlefield, a vast distinction emerged between a mujāhid who had undergone preparation and patiently persevered through training and garrison duty, and others who, driven by an eagerness for combat, bypassed this stage and rushed to the field, only to prove less effective and impactful when the battle commenced.

These distinctions, particularly in behavior and ethics, became manifest when adversities and trials beset us, and we entered a phase of hardship and pursuit. The true character of men was then revealed: sincerity, steadfastness, courage, generosity, altruism, dedication, sacrifice, the ethics of brotherhood, and the qualities of the truthful, sincere, and capable individuals upon whom Allāh had bestowed His grace, all came to the fore.

The opposites of these also appeared, such as the pettiness of souls and the slipping caused by Satan, even among some mujāhidīn, and indeed, some of their veterans. We ask Allāh for well-being and protection in this world and the Hereafter.

The reality is that any deficiency in the domain of education can be compensated for with the assistance of fellow mujāhidīn companions, with the exception of a weak creed, a lack of devotion, poor character, and a deficiency in chivalry.

Indeed, a weak creed engenders faintheartedness and potentially leads to apostasy. Similarly, a deficiency in devotion and worship breeds harshness and alienation. Poor character and inadequate upbringing are not easily rectified and bring hardship upon the individual, as well as tribulation upon those who are tested by his companionship.

Devotion, abundant supererogatory acts of worship, and consistent servitude instill the companionship and love of Allāh, reflecting upon the individual as gentleness and light. As for excellent character, it encompasses the good of both this world and the Hereafter. This alone is sufficient for its possessor to attain the highest stations of Paradise through Allāh's mercy. We ask Allāh for His immense grace.

Let no one claim that the program for various types of education I have indicated is too extensive or requires a prolonged period. This is because such development naturally accompanies an individual throughout a normal life, cultivated through the habit of reading, commitment to mosques, and attending lessons of knowledge. However, in situations of full dedication to Jihād and garrisoning in camps and on the front lines, the potential for achievement is immense, provided there is leadership that gives the matter of education the attention it merits. This is because the individuals arrive with a mindset prepared for learning and are dedicated to the cause of Allāh around the clock.

We experienced years during our commitment to Jihād in Syria where hundreds of mujāhidīn were fully dedicated yet received only limited education. Most of their time was squandered, and only those who were diligent in developing themselves and managing their time benefited. Similarly, in both phases of the Afghan Jihād, much time was wasted for the majority of people. Some, however, benefited through the efforts of certain organizations or through personal initiative, achieving commendable results.

Therefore, whoever intends to engage in Jihād must prioritize this matter for himself and for those with him. Time is a blessing from Allāh for which the servant will be questioned, and the period of youth, in particular, is a blessing from Allāh for which he will be questioned. The same applies to every blessing.

The Military Theory of the Global Islamic Resistance Call

This chapter, in its entirety, is the heart of this book. The entire book was written for its sake, and all introductions and chapters were arranged to lead up to it. It is the essence and summary of our idea.

This was the initial concept for the Resistance Call that I first articulated in the inaugural statement in late 1990 and published in early 1991. For the sake of its core, I returned to Afghanistan during the Ṭālibān era and made a desperate attempt to transform it into a living project active on the ground. However, Allāh decreed, and events overtook us, diverting us to our current situation, yet our hope in Allāh remains immense.

As is our method, the formulation of our military theory emerged from studying our own experiences within the Jihādī current, through firsthand suffering and engagement with its various stages, in accordance with the methodology of practical theory that I have defined.

Theories such as these are successfully formulated, by the grace of Allāh Almighty, only by those actively involved. They are written for the field, and the particulars of their ideas are assembled in the field, during moments of reflection in the rest periods of the mujāhidīn warriors. We ask Allāh to make us among them.

I draw attention to an important matter:

Most of what I will mention here is specific movement-related and military independent reasoning (ijtihād), based on personal experiences, study, comparison, and dialogue with experienced leaders and cadres of the mujāhidīn. Most of these topics are not matters of creed or rulings of lawful and unlawful, but rather opinions built upon lessons from experience in issues of judgment, war, and stratagem.

I laid the initial seed and the core of the idea in the summer of 1991, as the omens of Desert Storm and its fierce winds were bearing down on us in Afghanistan. I then developed it further amidst the upheavals and tribulations of the latest Jihādī experiences in Algeria. Subsequently, I refined it in the garrison camps and on the front lines in the Islamic Emirate in Afghanistan and attempted to implement it in cooperation with the Islamic Emirate. Then came September, after which I dedicated myself entirely to formulating it in its final form, as the unjust pursuits forced us into a state akin to imprisonment and house arrest. One of the benefits of this was the opportunity to dedicate time to following events, thinking, reviewing, and writing. Approximately three years have passed since the fall of Afghanistan until now, during which historic transformations have occurred, wherein events have altered the face of civilization and the course of history. American campaigns, with their new military methods and comprehensive onslaughts in every sphere, were launched, confirming to me the validity of these ideas – and Allāh knows best – increasing my conviction in them and helping me to develop and adapt them to suit the new reality. The material balance of power between us and our enemies was disrupted, then tipped in their favor, and then collapsed.

Materially and militarily, there are no balances or comparisons between us and them. If we decide on confrontation and consider it a religious obligation – as it truly is – I find no escape or alternative but to consider the only possible method, from the perspective of a theory for comprehensive confrontation, to be ideas such as those I will detail in this chapter, by Allāh’s permission. I ask Him for victory, facilitation, inspiration of truth, goodness, guidance, and sincerity, first and last, and that He crown His generosity with acceptance. Indeed, He is All-Hearing, All-Responsive.

A Review of Jihād Methods and Approaches in the Trajectory of the Jihādī Current (1963 - 2001)

As I elaborated in the sixth and seventh chapters of the first part, Jihād began in the early sixties of the last century, and experiences continued until September 2001, when a new world began.

An observer of those experiences can classify Jihādī endeavors, in terms of confrontation style, into three Jihādī methods, under which all Jihād undertaken during that period falls.

The results of their performance were as follows:

The method of movement-based organizations (regional, clandestine, hierarchical). The method of open fronts and overt confrontations. The method of individual Jihād and small-cell terrorism.

The method of movement-based organizations (regional, clandestine, hierarchical)

These are akin to the Jihādī experiences and organizations I mentioned earlier. They adopted Jihādī ideology and movement-based action within a regional scope, according to a clandestine system and a hierarchical network structure. The primary objective was to overthrow existing governments and regimes and establish an Islamic system through armed Jihād.

The summary of the results was:

1. Military failure and battlefield defeat.
2. Security failure and the dismantling of organizations.
3. Da’wah failure and inability to mobilize the Ummah.
4. Educational failure due to secrecy.
5. Political failure in not achieving the objective.

Net Result: Complete failure on all fronts.

The method of open fronts and overt confrontations

This pertains to experiences that occurred in open confrontation arenas, the most famous of which are the recent experiences in Afghanistan, Bosnia, and Chechnya. These confrontations adopted a method of engagement through fixed bases and semi-conventional guerrilla warfare. The summary of the results was:

1. Overwhelming military success.
2. Security success that hindered the role of intelligence agencies.
3. Proselytization success that led to mobilizing the Ummah behind those causes.
4. Relative educational success in camps and on fronts.
5. Political failure, except in Afghanistan where the Islamic state was established.

Net Result: General success, and complete success in Afghanistan.

The method of individual Jihād and small-cell terrorism

This includes individual operations carried out by individuals or small groups. Examples of such operations include:

- Sayyid Nosair the Egyptian and his killing of the prominent Zionist Kahane.
- Ramzi Yousef al-Balushi and the first attempt to destroy the New York World Trade Center.
- The Jordanian Daqamseh who killed Zionists on the border.
- The Egyptian Salman Khater who killed Israeli border guards.
- Individual operations during the Gulf War, and the list goes on.

The summary:

1. Military success that shook the enemy's entity.

2. Security success because these actions do not lead to thwarting the generation of more cells.
3. Proselytization success that mobilized the Ummah.
4. Educational failure due to the absence of a program.
5. Political failure due to the absence of a program to transform it into a phenomenon.

Net Result: Success in confusing the enemy and galvanizing the Ummah.

If we come to discuss these three methods in search of the best method for confrontation today, we find the following:

Firstly: The Method of Jihādī Organizations (Regional - Clandestine - Hierarchical)

As I summarized in the preceding table, this method has resulted in complete failure in all aspects. I do not say this about this method as an external critic. Rather, I was (and to Allāh is the credit, and I ask Him for sincerity and acceptance) one of its leading figures, advocates, and movement theorists.

However, I view methods as means, not as idols. What proved its utility, we adopted; what time has rendered obsolete, we moved beyond, lest time render us obsolete along with it.

It is true that I mentioned in the historical account that the events of September eradicated the remnants of the Jihādī current's organizations – especially the Arab ones – and the repercussions of those events destroyed what remained of those organizations collectively, and most of their members were eliminated through killing and imprisonment. However, this is not the reason for the demise of this method. This method had practically ended ten years prior, since the advent of the New World Order in 1990.

Over the last decade of the past century, counter-terrorism programs managed to dismantle these organizations from a security perspective, defeat them militarily, isolate them from their popular base, tarnish their reputation, dry up their financial sources, and displace their members, plunging them into a vortex of fear, hunger, and loss of wealth and lives. This was a reality I knew, as did others like me among the veteran Jihādīs.

Gradually, those organizations faded away and dissolved. The remnants of their survivors became fugitives in the East and West, hunted along with their families and children, and the members of their organizations. They fled with their religion and ideas, hiding here and there, barely able to produce anything.

The regime of the perished Pharaoh, Hassan II, crushed the early Jihādī attempt by the Moroccan Youth organization against him in Morocco in its infancy in the early sixties.

This is what Chadli Bendjedid's regime did in Algeria in the mid-seventies with the Islamic State Movement organization, and without much effort.

The security apparatus of the tyrannical Ba'thist Nusayrī regime in Syria managed to eliminate the organization of The Fighting Vanguard of the Muslim Brotherhood after an armed uprising that lasted for about a decade, ten years before the New World Order and twenty years before September. It was utterly eradicated.

The criminal Pharaonic regime in Egypt, led by Hosni – may Allāh not bless him or his ilk – managed to eliminate all Jihād organizations in Egypt, one after another. The last among them were the Jihād Organization and the Islamic Group, which were eliminated in the mid-nineties. Egyptian intelligence dismantled their cells, and the government imprisoned most of their human components, years before the events of September.

The same can be said for what happened in Libya; Qaddafi's regime crushed the two main attempts in the mid-eighties and mid-nineties.

This recurred whenever Jihādī organizations clashed in every Arab and Islāmic country, even with the weakest security and intelligence regimes in Arab and Islāmic lands! I mention this briefly here, as a detailed account was provided in Chapters 6 and 7 of the first part of this book. This continued until the major liquidation and the overwhelming success of the Arab security system in Algeria recently (1991-1997), despite the abundant factors for success available to that endeavor. Then, the last Jihādī pulses of organizations in Yemen and Lebanon faded away at the end of the last century.

The local security system in our countries was able to eliminate those attempts, due to Arab and regional coordination. They achieved their results when that coordination reached the international level. Thus, as I detailed earlier, the summary of the outcome of that method of ours was:

(1) Our organizations were militarily defeated in every confrontation. Yes, we achieved victories in many battles, but we lost the war, in all experiences and confrontations. I am not here to argue with those who wish to be obstinate. Reality is the greatest witness.

(2) Our organizations were defeated from a security perspective; their cells were exposed, dismantled, and attempts to build them were aborted. The security system advanced to the level of preemptive strikes against attempts before their establishment or in their infancy.

(3) In those experiences, we recorded a dismal failure on the proselytization level. Jihādī organizations were unable to expand among the masses or become popular, despite the truth they carried. The number of their members did not exceed hundreds, perhaps even tens, in countries with populations in the millions.

(4) Jihādī organizations also failed in terms of educating their members, preparing them, and qualifying them for confrontation intellectually, ideologically, methodologically, in terms of security, politically, and militarily, except in limited cases, especially after confrontations began. This was because none of those organizations could complete their preparation and building programs under the slogan "Building Through Battle," as secrecy and security conditions prevented it. Thus, cadres and elements formed through long-term education were consumed, leading to a prevailing low educational level in subsequent ranks. This occurred in most experiences.

(5) Ultimately, as a result of the comprehensive failure in the details, a comprehensive failure manifested in the inability to achieve the objectives of the general project.

Now, let us draw attention, through this summary, to the fate of these methods in light of our current reality after the launch of the New World Order, especially after September and the counter-terrorism campaigns:

If our failure using the method of (regional, clandestine, hierarchical organizations) in confronting local security regimes over the past decades was total, how then can we face the security apparatus of the New World Order and the launch of the global war on terrorism with all its security, military, intellectual, political, and economic means?! It is no longer possible. Indeed, insisting on this method, given these contemporary realities, is, in my opinion, a form of suicide and an insistence on failure, reaching the level of the crime of deluding simple Muslim youth enthusiastic for Jihād. It means bearing the responsibility for leading them to perdition down paths proven to be failures, a discovery for which we paid with pure blood.

The defect was not in the method of organizations nor in organizations in general. Rather, it was the transformations of time and the realities of the new situation after 1990 that rendered those methods obsolete. I gave an example of this in some lectures in Afghanistan to clarify the point, and I repeat it here.

If you had a good, strong, and excellent electricity generator, but it operated only on the old 110-volt system, and then, as happened in our countries, all electrical power sources were converted to 220 volts, what would happen if you insisted on using it? The generator would burn out, damage your electrical system, and perhaps electrocute you with it! It is self-evident that the fault is not with the generator; it was sound and functional in its time. However, the new surrounding circumstances have made it obsolete, and its natural place is now in a museum, in a corner of a cabinet as a relic of the past. Your affection for it, your beautiful memories with it, and the fact that it is an heirloom from your parents will change nothing about reality.

The generator is no longer fit for use; time has changed, and it has been decommissioned. This is what the New World Order did to our organizational "machines" (regional, clandestine, hierarchical), despite their excellence. Therefore, significant phenomena have occurred, and we note our observations here:

The battle between governments and Jihādī organizations during the sixties, seventies, and eighties lasted for many long years until governments were able to eliminate the Jihādī organizations. This was after fierce battles and significant losses for the governments. The Jihād in Syria, for instance, took about ten years of confrontation (1973-1983). In Egypt, it was similar or even longer. But look at Algeria: despite the tremendous resources and excellent conditions for the Jihādī movement, the attempt was destroyed within four years (1992-1995)! However, the confrontations and attempts that occurred in the late nineties and the beginning of the twenty-first century took only a few days to eliminate! In Lebanon, Abū ‘Ā’ishah's organization, may Allāh have mercy on him, which took several years to build, was destroyed in five days! The movement of Abū al-Ḥasan al-Miḥḍār, may Allāh have mercy on him, in Yemen was eliminated in three days, and so on! This proves that this old machine is no longer fit for anything but to burn and to burn its owners if they insist on operating and continuing with it as it is. There are other observations.

Regional and international margins for the operation of clandestine regional and international organizations, even non-Islāmic ones, were closed off due to the establishment of the New World Order after 1990, especially after September 2001. Previously, there were several poles in the pre-new global political system. There were the Eastern and Western blocs, and within the Western bloc, there were different axes, national interests, and disputes. This enabled those rebelling against certain regimes, which were appendages of a particular international axis, to seek refuge in the territory of a state from another axis and resume their activities. Organizations received support, felt secure, established safe havens, grew, and were funded. Thus, those rebelling against Abdel Nasser in Egypt, which belonged to the Eastern axis, fled to Saudi Arabia under King Faisal, who belonged to the Western axis. Those opposing Saddam operated from Syria, just as the Muslim Brotherhood and the Fighting Vanguard operated against the Syrian regime from Iraq and Jordan. Jihādīs, Islamists, and political opponents from every country roamed many parts of the world, obtained political asylum, and operated secretly across borders, etc.

However, once Russia fell and the unipolar system (America) emerged, most countries, especially small ones, became appendages of a single pole that imposed a unified policy. The margins between these appendages and axes were eliminated. Thus, small states, parties, and forces lost those margins and were forced to comply with the dictates of the policy of the dominant global system. The weaker the state, organization, or entity, the greater its loss under this New World Order. Among the biggest losers in this upheaval were clandestine resistance organizations and opposition parties. They were forced to cease operations, dissolve, surrender, or repent and reconcile with their governments.

Otherwise, the only other option was liquidation. One of the most horrific examples was what happened to the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and its leader, Abdullah Öcalan. It was one of the most powerful military opposition parties in the world, with tens of thousands of fighters spread across camps and fronts in Turkey, Syria, northern Iraq, and Lebanon. It had supporters in northwestern Iran. Hundreds of thousands of Kurds in Europe, especially Germany, provided it with a certain percentage of their monthly income, amounting to resources in the hundreds of millions of dollars. It even had several satellite broadcast stations, etc. It was an organizational empire compared to Islāmic Jihādī organizations!

When the New World Order arose, and Syria entered the American axis out of fear and ambition, it was compelled, against its will, to dismantle its camps in Syria and Lebanon. Then, its leader was displaced to several countries, and subsequently abducted through the cooperation of the CIA, Mossad, and Turkish intelligence. Even Greece, Turkey's historical adversary, assisted in handing him over to Turkey. The party was dissolved. Its camps were destroyed. America expelled its remaining members from Iraq. Finally, those who remained announced their renunciation of the armed option and the formation of an opposition political party according to the standards of democracy and the New World Order! Meanwhile, the only hope for its imprisoned leader was merely to avoid execution!

Another example is the Irish Republican Army (IRA), a military organization whose history and roots extend back more than 100 years. It is a formidable organization with extensions in Irish communities in America, from which it received billions in support. It had sophisticated training camps in the United States and had training and support relationships with Western countries like Algeria and Libya, and with a number of Arab leftist organizations, etc. When the New World Order emerged, and Britain became a leading part of the American alliance axis, the IRA was forced into the peaceful option, disarmed, dismantled, and the story ended!

These are some glaring examples before us, and there are others. If we do not take heed from them, we have no one to blame but ourselves when 80% of our forces are wiped out in the repercussions of September within only two years! This is so we realize that the era of the "Tora Bora siege mentality" must end.

Times have changed, and we must design a method of confrontation according to the standards of the present time.

I repeat again: the main flaw is not in the structure of the organizations and their internal defects, although these were a primary cause. The principal flaw is due to a radical, revolutionary transformation in time and the realities of the situation that changed the face of history, the present, and consequently, the future.

Secondly: The Method of Open Fronts in the Pre-September World

What is meant by open fronts are those in which mujāhidīn forces are overtly and permanently present, fighting enemy forces on open combat lines, or launching guerrilla warfare from those fixed areas. The clearest examples in our experiences are: the First Afghan Jihād, Bosnia, Chechnya, and then the Second Afghan Jihād during the Ṭālibān phase. As I said, this method, contrary to its predecessor, proved a number of things:

(1) Overwhelming Military Success:

This was despite the enormous disparity in enemy numbers, equipment, weaponry, technology, and all material balances. In the first experience, the Afghan mujāhidīn, despite their poverty, along with the Arab and Muslim mujāhidīn with them – as previously explained – were able to defeat a superpower and, Allāh willing, furl its flags forever.

In Bosnia, a handful of Arab, Turkish, and Muslim mujāhidīn managed to tip the balance of power in the Serbian war of extermination. They performed wonders. Suffice it to mention that 60,000 American troops were stationed at sea off the coasts of Bosnia and Serbia, and they stipulated for their entry into Bosnia after the Dayton Agreement that 600 Muslim mujāhidīn leave it! Each one of them instilled terror in a hundred soldiers of the great empire and its allies!

As for Chechnya, words cannot describe the military miracles that astonished the world, with a handful of men standing firm against the Soviet military machine! A nation of less than a million people, in a country not exceeding 50,000 square kilometers!

Thus, the believing mujāhidīn proved that in the fields of overt confrontation, they are unparalleled fighters, and the imbalanced scales between them and their enemies did not prevent them from achieving victories.

(2) Structural Security Success:

Considering that the confrontations were overt, there was no significant role for the intelligence agencies of regimes to play in aborting those fronts. In fact, field combat participation served as a barrier where many infiltrators and intelligence operatives were discovered, leading them to repent or flee. Their work was limited to monitoring the movements of organizations that had sought refuge on those fronts, not in aborting the fronts themselves.

(3) Proselytization Success:

This is the third matter of utmost importance. Those causes succeeded in mobilizing the Ummah by its hundreds of millions behind them. In contrast to organizational experiences, where even the most established Jihādī organizations could not mobilize the people in their limited region where they confronted regimes – not to mention that most of the peoples of the Islāmic Ummah had not even heard of them, let alone supported them! – in the case of open fronts, the Ummah, with its hundreds of millions, stood in support and aid. The best of its sons joined the fronts, and its elders and old women supplicated to Allāh, asking Him for victory for the mujāhidīn. Rich and poor Muslims alike donated their wealth and supported the Jihād.

The mobilization achieved for the Jihād of the fronts was overwhelming, and the call to those causes was astonishingly successful.

(4) Educational Success:

The Islāmic theory of education is based on the direct acquisition of knowledge and on good example and role modeling through interaction. This was the way of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) with the Companions (may Allāh be pleased with them), from them to the Successors, from these to the Followers of the Successors, then to the great scholars of the Salaf and the righteous of the Ummah, then to their students and disciples, and so on throughout history.

Unlike the impossibility of this under conditions of clandestine education, where neither time nor circumstance allows for providing genuine doses of education, and secrecy does not afford knowledge of the role model, leader, or shaykh, nor the possibility of being influenced by and emulating him, the Jihād of the fronts provided that. However, unfortunately, there was a significant shortcoming on the part of the leadership that oversaw that stage regarding attention to the issue of education in its various aspects. The masses focused on military training and combat. But this shortcoming does not negate two things: first, that education was possible; and second, that it did occur partially from some, and its impact was wonderful, as in the experiences of Afghanistan and Bosnia, and far greater than what occurred with the clandestine Jihādī experience.

(5) Political Success:

Political success is the realization of objectives and slogans. The goal of all Jihād was to repel the enemy and establish Islāmic rule. In the first Afghan experience, success was complete. After passing through trials and tribulations, the Jihād resulted in the establishment of the Islamic Emirate. The dream was realized, even if it was extinguished after a while; it will return soon, if Allāh wills. As for Bosnia, the goal was to save the Muslims from extermination, and this was achieved. However, establishing an Islāmic state in the heart of Europe under the New World Order was not possible. I believe that what was achieved, given the circumstances, constitutes a large measure of success. As for Chechnya, the political project was not realized despite military successes, because the strategic realities of Chechnya as a country—its area, resources, and population size—make that an almost impossible matter. What was achieved in terms of perseverance is considered a historic gain.

Overall, political success is linked to factors beyond those we are studying in this section, which is military performance.

Thus, we can summarize that the experience of the fronts is considered successful as a method of confrontation when compared to the complete failure on all levels of the method of clandestine, regional, hierarchical organizations, despite the sincerity and sacrifice of their members and the gains and victories achieved, which were ultimately lost due to what we have previously mentioned. And the command of Allāh is a decree determined.

However, the theory of the resilience of fronts collapsed in the post-September 2001 world, with America's use of its phenomenal technological superiority and its employment of the strategy of air and missile decisiveness, along with absolute space and electronic dominance, as we will discuss later, if Allāh wills.

Thirdly: The Method of Individual Jihād and Small Cells

This Jihādī method is very old. Perhaps its first experiences include the clandestine detachment of the noble Companion Abī Baṣīr and his famous story, when he formed the first guerrilla group in Islām, later joined by the noble Companion Abū Jandal. Among the evidence for this method is what happened at the end of the life of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), when al-Aswad al-ʿAnsī apostatized in Yemen, seized power there, and oppressed the Muslims. A blessed man, as described by the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him), from a blessed household, took on the matter. He acted individually on his own initiative, assassinated al-Aswad al-‘Ansī, overturned the balance of power, and consolidated Islām in Yemen. Gabriel brought the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) the good news of this decisive victory, achieved by a handful of proactive men.

Throughout Islāmic history, individual initiatives have been repeated. During the Crusades, amidst the corruption of princes and the decay of the Ummah, multitudes of resisting mujāhidīn confronted the crisis before the rise of the Zangid state and then the Ayyubid state. Many isolated detachments and groups fulfilled the obligation of Jihād. In contemporary Arab history, there is a famous story where a single mujāhid managed to tip the balance of power and influence the course of a major colonial campaign. This occurred when the mujāhid Sulaymān al-Ḥalabī, may Allāh have mercy on him, journeyed from Aleppo – my ancient city – in northwestern Syria to Jerusalem, where he sought a fatwa from one of its scholars regarding the killing of Kléber, the commander of the French campaign whom Napoleon Bonaparte had left in charge of Egypt. He reached him and killed him. This was one of the reasons for the departure of the French campaign from Egypt. The price for this was none other than Sulaymān al-Ḥalabī and his shaykh, who issued him the fatwa, attaining martyrdom in the path of Allāh, as they were both executed, may Allāh Almighty have mercy on them.

Since the Second Gulf War (Desert Storm) in 1990 and the rise of the New World Order, this method has revived. Since that time, dozens of individual operations have occurred here and there in various parts of the Arab and Islāmic world, and they continue to this day. Sayyid Nosair killed the Zionist fanatic Rabbi Meir Kahane in the United States, who was one of the harshest Jews against Muslims in Palestine and had a program to completely expel Palestinians from Palestine. His killing led to the dissolution and demise of his group. In 1993, Ramzi Yousef, one of the Arab Afghans (a Pakistani Baluchi), along with a group of mujāhidīn, attempted to blow up the World Trade Center in New York. In Jordan, a Jordanian border guard opened fire on a number of Jewish female students who were mocking Muslim prayer, killing several of them. In Egypt, the heroic soldier Salman Khater, by his own individual decision, opened fire on a number of Jews on the Egyptian-Israeli border. On the Jordanian-Israeli border, dozens of crossing operations were carried out by young mujāhidīn, some of whom carried nothing but a kitchen knife, to attack Jewish patrols on the west bank of the Jordan River. In Beirut, a mujāhid climbed onto the roof of a building and fired several RPG rockets at the Russian embassy during one of Russia's campaigns against Chechnya. During the Gulf War, an elderly Moroccan man stabbed ten French tourists in Morocco. The body of an Italian was found in the Emirates. A young man stabbed a number of foreigners in Amman, Jordan, and opened fire on them. In Palestine, many individual operations are carried out by citizens revolting against settlers or occupation soldiers. In Pakistan, mujāhidīn killed a number of Americans and Jews. In Egypt, a citizen presented a letter to Hosni Mubarak and then stabbed him with a knife, whereupon he was killed by the guards.

In Jordan, a remarkable group of four individuals formed a cell to assassinate Freemasons in Amman. They managed to execute several of them, then were arrested after a clash, and some of them were martyred. And so on.

What is noticeable about this spontaneous method, which began to spread with the intensification of American campaigns against Muslim lands, the escalation of the Zionist project in Palestine, and the spread of news via satellite channels and communication networks, is the following:

1. Military Success:

This can be inferred from the extent of awe and terror it instilled in the enemy, and its impact on their interests, to the extent that a few operations in 1994 prompted more than 34 heads of state, led by Bill Clinton, to convene the Sharm El-Sheikh summit on counter-terrorism.

2. Security Success:

This is because these spontaneous operations by individuals and cells here and there, across the vast expanse of the world, without any connection between them, threw local and international intelligence agencies into a state of confusion. The arrest of those cells that were caught does not affect the operations of others who have no connection to them. I have benefited greatly from this observation in designing the operational concept for the cells of the envisioned Global Islamic Resistance Call.

3. Proselytization Success:

This matter achieved great proselytization success, as it had a profound impact in igniting the spirit of Jihād and resistance in the Ummah. It transformed obscure individuals like Daqamseh, Salman Khater, Sayyid Nosair, and Ramzi Yousef into symbols of an Ummah, whose names are chanted by the masses, bringing solace to their hearts, and serving as role models for a generation of youth enthusiastic for resistance.

4. As for the Political Aspect:

It is noticeable that these events remained at the level of reactions and emotional outbursts here and there, and did not numerically reach the point of being a phenomenon, despite the ferocity of the onslaught and the passage of time. There are reasons for this, which we will address when formulating theories of action and movement, if Allāh wills.

5. As for the Educational Aspect:

The absence of a common methodology for these resisters meant that this phenomenon lacked an educational dimension. This is a flaw that can be remedied, as we shall see, if Allāh wills.

Thus, you also notice that this method has also registered relative success, especially in its impact on the enemy and its resilience against security abortion.

From a thorough study of these three Jihādī methods in the past stage, we can derive extremely important foundations:

(1) The end of the viability of operating according to the former method, through (regional, clandestine, hierarchical) organizations. Especially since after the events of September and the launch of American campaigns, the overwhelming majority of existing organizations were destroyed, and circumstances have made the possibility of establishing other organizations using this method impossible and futile.

(2) We must focus research on the method of open fronts and the method of individual Jihādī action through comprehensive resistance to develop them. This is for the purpose of deriving the appropriate military and movement theory for the upcoming stage, through methods that have proven their utility.

These are: action on open fronts, and clandestine resistance through individual Jihād and small cells.

However, before we discuss these two methods, it is worth drawing attention to an important matter: the necessity of instilling the idea of globalizing Jihād on all levels, as the enemy has imposed this. This is so that circumstances may help us to actually move according to our inherently internationalist beliefs. This is a self-evident aspect of our creed.

But our new method for Jihādī action in the Global Islamic Resistance Call is a global method and call. Likewise, our military theory, which we are currently discussing, relies on operating on a global horizon. This is fundamental to military movement, as well as being a political strategy and a religious creed.

The Idea of Belonging to the Totality of the Ummah and its Necessity for Jihād

This is on the level of religious belief, psychological sentiment, geographical affiliation, and on every plane.

If we were to approach any Muslim now and ask him, "Where are you from?" he would mention his country: Egypt, Syria, Tunisia, Saudi Arabia, etc.

He would not initially mention his city to tell you he is from Damascus, Beirut, Cairo, or Tashkent, because his sense of belonging is oriented towards the Sykes-Picot borders that colonialism drew in his mind.

What we must now inculcate in the minds of the mujāhidīn determined to resist is the reality of feeling and belonging according to the saying of Allāh Almighty: {Indeed, this, your nation, is one nation, and I am your Lord, so worship Me} (Al-Anbiyā': 92).

Praise be to Allāh, the enemy's current military offensive has placed us within a single map, which they named the "Central Command Area of Operations," practically encompassing most countries and lands of the Arab and Islāmic world. Similarly, in the political sphere and the intellectual, economic, and civilizational onslaught, Bush has placed us on a single map covering the same region, which he politically termed the "Greater Middle East."

Thus, the enemy, by its attack on us, has globalized our cause, and praise be to Allāh. This helps those who were not aided by belief and understanding towards this internationalist way of thinking, which is one of the fundamentals of our religion.

It must be noted that this internationalist affiliation has an important military dimension that aids in understanding the military theory of the Global Islamic Resistance Call.

Strategically, it is based on the international dimension of the entire greater Islāmic homeland, and its success is impossible if we remove this global, international dimension from it.

If we were to consider the Jihād of fronts and decide to confront America on open fronts, we would find that for Jihād to succeed on a particular front, it requires strategic conditions. These conditions are only available in limited areas of the Islāmic world. Meanwhile, those fronts need the mobilization of mujāhidīn from any Islāmic country, and support from various specializations from any country can fill a significant gap on those fronts when they arise.

Likewise, in individual clandestine Jihād, operating on an international and global horizon opens up prospects for such action irrespective of borders or region. The enemy occupies Iraq and confronts us there, and similarly in Palestine now. Is it incumbent upon a mujāhid in Tunisia, Morocco, or Indonesia to travel to Iraq to aid his brothers? A few might be able to do so, but it will become very difficult over time due to the cooperation of apostate regimes in the vicinity of confrontation zones with America against the mujāhidīn. However, any Muslim who wants to engage in Jihād and resistance can participate in this battle against America in his own country or any other place, and perhaps hundreds of times more effectively than he could if he reached an open confrontation zone.

Therefore, there must be a sense of belonging to the Ummah and its world, in the geographical, political, military, and every other sphere.

But it is strange that when one looks at these straight, curved, and wonderfully contorted lines that draw the maps of our countries, it is as if when the pens and rulers of the infidels from the colonial ministries drew them, they were etched into the minds and hearts of the majority of the sons of this Ummah. The astonishing thing is that this tragedy is only a few decades old, dating back to the fall of the unifying political entity of the Ummah in 1924, with the fall of the last symbolic Caliphs of this Ummah.

So, we must open the minds and hearts of the youth of the Ummah so that they feel a sense of belonging to the entire Ummah. This is fundamental in religion and creed, and it is likewise so in politics and strategic military conception.

Now let us turn to our military theory.

The Military Theory of the Global Islamic Resistance Call

The military theory of the Resistance Call is based on adopting Jihād in two aspects:

1. The Jihād of individual terrorism and the clandestine work of small detachments completely disconnected from each other.
2. Participation in the Jihād of open fronts where its conditions are met.

We draw attention to the fact that:

The Jihād of individual or cellular terrorism, employing urban or rural guerrilla warfare tactics, is fundamental to exhausting the enemy and bringing it to a state of collapse and withdrawal, by Allāh's permission.

As for the Jihād of open fronts, it is fundamental to controlling territory to liberate it and establish the Sharī'ah of Allāh upon it, with Allāh's help.

Thus, the Jihād of individual terrorism and guerrilla warfare carried out by small cells paves the way for the other type (the Jihād of open fronts), assists it, and reinforces it. However, without ground confrontation and control of territory, no state can be established for us, which is the strategic objective of the resistance project.

This is the summary of what I had crystallized of the military theory in its latest forms and recorded in the lectures I delivered in the summer of 2000.

However, what happened subsequently in terms of frontal confrontations between us and the American forces during the battles for the fall of the Emirate throughout Afghanistan in December 2001 – especially in the battles of northern Afghanistan and Qala-i-Jangi in Mazar-i-Sharif, the battles of Tora Bora, the battles of Kandahar, etc. – as well as some other battles thereafter, such as the battle of Shah-i-Kot, which the Americans called Operation Anaconda, where they suffered hundreds of casualties, and other confrontations; and the heavy strategic price we paid in these confrontations despite the losses incurred by American forces and their allies.

Then, through my continuous monitoring and study of the course of military confrontation and American performance during the invasion of Iraq in March and April 2003. And likewise, some battles waged by certain client armies under the management of the American military and security command in the region, as happened in the Yemeni army raids on mujāhidīn mountain positions in the Ḥuṭāṭ Mountains and elsewhere there.

And as happened during the Pakistani army's repeated sieges and incursions into areas of some Arab mujāhidīn and those who defended with them in the tribal areas of the North-West Frontier Province of Pakistan.

Similarly, what happened with the American destruction of some mujāhidīn positions in Iraqi Kurdistan in Khurmal, using the strategy of concentrated American air and missile bombardment, followed by the advance of client forces supported by American special forces on mujāhidīn positions.

And what recently occurred in the battles of steadfast Fallujah – may Allāh illuminate the faces of its mujāhidīn sons and the faces of mujāhidīn everywhere.

All of this has proven that the process of confronting American campaigns and its allied forces overtly, using the method of open fronts and launching from fixed defensive positions, is still untimely – though it will come, if Allāh wills. This is currently due to the phenomenal technological superiority of the enemy forces, especially in the air domain, in space dominance, and their formidable capabilities in surveillance and directing air and missile strikes. Also, the immense and incomparable capabilities of enemy forces in airborne landings, which reach the capacity to deploy divisions of vehicles, artillery, and commando forces of strategic size anywhere they wish and at record speeds.

If we combine these important current lessons with the lessons from multiple tragic Jihādī experiences we have had with the guerrilla warfare method of (fixed defense), as happened to us in the Jihād in Syria in the battles of Hama (February 1982), in the battles of Tripoli against Syrian government forces, in the defense of Tal al-Za'tar in Beirut, Lebanon, against Syrian and client Lebanese forces by land and Israeli forces by sea and air, in Yemen in al-Miḥdār's experience in 1998, and in Nabatiyeh in Lebanon again in 2000, etc., we find that all of them confirm what we have studied and taught in the "Principles of Guerrilla Warfare." These principles state that fixed defense, when untimely, is one of the greatest killers of guerrilla forces, as elaborated in the writings of major theorists of this military art such as Mao Zedong, Guevara, Giap, Castro, and others.

The conclusion I have now reached is:

The primary axis of military actions for the resistance against America and its allies now must remain within the framework of "light guerrilla warfare," "civilian terrorism," and clandestine methods, especially concerning individual operations and small resistance detachments completely and totally disconnected from each other.

However, despite this, I say: Any imbalance in the scales in favor of the forces of resistance and Jihād that nullifies the effects of American dominance in places where the conditions for open fronts are met (as I will list them), will bring back the issue of overt confrontation to liberate land, establish a presence on it, and form the nuclei of the political and legitimate entity for Islāmic forces as an objective whose opportunities must be seized whenever they arise.

Now let us review the details of the military theory of the Global Islamic Resistance Call in the domain of fronts and in the domain of individual terrorist guerrilla warfare. I will begin with fronts, due to the brevity of their details and our limited need for them now. I will leave the elaboration for the primary method in the current circumstances, which I believe will extend for a considerable time unless the mercy of Allāh overtakes us with something that overturns the balance of power.

Firstly: The Jihād of Open Fronts

While individual Jihād can be performed anywhere in the Arab and Islāmic world, and indeed in the entire world, because it is not tied to objective conditions where it occurs, the Jihād of open fronts requires necessary strategic factors to provide conditions for success, after the tawfiq (success granted by Allāh) of Allāh Almighty.

Necessary Factors for the Success of Open Front Jihād:

Geographical Factors:

These are the characteristics of the land, which should be:

1. Vast in area.
2. Having diverse and long borders.
3. Difficult to besiege.
4. Containing relative ruggedness such as mountains, forests, or other features that aid in establishing positions and confronting advancing ground forces; the best of these are forested mountains.
5. The land's food and water resources should also be sufficient in case of a siege.

Demographic Factors:

This is the presence of a large population whose movement cannot be controlled, especially if it is spread across inhabited rural areas and densely populated cities. It also includes that the people of that region are known for their military mettle and their ability to confront and endure, and that sources of weapons are available to them in that region.

Political Factors:

This is the existence of a cause for which it is possible for the local population to believe in, sufficiently to motivate them to wage Jihād for its sake. Also, that cause should be capable of mobilizing the Islāmic Ummah behind it, to support that people in religion and to wage Jihād with them with lives and wealth, and other forms of support. The best of such causes that incite resistance are foreign invasion and the availability of religious, political, economic, and social reasons for revolution and Jihād. This is what is called in the literature of guerrilla warfare the "revolutionary climate," and what we term in our literature the "Jihādī climate."

According to these conditions, we can benefit from studying these factors in the three main models that occurred in the past period of front-line Jihād:

In Afghanistan, Chechnya, and Bosnia. This is clarified by the following simple table:

| Country/Factors ... | Geographical ... | Demographic ... | Political ... | Result |
|---------------------|------------------|-----------------|---------------|--------|
|---------------------|------------------|-----------------|---------------|--------|

1. Afghanistan:

- Geographical:

- 650,000 km<sup>2</sup>
- Rugged terrain
- High resources, vast borders, unsealable, and other factors.

- Demographic:

- 24 million people, mostly youth
- A patient, fighting people.
- High availability of weapons.

- Political:

- Cause of occupation and foreign invasion.
- Religious motivation.
- Tribal motivation.

- Result:

Completely succeeded.

2. Chechnya:

- Geographical:

- Small area: 47,000 km<sup>2</sup>

- Rugged terrain available, relatively open borders, resources available.

- Demographic:

- Limited population, around 850,000 people.
- A warlike people with mettle.
- Abundance of weapons.

- Political:

- Cause of occupation and foreign invasion.
- Religious motivation.
- Nationalist motivation.

- Result:

- Military success.
- Proselytization success.
- Political failure to date.

3. Bosnia:

- Geographical:

- Small area.
- Very closed and confined borders.
- Rugged terrain and resources available.

- Demographic:

- Limited population: Muslims around 4 million. A non-warlike people, lacking mettle, with limited weapon sources.

- Political:

- Cause of Western Crusader aggression and extermination.
- Religious motivation.
- Struggle for survival.

- Result:

Generally failed, except in the Ummah's support for it.

If we survey the countries and regions of the Islāmic world, according to political divisions, from the perspective of these strategic factors, we will find that the regions and countries where these factors are available, especially geographical and demographic ones, are weak in most of those artificially created entities, crafted with utmost malice.

As for the cause, unless there is a feeling of belonging to the entire Ummah, it will be weak. As for the revolutionary climate due to religious, social, or economic motives for revolution against the injustice and collaboration of rulers, it has been extinguished by the scholars of the rulers and the passive preachers everywhere, who have implanted in the minds of the Ummah that those who do not rule by what Allāh has revealed are the believers! And that those among them who ally with the enemies are from us, our guardians, and the crown on our heads!

Therefore, one must search for the keys to revolution, resistance, and Jihād under the banner of confronting today's American-Zionist invasion of the entire Ummah. In this, the scholars of the rulers and the media apparatuses can only succeed in falling along with their rulers and their master, America, when this call is confronted, which is what is happening today.

As for the suitability of regions in the Islāmic world for confrontations on open fronts, the best among them, based on the availability of factors when considered as regions rather than political entities, are:

These regions are:

1. Afghanistan:

Its factors have already been indicated.

2. The Lands of Central Asia and Transoxiana:

This is a large area of approximately 5 million km<sup>2</sup>. It contains around 50 million Muslims and possesses all the required factors for open fronts, especially with the continuation of Soviet occupation in some parts and the semi-overt infiltration of American occupation into the remaining parts through modern colonialism, American style. I have previously written a research paper titled "Muslims in Central Asia" in which I discussed this matter in detail.

3. Yemen and the Arabian Peninsula:

This is a vast area exceeding a total of 2.5 million km<sup>2</sup>. Its total population is around 45 million. Its main fortress suitable for open confrontation is Yemen. It possesses strategic religious, economic, and locational factors that are undeniable. I have also previously written a study on Jihād in the Arabian Peninsula and its cornerstone in Yemen, which obviates the need for lengthy discussion here, as detailed in my treatise The Responsibility of the People of Yemen for the Wealth and Sanctities of Muslims.

4. The Maghreb and North Africa:

This is also a vast area with open land borders, long sea coasts, abundant mountains and natural fortifications, and sufficient weapons and necessary resources. It is difficult to besiege due to its multiple and diverse borders. Its inhabitants, Arabs and Berbers, have historically been known for their valor, courage, and combat capabilities. The region has significant armament resources from Central and West Africa, and its maritime contact with Europe provides it with considerable advantages. Not to mention that the conditions in North Africa, especially Morocco, possess most of the factors for a Jihādī revolutionary climate. The state of economic occupation and Western and Jewish control also provides golden keys for igniting the spark of Jihād.

5. The Levant and Iraq:

These form an integrated and contiguous region exceeding 700,000 km<sup>2</sup> collectively. As a whole, it possesses all the factors for open fronts, especially in the mountainous areas of northern and western Iraq, northern and western Syria, in most of Lebanon, as well as in the plateaus east and north of the Jordan River. The total population of the region also exceeds 60 million.

The current American occupation, which has announced its intention to stay for a long time, is a factor. It also paves the way for extending its aggression to Syria to control the entire Levant, after the Jews occupied Palestine, Christians gained control in Lebanon, and America seized control of major and minor affairs in Jordan.

The region has a great abundance of weapons and equipment, as well as a diversity of borders, coastlines, and passages.

Israel constitutes the impetus for a global Islāmic cause, and the American occupation adds an excellent revolutionary dimension as a key to Jihād.

There are other similar regions that possess many of the factors suitable for open confrontations as well, such as Turkey, which is one of the most suitable countries for waging Jihādī guerrilla warfare, as all factors are present. The same, and even more so, applies to Pakistan, as the author previously discussed in the book Musharraf's Pakistan: The Problem, The Solution, and The Incumbent Duty. Some areas of the Horn of Africa and others too. However, the vast majority of Islāmic states and entities, numbering over 55, are by no means suitable for open confrontations, due to the absence of all or some of the appropriate conditions.

Here, attention must be paid to the issue of the political cause that will be the matter of conflict and mobilization for confrontation.

It must be, as I have now clarified, the issue of repelling the American occupation in the region, the issue of the conflict with the Jews, the issue of expelling the polytheists from the Arabian Peninsula, the issue of oil and wealth, the issue of American hegemony, and the injustices and calamities resulting from the occupation and its allies in the region.

How to Participate in Resistance in the Jihād of Open Fronts:

Most Arab and Islāmic countries, with their current political divisions and entities, do not possess the factors for open fronts. Most of them are suitable arenas for individual terrorism, small detachments, and clandestine guerrilla warfare due to the dense presence of various forms of American and allied interests and Western and Zionist hegemony projects.

As for those mujāhidīn who wish to contribute to open confrontation, they should head to where fronts open, when they open, and operate under the command of their field leaders, as long as the minimum standard for a legitimate banner and legitimate Jihād under the general banner of Islām is met, in a manner consistent with the principles, ideology, and Jihādī creed of the resistance.

If the Jihād on one of those fronts results in the victory of the Muslims, that will be the nucleus of an Islāmic emirate that is supposed to rule by the Sharīʿah of Allāh, and be a nucleus and a place of hijrah (emigration) for those around it who emigrate for Jihād in the way of Allāh. The leadership and emirate therein will generally belong to the people of that country. There are social and practical legacies that are unhelpful to bypass, and their effects cannot be ignored until an Islāmic society based on the internationalism of Islām and the nationality of Islām is established, and this requires a long time, and Allāh knows best.

This is about the Jihād of open fronts in general and in summary, but I return to say and to caution:

It is very important for those who undertake to carry the banner of Jihād to understand their reality, the reality of the Muslims, and the factors of the current American era until Allāh removes their state and scatters their unity.

There is American tyranny and might in every field: economic, military, human, and political, which should not be ignored, nor is it beneficial to ignore it. We have, since the events of September, highly significant examples, all of which indicate that one must pause considerably before thinking of confrontation via open fronts against this overwhelming power, and that the time now, as long as the factors remain as they are, is for clandestine resistance according to the principles of urban or rural guerrilla warfare suitable for these conditions, through adopting the Jihād of individual terrorism and the action of small detachments, which we will explain in the remaining space in this chapter, if Allāh wills, in the following sections.

Secondly: The Jihād of Individual Terrorism and the Detachments of the Global Islamic Resistance

The Concept of Terrorism

I believe that one of the most significant areas of success for the new American Jewish Crusader campaigns is their success in the media. Among their successes in this regard is their imposition of terminology and its definitions upon people, and compelling humanity to accept the connotations of those terms that align with their vision. Among the terms they have imposed today in a distorted manner to describe the most heinous acts, attributes, and practices is the term "terrorism."

This includes the terms "terrorism," "terrorists," and "counter-terrorism."

It has reached the point where it is natural in Arab and Islāmic media, and even in the media of the Islāmic awakening, to deny this attribute as if it were an accusation, a vice, and a catastrophe, leading anyone accused of it to be characterized by all the properties of vices and their consequences in this world and the hereafter.

With all simplicity and courage, we say:

We refuse to understand this term according to the American description.

"Terrorism" (irhāb) is an abstract word, and like many abstract words, it can carry a good or bad meaning depending on its attribution, what is added to it, and what it entails. The word itself, in isolation, has no negative or positive quality.

Arhaba: means to terrify, and the verbal noun is al-rahab, meaning excessive fear. The one performing the act is an (irhābī) "terrorist," and the one upon whom the act is performed is murhab (terrorized) or marhūb (feared).

Thus, we have two types of terrorism:

1. Blameworthy Terrorism:

This is the terrorism of falsehood and the forces of falsehood. It can be defined as any act, statement, or behavior that leads to inflicting harm and fear upon innocents without right.

Examples of this include the terrorism of thieves and highway robbers, the terrorism of invaders and aggressors, and the terrorism of oppressors and those who dominate people unjustly, such as Pharaohs and their aides. This is blameworthy terrorism, and its perpetrator is a "criminal terrorist" who deserves punishment for his terrorism and crime commensurate with his harm and despicable act.

2. Praiseworthy Terrorism:

This is the terrorism that counteracts that blameworthy terrorism. It is the terrorism of the rightful, oppressed person who repels injustice from the oppressed by terrorizing and repelling the oppressor.

Examples of this include the terror instilled by just security men in thieves and highway robbers, the terror instilled by resisters in occupiers, and the terror instilled by those defending themselves in the aides of tyranny. This is praiseworthy terrorism.

Terrorizing Enemies is a Religious Obligation, and Assassinating Their Leaders is a Prophetic Sunnah

I recall being enrolled in a training course to prepare cadres for the military apparatus of the Muslim Brotherhood during the Jihād and revolution against the regime of Hafez al-Assad. I was 22 years old. This was at the Al-Rashid Camp, affiliated with the Iraqi army in Baghdad, in 1980. When the trainer entered – he was, may Allāh have mercy on him, a virtuous man and an elderly shaykh from the first generation, one of those who had pledged allegiance to Shaykh Hassan al-Banna, may Allāh have mercy on him, when he was 17 years old, fought in Palestine in 1948, was wounded in Jerusalem, worked in the Special Apparatus, participated in the clandestine resistance against the English in the Suez Canal in the early fifties, accompanied Sayyid Qutb, may Allāh have mercy on him, emigrated from Egypt for the rest of his life, was a trainer in the Shaykhs' camps in eastern Jordan with the PLO in 1969, and was assigned to assist more than one Jihādī movement supported by the Brotherhood when they were brothers on the path of al-Banna and Qutb, before the plague of democracy and parliaments.

He used to train us in military subjects and run with us in physical drills – despite his age nearing sixty – and deliver lectures to us. I remember the first thing he said to the team of 30 young men, who were the elite of the Syrian Muslim Brotherhood's military apparatus at the time, in his Egyptian dialect, was:

"Are you Muslim Brothers?" We said yes. He said: "Are you sure, my sons?" We said we were sure. Pointing to his neck, he said: "Then you will all be slaughtered... Do you agree?" We all said, filled with joy and delight: "We agree, sir."

He turned to the blackboard and wrote the title of the first lecture:

"Terrorism is an Obligation, and Assassination is a Sunnah!"

He underlined it, turned around, and the lessons began, and the journey commenced. We absorbed the lessons, the path was long, and the glad tidings remained. Hope in Allāh's generosity is great for those of that team who met their fate and for those who await.

This, which the Shaykh – may Allāh have mercy on him – summarized, is part of the creed of this religion. I later began my lessons with it.

Allāh has commanded the terrorization of His enemies in the plain text of His Book, and it has come in the verbal, practical, and tacitly approved Sunnah of His chosen Messenger (peace and blessings be upon him). The Book and the Sunnah have detailed the rulings of this praiseworthy terrorism against the enemies of Allāh in explicit terms. In the Qur'ān, Allāh Almighty says: {And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war by which you may terrify the enemy of Allāh and your enemy and others besides them whom you do not know [but] whom Allāh knows. And whatever you spend in the cause of Allāh will be fully repaid to you, and you will not be wronged} (Al-Anfāl: 60). The verse is explicit in its text and definitive in its indication. {And prepare} means train for combat. {Against them} means against your enemies. {Whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war} which is archery, riding, and weaponry. The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Indeed, strength is in archery," repeating it three times.

So why the preparation and training for combat, amassing weapons, and tethering horses? The verse itself clarifies that: {by which you may terrify}: meaning, so that you may terrify {by it}: meaning, by what you have prepared for combat {the enemy of Allāh and your enemy}: these are the intended targets of the terrorist act. {And others besides them}: meaning, those who aid and assist them or lie in wait to attack you. When these others see your terrorization of the aggressor, your resistance, and your defense of yourselves, they are terrorized, frightened, and deterred from advancing, without you having known of their intention to aggress. But Allāh knew it and deterred them by your preparation and your terrorization of Allāh's aggressing enemies. And Allāh Almighty knows best.

Thus, in short: The noble verse commanded preparation for the purpose of terrorizing aggressors and the enemies of Allāh from among the disbelievers and their allies. The disbelievers understood the verse better than many Muslim scholars in this age, so America demanded all Islāmic countries to remove it, and all of Sūrat al-Anfāl, al-Tawbah, and Āl 'Imrān from their educational curricula!

Whoever terrorizes others is a "terrorist," without mincing words. Thus, there is:

- An unjust, aggressing terrorist.
- A just terrorist defending himself or other oppressed people.

Therefore, we find no negative connotation in the word "terrorist" when used to describe resisters and mujāhidīn. They are, in fact, terrorists to their enemies and the enemies of Allāh and His weak servants. So where is the problem and where is the blame?

Yes, we are terrorists to the enemies of Allāh. We have terrorized them and made them tremble in their burrows, despite the hundreds of thousands working in their security apparatuses. And praise be to Allāh, this was after they had terrorized countries and peoples and instilled fear in fetuses in their mothers' wombs.

Hence, terrorism is commanded in the Book of Allāh. In a situation like a mujāhid repelling his enemy and terrorizing him in defensive Jihād, it is one of the most important obligations; indeed, nothing is more obligatory after the Tawhīd of Allāh, as stated by jurists and scholars, before the terrorism of the enemy's media and their intellectual terrorism made us disavow ourselves, the Book of our Lord, and the obligations of our religion.

The enemies of Allāh knew that the command to terrorize them is repeated in many places in the Book of Allāh and the Sunnah of His Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), so Rumsfeld and others stated this. They demanded Islāmic countries remove many verses from the teaching curricula in Arab and Muslim lands, to the point that it reached His Almighty's saying: {Say, "O disbelievers... For you is your religion, and for me is my religion."} (Al-Kāfirūn: 1, 6). They said these verses incite hatred and differentiate between people of religions and must be removed! I do not know where the hypocrites and fools will go with His Almighty's saying: {So when you meet those who disbelieve [in battle], strike [their] necks until, when you have inflicted slaughter upon them, then secure their bonds, and either [confer] favor afterwards or ransom [them] until the war lays down its burdens. That [is the command]. And if Allāh had willed, He could have taken vengeance upon them [Himself], but [He ordered armed struggle] to test some of you by means of others. And those who are killed in the cause of Allāh - never will He waste their deeds} (Muḥammad: 4).

And the saying of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): "I was sent with the sword just before the Hour so that Allāh alone is worshipped, my provision was placed under the shadow of my spear, humiliation and belittlement were placed upon those who oppose my command, and whoever imitates a people is one of them." And his saying (peace and blessings be upon him): "O assembly of Quraysh, by Allāh, I have come to you with slaughter!"

The rulers and ministries of education complied with them and repeatedly amended the curricula. The evidence is very abundant, the latest being the Pakistani Minister of Culture openly stating to the press that Sūrat al-Anfāl and al-Tawbah must be removed from the curricula because they call for terrorism!

Then, America finally reached the point of gathering a number of scholars residing in the West and Orientalists to summarize the Qur'ān and remove from it what they claim calls for hatred and fighting! They came out with a new, abridged scripture, which they named "Furqān al-Ḥaqq" (The True Criterion)! Several media outlets have spoken about this. I heard some of this on a program about the press review on the Saudi-Gulf channel "Iqra'"! And so on. And Allāh the Almighty spoke the truth when He warned us with His saying:

{They ask you about the sacred month - about fighting therein. Say, "Fighting therein is great [sin], but averting [people] from the way of Allāh and disbelief in Him and [preventing access to] al-Masjid al-Ḥarām and the expulsion of its people therefrom are greater [evil] in the sight of Allāh. And fitnah is greater than killing." And they will not cease fighting you until they turn you back from your religion if they are able. And whoever of you reverts from his religion [to disbelief] and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless in this world and the Hereafter, and those are the companions of the Fire, they will abide therein eternally} (Al-Baqarah: 217). The matter is clear and evident.

Among the foremost acts of terrorism against the enemies of Allāh, their leaders, and the imams of disbelief among them, is fighting the imams of disbelief. As Allāh Almighty said: {And if they break their oaths after their treaty and defame your religion, then fight the leaders of disbelief, for indeed, there are no oaths [sacred] to them; [fight them that] they might cease} (Al-Tawbah: 12).

So, one of the primary Jihādī actions is to eliminate their leaders by killing and assassination. It is authentically reported from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) in several separate incidents that he sent detachments of mujāhidīn as special squads (commandos) from the best of the Companions to carry out the assassination of a leader of disbelief in his time (peace and blessings be upon him). These incidents are authentically established. Indeed, among them was his sending someone to assassinate a female poet who was harming Allāh, His Messenger, and the Muslims with her poetry; he sent someone who assassinated her and silenced her tongue.

What the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) did is a Prophetic Sunnah that we cherish, follow, emulate, and consider anyone who denies it a disbeliever.

At the end of his life (peace and blessings be upon him), Fayrūz al-Daylamī assassinated the head of apostasy in Yemen, al-Aswad al-‘Ansī, who had seized power in Yemen and wanted to compel people to apostatize. Fayrūz killed him by assassination. Gabriel informed the Messenger of Allāh of the event while he was on his deathbed and gave him glad tidings of it. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) informed his Companions, and it is narrated that he told them: "Al-Aswad al-'Ansī has been killed. A blessed man from a blessed household killed him."

So, the assassination of leaders of disbelief – civilians, military personnel, politicians, propagandists, and media figures – who slander the religion of Allāh and support the enemies of Allāh invading Muslim lands, is an emphasized Sunnah of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him). It is one of the most important arts, actions, and effective, deterrent methods of terrorism.

Indeed, these are methods applied by the enemies of Allāh. The CIA obtained authorization from the American government to assassinate heads of state if American national interest required it, and they have carried it out many times. The CIA has a special branch for this! So I do not know why they forbid this for us? Then our rabble and the hypocrites among our scholars follow them in falsehood, may Allāh fight them!

After this necessary introduction to remove ambiguity from the term "terrorism" and its derivatives, because we will use it as a form and objective of Jihād, we move to the next section.

Observations on Past Acts of Terrorism and Individual Jihād

We observe that these operations remained limited and were carried out by some as an expression of an emotional reaction here and there, following certain acts of aggression against Muslims. They increase in the very places of aggression because minds and souls are still naturally inclined towards regional sentiment. If colonialism invaded a country, you would find many reactions there. But the same colonial forces – military and civilian, in various forms – are present in neighboring countries, and no one threatens their interests.

We also observe that they are not programmed by their perpetrators to become a phenomenon for the sake of providing a role model and drawing the youth of the Ummah to emulate them and build upon them, but rather mere emotional reactions. They did not transform into a phenomenon because they were spontaneous. No one undertook to program them and present them as a strategic method of operation. This is what we will adopt as a fundamental strategy in the basis of our military theory in the Global Islamic Resistance Call.

Circumstances and Necessities Mandating the Resistance's Use of the Individual Jihād Method of Operation

What imposes this method of operation as a strategic option are the circumstances of imbalance of power between the resistance and the grand alliance of aggression from the disbelievers, apostates, and hypocrites. Among these are:

- (1) The failure of the clandestine hierarchical organizational method of operation in the face of the international security onslaught and the regional and international coordination we previously mentioned, and the necessity of establishing a method of operation that does not enable those security agencies to abort resistance cells by arresting their members through torture and confessions.
- (2) The inability of clandestine organizations to absorb all the youth of the Ummah who wish to perform the obligation of Jihād and resistance by contributing through some action without having to bear the consequences of affiliation with a centralized organization.
- (3) The widespread presence of the enemy, the diversity of its targets, and its presence in many places where it is difficult to establish combat fronts or centralized organizations.
- (4) The collapse of the idea of fronts and fixed confrontation with the enemy due to the enemy's use of the strategy of air decisiveness through devastating missile bombardment and satellite-guided aerial strikes that control the ground and even see beneath it thanks to high technology – a matter that must be acknowledged and planned for in confrontation.

General Foundations of the Theory of Individual Jihādī Action in the Resistance Call from a Practical Standpoint

- (1) Spreading the culture of resistance and transforming it into an organized strategic phenomenon, not just a collection of reactions.
- (2) Disseminating the ideology of resistance, its methodology, its Sharī'ah and political foundations, and its theories of operation so that they are accessible to those youths of the Ummah who are determined to engage in Jihād and resistance.
- (3) Guiding resisters to suitable arenas of operation for individual Jihād terrorism.
- (4) Guiding resisters to the most important targets they should aim for in resistance operations and the Jihād of small detachments.
- (6) Disseminating Sharī'ah, political, military, and other knowledge and sciences necessary for mujāhidīn to carry out resistance actions without this being done in a direct manner that leads to a chain of arrests of networks, as happened with centralized organizations.
- (7) Guiding the youth on the method of armed action and building cells of resistance detachments using a "system of action" rather than an "organization for action," as we will explain later here and in the chapter dedicated to theories of "Security of Movement, Organization, Training, and Preparation."
- (8) Coordinating a method by which efforts converge to consolidate their results through a mechanism that achieves confusion and exhaustion of the enemy and raises the morale of the Ummah to engage in the phenomenon of resistance.

Primary Arenas of Operation Targeted by Individual Jihād Terrorism

Given the vastness of the Ummah and the arenas where the targets and interests of the invading enemy are present, and given the impossibility for all youth wishing to contribute to resistance to travel to confrontation zones, and indeed the impossibility of establishing such fronts in the foreseeable future, our method relies on guiding the Muslim who wishes to contribute and resist to operate where he is, or where he can be naturally present, live his public life normally, and practice Jihād and resistance secretly by himself or with a small cell of trusted individuals, forming an independent detachment for resistance and individual Jihād.

As for the priority of arenas where we should strike the enemy, their order of priority is:

1. Where it hurts the enemy most and inflicts the heaviest losses.
2. Where it awakens Muslims most and revives in them the spirit of Jihād and resistance.

Thus, the sequence of arenas according to their importance is as follows:

1. The countries of the Arabian Peninsula, the Levant, Egypt, and Iraq:

This area contains the holy sites, oil, Israel, and the surrounding "frontline" states. It also hosts American military and economic presence and is the primary and ultimate headquarters of the Victorious Group until the Day of Judgment.

2. The countries of North Africa from Libya to Mauritania:

These contain Western interests, especially those of European countries that are America's primary allies in NATO.

3. Turkey, Pakistan, and the countries of Central Asia:

These hold the world's second-largest oil reserves, American strategic interests, military bases, and primary economic investments. They also have large and historic Islāmic movements, which are considered a strategic depth for Arab Jihād and resistance movements.

4. The rest of the Islāmic world:

These contain the interests and presence of Americans and their allied nations. Collectively, they contain the primary support base for the resistance, which is the youth of the Ummah sympathetic to its causes and wishing to participate in Jihād and resistance – a support base of hundreds of millions of Muslims.

5. American and allied interests in Third World countries:

Especially those involved in the Crusader onslaught, due to their weak security capabilities compared to the security measures implemented by Western countries in their own lands. Jihād in these countries primarily falls upon the shoulders of mujāhidīn who are already residing in those countries and live a normal life there, which helps them in movement, concealment, identifying targets, and easily dealing with them.

6. In European countries allied with America and involved with it in the war:

This is due to the presence of large and long-established Islāmic communities, numbering over 45 million in Europe. These communities also exist in the millions in Australia, Canada, and South America.

Europe is particularly important due to its proximity to the Arab and Islāmic world, the intertwining of its interests with them, and the frequent movement and travel between them. Muslims in those lands, like Muslims everywhere, have the obligation of Jihād, repulsion (of aggression), and resistance, on an equal footing with Muslims in their own countries.

However, action in Europe and those countries must be subject to the considerations of political interests and harms according to the stances of those governments, while adopting a strategy of winning over the populations and not harming them. This we will detail in the political theory of resistance, if Allāh wills.

7. In the heart of America itself:

This is by targeting it with impactful strategic operations, as will be detailed in the following sections, if Allāh wills. It is the head of the serpent, as Shaykh Usāmah rightly called it, and it is the root of the affliction and the head of the alliance whose unraveling will come with its defeat, leading us to a new historical stage, if Allāh wills.

The Most Important Enemy Targets for Individual Jihād Terrorism:

The objective of resistance operations and individual Jihād terrorism is to inflict the maximum possible amount of human and material losses on the interests of America and its allied nations. It is also to make them feel that resistance has transformed into a phenomenon of uprising against them due to their aggression, extending from Central and South Asia, the islands of the Philippines and Indonesia in the east, to the Atlantic coasts in the west, and from the Caucasus, the lands of Crimea and the Balkans, and North Africa in the north, to India and Central Africa in the south, across the span of the Islāmic world, in addition to places of Muslim demographic presence.

The arena of Islāmic lands is the primary arena for resistance, as we have shown in the political theory and as we will clarify in the section on the "Strategy of Resistance" at the end of this important chapter.

The principle in action is for the mujāhid, the member of the resistance, to practice individual Jihād in his own land where he lives and resides, without Jihād imposing upon him the hardship of travel, emigration, and movement to where he can engage in direct Jihād. The enemy today is one and is spread everywhere, praise be to Allāh.

If we want to mention the most important targets according to their importance, we say they are:

1. In our lands (the Arab and Islāmic world).

2. In their lands (America and allied countries).
3. In (other countries of the world).

Firstly: Targets in the Primary Arena (the Arab and Islāmic World):

(1) Centers of proselytization, Christianization, cultural missions, and institutions overseeing the American-Western civilizational and intellectual invasion of Muslim lands, without harming the places of worship and facilities of indigenous Christians residing in our countries.

(2) All forms of American and allied Western economic presence: companies, mines, experts, engineers, merchants, foreign company representatives (non-Muslims), residences of the families of these colonial thieves, etc.

(3) All forms of American and allied diplomatic presence: embassies, consulates, diplomatic missions, etc.

(4) All forms of American and allied military presence: military bases, naval fleets, ports, airports, transit stations, military units, etc.

(5) All forms of security presence of American and allied Western intelligence agencies, such as overt or covert CIA and FBI offices, and others hidden under fictitious covers.

(6) All forms of Zionist or American invading normalization delegations to our countries today through civil, non-governmental, and governmental institutions—cultural, sporting, artistic, and otherwise.

(7) All forms of tourist presence, including tourism companies, delegations of foreign tourists, their offices, their airlines, and so forth. These are the ambassadors of vice, corruption, prostitution, and degeneracy. Furthermore, they represent the humiliating image of the occupation that has seized our lands and transformed them into a backyard for the rest and recreation of its profligates and the affluent among its peoples.

(8) The fundamental pillars of the apostate regimes that collaborate with the invading campaigns.

(9) The fundamental pillars of the collaborationist forces and the various forms of normalization with the invading campaigns in all fields.

In short: targeting all forms of human and material presence of the Americans and their allies in our lands, which is the primary arena for resistance.

Important Details:

The Economic Dimension of the American Occupation:

The economic dimension of the impending American occupation of our lands is one of the most significant aspects of this occupation and Crusader-Jewish invasion, secondary only to the religious and civilizational dimension driven by their Zionist and Crusader motives and their belief in the myths and fables of their falsified religious texts.

The Muslim lands contain the world's primary oil reserves. Saudi Arabia and the Gulf Cooperation Council countries possess the largest known reserves globally, while Iraq possesses the largest unexplored reserves, estimated at (at least 300 billion barrels).

The Central Asian region and the Caspian periphery hold the world's second-largest known reserves. Syria has vast reserves that modern colonialism avoids discussing. Sudan and the Horn of Africa have an enormous subterranean oil lake. North Africa, particularly Algeria, has similar resources. Algerian gas, which transits to Europe via Morocco and under the Strait of Gibraltar, constitutes approximately (65%) of Europe's energy consumption.

The Arab and Islāmic world also possesses vast and diverse mineral wealth, in addition to agricultural and livestock resources, freshwater sources, and so on. The primary objective of colonialism is to plunder these resources. As an aide to Bush Sr.

stated during the 1990 Kuwait War: "they came to correct God's mistake in creating oil in our lands." Allāh is Exalted far above what the descendants of apes and pigs say.

The second objective of American and Western colonialism is to transform the lands of the Islāmic world, whose total population constitutes one-fifth (1/5) of the global population, into a market for Western industrial and technological products, which suffer from significant stagnation and competition from East Asian and Chinese sources. Thus, the economic objectives of American and Western colonialism and invasion can be summarized in two points:

1. Plundering resources
2. Disposing of products.

These two objectives must be targets for the resistance and for legitimate terrorism. We must cut off their access to these resources and prevent them from selling their products. This is not achieved merely through the jihād of the feeble and incapacitated among the preachers calling for peaceful boycotts or through global verbal campaigns to repel aggression—though these are important forms of resistance if coupled with the jihādī impetus—but rather through military resistance, the jihād of individual terrorism, and the operations of small resistance detachments.

The jurists of Islām are unanimous on the prohibition of selling to the enemy anything that strengthens them against Muslims. So what about fuel for tanks and aircraft during Crusader campaigns?

Therefore, among the most important enemy targets, in detail, are:

Firstly: Oil and Energy Sources from Origin to Destination:

These are among the most important targets for the resistance: oil fields, oil pipelines, export terminals, maritime shipping lanes and tankers, import ports in their countries, and storage depots in their countries.

Some may argue that this oil is the livelihood of Muslims in those oil-exporting countries. This is incorrect. It is, rather, a source for the enemy's plunder of this artery that supplies them with energy, industry, and wealth. It is the lifeline for our murderous Crusader invaders, the blood of their military machine that has been pouring death and humiliation upon us morning and evening since the beginning of the twentieth century, and continues to this day. In reality, only a meager portion returns to our lands, most of which flows into the pockets of a handful of ruling apostate emirs, their offspring, and their corrupt, fornicating, and debauched cronies who control it. Only crumbs overflow from it to the rest of their peoples. This is in addition to the fact that the share of the poor of this Ummah from other Muslim peoples is deprivation, despite everyone's Shari'ah-given right to this blessing from Allāh.

Fifty percent (50%) of oil revenues go to foreign companies by virtue of colonial contracts, and the remaining fifty percent (50%) are transformed into senseless electronic figures in the banks of international Jewry. Its owners, the thieving, profligate emirs, have no right or freedom to withdraw any of it except with the approval of the master thieves, their lords among the Jews and Crusaders.

Oil has turned into a curse after it was a blessing. Thus, the rulers of Muslims have exchanged Allāh's blessing for disbelief and led their people to the abode of ruin.

Yes, disrupting oil exports will cause those fearful governments to lose their budgets. Consequently, this will affect the limited economic development sectors in those countries. But what is the weight of this partial harm to those limited segments compared to the harm of this oil reaching the Zionist and Crusader enemy? The matter is clear.

In short, it is the lifeline of our enemies, originating from our lands, and we must sever it.

When our wealth reverts to us and we possess it, we will engage in proper commercial dealings with them based on the principles of justice and good neighborliness.

Secondly: Mines of Mineral Wealth:

Gold, copper, iron, aluminum, cobalt, phosphate, and so on. The list of our resources is long. These too must be prevented from reaching them, and they must be barred from exploiting them. This is also achieved by preventing their export, by closing mines, and by cutting off export routes and means.

Thirdly: Maritime Straits and Major Waterways:

There are five (5) important maritime straits on Earth, four of which are in Arab and Muslim lands, and the fifth is in America, the Panama Canal. These straits are:

1. The Strait of Hormuz, the oil gateway in the Arab-Persian Gulf.
2. The Suez Canal in Egypt.
3. Bāb al-Mandab between Yemen and the Horn of Africa.
4. The Strait of Gibraltar in the Maghreb al-Aqṣā (Far West).

Through these waterways passes most of the Western world's economy in terms of trade and oil, as do military fleets, aircraft carriers, and the missiles of death aimed at our children and women. These passages must be closed until the invading campaigns depart. This can be achieved by targeting American ships and the ships of their allied nations on the one hand. This involves closing them with mines, sinking ships within them, or threatening movement through them with martyrdom operations, acts of piracy, and by force of arms whenever possible.

The enemy and the peoples of enemy countries must know that they have ignited a wicked world war due to the whims of their rulers, the Crusaders, and the Zionists. They must depart from our lands, end their interference, and cease their support for their treacherous rulers. If they do not come to their senses and act with justice and humanity, they must receive their share of the death they inflict upon our people and children, and they must receive their portion of the poverty, economic collapse, and miserable existence they cause us. We must convince them by force of arms, by the results of resistance, and by the losses they will incur, that it is better for them to leave us to our own affairs, so we may overthrow our criminal rulers, and then establish our legitimate governments and deal with them according to the principles of constructive dialogue and just, Shari'ah-compliant treatment.

We must make our peoples understand, through clarification, media, and incitement, that they must bear the burden of war alongside the mujāhidīn. We are in a state of war imposed by the enemy, and we must endure its temporary economic losses. This is so we do not lose our entity, our wealth, our religion, and all the components of our existence.

Striking the Strategic Targets of the Allies of the Crusader-Jewish Campaigns in Arab and Islāmic Countries:

As we explained in the second chapter (The Political Theory of Resistance), the American campaigns, in their advance upon our lands, rely primarily on substantial backing from forces of apostasy and hypocrisy, and on a vast fifth column of Americanizers who welcome this invasion and tie their interests and existence to it.

This large group, an alliance of apostates and hypocrites, comprises various types and forms, some aligned, some competing, and some warring amongst themselves. We will select the most important and prominent joints of this front from among the pillars of colonialism, according to their priorities. We will explain the importance and method of targeting them in a manner consistent with the general strategy of resistance. This strategy involves prioritizing the confrontation with the invading forces: America and its allies. On the secondary fronts within our lands, efforts will be confined to the important and principal axes, in accordance with the theory of construction and destruction.

Just as we must build the forces of resistance and deploy its detachments, we must also demolish, shatter, and eliminate the important enemy strongholds in our midst, in a way that does not distract us from the primary axis of strategic attack in resisting the occupation, namely, the external enemies.

The most important of these military targets for the resistance, from among the forces of apostasy and hypocrisy in our lands, are:

(1) Arab and Islāmic Governments:

This is by targeting only their kings, presidents, emirs, senior ministers, and high-ranking officials. Especially those upon whom the American invasion project relies, or those senior officials and first-tier figures upon whom security campaigns depend. This should not be transformed into a local revolution or a jihād movement aimed at fighting the government and targeting its installations and symbols, both major and minor, similar to what occurred in past jihādī revolutions in Egypt, Syria, Algeria, and elsewhere, which, as we previously explained, ended in failure. What is required is only the elimination of the top leaders of the apostates allied with the invading American campaigns, and to target them offensively.

(2) Security Forces and Military and Political Powers Directly Collaborating with the Occupation:

Such as the Iraqi police, the Kashmiri police, and the army operating under their command, should such a situation exist. They are to be targeted offensively. This should be done before these agencies expand and the occupation becomes self-sufficient through their presence, thereby no longer needing to use its own forces. This, however, applies only in cases of direct and explicit occupation.

(3) Security Forces, Armies, and Soldiers of Regimes that Target Mujāhidīn and Islāmists:

These are to be engaged only defensively and not targeted offensively. Instead, they should be addressed with a gentle Islāmic, nationalistic, and emotional discourse to draw them into the trench of resistance, and to guide their members and officers to the role they can play in defending their religion, country, and Ummah. However, if they confront the mujāhidīn and intend to kill, arrest, or harm them, then it is obligatory to fight valiantly to repel them and not to surrender to them. They should be fought as one fights a faction of apostasy and disbelief. This is without deeming them individually to be disbelievers, an explanation of which was provided in the theory of methodology. A culture of non-surrender must be spread among the youth of the resistance, encouraging them to refuse captivity and to defend themselves until martyrdom, if possible.

(4) Advocates and Symbols of Colonialism:

A new class has emerged in Arab and Islāmic societies, consisting of secularists and democratic opponents who openly call for welcoming the American project on all military, political, intellectual, and cultural levels, exemplified by figures such as the well-known Dr. Saad Eddin Ibrahim. These "apostate-hypocrite models" operate openly today, exploiting American cover under the pretexts of civil society organizations and the call for democracy, to the extent that they have gained immunity from the oppressive apparatuses of the tyrants. They have expanded and now possess institutions, work programs, and vast resources openly provided by the Americans. These models are among the most important military targets for the detachments of the Global Islāmic Resistance. Their leaders must be targeted for assassination and elimination, and their institutions for demolition, burning, and destruction, so they may join the "mosques of harm" (masājid al-ḍirār) which Allāh Almighty and His Messenger ordered to be burned and removed.

(5) Zionist and American Normalization Projects:

Today's American strategic offensive relies on disseminating projects of an intellectual, cultural, methodological, or university-academic nature in Arab and Islāmic countries. Their goal is, on the one hand, to spread colonial culture and, on the other, to produce generations of local Americanizers, or to send them to America and some allied countries to obtain degrees, gain experience, and qualify to become the rulers and figures of the upcoming American era in the "Greater Middle East." American media outlets promote these American-made splinter groups and encourage joining them among ethnic or religious minorities, or among the financial, political, and social elites in Arab and Islāmic societies. These projects include initiatives like the "Wādī 'Arabah Project" on the Israeli-Jordanian border. These institutions and facilities are primary targets for the resistance, to be demolished, destroyed, and subverted. Those who graduate from them, collaborate with them, and are major supporters of them are among the most important targets for elimination and assassination. They are apostates and hypocrites, among the foremost leaders of disbelief (a'immat al-kufr) who revile the religion of Allāh and betray the Muslims.

(6) Prominent Revilers of Allāh's Religion and Fighters Against the Mujāhidīn from Among Media Figures and Colonialist Intellectuals:

This is a column that has begun to expand significantly these days, consisting of writers, poets, thinkers, authors, or journalists. These are the ones who today launch attacks on the tenets of Islām and its defenders with utter frankness, openly, day and night, without fear or shame. They have transgressed against Allāh's religion and against the worship of the mujāhidīn. Under the guise and cover of the "international campaign against terrorism," as they call it, they reveal their deep-seated hatred for Allāh's religion and His allies. The Islāmic Awakening (al-Ṣaḥwah al-Islāmiyyah), its figures, and its institutions have been drawn into a vortex of engagement with them through dialogues and satellite channels, and this is good.

However, the contest proceeds under the banner of "respecting the other" and "recognizing the other's opinion," and this is false. These individuals are not merely ignorant or dissenters to be debated kindly. Most of them are originally Muslims who are, in reality, apostates, or they are non-Muslims from the outset, such as Christians and disbelieving minorities in Muslim societies. They are not under a covenant of protection (dhimmah), and even if they were, it would have been nullified by their launching of propaganda campaigns against Islām and its people. The Qur'ān explicitly names these individuals "leaders of disbelief" (a'immat al-kufr) and has ordered that they be fought and assassinated. Therefore, they must be killed in response to His Almighty's command in His Noble Book: {But if they violate their oaths after their covenant, and attack your religion with disapproval and criticism, then fight the leaders of disbelief - for surely their oaths are nothing to them - so that they may stop} (Al-Tawbah: 12).

(7) Advocates of Degeneracy, Immorality, and Vice, and Institutions that Spread Lewdness Among Those Who Believe:

Today's American Crusader-Jewish invasions rely on destroying the religious, moral, cultural, and intellectual foundations of Muslims. Among their methods is the propagation of a culture of degeneracy, vice, adultery, and debauchery, unveiling, nudity, free mixing, and various forms of social corruption. Many media and propaganda outlets have been established for this purpose, employing many figures from thought, art, literature, and other fields. Among their most potent tools today are satellite television stations funded by millionaires of prostitution and corruption, from certain Gulf and Saudi financiers and others like the "emir of prostitution" (Al-Walīd bin Ṭalāl bin 'Abd al-'Azīz) and his network of satellite channels. Rotana and others. And now... Some honorable media outlets and some figures of the Islāmic Awakening attempt to confront this putrid torrent and sweeping epidemic of the culture of corruption, degeneracy, and vice through dialogues and counter-guidance. They try to spread a culture of virtue and preserve the Ummah's religious and moral identity. This is good, but it is not sufficient. When germs, epidemics, and locusts spread, they are not combated with dialogue! Rather, they are combated with pesticides and germ-killing medicines. This is self-evident to any rational person. Therefore, it is an obligation according to Sharīʿah, reason, and logic that these institutions, their senior figures, their advocates, and those in charge of them be targeted for demolition, destruction, and the assassination of their leaders. Such as the aforementioned ill-reputed Emir Al-Walīd bin Ṭalāl and his ilk, and the likes of Rotana satellite channel, programs like "Video Club" and "Star Academy," and other manifestations of the creeping plague transmitted via Lebanese and other satellite channels that promote vice and corruption. The tear has become too wide for the patcher, so this does not necessitate opening a war against every minor and major figure among them, but rather against the heads—the artistic, literary, and, above all, financial heads who fund these gateways of Satan against the Ummah's religion and morals. Allāh Almighty says: {Indeed, those who like that immorality should be spread [or publicized] among those who have believed will have a painful punishment in this world and the Hereafter. And Allāh knows and you do not know} (An-Nūr: 19).

A Very, Very... Very Important Note:

There are some affiliated with the sector of Muslim scholars or preachers and leaders of the Islāmic Awakening who have deviated, either out of greed for worldly gains and positions with their governments, or out of fear of their oppression and being accused of terrorism and violence. They began to hum the tunes of "moderate Islām," "respecting the other," and "centrism," presenting a distorted Islām tailored to American specifications. Some of them have gone as far as attacking the obligation of Jihād and the principle of resistance. They have started to fight the mujāhidīn in the path of Allāh, launching a relentless attack on the resisters, their leaders, and their mujāhidīn from Allāh's soldiers. They issue religious edicts declaring them to be spreaders of corruption in the land. They advise rulers and colonial authorities that these individuals are dissenters (Khawārij) and spreaders of corruption, and they permit their killing, imprisonment, and torture. Indeed, it has reached the point where they presume to speak for Allāh, claiming that this elite group of mujāhidīn are not martyrs and will not enter Paradise! Moreover, they have begun to call on the Muslim masses to cooperate with the security forces of apostate rulers and colonial authorities in exposing the secrets of the mujāhidīn and reporting them, under the pretexts of cooperating against terrorism or preserving Muslim interests.

Here, I draw attention to a very important matter:

Although many of these individuals have thereby fallen under the ruling of apostates and hypocrites who fight against the believers due to their allegiance to the tyrant (ṭāghūt) and the invading disbelievers, and the blood of many of them has become permissible (ḥalāl) according to Sharīʿah due to apostasy, treason, and waging war against Allāh, His Messenger, and the believers;

However:

Nevertheless, one of the strategic foundations of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance is that the weapon of confrontation against this errant faction of callers to Satan and scholars of the Sultan, the callers at the gates of Hellfire—those who respond to them, they cast therein; is through argument, clarification, and Sharīʿah-based, political, and rational real-world evidence, and not with weapons or the sword.

Even though many of them deserve it. This is to avert great harms, such as the evident harm of placing the sword among Muslims, the fanaticism of their followers towards them, their fighting against the mujāhidīn, their turning against the resistance to join the enemy camp, and other such great harms.

So, the confrontation with these individuals, as we affirm and reiterate, is through argument and evidence presented by those qualified to do so—people of knowledge, the pen, and literature. It is not with weapons.

Weapons are to be directed offensively at the chests of the invaders and their major collaborators among the leading apostates and traitors, as we have explained, and defensively against those soldiers of the tyrants who intend to fight the mujāhidīn. This is an extremely important strategic principle among the foundations of the political and military theory of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance.

Secondly: Striking the Invaders Militarily in Their Homelands – in the Heart of America and in the Territories of Its Allied Nations:

Regarding striking America or any of its allies in their own territories, targeting one nation while sparing another, or targeting them and then ceasing to target them, or refraining from targeting them and then targeting them again—this is not the place for its discussion. Rather, it was addressed in the first and second chapters, which dealt with the Sharī‘ah-based, doctrinal, and political dimensions of the fundamentals of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance. Here, however, we examine the matter from its military angle, in the event that it is politically expedient to target a particular nation.

If targeting a particular nation is permissible according to Sharī‘ah and serves a political interest for the resistance, then the most important targets that must be struck are the following:

Most Important Military Targets in America and Its Allied Western Nations:

- (1) Key political figures leading the campaign against Muslims, such as heads of state, ministers, and military and security commanders.
- (2) Major strategic economic targets, such as: stock exchange headquarters, energy and oil complexes, airports, seaports, railway networks, bridges and highway junctions, road tunnels, subway networks, tourist destinations, and other sources of economy and resources.

(3) Military bases and barracks of army concentrations, especially American military bases in Europe.

(4) Media personalities and centers that wage war on Muslims and fuel the attack against them, from Zionist, Crusader, and pro-Zionist media institutions.

(5) Information centers and central computer systems that control the linking of various state institutions, as this would completely paralyze activity in those countries.

(6) Jewish gatherings, personalities, and institutions in Europe, while avoiding places of worship and synagogues.

(7) Official offices of government institutions of warring states at the national level, and at the level of political and military unions and alliances if they participate in aggression, such as NATO offices, the European Union, and so forth. These require decisions that are carefully studied politically.

(8) Central security and intelligence buildings in American capitals and allied Western countries.

(9) Striking civilians in general in cases of deterrence and reciprocity (while avoiding women and children if they are separate from men in designated places such as methods and other such locations).

This would be, for example, in response to a barbaric act committed by America and its allied forces. The target that deters nations and topples governments is mass human slaughter. This is achieved by targeting human gatherings to inflict the largest possible number of human casualties. This is very easy due to the abundance of targets such as crowded sports stadiums, large annual festivals, and major international exhibitions. Crowded markets, skyscrapers, and densely populated buildings, and so on.

Here, attention must be drawn to the observations concerning the targeting of civilians that we mentioned in the second chapter on political theory, as well as the Sharī'ah guidelines detailed in the third chapter in the section on Sharī'ah rulings of Jihād. In this situation, there are very many easy targets that ordinary resisters among Muslims residing in America and its allied Western countries can strike to participate in Jihād and resistance and to offer aid to the mujāhidīn. This can be done through acts of popular resistance, such as sabotaging economic targets and burning forests during hot summer periods, as part of civil resistance actions. Here, we must draw attention to the difference in confronting America versus Europe, as we previously mentioned when discussing political theory. The confrontation with America is primary, while that with Europe is secondary, aimed at pressuring it to withdraw from the alliance.

Thirdly: American and Allied Targets in Islāmic Countries, Other Third World Countries, and Elsewhere:

- (1) American and Western economic targets in various countries around the world, due to their ease and abundance.
- (2) Diplomatic targets such as embassies, consulates, and missions.
- (3) Economic interests of America and allied nations in those countries.
- (4) American and Western delegations and missions (in allied countries), including sports, commercial, and tourist groups.
- (5) Military bases and military missions – land, sea, and air.

This is a broad field for contributions. However, those involved must pay attention to Sharī'ah guidelines, political interests, and security considerations. More details on this will follow, if Allāh wills.

There is a final observation regarding targeting objectives in the heart of enemy countries—America and its allied Western nations. This is to avoid targeting places of worship of any religion or denomination, whether Christian, Jewish, or otherwise, and to avoid harming civilians from those countries who have no connection to the conflict, even if they are non-Muslims, in order to preserve the reputation of the resistance before various segments of public opinion.

The Strategy of Deterrence Through Terrorism

The theory of terrorism is based on deterring the enemy through fear. As Allāh Almighty says: {And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war by which you may terrify the enemy of Allāh and your enemy and others besides them whom you do not know [but] whom Allāh knows. And whatever you spend in the cause of Allāh will be fully repaid to you, and you will not be wronged} (Al-Anfāl: 60). And as Allāh Almighty says: {So if you gain dominance over them in war, disperse by [means of] them those who follow them that perhaps they will be reminded} (Al-Anfāl: 57).

The resistance is fundamentally in a state of war with the invading campaigns. It must deal with them using the method of terrorism and confrontation, as we have explained. However, there are primary or secondary parties that enter the line of this confrontation from time to time, either out of fear of America and its allies or out of greed for what it promises them. The resistance must not overlook the importance of deterring these parties. It must prove that its arm is long and can reach anyone who dares to aggress against Muslims and the resisting mujāhidīn or to support their invading enemies.

For the most part, the majority of our enemies who support the American invasion, especially in the sector of apostates, collaborators, hypocrites, corrupters, and claimants of culture and progress, are a group of cowardly mice, from their senior kings, presidents, and emirs down to their most junior writers, media figures, and cronies of all stripes. Most of these are deterred and learn their lesson from striking some of them and making an example of them, whereupon most of them withdraw from the confrontation.

The principle is that any state, even if not allied with America, that arrests a mujāhid, resister, preacher, or scholar and hands them over to America or to their own government to be subjected to killing, imprisonment, or torture, should immediately receive a deterrent operation from any Muslim or resistance detachment capable of performing this obligation. This is a duty to support Muslims and deter those who harm them, especially those who capture them and hand them over to their enemies.

The principle is that any act of killing civilians, any harm to peaceful Muslims, or any action taken by the forces of a warring state should be met with a reciprocal deterrent action, as Allāh Almighty says: {So whoever has assaulted you, then assault him in the same way that he has assaulted you} (Al-Baqarah: 194). The principle is that any state that enters into an alliance with the Americans with any military, political, or security support should immediately receive a deterrent strike to dismantle the joints of this criminal alliance, and so on.

But what is happening so far is the opposite.

Muslims, mujāhidīn, and resisters accused of terrorism are, in fact, among the most terrorized, and have been for decades. They are terrorized by their rulers, by their security agencies, by America and its pursuits, by spies, and by all the accomplices in this wretched chain.

All these real terrorists, starting with America and its chain of allies and hypocrites, have managed to invert the image in the media and politically, portraying us as rejected terrorists in the eyes of public opinion, and this is the field of their real success.

There is no solution to this except what is necessary in terms of intensifying efforts in da‘wah (call to Islām), media, and propaganda, and political action based on knowledge, understanding, and awareness of what is happening in today's world, in addition to real military deterrence.

Armed terrorism has proven its effectiveness throughout history as one of the best political means to persuade an adversary to submit to an active will.

I am writing these lines a few days after a deterrent operation carried out by a mujāhid detachment in Spain on March 11, 2004. They carried out a series of bombings that resulted in about 200 deaths and 1,700 injuries, according to Spanish statistics. Its main results were as follows:

1. A shift in public opinion in Spain, which, according to polls three days before the parliamentary and presidential elections, was leaning in favor of the right-wing party and its leader (Aznar), allied with (Bush), who had sent about 2,000 Spanish soldiers to Iraq. Public opinion immediately shifted in favor of the Socialist Party, which opposed this alliance and whose leader (Zapatero) had pledged to withdraw Spanish forces if his party came to power. This led to the latter's victory in the elections, and thus the operation toppled the government and removed a key ally from America's side with a single operation that cost a small group of martyrs and prisoners. May Allāh reward them well and accept from them.

2. The new prime minister's announcement of the withdrawal of Spanish forces from Iraq, which were hastily withdrawn shortly thereafter, followed by the withdrawal of Honduran soldiers. Thus, a single deterrent operation led to the withdrawal of an entire army and state from the war.

3. The entire Euro-American alliance was shaken, and statements began to emerge from several countries considering withdrawal. This was the first real deterrent operation since these unjust campaigns against Muslims began more than 14 years ago.

I discuss this operation as an example for research on the political impact of military deterrence. Otherwise, there are some important observations and political calculations regarding such operations, which must, before a decision is made, be subjected to precise Sharī'ah-based political calculations that take into account interests, harms, political balances, and the benefit to Muslims.

Unfortunately, since these unjust campaigns were launched in 1990 until today:

- More than 300,000 people were killed in the first Iraq war, and more than one and a half million children died under the siege over 13 years.
- In the recent war to overthrow Saddam, about 10,000 civilians were killed, and tens of thousands are in prison today. Allāh has exposed America's actions in those prisons.
- Thousands have been killed in Palestine, and the Israeli sword continues its work.
- More than 200,000 Muslims were killed in Bosnia, and more than 60,000 cases of rape of Muslim women were recorded there, resulting in thousands of children born of rape, abandoned by their mothers to be taken into church basements and Christianized!
- More than 300,000 Muslims have been killed in Chechnya, honors violated, homes demolished, thousands imprisoned, and hundreds of thousands displaced.
- Tens of thousands were killed in Afghanistan during the civil war ignited by America and managed by Pakistan. Then more than ten thousand were killed in the latest attack in December 2001. America filled Guantanamo with hundreds of innocent prisoners!
- Thousands were killed in Indonesia, and Christians buried some of them alive, burned them, and filmed themselves eating their flesh.

- And much more in the Horn of Africa, Central Africa, the Philippines, Thailand, and Kashmir.
- The number of Muslim prisoners, including Jihādīs and Islāmists, in all Arab and Islāmic countries has reached tens of thousands, without accountability or oversight. Scholars have been imprisoned, preachers abducted, symbols killed, mosques and Islāmic centers burned in Europe and America, and Muslim immigrants from Islāmic communities assassinated unjustly and aggressively, and so on.

So where is the deterrence of these alleged Muslim terrorists? Truly, real terrorism in its correct sense would be ashamed to be associated with us! We are at the bottom of the list of those terrorized by all forms of disbelievers, apostates, and oppressors.

Then came the September events, for the Zionist-influenced West and the Americans to pay a small bill of what they owe from a heavy reckoning, and the world has been in an uproar ever since!

Pedants will philosophize to us about the blood of the protected, the covenanted, civilians, and treacherous Muslim hypocrite collaborators, and all the other claims of evil jurists.

But the Jihādī resistance, in reality, targets only those who deserve to be deterred by terrorism and those designated for elimination, those deserving punishment according to the laws of Heaven and even the legislations of Earth. Indeed, it refrains from targeting many who deserve such deterrence in order to ward off harms and attract benefits.

Many details regarding the rulings on targeted blood have been covered in the section on Sharīʿah rulings in the third chapter; it should be referred to in its place.

I add:

This fierce international onslaught cannot be deterred by a few Jihādī organizations or tens or hundreds of mujāhidīn here and there. Resistance must transform into a strategic phenomenon, a model like the Palestinian Intifāḍah against the occupation forces, settlers, and their collaborators, but on an expanded scale that encompasses all parts of the Islāmic world primarily, and whose deterrent arm reaches the heartlands of the American invaders and their disbelieving allies of every race and in every place.

The Ummah must mobilize, with all its segments, for resistance and deterrence. We will explain in the following section the operational mechanism of the resistance from a military and operational perspective to achieve such deterrence, by Allāh's permission.

The Operational Mechanism of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments, Their Military Theories, and Their System of Operation

Our deduction of the military operational mechanism for the call of Global Islāmic Resistance was derived through the study of the three preceding methods, meticulous and lengthy research into the old methods we practiced in past Jihād experiences and their outcomes, and through studying the reality of the balance of security and military power between us as Jihādīs and resisters in general, and the size of the American and allied forces, both external and internal, especially since the recent assault on Afghanistan and Iraq and the other pursuits elsewhere.

For several years, my thinking has been focused on finding a method that meets the minimum following conditions:

(1) Opening the possibility of participation to thousands, or rather hundreds of thousands or millions of Muslims sympathetic to Jihād and the causes of their Ummah, whom the limited capabilities of Jihādī organizations cannot accommodate, and most of whom do not want to be bound by this commitment and its security and personal repercussions. Likewise, they are unable or unwilling to expose themselves to security risks by joining open fronts, which also have limited absorption capacity.

(2) Finding a method for clandestine work through which we can overcome the security problem of eliminating the entire organization due to the arrest of some of its members, resulting from the torture of prisoners and security pursuits that have transitioned from the national to the regional to the international level, thereby completely aborting the idea of clandestine urban guerrilla warfare from its foundation.

(3) Finding a method that transforms the wonderful individual initiatives that have occurred over the past decade from scattered emotional impulses and reactions into a guided and utilized phenomenon, thereby advancing the Jihād project to become a battle of the Ummah rather than a conflict of an elite.

(4) Imbuing individual actions with a characteristic of general unity for a resisting Jihādī current suitable for the current phase, around which the masses of the Ummah can rally. This method should combine a form of centrality at the level of affiliation, slogans, symbols, and ideas, with a lack of central linkage so that it cannot be aborted by security forces.

In short, I was searching for a method that the enemy has no way to abort, even if they understand it and its techniques, and even if they capture two-thirds of those involved in it; a method capable of renewing itself and continuing as a phenomenon after all its conditions and causes have been created by the enemy itself. Thus, the idea was practically born in my mind through contemplation of the meaning of the noble Qur’ānic verse:

{So fight in the cause of Allāh; you are not held responsible except for yourself. And incite the believers [to fight] that Allāh will restrain the might of those who disbelieve. And Allāh is greater in might and stronger in punishment} (An-Nisā’: 84), and what some commando mujāhidīn undertook in individual operations.

I secretly disseminated it in a statement titled: "A Statement for the Establishment of the Global Islāmic Resistance" in late 1990 or early 1991. Then, the idea was developed in stages, as I mentioned in the introduction, until it reached its final form in late 2000 in Kabul. It has now matured with the study of the repercussions of the confrontation methods between us and America and its allies in the post-September world and the invasion of Iraq, to take the form I present here.

Characteristics of the Operational Method of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments:

1. A System, Not an Organization:

It is a system of operation, not a centralized organization for action. The idea is based on linking all spectrums of resisters—individuals, cells, detachments, and limited groups—by only three central links:

The Central Links of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments:

- 1 - The common name and a personal covenant with Allāh Almighty to belong to it.
- 2 - The Sharī'ah-based political methodology and common doctrine, and a covenant with Allāh to adhere to it.
- 3 - The common goal, which is resisting the invaders and their allies, and a covenant with Allāh for Jihād in His path to defeat them, then working to implement His Sharī'ah.

This is done in the following manner:

(1) Disseminating the ideology of the resistance call, its methodology, its action programs, its performance method, and its operational theories in the eight aspects we mentioned (combat doctrine, political theory, comprehensive tarbiyah (training/education) method for resisters, military theory, media and incitement theory, then operational theory which includes methods of training, financing, organization, and operational security). This is to mobilize the youth and men of the Ummah who are determined to resist on any of its general fronts, especially the military front.

(2) Directing the youth to strike enemy targets, especially in our lands—which is the primary arena of resistance—and in their lands as an arena for deterrence and reciprocity. This must be in accordance with the Sharī‘ah guidelines of the methodology and political interest calculations, in order to achieve the political return and the goal of resistance.

(3) Guiding the youth so that each group prepares itself, with the necessary military training, and carries out operations commensurate with the training and preparation capabilities it has achieved. This ranges from methods of popular resistance to complex strategic operations, passing through all forms and levels of guerrilla operations, whether in cities, rural areas, or other types of clandestine guerrilla warfare.

(4) There is no organizational link of any kind for all those belonging to the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments except for the link to (the methodology of belief, the system of operation, the common name, and the common goal).

(5) Every detachment (sariyah), composed of one or more individuals, is considered an independent unit headed by its emir, who manages its affairs. It directs itself immediately to military action and does not engage in any form of organization, da‘wah, incitement, or other activities of secret groups. Rather, it forms itself, chooses its target, and attacks it. It then informs any media outlet (using a secure method we will indicate in the media theory) that it is detachment (so-and-so), by its chosen specific name, and emphasizes that it is (one of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments - min Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah), which indicates the methodology of those who carried out the operation and links their action to the collective output of the resistance detachments. We will provide more organizational and practical details in the theory of operation and movement, if Allāh wills.

(6) The idea is to gather the efforts of resisters who practice individual Jihād, remnants of the Jihādī current and its supporters, new sympathizers, those resentful of the American invasion, and those wishing for practical action from various segments of this Ummah at all levels. These efforts are to be regulated by a common method and common methodology to achieve the result. It aims to transform individual Jihād into a phenomenon that consolidates the collective effort under one name, for one goal, and under one slogan, governed by a single political, Sharī‘ah-based, and educational methodology.

Benefits and Advantages of This Method:

(1) The method opens the way for the lone individual who wishes to work completely alone and does not trust partnering with anyone, or for the very small detachment of a few men and friends who trust each other, to form a detachment of two or more persons who pledge among themselves and pledge to Allāh to join (the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments - Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah) with their peers everywhere, from every color and race of Muslims. Thus, this method provides them with homogeneity, security precautions, and capabilities, and opens for them the field of broad joint action without linkage. It guides them to act where they are and where they can, without burdening themselves with the costs of traveling to confrontation zones or joining an all-encompassing organization that obligates them to what they cannot bear according to their convictions. This is a very large segment among Muslim youth.

(2) The method allows for complete disconnection between these cells, so that if every active and implementing cell were exposed, it would not affect those who are working or intend to work, because there is no link of any kind between them. It is a form of (organization of the idea) rather than (the idea of organization), and a (system of operation) rather than (the operation of an organization). This is the only way to continue in light of the fierce security onslaught we are witnessing today, faced by everyone who wants to engage in Jihād.

(3) The gathering of efforts under a single name suggests to the Ummah the existence of an organization, a guiding entity, and a center that links the collective by virtue of the common name, shared combat doctrine, and detailed educational method. This raises morale and motivates a_l-mutaraddidīn_ (the hesitant) to join a caravan moving within a well-structured secret operational system. The common name, goal, and ideology also suggest to the enemy the existence of a single organization behind these actions; an organization that guides with ideas, trains with instruction, unifies with a common goal and name, and manages from the shadows and from a distance. However, when the enemy comes to capture it or some of its parts, they discover that they have captured nothing significant compared to the rest of the body, which is an Ummah engaged in Jihād, not a group of mujāhidīn from a passive Ummah.

(4) The cumulative arithmetic progression of mujāhidīn operations: This is very important. We will launch the idea and disseminate it completely with all its requisites, by Allāh Almighty's permission and facilitation, through every means: directly, by correspondence, or via communication networks, the Internet, and various publishing media—written, audio, and visual. We will try, over time, to have it translated into the living languages of Muslim nations and major world languages. If we assume, as we hope from Allāh, that some individuals believe in this idea and contribute to one operation at least once a year—and this is easy if we open before them various types of targets, military terrorist ideas, and popular resistance methods, up to complex operations by cells that have received some training. Let us assume that throughout the length and breadth of the Ummah, with its hundreds of millions of oppressed and rebellious people, in the first year of disseminating the call, twelve groups consisting of an individual or a small band of friends become convinced. If each of these groups operates decentrally once a year, the outcome will be 12 operations per year, meaning one operation per month initially. If the number reaches fifty-two mujāhidīn or cells, each operating once a year, the outcome would be one operation per week. This is beyond the capacity of any secret organization or armed gang. If the operations are attributed to a single unifying name (Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments - Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah) and under one ideology, slogan, and goal, the presumed result, by Allāh's permission, will be the incitement of hundreds and thousands. Then, individual operations and contributions will gradually become a real phenomenon, as is the slogan of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance: Jihād and Resistance: A Battle of the Ummah, Not a Conflict of an Elite. By coordinating with other resistance fronts we will direct—civil, media, intellectual, and political resistance—we will reach the desired goal, by Allāh Almighty's permission. This is a comprehensive Ummah-wide uprising across the Islāmic world and wherever Islāmic communities of various nationalities exist, similar to the Palestinian Intifāḍah, but primarily against America, then its external and local allies everywhere, within the aforementioned Sharī‘ah-based and political guidelines. Then, by Allāh's permission, cells will emerge that operate not just once a year, but more frequently. By discovering the arithmetic progression, we find that it is possible to reach tens of operations or more per day, if Allāh wills. Thus, we place the task of Jihād on its correct path, like the obligation of prayer and zakāh. This requires uniting the efforts of scholars, preachers, writers, orators, thinkers, and authors, so that all of them contribute to incitement, each according to their capacity and what their situation and style allow, to stir emotions so that the effects eventually manifest in the form of a detachment from the desired resistance detachments, by Allāh's permission.

(5) The idea of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments (Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah) allows, indeed includes, the idea of each detachment naming itself with its own chosen name, whether it consists of one mujāhid, two, five, or more. This gives the detachment a sense of its own production and the association of its name with its output, which is a natural human feeling and desire. It also opens the door for competition among detachments and resistance commando teams, each according to its size. This generates competition and haste in the path of martyrdom, obedience to Allāh, and harming His enemies. Thus, a comparison can be drawn between the idea of the spread of resistance and the bond among its members and detachments—which have no operational link between them—and the idea of the Sufi orders (ṭuruq ṣūfiyyah) in their spread without connection to a leadership or even knowledge of the guide (murshid) and shaykh of the order. The fundamental difference, however, is that the method of Global Islāmic Resistance is a comprehensive method that adopts the creed of Ahl al-Sunnah wa al-Jamā‘ah and the jurisprudence of their recognized schools of thought (madhāhib) and their eminent imāms, and is based on a comprehensive understanding. It is a comprehensive doctrinal, Jihādī, political, behavioral, and educational method. Just as some orders spread until their followers number in the millions from all countries of the world, with no link other than the name of the order, its methodology, its educational program, and its historical symbols, we hope that this method of Global Resistance will spread, where the list of martyrs in the resistance will provide the poles (aqṭāb) and symbols of this comprehensive Jihādī method.

(6) The idea of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments (Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah) is based on the homogeneity of the detachment within the choice of its members regarding schools of thought within Ahl al-Sunnah, and a general political, security, military, and educational understanding suitable to their situation and place of operation, without this conflicting with the diversity at the level of the detachments as a whole and the call for resistance with all its military, civil, da‘wah, political, and media axes, and other fields and axes of resistance.

(7) Ease of affiliation and immediate commencement of work without the complexities in stages of organization, formation, and education (tarbiyah) as is customary in traditional groups and organizations. As we explained in the theory of education, the slogan for performing the obligation and its timing is the saying of the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, "Embrace Islām, then fight":

The method of Global Islāmic Resistance considers fighting the invading enemies of Allāh and those who ally with them and fight Muslims alongside them an individual obligation (farḍ ‘ayn) like prayer and zakāh. It considers the timing for performing this obligation in our current circumstances to be immediate; the responsibility falls upon a person as soon as they embrace Islām. As the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "Embrace Islām, then fight." Thus, anyone who is a Muslim, even if they embraced Islām an hour ago, after the occupation began and Jihād became an individual obligation, the obligation is incumbent upon them. As for the stages of education in Jihādī doctrine, political understanding, and comprehension of Sharī‘ah rulings, these are accomplished over time, but the emir of each detachment or group must strive to qualify himself and those with him through the detailed and accessible program of the resistance call, presented in an easy and simplified manner. Therefore, whoever wants to engage in Jihād and belong to this call need only make a firm decision, pledge to Allāh to adhere to its methodology, name, and slogans, and embark on the path of direct action within their capability. This is especially true for those who have previously received military training, whether in a Jihādī group, an official military institution, or an unofficial one. The issue, at its core, as we will explain in the theory of training, is based on the reality that the foundation of a mujāhid's work, especially in guerrilla warfare, is the principle of (the will to fight), providing it, and raising its level.

Types of Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments and the Level of Their Military Operations

Levels differ from one detachment to another in terms of military, material, and logistical preparedness, which also makes their eligibility to carry out the operations, some examples of whose targets we have indicated, different, both domestically and abroad.

Here we distinguish between several types of detachments according to their technical, military, technological, security, and financial capabilities, in the following sequence:

Firstly: Popular Resistance Detachments:

These detachments consist of individuals and small groups with limited capabilities in terms of funding or training level, and they constitute the overwhelming majority of Muslims. These individuals can carry out simple, low-level actions from a military standpoint, but the importance of their participation lies primarily in their sheer numbers if resistance becomes a phenomenon. They will not allow the colonizer to establish any firm footing in our lands and will cause enormous disruption if the phenomenon of resistance spreads within Muslim communities residing in countries participating in the war against Muslims, especially Western countries.

Secondly: General Military Detachments:

These armed detachments, with limited capabilities, consist of individuals who have previously received moderate-level training in the use of individual light weapons and explosives. Most of these are remnants of Jihādī current cells and organizations, or mujāhidīn who have previously participated in Jihād fronts such as Afghanistan, Chechnya, Bosnia, Kashmir, the Philippines, or elsewhere, or have received training through other means, or through their service in the security or military agencies of their countries. Material and security obstacles may prevent these detachments from carrying out large, resounding special operations. However, their military contributions are fundamental in the guerrilla warfare waged by the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments due to the abundance of this type of Jihādī cadre in the Arab and Islāmic world, and even among Muslim communities in warring countries. They number in the tens of thousands of Jihādīs and resistance supporters, not to mention the hundreds of thousands, or even millions, of men who have served in a governmental security or military apparatus in their lives, either in general courses or as professionals who have since left or are still in service, and who are strongly motivated by religious, national, or patriotic feelings, or by a living conscience.

Thirdly: Special Operations Detachments:

These are detachments with high security, operational, military, and material capabilities. They are formed from elements or groups that have received advanced training in the security field for clandestine work, urban terrorism, cell management in guerrilla warfare, communication technologies and their security, as well as advanced military training in the use of weapons and explosives, especially guerrilla warfare tactics in various conditions, particularly the manufacture and use of explosives and mastery of different detonation methods, especially electronic ones. They also have an important factor for operation: high financial capabilities that enable these cells to operate at a high level within the primary main resistance arena or in the external arena inside enemy countries—America in the first degree, then its allied nations.

Fourthly: Strategic Operations Detachments:

These are special detachments that can be formed by those who meet the following conditions:

1. A strategic understanding of the nature of the conflict and its current state politically, militarily, and strategically in general, and the ability to conduct a Shari‘ah-based study of major operations and their political effects, in order to lead and manage this type of detachment.
2. Very high financial capabilities to qualify such detachments and finance their operations.

3. Very high security and operational capabilities for the mobile elements involved in action and execution.
4. Very high military capabilities for the mobile elements involved in action and execution.
5. Knowledge and operational capabilities in possessing and using weapons of mass destruction when needed for reciprocity or for the strategic resolution of the conflict with America.

These detachments can be formed by an elite of Muslim financiers who believe in the resistance methodology, in cooperation with senior veteran Jihādīs, and in collaboration with some honorable individuals who previously worked in the former security services of Muslim countries' governments, as well as veteran military officers, strategic scientists in military fields, and some sincere retired politicians or even those still working in some Arab or Islāmic government agencies, whose loyalty to their religion, Ummah, and country can be trusted, along with their discretion and belief in the program of Global Islāmic Resistance. It is sufficient for these to accomplish one decisive-scale operation every year or two. Allāh is the Granter of success, and to Allāh belong the soldiers of the heavens and the earth. And none knows the soldiers of your Lord except Him.

Terrorist Culture, Terrorist Aptitude, and Acquired Traits of a Guerrilla Fighter

Terrorist Culture

It is the set of knowledge, information, and general culture possessed by a fighter using the "terrorism" method, especially in urban guerrilla warfare. This includes, in brief headings:

- Practical involvement in public life and knowledge of people's activities.
- Knowledge and reading of books on intelligence, espionage, and clandestine wars.

- Knowledge and reading of intelligence methods in investigation, interrogation, and inquiry, information gathering, security pursuits, espionage, eavesdropping, and their modern tools and devices.
- Knowledge and reading in forensic science and security methods in following up on security incidents, criminal incidents, and the like.
- Knowledge and reading of the history of special operations and details of their events, whether military operations carried out by elite military commandos from guerrilla groups and international armed groups, as well as the reasons for the success and failure of these operations, especially major ones.
- Knowledge of the working methods of so-called "counter-terrorism units," their weapons, training, and operational methods. Study of some of their successful and failed operations in various countries around the world, especially during the last ten years.
- Knowledge and reading of books on "guerrilla warfare" in its various forms: urban, mountain, forest, or rural guerrilla warfare, desert guerrilla warfare, tunnel warfare, and so on. Other types of these wars, the arts and weapons of each type, their methods, the history of their experiences, and their famous schools in modern history, especially in major revolutions during the colonial era in the interwar period, then the period of struggle against American imperialism after World War II, especially in South America, Africa, and some other countries in Asia.
- General sciences and knowledge that aid in guerrilla warfare in general, especially urban guerrilla warfare or acts of urban terrorism, including:
  - Computer science; it is today one of the most important sciences that aids in all other fields of science and culture, as well.
  - General knowledge of electricity, electronics, and electronic devices. It is useful to have general knowledge of mechanics and machinery, especially vehicles and weapons, and how to handle, repair, and modify them as needed.

- Some general information and readings on history, politics, economics, and on the geography, climate, economy, roads, and infrastructure of the country in which one operates, as well as customs, traditions, and general aspects of human life activity in the operational area of a guerrilla fighter or a mujāhid using guerrilla warfare methods, and so on.

This collection of sciences and knowledge forms a culture in the mujāhid in the field of urban guerrilla warfare or so-called "terrorism." This knowledge cultivates a culture in the terrorist and develops in him the aptitude—the aptitude for terrorism in selecting targets, the nature of operations, the feasibility of their execution, their requirements, and their consequences from other political and security aspects, and so forth. I indeed suggest to those supervising the preparation of terrorist cells and detachments that they add to their preparation programs a subject called "terrorist culture," which includes this and comprises a library recommended to the trainee for reading and self-education.

The Terrorist Aptitude:

I recall giving a lecture in a cadre qualification course for al-Qā'idah, for some selected Arab mujāhidīn youth during the Afghan Jihād in 1989, titled: "Terrorism is an Aptitude."

Indeed, after long contact with the Jihādī current, training and operational fields, and interaction with hundreds of mujāhidīn of various nationalities, types, and levels, in addition to extensive readings that Allāh Almighty facilitated in these areas, I saw that readiness for work in the field of terrorism is based on three foundations:

(1) Aptitude. (2) Broad general culture. (3) Acquired traits and preparation.

While the level of culture of a mujāhid can be raised, and likewise the level of preparation and acquired traits can be raised, and this affects the refinement of the aptitude, the aptitude remains fundamental in producing a terrorist proficient in his work and performance.

From this perspective, the aptitude for terrorism is like the aptitude for poetry, music, painting, and various other arts, literature, hobbies, and other general mental and practical aptitudes: it is a talent. There are individuals inherently qualified with innate capabilities to be successful terrorists who excel at selecting, planning, and executing operations, and who understand their political calculations and their Shari‘ah-based and ethical controls, and so on.

Trainers and supervisors establishing resistance detachments must discover these talents and refine them with culture and training so they can take their place in leading terrorist actions in this blessed type of Jihād.

Acquired Traits of a Guerrilla Fighter:

This is the set of sciences, capabilities, perceptions, knowledge, and physical and technical abilities that a guerrilla fighter is trained in, in various direct military fields such as the use of different weapons, and what follows from that or other subsidiary sciences. I will leave delving into some details of this to the chapter on preparation and training, as Allāh Almighty facilitates, and He is the One whose help is sought.

Finally, at the conclusion of the military theory, after reviewing the two fields of resistance work—open fronts and individual terrorism—it is worthwhile to touch upon the relationship between these two types of Jihād before concluding this chapter.

The Relationship Between Open-Front Jihād and Individual Terrorism Jihād

Some details of this paragraph will come in the chapter on organizational theory, but some ideas can be summarized in this paragraph as follows:

(1) With strict security controls that must be adhered to, detachments operating in the field of individual terrorism Jihād can benefit from open fronts in raising the military and general training capabilities of their elements.

(2) Some elements working in the field of recruiting and building detachments can benefit from open fronts in recruiting certain elements coming for Jihād, selecting them, and sending them to work in their countries or wherever they can in the field of individual or cellular Jihād terrorism, while observing a very important note: this should not take the form of organization and central linkage.

(3) Open fronts can serve as a refuge and safe haven for those who are pursued and wanted, who have worked in the field of individual terrorism Jihād, have been exposed, and can no longer continue openly nor can they hide.

(4) It must be emphasized that resistance detachments working in the field of clandestine operations must maintain their clandestine methods when they move to work on the fronts, and not switch to open work and da‘wah; this is a fatal flaw and a dangerous pitfall resulting from the secure and emotional atmosphere.

(5) Members of secret resistance detachments, if they go to open fronts, must operate under the command of the emirs of those fronts, especially local ones, or the general administrations that arise if such situations are repeated. They must work under their administration with sincerity and dedication as long as they are in those environments. They should seek to be present on the front lines of combat and in preparation camps to perform the obligation sincerely, to interact with the mujāhidīn, and to spread the call and its methodology secretly as much as possible.

(6) As for what the fronts gain from individual and cellular Jihād detachments, it is that the work of these detachments serves as a long arm for the Jihād of those causes. Through their work, they can provide the necessary deterrence to aggressor forces, eliminate enemy leaders, operate behind enemy lines, and carry out special operations in cooperation with the emirs of those arenas and causes, secretly and systematically.

And now, in conclusion, we appeal to whomever this call reaches:

O mujāhid youth! O honorable men of this Ummah! O loyal ones resolved on Jihād! Today, determination has died in most of the men of the Ummah, and weakness has struck it due to love of this world and hatred of death, especially since the Caliphate of Muslims and their political entity fell and their enemies colonized them.

We must revive the Ummah and take it by the hand out of this moribund state.

During the first American advance on Iraq in 1991, some mujāhid youth would cross the Jordan River with a knife, a pistol, or whatever was available, searching for a Zionist soldier to strike down and contribute to the Jihād of this Ummah. Some mujāhidīn would go to the ends of the earth to carry out an operation behind enemy lines in response to aggression against this Ummah, or to join a Jihād front that they could only reach with great difficulty.

Now, the matter has become easy. America has brought us hundreds of thousands of soldiers and experts and deployed them in our midst, in addition to hundreds of thousands of civilians working in other colonial fields—political, economic, cultural, and otherwise. The matter to which we call does not require affiliation with an organization, nor does it necessitate travel or emigration, nor a change in lifestyle.

All that the matter requires is:

- A firm personal decision to perform the incumbent obligation, and a definite resolve to contribute to Jihād and resistance.
- A covenant between you and Allāh Almighty, then between you and those with whom you will work, to belong to the resistance call.

- Form your detachment (sarīyah), and thereby you become a member of this call, and a detachment within the global resistance detachments.
- Strive to understand the methodology, apply its educational program, and proceed with it patiently as much as you can.
- Prepare yourself and those with you as much as you can.
- Take the initiative to act, for Jihād is an individual obligation. Choose an enemy target that suits your material and military capabilities.
- Be deliberate and think. Design your plan and seek Allāh's guidance (istikhārah). Then proceed.

And welcome to the path of the two goods: either victory or martyrdom. It is a call to action and martyrdom, not a method of debate nor a methodology of hearsay and excessive questioning. The Ummah has had its fill of that, and it has led to our current state.

Allāh is the One whose help is sought, and it is time for mobilization (nafīr). {Indeed, Allāh has purchased from the believers their lives and their properties [in exchange] for that they will have Paradise. They fight in the cause of Allāh, so they kill and are killed. [It is] a true promise [binding] upon Him in the Torah and the Gospel and the Qur'ān. And who is truer to his covenant than Allāh? So rejoice in your transaction which you have contracted. And it is that which is the great attainment} (Al-Tawbah: 111).

Organizational Theory and System of Operation for the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments

The theory of operation and organizational construction is based on the fundamental rule and slogan of the operational method, which is: "A system of operation, not an organization for operation" – "A system, not an organization." This means that the Islāmic Resistance Detachments build their operational method, as partly explained in the military theory, on the basis of a system for action and for consolidating the results of efforts, not on the basis of centralized organization. Let us explain this further:

Foundations and Components of Building Traditional Organizations:

In a lecture I delivered in Peshawar in 1990, I summarized the components and foundations upon which traditional organizations are based, which are five:

- 1. Methodology (Manhaj): This is the ideology and operational doctrine upon which the members of the organization converge.
- 2. Leadership (Qiyādah): This includes the Emir, the consultative and administrative council (Shūrā), and the decision-making process.
- 3. Plan (Mukhattat): This is the program of the operational strategy to achieve objectives.
- 4. Funding (Tamwīl): These are the material means sufficient to meet the needs of implementing that plan.
- 5. Pledge of Allegiance (Bay'ah): This is the system of linkage between the emir and the subordinate in that operational chain.

Foundations and Components for Building the Call for Global Islāmic Resistance and its Mujāhid Detachments:

As I explained in the military theory and throughout the preceding discussion, the foundations of construction in our call are based on:

- Belief in the ideology of the call, its fundamental and Jihādī doctrine, and its Sharī‘ah-based political theory.
- Working to achieve the common goal, which is repelling the assaulting invaders and fighting those who assist them.
- Application of the comprehensive educational methodology (tarbiyah) by the members.
- The method of operation and movement, which includes the specific details in the theories (military, organizational, preparation, training, funding, incitement).
- Carrying the common general name of the detachments alongside the specific name of the individual detachment (sarīyah).
- A covenant with Allāh Almighty to adhere to the methodology and work towards achieving the goal.

If we were to make a comparison between the components of traditional organizations and the components of the operational system of the Global Islāmic Resistance call’s detachments, we would find it summarized according to the following table:

Basis of Action – Components of Traditional Organizations – Operational System of Resistance Detachments

Goal: To overthrow the government and establish a legitimate government in the specific country. Resistance to repel the assaulting invaders and their assistants.

Methodology: Ideology and methodology of the Jihādī organization. Methodology of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance.

Leadership: Central Emir and leadership. General guidance for the global detachments, and the specific emir for the individual detachment (sarīyah).

Plan: Operational program of the organization. Resisting the occupation and striking it everywhere.

Funding: Funding sources of the organization, its expenditure program, and its sources from donations. Specific funding for the detachment (sariyah), its source being spoils of war (ghanā'im) and donations.

Pledge of Allegiance and Covenant: Central pledge of allegiance to the Emir. Covenant with Allāh for Jihād and resistance, and a covenant to obey the emir of the detachment (sariyah).

The resistance call is based on decentralized cells. Its mujāhid detachments are based on individual action and the action of completely separate and completely decentralized small cells. As we mentioned earlier, they are linked only by the common goal, the common name, the methodology of belief, and the educational method.

Building Cells and Detachments (The System of Building and Operation):

When I finalized the theories of resistance in their current form in 2000 in Kabul, under the shadow of the Islāmic Emirate in Afghanistan during the Taliban era, and began attempting to build its first nucleus on the ground in Afghanistan, the formula for organizational construction was as I explained it in the series of lessons "Jihād is the Solution" and the video lessons "Resistance Detachments," in the form that I will clarify in this paragraph. After this clarification, I will mention the modification that the repercussions of the September events and the American campaigns forced upon us, compelling me to adjust the idea to suit the current reality.

The Three Organizational Circles of the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments:

Firstly: First Circle – The Central Detachment (al-Sarīyah al-Markaziyyah):

Its primary mission is guidance, direction, and da‘wah (call). This is achieved by disseminating the literature of the call, its Sharī‘ah-based political, educational, and operational methodologies, and delivering them to various segments of the Ummah. It also involves issuing media and methodological statements in the name of the call and its detachments, ensuring they encompass its ideology, methods of performance, and viewpoint. Additionally, it includes building the central detachment operating militarily on the front that was open in Afghanistan, and working through communication with whomever could be contacted to build relationships of cooperation and coordination with non-central detachments that carry the resistance call and operate completely separately on the operational level.

Secondly: The Coordination Circle or Decentralized Detachments (al-Sarāyā al-Lāmarkaziyyah):

This consists of elements with whom contact was possible and who were subjected to comprehensive intellectual, methodological, and educational qualification courses—intellectually, behaviorally, militarily, and operationally—through direct interaction. The program for these elements is to depart from the front and disperse throughout the land, each according to their circumstances and life, and to operate freely and completely separately from the central detachment from an operational standpoint, linked only by the name, goal, doctrinal and educational methodology, and method of operation, with all contact completely severed. The advantage of these detachments over the next type is that their leaderships were directly educated in the ideology of the call, enabling them to correctly transmit the methods of education and the methodology of belief, thought, and action. They were also proficiently prepared militarily, enabling them to disseminate the necessary military sciences.

Thirdly: The Call Circle - the General Detachments of the Call for Global Islāmic Resistance:

These detachments are the foundation of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance, which raised the slogan: "Resistance: A Battle of the Ummah, Not a Conflict of an Elite." Here, the call and the conveyance of the idea, through all concise and detailed methods, are aimed at enabling youth determined for Jihād to enter the call and form their own completely independent detachments to participate in the resistance without any operational link to the center. The link, as we mentioned, is confined to the common goal, the common name, the common Jihādī doctrinal methodology, and the comprehensive educational methodology. The published methodologies provide them with all the necessary materials to complete their self-preparation wherever they are, so they can commence work with clear insight and through a clear, disciplined methodology. An element joining the general detachments of the call is only required to believe in the idea, make a firm intention, join the call, and educate himself and those with him on its methodology over time, beginning work according to the methods and ways explained in the published methodology and literature of the call.

In the writings and recordings where I explained this method, I focused on the fact that the basis of the call and its strategic field is the third circle, the detachments of the call (Sarāyā al-Da‘wah)... (Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments - Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah). We have laid out details explaining to adherents of this method the ways to establish their detachments and their method of operation, which I will clarify below. But before that, I point out:

However, the repercussions of the September events and the fall of the Emirate of Afghanistan, and the complete collapse of centralized confrontation theories with the overwhelming American military offensive—materially, technologically, and humanly on every level—and the confirmation of this in the limited confrontations that took place between the exposed, centralized mujāhidīn forces and the forces of these American campaigns in Afghanistan, then in Pakistan, in Iraq, and some other hotspots like Yemen and elsewhere, fully affirmed to me the strategic importance of clandestine individual action and focusing on the primary circle in the resistance call, which is the circle of the general call.

For I believe that it may be a long time—and Allāh knows best—before we, or other mujāhidīn if we remain until then, will be able to centralize again and operate face-to-face through static defense and frontal confrontation.

Given the current situation, we must operate through two circles: the first and the third.

The First Circle: The Guidance Center:

This supervises guidance and direction, disseminates the methodology and educational programs, and issues the necessary statements and research to follow up on that. It operates secretly, in a manner appropriate to the circumstances.

The Third Circle (Detachments of the Resistance Call / Sarāyā Da‘wat al-Muqāwamah):

These are the detachments that we hope from Allāh, and expect, will form spontaneously by those wishing to operate according to this methodology and method. Through the communication of the call to Muslim circles, who are driven by all surrounding circumstances to engage in resistance, these will be formed, by Allāh's permission. This will occur through clandestine da‘wah work to convince these segments of the necessity of methodological discipline for the resistance, and the necessity of working through the principles of this call to consolidate efforts and attempt to reach the strategic goal, which is to repel the aggression and defeat the Nazi-like campaigns and their American-Zionist leadership.

If Allāh grants me life until the balance we hope for is achieved, enabling us to centralize and conduct static defense again, I will work to resume what I began in forming the three circles in a practical way. That beginning was promising and encouraging, and I am not in the process of reviewing that experience, which collapsed like other Jihādī attempts amidst the repercussions of September and the fall of the Islāmic Emirate of Afghanistan.

I hope, if that balance is achieved and the mujāhidīn are able to centralize after I have met my Lord—and I ask Him for mercy, forgiveness, and martyrdom in His path that pleases Him—that Allāh will appoint some competent mujāhidīn cadres to work on what I dreamed of and worked for: the formation of the "Guidance Office for the Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments (Maktab Irshād Sarāyā al-Muqāwamah al-Islāmiyyah al-‘Ālamiyyah)," and the professional central detachment for this call, in which I summarized the essence of my operational and Jihādī experience and ideas over a quarter of a century of experience and work, and I ask Allāh for sincerity.

I hope the idea has matured and contains a serious contribution among the sincere and serious contributions to repel the assaulting invaders and their assistants from this weakened, believing Ummah, whose time for resurgence has come, by Allāh's permission.

Now I will return to further explanation that will help those who are convinced by this Jihādī call for resistance to form their completely independent secret detachments.

Types of Global Islāmic Resistance Detachments According to Their Operational Tasks:

Elements and Detachments that Build Operational Detachments:

These elements and detachments specialize in spreading the idea of the call for Global Islāmic Resistance, convincing Jihādī cadres and youth determined for resistance of the idea of the call, and urging them to quickly form their independent detachments. They prepare them intellectually, militarily, and in terms of security, providing them with various Sharīʿah-based, political, military, and security research, and qualifying them to train their own elements and themselves to become effective detachments. Another potential task for such building detachments is to provide the nuclei of detachments with funds that help them get started, where they can procure them.

The necessary qualities for elements and detachments that will undertake the mission of building detachments include:

1. They must not be exposed and must be able to move freely and securely within the environments they live in.
2. They must understand the methodology of the resistance call and have the intellectual capacity to explain it and call to it, along with a reasonable level of Sharīʿah-based, political, and operational understanding.
3. A high level of understanding and security aptitude in movement to qualify others for clandestine movement.
4. An appropriate level of ability in clandestine training on light weapons, explosives, and other light guerrilla weapons.
5. Ability to connect with some sources of funding for the resistance to provide the operational detachments they have formed with the initial push to start working.

Operational Detachments:

These consist of one or more elements. It is preferable that the number of a detachment does not exceed five to ten at the most. They should form spontaneously upon learning about the idea and its literature and believing in belonging to the call and heading directly to work. Or they can be formed with the help of an element from the builders of detachments from the aforementioned cells. The mission of these detachments is to devote themselves to Jihādī work and engage in combat immediately, and to educate themselves on the methodology of the call autonomously. They should not be drawn into expansion and transformation into building other detachments, and they must resist the natural inclination and desire for expansion for fear of turning into small organizational hierarchies. This is very dangerous and will lead to their swift capture—may Allāh not decree it.

Secret Incitement Detachments:

These detachments are formed from very small cells of (1-3) elements, who possess Shari‘ah-based, political, and intellectual competence, media experience, operational awareness, and experience in using the Internet and electronic communication networks. The mission of these detachments is to spread the call for resistance, rebroadcast its literature, research, studies, and various methodologies through secret publishing means, especially (the Internet), and to work on translating resistance research and statements into Muslim languages and major world languages. Attention must be paid to the security of distributing materials, such that these detachments devise their own methods of operation according to the capabilities of each country and place they operate in.

Some explanation of the operational methods of these detachments will be provided in the chapter on the theory of media and incitement.

Explanations on the Method of Building and Operating Secret Detachments

The Method of Building Multiple Detachments by Elements that Build Operational Detachments:

We previously discussed the hierarchical organizational building method and its danger, where the arrest of any element in the pyramid leads to the arrest of those with him, below him, and above him in the organizational pyramid. Thus, the circles of arrest widen until destruction befalls the entire organizational pyramid. If we had an organizational pyramid.

The arrest of an individual will lead to their confession regarding those at their level and those above them. Similarly, it will implicate those with similar responsibilities. Thus, the tragedy repeats with the arrest of those below and above. Brutal and unethical methods of arrest and torture have led to the abortion of the strongest secret organizations everywhere throughout past experiences.

As previously explained, some organizations adopted the cluster method, leaving the heads of the clusters in a country other than the one in which they operate. The leadership resides in a safe place and communicates with or meets field command elements, who also reside in a safe place. These elements manage hierarchical organizational clusters operating within the target country. If the pyramid linked to the main element is eliminated, it does not lead to their arrest, and the chain of collapse is broken at that point. This method succeeded in giving some Arab, Islāmic, and even international organizations a margin for maneuver. However, current international cooperation in combating terrorism has eliminated it. A government's request for a wanted element leads to their arrest by another government and their confession about individuals in other countries, who are then arrested within hours or days at most, after the slogan of eliminating safe havens was raised. When the leadership of organizations resorted to some havens outside the control of the international system, such as Afghanistan and Chechnya, it was part of the enemy's programs to overthrow them and subject them to the control of the international system. Thus, the cluster method of management from safe havens was aborted. The era of such organizations has definitively ended and cannot return except with the destruction of the new world order, and Allāh Almighty knows best. This is the goal we seek to find a way to achieve, with Allāh's help.

As for the method we propose to the builders of the brigades, it is as follows:

The active element from the builders of the brigades, who must possess among his most important characteristics prior security, Sharīʿah, and cultural eligibility, numerous acquaintances, and the ability to influence a wide circle of others.

He selects some of his acquaintances whom he believes are qualified to lead brigades. He broaches the subject with each of them separately and in complete isolation, gradually, after verifying each one individually. He prepares them separately or with one or two assistants at most. He prepares them during a preparation period using printed and audio daʿwah curricula, especially this book, and my series of lectures titled "Jihād is the Solution, Why and How," and my video-recorded lectures titled "Brigades of Global Islamic Resistance." The most important are the studies in this book due to their comprehensiveness and the precision of their information. I also have a number of recorded lectures on "Principles of Guerrilla Warfare," which are useful as military education for secret wars and guerrilla operations. They consist of three sets: (concise lectures in two tapes), (lessons in six tapes), and the most extensive, a course of (32) cassette tapes, which is (Explanation of the Book "War of the Weakened"). This is one of the most important books that explained guerrilla warfare and showed the reasons for its success and failure. The book I explained is about 170 pages and is translated from an American author specialized in counter-guerrilla warfare.

It is also beneficial in preparation to utilize available security and military research, now accessible on the Internet in multiple languages. I intend, if Allāh facilitates, to prepare some concise summaries of that, along with some intellectual studies complementing what is contained in this book, which collection of the most important necessities for intellectual, Sharī'ah-political, and operational preparation.

The builder of the brigades must also subject them to an intellectual, security, and military preparation program for a period I estimate not to exceed one or two months if an intensive course method is followed with them. This concerns intellectual preparation, which is the most important; methods of secret military preparation will be explained later, Allāh willing.

Thus, let us assume that the element (builder of the brigades) has prepared four or five completely separate brigades that do not know each other and know nothing about each other.

A, then B, then C, then D, then E, leading to F.

Now, each one of them is assigned the task of building his brigade from two or three elements, or alone if he wishes, and a date is set for them before which they do not begin work, so that he (the builder) distances himself from their area, because he is the sole fatal point for these groups.

Shortly before this date, the founding element from the builders of the brigades must have departed to a destination unknown to them, so that these elements cannot lead to him.

Either to one of the open fronts in areas of no control, or to another country with personal papers whose information no one knows, or to complete disappearance in a new arena.

Or, it might be part of the founding element's program to carry out a martyrdom operation after building a number of brigades, because he represents the only security weak point for the brigades he built. For if any brigade is arrested, they have no way to confess except about him, as they do not know the others.

It is absolutely essential for the founding element to be careful that nothing in his speech or movement, even by way of indication or encouragement, suggests to some elements that he has recruited others, such that some of them might guess who these others are and confess about each other based on suspicion.

A brigade can also be formed spontaneously without an external founder building it. It can operate in resistance directly and not work on inviting others. This occurs when a man becomes convinced to join the call to resistance, forms his small brigade, or works by himself or with a convinced assistant. They prepare themselves based on these studies, name their brigade, and operate directly. They do not seek to organize others, nor do they work in the field of da‘wah and incitement, but rather dedicate themselves to direct action. These are the highest security precautions. Anyone with minimal experience and knowledge of training and the principles of secret work will realize that a small brigade of two or three elements, qualified in security and military aspects, and possessing a high "terrorist culture," can carry out enormous actions and move its operations within its country across several cities, making it seem to those who do not know it that there are tens of active groups in the country. I have many stories, living testimonies, and wonderful examples of this, which space does not permit me to narrate.

Caution Against Mixing the Brigade's Military Work with Media and Da‘wah for the Method

The mujāhidūn who are building their brigades must exercise extreme caution against mixing da‘wah activities with military ones, for by doing so they harm themselves and others.

The principle is that whoever receives the idea and is convinced by it should form his brigade by himself, alone, and work within his capabilities if he has no trust in others. Or with two or three at most whom he trusts, forming a single brigade. They should work silently and with devotion in the military field, choose an enemy target from those previously mentioned or indicated, and carry out an operation, even if only once every few months. They should report their work in a suitable, secure, and brief manner.

Be aware: Calling to organize others, propaganda and media work, and fundraising are methods contradictory to secrecy and direct action, and they never combine.

The combination of these contradictions in our Jihādī operational history has led to real disasters. This is one of the most important lessons from past painful experiences.

The principle of "public da‘wah, secret organization" is one of the most failed operational principles, and its practice has led to bloody disasters. Whoever works in da‘wah and incitement should leave secret combat work, and vice versa. Know that while the Ummah needs tens of thousands of commando fighters today, a few inciters through verbal da‘wah are sufficient for it.

The practice of combat, harming the enemies of Allāh, and sacrificing oneself in the way of Allāh are the most eloquent messages of incitement that an Ummah, negligent of Jihād, needs to awaken from its slumber.

Practicing incitement does not absolve the Muslim from the individual obligation of combat today, the neglect of which is considered like abandoning prayer, zakāt, fasting, and Ḥajj, indeed, worse than them, due to the resulting harm to the Ummah, such as the domination of its enemies and the loss of its religion and worldly affairs. So do not deceive yourselves.

And fear Him who knows the secret and what is more hidden, and He will reveal what is in the hearts when what is in the graves is scattered. Indeed, our Lord is All-Aware, All-Seeing of His servants.

The Call to Resistance is a Call for Serious Action

The mujāhidūn must be aware that a few brigades are sufficient for incitement; the urgent need is for active brigades. The fundamental important obligation is combat ({So fight in the way of Allāh; you are not responsible except for yourself}). As for incitement, it is a communal obligation for those capable and qualified for it.

So, the active individual should not leave a way for Satan to make him sit back from action by convincing him that he is inciting others or recruiting others. This is from the deception of Iblīs (Satan). The task of recruiting others is a great responsibility because, as we mentioned, it requires him to completely disappear from the arena in which he recruited other active individuals. Therefore, the principle is that a person recruits himself and works with those directly connected to him.

Participate in the Arithmetic Progression of Resistance

I reiterate what I mentioned in the chapter on military theory: the importance of the idea of the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades comes from its spread and the accumulation of efforts. As I stated earlier, if twelve brigades were formed throughout the length and breadth of our Islāmic world, and each brigade operated once a year, we would have a monthly operation. If they operated twice, there would be an operation every 15 days. Even the strongest organizations cannot achieve this. So what if, within a year of launching the idea, 100 people are convinced, 50 of whom succeed in operating, and each one carries out two or three operations a year? The outcome will be that the efforts of the resistance brigades are mentioned several times daily over time. This harms the enemy and motivates Muslims to act. This is what is hoped from Allāh, Glorified and Exalted, that He blesses this idea, prepares its men for it, blesses all our efforts, shows us the defeat of the enemies, and seals our lives with martyrdom in His cause.

The Theory of Training in the Call of the Global Islamic Resistance

A Review of Old Training Methods Adopted by Jihādīs in Past Experiences

Following our aforementioned method of deriving the appropriate theory and successful methods, by Allāh's permission, we deduce the training theory for the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades by studying the training methods adopted in our previous Jihādī experiences. These are methods in most of which I, by Allāh's grace, had the opportunity to work over the past years, first as a trainee, then as a trainer, and then as a supervisor of training in our special program during the Taliban days. With a comprehensive view, we find that Jihādī experiences have used one of the following methods:

1. Secret training in homes.
2. Training in small secret camps in the areas of operation themselves.
3. Public training under the auspices of safe-haven states.
4. Public training in open-front camps.
5. Training in areas of chaos and lack of control.

Let us briefly shed light on the negatives and positives of each of these methods and examples of each, to choose the optimal method for training today in the circumstances of the post-September world and the global counter-terrorism atmosphere.

Secret Training in Homes

Secret Jihādī organizations used this method in all Jihādī experiences. Indeed, it can be said that this method is the basis for preparing all secret organizations and gangs in the world. Although it only allows for training on personal and light weapons and some lessons on the use of explosives and weapons of the first stage of guerrilla warfare, it has proven to be very effective. The foundation, as will be shown in guerrilla operations, is the moral impetus and the will to fight, not an increase in knowledge of weapons that the mujāhid will not practically use.

In this method, trainees learn to disassemble, assemble, and use weapons, and how to shoot them theoretically. They conduct some practical applications and limited shooting in empty areas, caves, or even basements insulated against sound leakage within the homes themselves. Often, the first shots fired by trainees are in a real combat engagement.

The mujāhidūn in the Syrian Jihādī experience (1975-1982) used this method, and it was successful and beneficial. Indeed, some mujāhidūn were able to kill some apostates and their collaborators by firing for the first time, and they developed their capabilities through live action. It was a unique experience. Similar occurrences took place in Jihādī experiences in other countries.

Training in Small Secret Camps

Jihādī organizations have used this method where some empty areas in mountains, forests, or remote agricultural countryside were available. The method involves subjecting small, limited-numbered groups, not exceeding a small brigade of 5-12 people. They are able to establish a mobile camp in remote, isolated areas and conduct intensive courses where some advanced military tactics for urban and rural guerrilla warfare, such as ambushes, raids, and other exercises, can be applied. This includes some limited live firing and detonations in areas near stone quarries and dynamited fishing spots where the sound of explosions is common, or even inside caves with small, limited quantities. It is a very effective method and sufficient for graduating mujāhidūn capable of entering battles of the first stage of guerrilla warfare, especially urban warfare.

Public Training Under the Auspices of Safe-Haven States

This method was heavily relied upon in the world before the launch of the New World Order. Many Jihādī organizations were able to benefit from the margins of political contradictions and regional and international axes of conflict, as I mentioned in Chapter Six, and established declared camps in countries opposed to the ruling regimes they had risen against. Among those experiences was our Jihādī experience in Syria; the mujāhidūn from the Fighting Vanguard and the Muslim Brotherhood in Syria were able to establish advanced camps in Iraq, where the Iraqi regime provided them with significant military and material assistance. During the period between (1980-1983), many batches of mujāhidūn graduated, having completed general and specialized courses that covered various types of ground weapons, up to medium and heavy, excluding aircraft. Something similar occurred on a limited scale in Jordan with the assistance of King Hussein's regime and the supervision of its intelligence agencies. Such a thing also began with Egypt, where a specialized team of mujāhidūn from Syria underwent high-level training in urban guerrilla operations and special operations under the supervision of the Egyptian General Intelligence service during Sadat's famous dispute with Syria and some Arab countries in mid-1981. I personally witnessed these experiences in Iraq and Egypt, and they were very beneficial, and we gained high expertise from them.

Practically all Islāmic and non-Islāmic organizations in Arab and Islāmic countries employed this method during the period from the early sixties to the mid-nineties, when it ended, as I mentioned, with the establishment of a system of security cooperation between Arab and Islāmic states under American supervision. Among those experiences were:

The work of Jihādī organizations in Syria with a number of neighboring countries; the work of organizations opposed to Saddam, especially Shiites, in Syria, Iran, and Lebanon; the work of most, if not all, Palestinian organizations in Syria, Iran, Lebanon, Jordan, Sudan, and elsewhere; and the work of Lebanese Islāmic and other organizations likewise. Some Egyptian organizations trained in Lebanon with Hezbollah and the Palestinians, and in Iran, as did some groups from Northwest Africa in Algeria, Libya, and some Central African countries, and vice versa. Indeed, this matter of margins extended to the entry of international military organizations such as ETA and the Irish Republican Army (IRA) for training and receiving support from Arab and Middle Eastern countries. The Turkish Kurdistan Workers' Party benefited from Syria, Lebanon, and northern Iraq, and the Iranian Mojahedin-e Khalq organization and others grew in Iraq, and so on. The examples are very numerous. This method is very important and beneficial if its circumstances recur, provided that organizations avoid the political and security negatives of such openness, as its military benefits are great.

Public Training in Open-Front Camps

The recent famous experiences are too well-known to require detailing, such as what happened in Afghanistan during the Afghan Jihād (1986-1992), and in the second phase for the Arab Afghans during the Taliban era (1996-2001), where tens of thousands of Arab and Muslim mujāhidūn trained during these two phases. Dozens of Jihādī organizations and many Islāmic, even non-Jihādī, organizations benefited from this wonderful margin. Similar events occurred on a smaller scale in Chechnya and Bosnia. This also happened in many revolutionary camps and open fronts in the Philippines, the Horn of Africa, Kashmir, and elsewhere.

Training in those camps was the best field of training ever, as military and educational training methods were integrated in all their aspects, completely freely, without being subjected to the pressures and directives found in the camps of safe-haven states, whose governments often impose certain political and ideological restrictions.

Semi-Public Training in Areas of Chaos and Lack of Control

Before the launch of the New World Order, areas of chaos and lack of control in the world were numerous, especially within the Arab and Islāmic world, and particularly in semi-autonomous tribal areas and remote regions far from the control of weak governments in some countries. Examples include tribal areas in Yemen, Somalia, and the Horn of Africa, tribal areas on the borders of Pakistan, and the long belt in the sub-Saharan African countries extending from Sudan to the Atlantic coast. It was possible, and perhaps still is, for many local and non-local Jihādī groups to benefit from these areas and establish semi-public camps where the atmosphere, weapons, and ammunition were available at low costs. However, after September, America placed controlling these uncontrolled gaps among its top priorities. Nevertheless, many gaps still remain suitable for utilization, especially for local groups or those close to those countries.

If we wish to record observations on the training and preparation operations conducted by Jihādīs during the past phase through these five avenues, we can summarize them briefly as follows:

1. Internal Training: In Homes and Limited Internal Camps:

In home training experiences, the level of military preparation was relatively low, but the security return was high, as it was conducted under conditions of great secrecy and precaution. Likewise, moral and ideological training was high and was reflected in the level of Jihādī creed, intellectual and political understanding, and the principles of Jihādī guerrilla warfare theory, especially in Jihādī experiences in Syria, Egypt, Libya, Algeria, Morocco, and others. I recall when I was a member of the training apparatus during our semi-secret stay in Jordan during the Jihādī revolution against the Syrian regime (1980-1982), we used to secretly teach more than fifteen theoretical military and educational subjects in homes scattered for the mujāhidūn in Amman and other Jordanian cities, and we would conduct examinations for the different cells. Afterwards, we would send those who passed to the camps in Baghdad, Iraq, where they underwent intensive and condensed courses because they had finished their theoretical training. Those who would specialize in military work were kept for specialized courses on various types of weapons, including tanks. We saw that the subjects that can be taught in homes are not few and are very important, especially the doctrinal and ideological ones. If the cells are able to establish limited and mobile camps, the practical circle is completed and achieves the best forms of preparation, even if it does not reach high military levels, due to the absence of security and political negatives as in the case of traveling to training camps abroad.

2. In Experiences of External Camps in Safe-Haven Camps in Other Countries:

A clear positive was recorded, which is the high military levels that some cadres were able to achieve through what the capabilities of states, their armies, and their security agencies provided in terms of preparation and its diverse and advanced materials. However, there were serious negatives that experiences revealed over time, including:

- The disclosure of many secrets of the organizations, both personal and informational, to the countries hosting the camps. This information became leverage for pressure and bargaining and ultimately ended up on the table of security and intelligence cooperation between states whose positions change in a Machiavellian and continuous manner. Experiences proved that this was a strategic fatality.
- This method enabled host countries to penetrate organizations, even Jihādī and Islāmīc ones, over time. They gained, for work under their administration and intelligence, some members of these organizations, especially when those organizations stayed for a long time in the host countries and developed political, media, and military structures, as in the Syrian Jihād experience, while its leadership was in Iraq and Jordan, as well as others. Over time, those states were able to interfere in the affairs of the groups and impose their will, making them regional political cards out of necessity, as those states pursued a policy of financial inundation and absorption, as we will refer to in the chapter on funding.

- The process of traveling to nearby safe-haven camps often constituted a security fatality due to the movement of mujāhid elements and their travel there. These were security traps for vigilant intelligence agencies in such cases, which in many instances managed to plant their agents in those camps and open environments that often drifted towards public activity and abandoned their state of security alert, especially as time went on and the travel of elements shifted from the goal of training and return to the scale of opposition groups migrating for settlement, thereby emptying the Jihād arena itself.

3. Open-Front Camps:

The archetypal example of this situation is the Afghan camps during the two Arab phases: the first during the Russian presence and the second during the Taliban era, as well as the Bosnian camps to some extent. Chechnya, however, did not constitute a training and recruitment ground for organizations and interested elements but was rather an arena for combat, Jihād, and direct action that produced high-level field cadres.

The positives of these experiences were (very significant) concerning the point we are addressing, which is training and preparation, especially in the military levels they provided. As for its negatives, the most important can be summarized as follows:

- The loss of opportunity for systematic education due to the multiplicity of organizations, arenas, attractions, and competition, which was often not regulated by Sharī'ah or reason in many cases, as previously indicated.
- The problem of exorbitant costs for trainees coming from the farthest corners of the world to the training arena (travel and accommodation expenses).
- The problem of security exposure, involving obtaining visas from embassies of neighboring countries, especially Pakistan, transit, and public movement. The easy spread of spies and agents for all forms of intelligence agencies, along with completely public movement for those present. The security problems that arose from their return and spread, and the way the entire world dealt with them in response to counter-terrorism campaigns, branding them as presumed terrorists. Many segments of them incurred severe losses and damages without any Jihādī return to justify that hardship.

4. Camps in Areas of Chaos:

Their use was not widespread in the past phase as a primary method. Their positives and negatives are close to the method of small secret camps, with the difference of high material costs to travel to them.

This, in brief and as a quick review, covers the most important negatives and positives of training methods in the pre-September world and the current American campaigns against the Islāmic world.

As for today, it automatically appears from the course of the campaigns that most of these methods have been eliminated by the removal of the opportunities that enabled them.

It is no longer possible or practical in the current circumstances to establish open fronts. Nor is it possible for states to open safe havens and camps for Islamists and Jihādīs. Areas of chaos are on the verge of being brought under American control and closed, as in the tribal areas of Yemen, the Sarhad tribal regions in northwestern Afghanistan, the desert belt in central Africa, and elsewhere.

Thus, it seems clear that the only method remaining possible for us now, in this world of American onslaught and international coordination for counter-terrorism, is secret training in homes and mobile camps.

The opportunities subject to methods of secrecy, indeed extreme secrecy, in these very severe and harsh conditions are what we will try to outline and explain to help resistance brigades and other mujāhidūn everywhere to train themselves and prepare their forces to terrorize the enemies of Allāh: the Americans, Zionists, and their allies.

However, before moving to the core of the subject, which is the essence of this section – the training methods for resistance brigades – I will present a set of concepts and points that help in understanding and comprehending the main section, which is the training methods necessary for us now.

The Concept, Reason, and Goal of Preparation

Preparation (I'dād): It is the acquisition of a set of knowledge, sciences, and cognitive and physical capabilities in order to perform the mission of Jihād, which is fighting in the way of Allāh. Its concepts, means, and objectives have been noted in the following two noble Qur'ānic verses, and many texts of the verbal and practical Sunnah have detailed this, worthy of being compiled into a separate book. However, we are here for brevity, and these two verses are His Almighty's saying in verse (60) of Sūrat al-Anfāl: {And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war by which you may terrify the enemy of Allāh and your enemy and others besides them whom you do not know [but] whom Allāh knows. And whatever you spend in the cause of Allāh will be fully repaid to you, and you will not be wronged}. And in verse (36) of Sūrat al-Tawbah: {And if they had intended to go forth, they would have prepared for it [some] preparation. But Allāh disliked their being sent, so

He kept them back, and it was said, "Remain with those who remain behind."}. Let us mention some of the benefits indicated by these verses:

As for the verse from al-Anfāl, it:

1. Establishes that preparation is according to ability, not beyond ability, which is the Sharī'ah obligation. So, every Muslim prepares his capacity and his weapon according to his ability.
2. Power and steeds of war: This is a comprehensive statement referring to all means of weaponry, instruments of war, and means of movement and transport. The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) explained it in his Ḥadīth, saying: "Indeed, power is shooting," repeating it three times.
3. The Qur'ān advised all Muslims to possess weapons and not be negligent of them, saying: {And let them take their precautions and their arms. Those who disbelieve wish that you would neglect your arms and your baggage so they could come down upon you in a single assault. But there is no blame upon you, if you are troubled by rain or are sick, for putting down your arms, but take your precautions. Indeed, Allāh has prepared for the disbelievers a humiliating punishment} (al-Nisā': 102).
4. The verse showed that the obligation of preparation is not merely acquiring knowledge, physical fitness, and other such things that have recently become common in preparation, like tourism without the intention of Jihād. Rather, preparation is for a specific goal: {Prepare... by which you may terrify the enemy of Allāh and your enemy and others...}. This was previously indicated.
5. Then the verse subtly pointed, after the command for preparation and possession of weapons and instruments of war, to spending, due to Allāh's knowledge of its costs and the limited means of most of those desiring Jihād.

So the verse commanded and concluded with the command to spend, and promised a great reward and provision from Allāh for it.

As for the verse from al-Tawbah:

It contains great indications and profound understanding of the relationship between preparation and faith, and its relationship with practical Jihād. Among its subtleties:

The verse spoke about the hypocrites and their claim of wanting Jihād, after the preceding verses had discussed the believers, stating that they strive with their wealth and their lives and do not seek permission to flee as the hypocrites do, whose hearts are in doubt and who sought permission to flee (for this reason, Sūrat al-Tawbah is called the "Exposer of the Hypocrites"). Here, the verse we are discussing comes to establish that one of the signs of the hypocrites' hypocrisy is their aversion to preparing for combat and Jihād, saying about them: {And if they had intended to go forth}, meaning if their resolve for combat and going forth to it were true, {they would have prepared for it [some] preparation}, meaning they would have prepared for combat what they need according to their means and their ability. It established that Allāh, Glorified and Exalted, disliked their being sent for Jihād and held them back due to His knowledge of their state, so He made them sit back as a mercy to the mujāhidūn, because the going forth of these people is mischief and harm.

Let us return to our topic, which is the relationship of Jihād with preparation. The verse indicates that its stages are in His Almighty's saying:

{And if they had intended to go forth, they would have prepared for it [some] preparation. But Allāh disliked their being sent, so He kept them back, and it was said, "Remain with those who remain behind."} (al-Tawbah: 46). What we understand from the indications of the verse is that its stages are three:

(Will/Intention) ... then (Preparation) ... then (Setting Forth/Mobilization).

This dynamic and logical order summarizes the mechanism of action in the act of Jihād and resistance.

The Will: The Will to Fight is a Prerequisite for Preparation, then Jihād:

All military schools agree that the will to fight and the morale of the fighter are fundamental to victory and good performance. The will is fundamental in every action and every aspect of all human activity.

Whoever seeks food, drink, marriage, trade, travel, or any matter, must begin that with a sincere will. The sign of the sincerity of that will is moving to the necessary preparation for that resolve.

In our case, which is Jihād, preparation is the fruit of sincere will. After the will and resolve are sincere, one moves to prepare according to ability and to terrorize the enemy of Allāh and the enemy of Muslims. After preparation, mobilization for combat occurs – if the resolve is sincere, what is possible is prepared, and the individual moves forth, mobilized, unless Allāh Almighty holds him back due to his mischief and insignificance – we ask Allāh for well-being and steadfastness – and unless Satan and his own inclinations of cowardice, weakness, and inaction overcome him, the cause of which, in short, as the Prophet (peace be upon him) said, is: love of the world and hatred of death.

This fighting will, which creates the incentive for preparation and activity, if it is very important and fundamental for the regular soldier, is the foundation of the movement of the guerrilla fighter in general, and the Jihādī resistance fighter in particular. Indeed, it is his primary weapon that moves him with whatever he can, even with civilian weapons if he finds nothing else.

A Strange Phenomenon in the World of Contemporary Preparation for Jihād

I have often pointed to this strange phenomenon, and I wished to correct it and straighten its crookedness due to its dangerous negative impact on the Ummah. It is known in the world of the inactive, hypocrites, and those fleeing from Jihād that they do not prepare, as the verse mentioned: if they had intended Jihād and mobilization, they would have prepared. But they did not intend, so they did not prepare, and consequently, they did not engage in Jihād.

However, what particularly caught my attention, especially in our great Jihādī experience in Afghanistan in both its first and second phases, was the arrival of tens of thousands of young men for preparation in the camps, not for the sake of Jihād! Rather, they explicitly stated that they came for the obligation of preparation! These tens of thousands returned to their countries, saturated with the military courses they underwent, during which they learned to use various types of weapons and combat tactics. Since that time, great events have befallen the Ummah, such as the deployment of American and allied forces in the Arabian Peninsula, then the occupation of Afghanistan, then the occupation of Iraq, and between and before that, the bloodshed in Palestine, in addition to the continuation of the apostate rulers' series of tragedies, betrayals, and the oppression of their agents. The overwhelming majority of those who prepared but did not mobilize showed no movement; rather, they submerged into a strange stillness.

Here, a new situation appears to us in the series of contradictions of the contemporary Ummah and manifestations of its fall and collapse, which is:

The phenomenon of those who prepared but did not intend to mobilize. They intended preparation while intending not to engage in Jihād; they intended inaction with premeditation and deliberation!

I am not here to discuss the reasons for this, as many of its causes have been mentioned. But I mention it here because of its relationship to preparation, which is empty preparation without benefit, constituting only an argument against its possessor for inaction despite expertise, and incapacity despite strength. And there is no power nor strength except in Allāh, the Most High, the Great.

Weapons of Resistance and Jihādī Guerrillas

I have indicated in previous recordings and lectures the foundations of guerrilla warfare, its stages, weapons, and military and political methods. Here, we are concerned with training on the subject of resistance weapons, focusing on them and adopting training methods according to need and the requirements of current circumstances. Just as guerrilla warfare is theoretically divided, according to various global experiences and the writers of this art, into three stages, the weapons of each stage differ. These stages are principally:

The First Stage: Called the Stage of Exhaustion.

This is the stage of small gangs and limited terrorism wars, where small-sized and numbered gangs adopt the method of assassinations, raids, small ambushes, and selected explosive operations to confuse the enemy, whether it be a colonial power or a despotic government, in order to bring it to a state of security exhaustion, political confusion, and economic strain.

The Second Stage: Called the Stage of Equilibrium.

In this stage, the gangs move to large strategic attacks and force regular troops into decisive battles that may lead to the dismantling of some of their units and the defection of some of their cadres, officers, and elements to the guerrilla forces. However, this is without reaching a state of open confrontations, as raids and ambushes remain the basis of guerrilla operations, albeit on a larger scale. Guerrillas in this stage may carry out temporary control operations over some areas to achieve important military, media, or political objectives, but they do not establish permanent bases.

The Third Stage: Called the Stage of Resolution or Liberation.

In this stage, the guerrillas engage in semi-regular and regular operations, control some areas, and launch a liberation process for the rest of the country. This occurs after units of the regular army have joined the rebels or guerrillas, and they have acquired the tactical and armament capability to enter confrontational battles, where small guerrilla units remain important for operating behind enemy lines to disrupt its forces with guerrilla tactics.

This very brief overview of the stages of guerrilla operations generally gives us an idea of the weapons for each stage. Books on guerrilla warfare have discussed this. In short:

Weapons of the First Stage

These are primitive weapons and individual weapons such as pistols, light and medium machine guns at most. Light anti-vehicle launchers like RPGs and their equivalents. Hand grenades, and popular and military explosives.

Weapons of the Second Stage

This includes medium and heavy machine guns that require more than one person or movement on vehicles, some medium cannons, especially mortars, as well as various types of mines. Some short-range, easily transportable surface-to-surface missiles, in addition to explosives, the use of which develops in this stage to the level of specialized engineering teams for the engineering use of explosives and mines.

Weapons of the Third Stage

This includes the rest of the army's weapons of all other types after they enter the revolutionary process and confront the disintegrating regular military units in favor of the guerrillas.

From here and through this introduction, we find ourselves, in light of the current situation and what is appropriate for the theory of Global Islamic Resistance in its political and military objectives, facing the first stage now. Our need now and for a period that will not be short is for the weapons of resistance and Jihādī guerrillas in their first stage, especially concerning the popular and simple Global Islamic Resistance Brigades, which adopt the war of attrition against American forces and their external allies and local agents, as I explained in the second (political) and third (military) chapters. As for areas where we are forced to confront with semi-open operations, as is happening now in Iraq, Afghanistan, and the peripheries of the Sarhad tribes, this calls us to develop second-stage weapons.

However, under the current overwhelming enemy strategy (air, land, and sea), and consequently our strategy, and our necessity to wage what are called guerrilla wars or wars of the weakened, our training needs are summarized in two headings:

- (1) - Adopting the method of secret home training and small, secret, mobile camps.
- (2) - Limiting training primarily to first-stage weapons, and second-stage weapons in some suitable arenas like Afghanistan, Iraq, and similar places.

The details of this are in the following section:

Training of Global Islamic Resistance Brigades: Method and Weapons

Our training theory is based on the following foundations:

1. Focus on doctrinal and ideological preparation and development of the will to fight and morale.
2. Focus on understanding the theory of Jihādī guerrilla warfare, or what is called the war of the weakened.
3. Disseminate ideological, theoretical, and military training curricula throughout the Ummah by various means.
4. Adopt the method of secret home training and limited mobile camps.
5. Develop combat proficiency through Jihādī action and engagement in battle.

Let us shed some detailed light on the aspects of this strategy in preparation and training.

As for doctrinal preparation, consolidating the principles of Islāmic creed in general and Jihādī creed in particular as a basis in the resistance process to create the ideological Jihādī resister, and raising the general climate in the Ummah to the level of Jihād and revolution against oppressors and their aides, this has been mentioned extensively in many sections of this series.

I only point out here that this must be done systematically and through an effort undertaken by every brigade, however small or large, under the supervision of its amīr, by preparing its members and cadres systematically by providing research, books, and compulsory readings according to their level of understanding and absorption capacity.

I have provided in this series of Resistance Messages a fair amount of methodological foundations. I recommend most of the writings of our martyr, Imām ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām (may Allāh have mercy on him), as he left a great legacy whose value is not yet known. In addition to using books from the traditional and contemporary Islāmic library that help raise the will to fight and incite to it with insight and knowledge, as I mentioned in the message on the theory of integrated education.

Focus must also be placed on understanding the theory of guerrilla warfare in general and the principles of Jihādī guerrilla warfare in particular, through methodological notes (I will try to provide summaries of them) appended to this series, Allāh willing, as well as through military offices and references that have discussed it. During the Afghan Jihād, in its two phases, I previously recorded a series of lectures on this art, which are a summary of many books and readings that Allāh guided me to, and I recorded their summary in those lectures. I mention them here due to their importance:

- (Lessons in Guerrilla Warfare) two cassette tapes, about three hours.

- (Management and Organization of Guerrilla Warfare) 6 cassette tapes, about 9 hours.
- Then the lengthy and very important research and course: (Explanation of the Book "War of the Weakened"), which is one of the most important translated books on guerrilla warfare, and I explained it in 36 cassette tapes, perhaps about 25 hours.

I will try, if Allāh Almighty grants me success and life, to transcribe these recordings and turn them into a book titled "Principles of Jihādī Guerrilla Warfare in Light of Contemporary American Campaigns." If that is not destined for me, I hope Allāh will grant success to someone who can transcribe the tapes as they are and phrase them in written language with extreme care to preserve their content without additions or comments. I ask Allāh to make them beneficial and to write their reward for me. This very important art of military science has few writings in the Arab library in general, and I do not know of important writings on it in the Islāmic and Jihādī library, or rather I have not come across such despite my search. I hope that with these lectures and the books emanating from them, if completed with Allāh's help, I will have filled an important gap.

As for this section, it is one of the most important pillars of training in our Jihādī call to resistance. It is the dissemination of the culture of preparation and training, its programs, and curricula in all its aspects through all means of publication, especially the Internet, distribution of electronic discs, direct mail, recordings, and every means.

Methods of Training Resistance Brigades Under American Campaigns

I believe that for a time I do not think will be short, it will not be possible, and Allāh knows best, to establish open camps like we did in the last decade. Security conditions have changed greatly. Not to mention that camps and fronts, however large, will not be able to accommodate the billion-strong Ummah and its Jihādī youth, who will soon be in the millions, Allāh willing. They cannot be accommodated in camps, and resistance brigades must maintain their secrecy and the secrecy of their entire movement, including training and preparation. Therefore, contrary to the training theory in Jihādī circles during the last two decades, which was based on calling the Ummah to camps, the training theory in our call to resistance is based on transferring the camps into the Ummah. Training must be transferred to every home, every neighborhood, every village in Muslim lands. This is by disseminating curricula and their details, especially military ones, and lessons on the use of weapons and combat tactics in a comprehensive militarization process for the youth, men, and even women and children of the Islāmic Ummah.

The issue is quite logical: the Ummah cannot be mobilized into camps, but camps can be planted throughout the Ummah in all its homes and neighborhoods.

This is if we want to achieve our slogan in the confrontation, which is: (Resistance is the battle of the Ummah, not the conflicts of the elite).

The method of home training and limited mobile camps must be used, as I mentioned. The weapons of popular resistance and Jihādī urban guerrilla warfare in the stage of attrition and confusion through terrorism are simple weapons: a pistol, a machine gun, a hand grenade, a rocket launcher, explosives. These are simple weapons, and training on them is very simple. Whoever has prior knowledge of these weapons and has received some training should train those around him, and the published simplified programs will greatly help in this.

But extreme caution must be exercised regarding explosives, limiting training on them in homes to theory, and going outside residential areas to handle their components, even simple ones, to avoid losses from accidents and the resulting security exposure.

As for shooting and practical application, it should be done by finding necessary locations and suitable conditions in caves, empty mountains, vast forests, deserts, etc., with extreme security precautions and placing warning points at great distances during the activity.

Adopting this method has become very urgent in the post-September world. I actually realized this some time before that and tried to disseminate this observation among the Arab mujāhidīn in Afghanistan during the Taliban era after the cruise missile targeting of al-Qā'idah camps in Afghanistan in the summer of 1998, and the precision I observed in the targeting, and the intensity of the firing, where 75 cruise missiles hit the targets within limited minutes, during which America managed to place a missile in every room of the camps. I spoke to many of our brothers then that the era of fixed camps had ended with this incident, and that we should adopt the method of home training and (nomadic mujāhidīn camps) as I called them: tents, two cars, a few members, and a camp in the wilderness applying the program and moving on, with others coming to another place, and so on. But Arab circles relied on propaganda, mobilization, and calling the Ummah to camps, and generally did not pay attention to the era of satellites and long-range targeting. And the decree of Allāh was a destiny ordained. Now, I see that the spread of knowledge about war experiences and its weapons makes everyone convinced to search for alternative means, and I see it only as secret warfare in everything: teaching, training, and execution, as long as modern American technology dominates space and air. I will give at the end of this message (an idea about programs for such training in secret home courses and nomadic mujāhidīn camps).

As for developing combat proficiency through direct action and engagement in battle, we have seen its effectiveness practically through Jihādī experiences in some Arab and Islāmic countries, including the Syrian experience, as well as in the Afghan experience in its phase.

The first brigades of mujāhidīn in the Fighting Vanguard of the Muslim Brotherhood in Syria adopted the following method in home training and application in the field of confrontation:

- The organization was divided into dormant, undiscovered elements not wanted by the regime, and another section of wanted individuals hiding in civilian bases in house hideouts.
- The dormant, undiscovered section worked on reconnaissance, information gathering, fundraising, recruitment, and some support operations.
- The exposed elements carried out basic military tasks, mostly assassinations, limited ambushes on security patrols, or attacks on some government intelligence centers.
- Training took place in homes on disassembling and assembling simple weapons, which were mostly pistols and some light machine guns, especially Kalashnikovs, in addition to some hand grenades. Some limited shooting operations were sometimes carried out in orchards and isolated areas. Training was supervised by those with previous experience from training with Palestinian organizations, especially Islāmic camps in 1969, or those who had served in some government military agencies.
- The untrained element would go out on a first operation merely as an observer, watching its execution with others. In the second stage, he would go out armed as a support element, intervening only if necessary. In the third stage, he would go out as an executor, supported by old, trained elements. After that, he would engage in training and field participation together.
- Thus, expertise developed through battle. Then, some elements began to be sent for training in Iraq starting in 1981, and they returned to introduce some medium weapons like machine guns, anti-armor rocket launchers, light mortars, and explosives.

- Some training camps were held even shortly before the Jihād began and during it, through scout camps and under the cover of youth trips, where physical fitness and weaponless military tactics were trained. Weapon use remained for limited cases. This method produced excellent cadres who performed well. The main factor was the very high will to fight and moral preparation. I have heard of similar experiences in home training and shooting in local camps in isolated areas from what happened in Egypt, Libya, Algeria, Morocco, and elsewhere.

As for the Afghan experience, the basis was to subject elements to good training courses before they moved to the front lines. However, I witnessed many cases and training courses through battle and the mixing of training with actual Jihād, and they were excellent experiences. I once witnessed a course on the use of mortars conducted directly on the front line during the Jihād against the Russians and communists. The trainer (Abū Hammām al-Miṣrī) – may Allāh have mercy on him – explained theoretical lessons on the cannon to us for two days. Then, practical application was done with live firing on enemy targets, which retaliated with similar shelling. Over three or four days, the trainees lived in excellent live conditions for training and combat simultaneously.

So, actual field training through battle is possible, effective, and has a special flavor and different effectiveness if some trained elements are available to supervise the training. I reiterate that I saw practically, through my work as a trainer during our presence in Iraq and Jordan during the Jihād against the tyrannical regime in Syria, as well as in the first and second Afghan experiences and in some other limited operational experiences, that the basis for producing a fighter is the will to fight and moral training. As for military training, it is essential and necessary, but it can be conducted even with the simplest means and conditions, and effectiveness can be compelled through engagement in action. Allāh Almighty's saying is sufficient: {And those who strive for Us - We will surely guide them to Our ways. And indeed, Allāh is with the doers of good}. Jihād's foundation is Allāh Almighty's support, guidance, and help in both training and action. The origin is the will. {And if they had intended to go forth... they would have prepared for it [some] preparation}.

A Brief Idea about the Training Program through Homes and Secret Mobile Camps

If Allāh facilitates, we will try to append to the Resistance Messages a military supplement with detailed course programs in some military sciences necessary for guerrilla warfare, especially urban and secret warfare, which is the basis of the resistance brigades' work in the current stage. The program should cover training on light weapons, mastering their marksmanship, the science of explosives and its annexes from some sciences in electricity and electronics, and some tactics of urban guerrilla warfare, Allāh willing.

But here I point to a light program that the simplest cells determined for resistance can apply in the most severe security and secret conditions. This program includes the broad outlines as follows from the training program:

- Subjecting the element himself and those with him to a focused physical fitness program by joining a sports club for a violent sport (wrestling, karate, judo, boxing, etc.) or a daily personal sports program that includes running long distances and times, and physical exercises that provide high fitness.

- Lessons on disassembling and assembling available pistols and machine guns by providing notes explaining their features, characteristics, handling, and firing.
- Starting with shooting air guns used for hunting birds; these rifles and pistols that use small lead projectiles are available everywhere.
- Theoretical study of the use of hand grenades by studying notes and practicing throwing them by throwing stones of similar size and weight.
- Theoretical study of the use of explosives, their properties, storage methods, and handling. Training elements on models similar to the basic materials: wooden models, ropes, and plastic models, without using the basic materials. Using electrical wiring to explain connection methods and small lamps instead of detonators. We tried this method practically, and it was completely successful. The theoretical explosives course consisted of about 40 hours of lessons on wooden and plastic models, where the use of explosives is mastered, leaving only application in a suitable place with very small charges.
- Mastering the use of wireless communication devices and studying a note on the security of their use, not using them in private homes but in open areas, and for training transmission periods not exceeding half a minute to avoid detection, and speaking in a manner similar to government agency communications.
- Theoretical studies including the following military and tactical materials through notes available today on the Internet and elsewhere. The most important of these notes are:
  - Notes on light and medium weapons.
  - Note on the science of explosives engineering.
  - Note on the science of military topography.

- Note on the science of wireless communications and cryptography.
- Note on security, movement, secret work, hiding, escaping security pursuits, and target reconnaissance.
- Note on the science of electricity, electronics, and auxiliary sciences supporting explosives engineering.
- Note on the science of composing and manufacturing explosives (application to be supervised by a chemistry specialist and conducted in remote areas, away from population, and in very limited quantities).
- Notes on combat tactics such as: - Urban warfare tactics - Mountain warfare - Forest warfare - Guerrilla warfare - Regular army tactics and ways to confront them, etc.
- Notes on organizational and security conduct, punctuality, secret message delivery and reception, etc.

This military culture is very important and can be provided on computer disks, transferred, and utilized. Elements can be graduated through an intensive program, and many useful practical applications can be conducted in homes or in sports and scout camps, etc., where the only remaining need is for shooting and detonation practice. A suitable place is sought for this, and it is done in specific hours, whether in secret mobile camps or as available. It is very important to ensure security of movement in conducting these trainings. And Allāh is the Granter of success.

The Theory of Funding for the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades

Money is the pillar and foundation of Jihād. Bitter reality has made us understand this and realize why most mentions of Jihād with one's self are coupled with Jihād with wealth, and why the latter is often mentioned first in many Qur'ānic texts.

As is our method in deriving theories for the work of resistance brigades from past experiences, we begin the discussion of the tragedies of this problem that exhausted contemporary mujāhidīn and led them into calamities over long decades of suffering, ending with the disasters of hostile global plans to combat mujāhidīn and their programs to dry up sources. We will try to find solutions for funding the upcoming resistance brigades, and Allāh is the Guide to the right path.

Funding Methods in Jihādī Experiences of Secret Organizations in Past Stages

Jihādī organizations in past experiences relied on the following sources for funding:

- Beginning with contributions from members and close supporters at the launch of work.
- Reliance on donations from local benefactors in the early stages.
- Reliance on donations from external benefactors after the work launched and the confrontation became public.
- Reliance on support from some neighboring regimes benefiting from the Jihād of those organizations against governments hostile to them in regional policies, where some organizations benefited materially and otherwise from these opportunities.
- Partial reliance on spoils of war, which never developed in any Jihādī experience of organizations and Jihādī groups to become a primary resource.

This is in general. The proportion of reliance on these resources varied from one experience to another. But the general characteristic of most experiences remained donations from benefactors as a basis. The summary of the funding theory and its slogan in the experiences of organizations was: "For Allāh's sake, O benefactors... help us in Jihād..."

Funding Methods in Jihād Experiences in Open Fronts

Such as in the experiences of Afghanistan in its two phases, Jihād in Bosnia and Chechnya, and others like the Philippines, Eritrea, etc. We clearly note that the sources of Jihād funding in the case of fronts were also:

- Donations from Muslim benefactors for those causes that mobilized the Ummah or most of it in their support.
- Support from some governments and international fronts benefiting from the direction of Jihād in those fronts.
- Spoils of war from enemy weapons and equipment, not as a primary source of funding.

However, the summary of the funding issue and its slogan was also, in the experiences of the Jihādī current when it participated in those causes, in short: "For Allāh's sake, O benefactors... help us in Jihād..."

Quick Observations on the Issue of Funding in Past Experiences

The observations, lessons, and morals from our past experiences can be summarized in the following points:

Firstly: The problem of funding remained in all Jihādī experiences the problem of problems and the dilemma of dilemmas. It was often one of the main reasons for the collapse of Jihād or its absorption by insincere parties and its diversion from its course due to the policy of penetration, which is called (the policy of financial inundation), where these fronts begin funding gradually as follows:

- a. Funding without conditions.
- b. Funding with non-binding advice and guidance.
- c. Funding with attached suggestions and complaints for not adopting them.
- d. Funding conditional on adherence to the will of the funding parties after they are certain that the expenses of Jihād and those responsible for it have reached a state where it is impossible for its leadership to continue without the funders' money, who then begin their dictates upon verifying that Jihād has reached that stage.

Secondly: It has been proven that even the most sincere funders rarely fund without interference, control, and attempts to dictate to Jihād leaders, whether organizational or front-based, except in very rare cases.

Thirdly: It has been proven that the expansion of secret organizations, their entry into the confrontation stage, and the expansion of the list of military and organizational expenses and their consequences (families of martyrs and detainees), in addition to movement expenses, etc., make the expenses enormous, in a way that even the largest organizations are unable to solve this problem.

Fourthly: It has been proven that open fronts have passed through two states regarding their funding:

1. Fronts whose performance context was consistent with the direction of major international policies, especially the direction of Western policies of America and its allies, or at least America. This was reflected in cascades of material support for those fronts, as was the case with the first Afghan Jihād, a model of international consensus on support, or at least permission for benefactors' funds to reach it in huge quantities. And as was the case with Jihād in Bosnia in its early stages when it was in America's interest to pressure Europe and obstruct its projects tending towards independence from American decision-making. Similarly, the early stages of Jihād in Chechnya, which coincided with American policies to contain Russia and pressure it.

2. Fronts whose context was contrary to international will, especially American will, as became the case with Jihād in Afghanistan during the Taliban era, in Bosnia after Dayton, and in Chechnya after Russia's submission to Western policies and the collusion of the West and the entire Christian world, including Russia, in a global confrontation with Islām, especially since the mid-1990s. This was reflected in a siege and blocking of financial channels to those fronts and those working in them, whether local leaders or Muslim mujāhidīn volunteers working there.

Thus, the problem of external funding through donations was a calamity for the fronts in both cases. In the case of openness and the flow of funds, this factor was a cause for controlling the leadership of the work and its parties, and the dictates of funders (benefactors and states) and their ultimate control over the course of those issues, almost completely in most cases. It was also one of the main reasons for aborting the work in cases of closure.

If we want to mention some of the negative repercussions of the funding tragedy on the Jihādī current and its experiences (groups and individuals) during those experiences, we find:

(1) Contrary to what was in the history of Islām since the era of the Companions and thereafter until the last days of the Islāmic Caliphate, where mujāhidūn were from the wealthy classes of the Ummah, some even becoming among the richest of the rich from what they obtained from their share of spoils, plunder, prizes, and incentives, as our master al-Zubayr ibn al-‘Awwām (may Allāh be pleased with him) was one of the richest Companions and had no resource other than what he obtained from spoils, and his story is famous. Similarly, many of the Companions and those after them, so that military leaders, great warriors, and mujāhidūn were among the rich and feudal lords when spoils were divided equally and caliphs and kings ruled justly among the subjects.

But the phenomenon of contemporary Jihād has made contemporary mujāhidūn among the poorest classes of the Ummah, and the most bankrupt, needy, and destitute. It linked the status of the mujāhid to begging, need, and dependence on whoever funds him and helps him perform this obligation, even though they were the vanguard of the Ummah, its cream, and its noblest segments in religion, sacrifice, and devotion!

(2) Funding sources mortgaged the will of organizational leaders or even front leaders and their officials to the will of the funders. This led to the forced disclosure of many secrets and the entry of funders and their accompanying intelligence personnel into camps, fronts, and private meetings of leaders. The matter even reached, in experiences like the first Afghan Jihād, that Saudi intelligence imposed on the Arab administration, in the presence of their senior figures, a ban on discussing ḥākimiyyah (sovereignty of Allāh), giving lessons on it, and spreading its thought in the main Arab camps! In Bosnia, Saudi intelligence imposed on Arab camps a ban on teaching guerrilla warfare and explosives lessons, fearing that mujāhidūn would return with this knowledge to their countries. This was by "benefactor" funders coming in Islāmic garb and with the beards of "brothers."

Not to mention the calamity that occurred from supporting states. As happened to the Jihād in Syria from the Iraqi government's control and its imposition of a secular banner on the Jihād in the end, and compelling the Muslim Brotherhood to ally with apostate parties, even with a part of the hostile Nuṣayrī regime! This is not the place to mention more examples, but it is a painful, bitter research with many witnesses.

(3) The bitterness reached the point where even some large, funded Jihādī organizations imposed their will on smaller organizations, obliging them to their policies, desires, and viewpoints, and even imposing activity and cessation on them through the "brotherly!" aid they provided (for the sake of Allāh)! As the funding parties saw the interest of Islām and Muslims in the policies and methods of work they deemed appropriate.

When the enemy realized the importance and impact of funding Jihād, it adopted the slogan of "drying up the sources" as a comprehensive plan for siege, starvation, and paralyzing the mujāhidīn's movement. America forced all countries to submit reports on their efforts to monitor money movement and freeze the accounts of those accused of terrorism. The matter reached the point of confiscating the funds of charitable institutions and abolishing them. The calamity befell the mujāhidīn and everyone close to them in any way, even merely for being accused by America and its agents.

And so, in short, I say:

Our past experiences have been fraught with many tragedies, which makes one of the most important matters we must research for a conception of funding the Jihād resistance brigades for the upcoming stage the issue of Jihād funding sources.

Before we move to present our conception, we mention some ideas that illuminate our research for solutions. And Allāh is the One whose help is sought.

If We Look at the Theory of Funding in Islām

If we look at the theory of funding in Islām in all its stages, since Jihād was permitted then obligated, and across the various stages of the Islāmic state from the state of Madīnah in his era (peace be upon him) to the state of the Rightly Guided Caliphs and those after them from the states of Islām and its stages, especially in the prosperous golden age, we would find that it is primarily based on Jihād resources from spoils (ghanīmah) and fai' from direct Jihād, or on resources resulting from Jihād such as jizyah (poll tax), kharāj (land tax), and 'ushūr (tithes), etc., where zakāt and ṣadaqāt (charities) constitute only a secondary resource to meet the needs of some poor Muslims locally. As for the basic expenses of Jihād and even of the Islāmic state, they were from the resources of Jihād and its spoils and what it brought into Muslim possessions.

If We Look at the Expeditions of the Messenger of Allāh

If we look at the expeditions (ghazawāt) of the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) and his brigades (sarāyā), we would find that a large part of them was allocated to acquiring resources. It suffices that the jewel of those expeditions and their vanguard, Badr (the great Battle of Badr, which Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, named "the Day of Criterion"), was fundamentally to intercept a Quraysh caravan so that the believers could recover compensation for what the disbelievers had plundered from them. The economic dimension was a very important dimension of Jihād. It is one of the characteristics with which the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) was specially endowed in five things given to him that were not given to any prophet before him, among them that spoils were made lawful for him and became lawful and a Sunnah for his followers after him.

It was narrated from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) that he said: "I was sent with the sword until Allāh alone is worshipped without partner, and my sustenance was placed under the shadow of my spear, and humiliation and subservience were placed upon those who disobey my command, and whoever imitates a people is one of them." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

So his sustenance and the sustenance of his Ummah after him is under the shadow of his spear (peace be upon him) and the shadow of their spears after him, despite the defeated proponents of misguided philosophies on the paths of alleged moderation. If this astonishes them, let them look at America, which has placed its economy and policy under the shadow of its spear after the Muslims became like the foam of a torrent!

In another Ḥadīth, from Salamah ibn Nufayl al-Kindī, he said: "I was sitting with the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) when a man said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, people have neglected horses and put down weapons and said there is no Jihād, the war has laid down its burdens.' So the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) turned his face and said: "They have lied! Now fighting has come. And there will not cease to be a group from my Ummah fighting for the truth, and Allāh will cause the hearts of some peoples to deviate for them, and He will provide for them from them until the Hour comes and until the promise of Allāh comes. And good is tied to the forelocks of horses until the Day of Resurrection." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).

In another Ḥadīth, from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), he said: "When people become stingy with the dīnār and the dirham, and engage in ʿīnah transactions (a type of usurious sale), and follow the tails of cattle, and abandon Jihād in the way of Allāh, Allāh will inflict upon them a humiliation that He will not lift from them until they return to their religion." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

And the evidences are many regarding the truth about raiding and spoils.

The Companions of the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) set out with these meanings. When they conquered lands and saw the fertile lands in Shām (Levant) and Iraq during the era of ʿUmar, they intended to farm, and they cultivated the plains of Palestine. When ʿUmar learned of this, he sent someone to burn their crops and sent a message to them teaching them that they were sent as soldiers and mujāhidīn, not as farmers.

Thus, wealth flowed and poured upon the mujāhidīn and the Ummah after them as goodness and support, and the basis of that was Jihād and the wealth it generated from direct spoils and faiʾ, and wealth from jizyah and kharāj of lands, etc. Thus, the cycle of resources and expenditures was a series of links where good poured from Jihād resources from various sources, to fill the treasury (bayt al-māl) and then to be issued from it towards expenditures anew, to complete the financial cycle of the Islāmic economy. However, if we look at the cycle of resources and expenditures in today's Jihād issues and its organizations and groups, we would find it simply contrary to the historical theory of funding.

The treasury for funding organizations, burdened with expenditures, must cover the costs of fighting, training, families of martyrs and detainees, movement of mujāhidīn, media, etc. This is impossible, and therefore the imbalance occurred, and we reached the state some of whose tragedies I have indicated. Therefore:

The Funding Method for Global Islamic Resistance Brigades

- (1) Contributions of mujāhidīn members, when able, to establish the brigade.
- (2) Unconditional aid from mujāhidīn with their wealth, from trusted individuals known to the Jihādī brigade's administration.
- (3) Spoils (ghanā'im) and fai' from the wealth of disbelievers and apostates, such that the mujāhidīn take their share and place their due percentage for the treasury (bayt al-māl) in the brigade's treasury, according to what is agreed upon in the manner detailed below.

Firstly: Wealth Whose Spoils are Lawful Today for Mujāhidīn in the Way of Allāh

We mentioned some detail in the section on Sharī'ah Jihādī rulings in the third chapter, which discussed the integrated education of the mujāhid. Therefore, we refer to it here briefly without detail and say:

These rulings are based on the Sharī'ah reality prevailing in Muslim lands, which was indicated in the second chapter ("The Sharī'ah Ruling on the Reality of Muslims"), namely that the existing governments in Arab and Muslim countries today are illegitimate and fallen, due to the apostasy of the rulers because of their allegiance to disbelievers, their ruling by other than what Allāh revealed, their legislation from other than Allāh, and for other secondary reasons that further confirm this reality. Accordingly, it is established:

- a. The lawfulness of the wealth of apostate governments and their public property, and the property of their ruling senior criminals.
- b. The lawfulness of the wealth of all foreign disbelievers in Muslim lands due to the lapse of their security (amān) with the fall of the legitimacy of the existing governments, which have no right to grant security, protection (dhimmah), or conclude covenants and treaties with disbelievers.
- c. The lawfulness of the wealth of all non-Muslims residing in Muslim lands for the same preceding reason.
- d. The lawfulness of the wealth of apostates who openly cooperate with occupying forces and support them against Muslims.
- e. The lawfulness of the wealth of disbelievers in countries at war with Muslims, due to the state of war between us and them, and the absence of treaties between them and legitimate Islāmic entities or emirates that bind their Muslim subjects to covenants between them and those disbelievers.

This is in general. Refer back for more Sharī'ah details in the special chapter on that which preceded, and for details of political interests in avoiding striking some targets for political interests. I remind of the following important warnings:

1. The absolute sanctity of the wealth and blood of Muslims, wherever they are, in Muslim lands or in disbeliever lands, regardless of the sin, disobedience, and shortcomings they may be involved in. Even if doubt arises about the origin of their faith, doubt does not remove certainty. And certainty here is their testimony that there is no god but Allāh and that Muḥammad is the Messenger of Allāh. So, caution must be exercised against violating the blood, wealth, and honor of Muslims, as they are sacred and inviolable.
2. Whoever has a contract or covenant with any disbeliever that entails security, it is not lawful for him to break his covenant or violate his protection and security, whether in Muslim lands or disbeliever lands. Allāh Almighty said:

{O you who have believed, fulfill [all] contracts} (al-Mā'idah: 1). And He said: {And fulfill [every] commitment. Indeed, the commitment is ever [that about which one will be] questioned} (al-Isrā': 34).

3. The security granted by Jihād amīrs and Muslim amīrs, if found within their sphere of authority, must be respected. Likewise, their followers must fulfill the protection and security their amīrs have granted to disbelievers.
4. I remind here of the Sharī'ah ruling on that wealth and blood of disbelievers and apostates regarding its lawfulness under its conditions. As for applying these rulings and carrying out acts of taking spoils from them, it must then be subject to a study of political benefits and harms of attacking a specific target in a specific place at a specific time. If it results in a clear harm to Islām and Muslims, then it is forbidden, not because of original prohibition but because of the corruption resulting from it. Whoever is ignorant of assessing these matters should not venture without knowledge but should ask those he trusts among the people of remembrance (ahl al-dhikr), who are knowledgeable in matters of Sharī'ah rulings and Sharī'ah-based policy, from those trusted in their religion, understanding, and Jihād.

Sources of Spoils and Fai' for Resistance Brigades and the Method of Their Division Among Mujāhidīn:

We return to the context of the discussion to say that the primary source of funding for the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades, after launching work with the mujāhidīn's private money or unconditional donations received from trustworthy close acquaintances, should be from spoils and fai' from the wealth of:

1. Wealth of warring disbelievers in their lands or in our lands.

2. Wealth of apostate governments cooperating with the occupation, while paying attention to preserving the blood of Muslims working in those various interests.
3. Individuals whose apostasy is proven by their allegiance to disbelievers and their support for them against Muslims; their wealth is lawful, like their blood, due to their apostasy.

Distribution of Spoils and Fai' Funds in the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades

I asked our Sheikh 'Abd al-Qādir about this during the Afghan Jihād, how spoils are divided among a brigade of mujāhidīn who captured them, and he said the following:

- a- The basic rule: in dividing spoils is what the Qur'ān decided ({And know that whatever spoils of war you acquire, then to Allāh belongs its fifth}): which is 20% of the captured wealth is placed in the Muslim treasury (bayt al-māl). And 80% of the captured wealth is divided among the Jihādī group that captured it.
- b- The agreement among the members of this Jihādī brigade before the spoils on the method of its division; what they agree upon, they implement justly. The portion spent on the interests of Jihād and Muslims should not be less than the fifth, which is 20%. If they see fit to increase it by consent before the operation, they increase it by agreement for the needs of their organization or brigade for Jihād expenses.
- c- If the brigade operates under the strength of an organization or another group of brigades that provides general services such as ammunition, weapons, reconnaissance, propaganda, and other supplies, all members of the organization contribute a share agreed upon by mutual consent between the leadership of that organization and its rank and file.

Accordingly, the method established for us in dividing what the resistance brigades obtain as spoils from the enemy is as follows:

1. The brigade allocates a special treasury for itself in which it places its members' contributions or any unconditional support it receives for its Jihādī activities from its trusted close acquaintances. It also places in it at least the fifth (20%) of any spoils it captures, i.e., 20% of the spoils or its monetary value.
2. The members of the brigade agree on the financial bases among themselves if they want to increase the share of their treasury to contribute to increasing their armament capability, for example, or spending in the avenues of Jihād, assisting other brigades, assisting families of some they know who lost their breadwinner in the way of Allāh, or what they deem as expenditures for Muslims.
3. The members of the brigade agree on the bases by which they divide a share for the rest of the brigade members who did not participate directly in a spoils operation, considering them as supporters of the brigade. Thus, they complement each other. For example:
They can agree on three shares for each man who executed the operation and one share for each member of the brigade who was not present at the execution, after deducting the fifth or what they agreed upon among themselves. Whatever they agree upon, they are obliged to implement it with justice and kindness. And Allāh is the Granter of success.

The Theory of Media and Incitement in the Call of the Global Islamic Resistance

Allāh Almighty said: {O Prophet, urge the believers to battle. If there are among you twenty [who are] steadfast, they will overcome two hundred. And if there are among you one hundred, they will overcome a thousand of those who have disbelieved because they are a people who do not understand} (al-Anfāl: 65). And He Almighty said: {So fight, [O Muḥammad], in the cause of Allāh; you are not held responsible except for yourself. And incite the believers [to fight] that Allāh will restrain the might of those who disbelieve. And Allāh is greater in might and stronger in [exemplary] punishment} (al-Nisā': 84).

Incitement to Jihād and fighting, making it beloved, mentioning its virtue, and warning against abandoning it, occupied a large space in the verses of the Noble Qur'ān since the verse permitting fighting was revealed in the second year of the Hijrah. And Allāh Almighty said:

*{Permission [to fight] has been given to those who are being fought, because they were wronged. And indeed, Allāh is competent to give them victory. * [They are] those who have been evicted from their homes without right, only because they say, "Our Lord is Allāh." And were it not that Allāh checks the people, some by means of others, there would have been demolished monasteries, churches, synagogues, and masjids in which the name of Allāh is much mentioned. And Allāh will surely support those who support Him. Indeed, Allāh is Powerful and Exalted in Might}* (Al-Ḥajj: 39-40).

Just as the verses of the noble Qur'ān are replete with incitement to fight and urging Muslims to it, so too have many prophetic narrations and the practical and tacit Sunnah of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) come to urge Jihād, detail its virtue and reward, what Allāh has prepared for those who engage in Jihād and the martyrs, mobilize the believers for fighting, stir in them zeal for His religion and hatred for His enemies, and a desire for reward from Him. And they promise them victory, triumph, and empowerment.

It suffices that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) himself went out for Jihād many times. He sent the dearest of people to him under the banners of expeditions and to lead platoons. He equipped the fighters and attended to their affairs. He spent his life preparing, striving, fighting, and exhorting the believers as his Lord, Blessed and Exalted, commanded him. So he strove in the way of Allāh with the striving due to Him until certainty came to him (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him). He remained so until his final moments. The concern for expeditions and Jihād was his concern even on his deathbed, as he was breathing his last pure, sacred breaths, urging the dispatch of Usāmah's army to fight the Byzantines, and enjoining them: "Expel the polytheists from the Arabian Peninsula."

Incitement is the twin of Jihād and its motivator. It is the task of the caliphs, commanders, scholars, callers to Allāh, and those who enjoin good from all segments and classes of the nation. This is if it involves seeking out the enemy in their lands, elevating the word of Allāh, spreading His religion and its banners, and establishing His Sharī'ah on earth. However, if Jihād becomes defensive, protecting the religion, life, honor, land, and sanctities, as is its nature today and as it was in times of major calamities, then it is one of the most important obligations upon every Muslim in general, and upon scholars and callers to Allāh in particular. Even those whom Allāh excused from fighting due to their incapacity from illness and ailments preventing them from Jihād, He stipulated for the acceptance of their excuse that they move their tongues with the call to Allāh and incitement to support His religion. Allāh the Exalted said: {There is no blame upon the weak nor upon the ill nor upon those who do not find anything to spend if they are sincere to Allāh and His Messenger. There is no cause [for blame] against the doers of good. And Allāh is Forgiving and Merciful} (At-Tawbah: 91).

As I have said, the Book of Allāh the Exalted, the Sunnah of His Prophet, the biography of the Chosen One (peace and blessings be upon him), the biography of his Rightly Guided Caliphs after him, and the righteous kings, sultans, and commanders after them throughout the history of Islām, are full of stories, examples, biographies, and lessons. They constitute treasures of traditions in the arts of incitement, its methods, lessons, admonitions, and experiences. This is one of the most important great legacies to which we must return, from which we must draw, and through which we must fulfill the obligation of incitement today in a nation overcome by laziness, where inaction has dominated its elite and common folk, and where weakness from the love of this world and hatred of death has crept into the vast majority. This has led to nations pouncing upon it and converging upon it, just as the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) informed, like diners converging upon their platter, plundering it as predatory wolves do, and tearing at it as attacking dogs do, after its guardians have fled, its scholars have remained silent about the truth and the call to Jihād and defense, and its common folk have become lost in seas of helplessness and ruin.

We return to deriving the theories for our work and movement by evaluating our past lessons and experiences, through the course of the call and the Jihād-oriented current in our contemporary awakening. These experiences of incitement can be studied through their four media-related domains and components, such that we study them at the level of:

1. The Addressee of the Discourse: The segment of Muslims to whom the exhorter's message was directed.
2. The Content of the Discourse: The exhortative media message and the call made by the one inviting to Jihād.
3. The Style of the Discourse: The tone, structure, and method of presenting his call.

4. The Method of Delivering the Discourse: The means employed by the caller to Jihād to convey his message to the people to invite them to Jihād.

If we come to make a comparison to derive our method and theory of operation in media and incitement from past experiences and the realities of the present with its negative and positive changes, we find the following:

First: The Method of Incitement in Ancient Historical Experiences

- The Addressee of the Discourse: Throughout our entire history, those calling to Jihād directed their call for Jihād to the entirety of the nation in all its segments and classes: its rulers and ruled, its poor and rich, its strong and weak, from every race, color, and element of this Muḥammadan nation.
- The Content of the Discourse: The general content of the discourse was to exhort the nation to offensive Jihād during the days when the nation possessed might and sovereignty. This was done by reminding them of the reward from Allāh for guiding people and bringing them out of darkness into light, and the consequences of victory in conquest, such as the expansion of the state of Islām and the bounties of Jihād, its spoils, and conquests that would flow to the nation. If it was defensive Jihād, as in times of calamities and enemy raids, the discourse focused on arousing motivations of zeal and ardor for the religion, honor, and land, and defending the lives and property of Muslims. It also involved reminding them of the warning associated with abandoning Jihād, such as punishment from Allāh, humiliation, disgrace, enemy domination, killing of souls, violation of honor, captivity of offspring, and a ruin of homelands.
- The Style of the Discourse: The style of calling to Jihād relied on stirring the hidden reserves of zeal for Allāh's religion, mobilizing the latent desires for Allāh's paradise, forgiveness, and pleasure, and the elements of honor and manliness in the souls of the nation. It depended on all aspects of promise and threat, and its means were poetry, prose, and oratory.

- The Method of Delivering the Discourse: Mosques were primarily the main engine for the nation, as they were the place for scholars' lessons and orators' speeches. From them, news, circulars, and decrees were issued by sultans, caliphs, and commanders. Likewise, religious edicts for Jihād were issued from them, deeming it a collective or individual obligation according to the circumstances. Literati, poets, and orators had a significant role and a distinguished position in Muslim societies. Especially in major calamities, they would rouse the nation to defense, sacrifice, and giving, as these speeches, poems, and religious edicts would spread, carried by travelers to reach the East and the West.

Second: Incitement and Media in the Experiences of the Contemporary Jihād-oriented Current and its Secret Organizations

This is also examined through the four pillars of media and incitement:

- The Addressee of the Discourse: If we look at the majority of the publications and literature of the Jihād-oriented current, their content, tone, and the circles they targeted, we will find that the discourse was mostly directed, perhaps almost exclusively, to the elite among the youth of the Islamic awakening.
- The Content of the Discourse: The Jihād-oriented discourse focused primarily on the issue of Ḥākimiyyah (Divine governance). The idea of the ruler's disbelief, dissociation from him and his faction, the issue of rebellion and revolution against him, and the jurisprudential evidence for that, constituted the largest part of the discourse's content and the Jihād-oriented groups' media message. Since the first Afghan Jihād in the late 1980s, and throughout the last decade of the 1990s, the doctrinal issue according to Salafī principles and their theological propositions was added to the subject of Ḥākimiyyah. This was characterized by an elitist tone and a complex scholarly formulation. Thus, it can be said that the content of the media and incitement message of the Jihād-oriented groups was uni-dimensional (doctrine - Ḥākimiyyah), complex, and elitist. It did not have a popular dimension that could be said to be directed to the general Muslim masses. Other key dimensions of discourse, such as economic, social, and political aspects, and the dimensions of Muslims' daily suffering, were almost completely absent. It was a uni-dimensional, self-enclosed discourse.

- The Style of the Discourse: The Jihād-oriented groups' exhortative media discourse was generally characterized by elitism and a sense of superiority, even by much harshness, dryness, a prevalence of threats, and an absence of emotional dimensions, heart-softeners, and winning over the masses through their psychological keys. The style was a reflection of the uni-dimensional content and approach, elitist in its style as well as its overall content.
- The Method of Delivering the Discourse: The Jihād-oriented current relied on pamphlets and secret newsletters to deliver its message, and very rarely on audio cassettes. The effort in delivering the pamphlets was very minimal compared to the scale of military operations and the duration of their activity. During the phase of clandestine work before confrontation, there was no effort to deliver any message to the masses in a manner consistent with the state of secrecy. With the outbreak of confrontation, security conditions made it difficult for that message to reach them. After the organizations moved abroad, the discourse became distant and did not reach the homeland concerned with the revolution. Rather, the publications of the Jihād-oriented groups became émigré publications representing an internal discourse written by a handful of media personnel and distributed among the Jihād-oriented individuals themselves, for them to re-read the same ideas they believed in but could not practically convey to the people.

In general, it can be said that the media and incitement dimension of the Jihād-oriented groups was one of the most prominent aspects of their performance failure, and no success was recorded. This was the case until the dissolution of the Arab collective in the Afghan Jihād and the dispersal of Jihād-oriented individuals to émigré lands and safe havens. At that point, there was a kind of spread of Jihād-oriented thought and literature within the awakening circles themselves, and the horizons of the Jihād-oriented tide within the awakening expanded. However, the discourse remained distant from the various segments of the nation in terms of quantity, quality, and type.

Third: Incitement and Media in Jihād Experiences on Open Fronts

Let us take as examples the most important experiences: the Afghan Jihād against the Russians, the Jihād with Muslims in Bosnia against the Serbian Christian genocidal campaigns, then the Jihād experience in Chechnya, and finally the Arab Jihād alongside the Taliban. These are the most prominent cases that took on an international dimension at the level of the Muslim nation in Jihād confrontations. We find that the four aspects of media and incitement in these cases were as follows:

- The Addressee of the Discourse: The media discourse in all these Jihād cases was directed to the entirety of the nation in all its segments, as is the original principle.
- The Content of the Discourse: The discourse focused on a simple, popularly understood issue and an established religious truth from the beliefs of general Muslims: repelling the invading foreign aggressor attacking Muslims, and that Jihād with them and supporting them with life and wealth is an individual obligation upon Muslims.

- The Style of the Discourse: The style was emotional and smooth, an incitement that combined promise with threat, and favored the direction of promising reward for Jihād and what Allāh has prepared for those engaged in Jihād, those stationed on the frontiers, and the martyrs.
- The Method of Delivering the Discourse: In its beginnings in the late 1980s, the discourse relied on magazines, newsletters, cassettes, and videos. Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, may Allāh have mercy on him, established an excellent media school in this regard, which deserves study, reflection, benefit, development, and building upon. Then, the media school of Jihād in Bosnia added an important dimension by using video and cassettes, filling a huge gap. Then, the Arab Jihād in Chechnya entered the scene to develop internet tactics, taking the experience to its furthest extent and success. They also worked on distributing videos and registered a great presence. In short, the media success in the Jihād on the fronts was immense. There is no greater proof of this than the tremendous stand the nation took with these causes, reflected in its generosity with hundreds of millions from the poor and the rich, men and women, and by the flight of its dearest sons by the thousands, even tens of thousands, to the arenas of honor, victory, and martyrdom.

Through studying these experiences and lessons, we derive conclusions and admonitions that, by Allāh's permission and guidance, will help us lay the theoretical foundations for the media and incitement of the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades, and its comprehensive, integrated call, Allāh willing. The most important of these lessons and admonitions learned from our past experiences in this vital field are:

(1) Allāh, may He be glorified and exalted, says: {And rouse the believers} – meaning all believers. The terms "believers" (al-mu'minīn) and "Muslims" (al-muslimīn), as is known, if used separately, refer to the people of the religion of Islām, the people of "there is no god but Allāh." If they are used together, the term "Muslims" encompasses the people of Islām generally, while the term "believers" specifies the believing elite among them, as Allāh the Exalted says: {The bedouins say, "We have believed." Say, "You have not [yet] believed; but say [instead], 'We have submitted,' for faith has not yet entered your hearts."} The point here is that the command to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) to rouse the nation, in the verse that was the basis of our call, its support, the starting point of its theories, and its slogan, namely His saying: {So fight in the cause of Allāh; you are not held responsible except for yourself. And rouse the believers} – is an order for every individual and a personal duty to fight, whether people fight or sit back. It is also an order for the one engaged in Jihād in general, and for scholars, callers, orators, writers, and speakers, to rouse the believers, meaning all Muslims. So, the first lesson is to address the nation, the entire nation, with the call to resistance, not just its elite from the people of the awakening or the religiously observant. Jihād is an obligation on everyone, and we must rouse everyone and fight with them, their righteous and their sinner, their strong and their weak, especially since the call to resistance is a call to repel a general aggressor under the general banner of Islām.

(2) The most successful slogans for mobilizing and uniting for Jihād were the slogans of Jihād against the external aggressor. This is our situation today, and it is the goal of the call to resistance. Therefore, our exhortative message and our call must take that as the basis of the call: repelling the aggressor and the individual obligation in that regard.

(3) The Muslim nation today is under attack by an aggressor in all aspects of its existence. It targets its religion for removal, obliteration, and alteration; its people with killing and extermination; its honor with harm and violation of dignity; and its wealth and resources with plunder, etc. Therefore, the key to Jihād, the program of incitement, and its slogans must be comprehensive of all that. The key to the discourse and Jihād must take three general dimensions, and the media program must include their details:

Dimensions of the Media Message for the Call of Global Islamic Resistance:

- First: The Religious Dimension: Defense of (beliefs - sacred sites - pillars and foundations of religion).
- Second: The Economic Dimension: Defense of (wealth - land - essentials of existence).
- Third: The Political Dimension: Defense of (the civilizational entity - essentials of existence).
- Fourth: The Emotional Dimension: Defense of dignity, honor, values, ideals, inherited high customs and traditions, such as zeal, manliness, and protection of honor and integrity.

(4) Employing a popular, emotional, and simple style was the basis for calling the common people of the nation, not lengthy jurisprudential treatises and detailed doctrinal issues. Stirring zeal for religion and sacred sites; honor for reputation, blood, and wealth; the wellsprings of manliness in Muslims; and vengeance for religion, honor, lives, and property. Arousing emotions through the heroic deeds of Jihād, stories of heroism, and the exploits of heroes and martyrs, past and present. Stirring sorrows and longings for Paradise and the stations of martyrs, and what Allāh has prepared for them – O Allāh, make us among them by Your mercy, O Lord, Your generosity, and Your grace – and instilling fear of inaction and its consequences in this world and the Hereafter.

(5) Adopting diverse methods in the style of delivering the message so that it is popular. In this age, the two main axes for reaching the public are the Internet and satellite channels, then what can be disseminated of films, recordings, and writings via computer discs. These popular methods, which reach both the elite and the common people, have indeed established Allāh's proof against those of His creation who wish to receive the message. At a time when the costs of printing and widely distributing a book exceeded the capabilities of most organizations, not to mention the difficulty, indeed impossibility, of disseminating Jihād-oriented thought, satellite channels, the Internet, and computers have entered every home, rich and poor alike. The matter, after Allāh's guidance, now requires no more than determination, sincerity, intention, and devotion in proclaiming the truth, taking a stand, and possessing some dynamism and breadth of vision.

(6) Not neglecting the role of mosques and their weekly gatherings: Friday sermons, this great key that Allāh has given to the inheritors of the prophets, which most scholars and callers of this nation have squandered out of fear or desire for the rulers. Mosques are an absent media and incitement dimension that must be restored.

(7) Innovation and diversity in methods and content, renewal, presence within the nation and its discourse with current issues, and following up the media message with it. Therefore:

Summary of the Theory of Media and Incitement for the Call of Global Islamic Resistance

- First: The Addressee of the Discourse: The discourse of resistance is directed to the nation, the entire nation in all its segments: its learned and its ignorant, its Arab and its non-Arab, its active and its inactive, its male and its female, its poor and its rich. Everyone is intended by the call to resistance, as Allāh the Exalted said: {And rouse the believers} – all believers, meaning all Muslims.

- Second: The Content of the Discourse: It is repelling the aggressor and that it is an individual obligation on every Muslim man and woman. The details of the content vary according to each segment; there is a general discourse directed to the public, and there are specific discourses for each group according to what suits them.
- Third: The Style of the Discourse: Addressing people according to their intellect, understanding, knowledge, culture, language, and its type. The general discourse directed to the entire nation should be styled with conciliation, mercy, unifying what is divided, and negating causes of discord and division, in order to unite in repelling the aggressor. The style of that discourse should be serious, emotional, and based on the Qur'ān and Sunnah. As for specific discourse, its style should be appropriate to the cultural state, gender, and specific circumstances of its audience.
- Fourth: Means of Delivering the Discourse: As we have previously mentioned, using popular and modern means simultaneously, foremost among them: satellite channels, communication networks, and computers. And delivering our message through read, heard, and visual means to convey the message of resistance to all classes and segments of the nation.

We now come to some explanation and detail to clarify what we have summarized in the foundations of our theory of media and Incitement:

The General Addressee of the Discourse, Specific Addressees, the Content of their Discourse, its Style, and its Means:

The general addressee of the discourse is the nation and its broad segments, regardless of any factor that specifies them. Its discourse is solely in terms of Islām, regardless of ethnicity, level of religious knowledge, or cultural awareness. Its discourse is a general discourse.

As for specific addressees of discourse, this is due to a segment being distinguished by a primary unifying factor, such that their discourse takes this unifying characteristic into account. This can be, by way of example and not limitation, as follows:

1. Ethnicity and Nationality: In this case, their situation, history, reality, and addressing them in their language are taken into account, reminding them of their exploits, and playing on the chord of their emotional interactions with Islām and the issue of repelling the aggressor through their specificity.
2. Level of Religious Knowledge: The discourse for scholars is different from that for the ignorant, and the discourse for callers is different from that for the rank and file of the call. Here, the role of religious evidence and its details becomes prominent. Even within this segment, there are levels and types; the discourse for scholars differs from that for activist callers.
3. Cultural Level: The discourse for the educated is different from that for the common person, the ignorant, and the illiterate. Each has its key and entry points. The educated are addressed with logic, statistics, numbers, and political and realistic evidence. They too are of various types, segments, and levels, each addressed accordingly. The common people are addressed with emotion and motivations of zeal.
4. Intellectual and Political Affiliation: The discourse for a committed Muslim or a member of the awakening differs from the discourse for someone with another intellectual-political identity, such as secularists, nationalists, or pan-Arabists. Each has its entry points, and common ground must be sought between the addressee and the call to resistance by uniting honorable people under the banner of resistance and its branches, and conciliating others without compromising the constants of religion and identity. Wisdom is the basis for this, and whoever is given it has been given much good.

And so on. The discourse for Ahl as-Sunnah differs from the discourse for doctrinal groups among the People of the Qiblah. Even within Ahl as-Sunnah, the doctrinal school and jurisprudential school of each group and people are taken into account. Thus, classifications multiply. The discourse for men is different from that for women, and the discourse for youth is different from that for the middle-aged and elderly. The discourse for workers differs from that for merchants and farmers. Thus, when we enter the fields of specific discourse, we must take into account understanding the addressee, their culture, level, convictions, characteristics, reality, and problems, all in search of the point of persuasion with them to draw them to the general line, and to unite everyone on the call to resistance and its individual obligation, based on the unifying principle in our creed, the creed of Ahl as-Sunnah, that defensive fighting does not stipulate any condition or banner, and it is with every righteous and sinner from the leaders of the Muslims and their common folk.

Thus, accurately defining the addressee of the discourse determines the rest of the elements of media and incitement. Defining the addressee of the discourse determines the content of the discourse, its style, and its means. This is the pivotal point in getting the choices right or wrong in the remaining components of the process of incitement and media.

Brigades of Incitement, Media, and Call for the Global Islamic Resistance Call

The task of media and incitement in the nation is general and specific. As for the general, it is the general call to fight the axes of the invading campaigns in all their military, cultural, intellectual, educational, economic, political, social, and every other field, because today's campaigns are comprehensive and complete. They have a program for every component of our civilization and theirs. They target everything they want to demolish and replace with its antithesis from the components of their civilization. Accordingly, the task of civilizational confrontation falls on the shoulders of all components of the nation.

Its scholars in their mosques, books, and lessons; its intellectuals in their lectures, literature, and cultural activities; its men in their fields of work and spheres of movement; and its women in their homes and raising their children.

Thus, the role of everyone emerges in general incitement and media to revive the roots of resistance, create an atmosphere of resistance, a climate of revolution against the invader and his aides, and incitement to repel them. This is a general field whose circles we must exhort so that each has its role.

There is a role for scholars, poets, writers, and literati. There is a role for intellectuals, politicians, economists, and academics. There is a role for students, workers, and every segment. This is regarding the field of general incitement to preserve the nation's identity, its components, the foundations of its renaissance, its civilization, and its entity with all its religious, national, patriotic, and other components.

As for the field of specific incitement, it is incitement to armed resistance. This is among the tasks of the members of the Global Islamic Resistance Call and its supporters. Its essence is to exhort engagement in the mission of fighting and forming striking, separate brigades, the Global Islamic Resistance Brigades, the armed Jihād-oriented brigades. This is a task that must be undertaken by cells that dedicate themselves to this mission.

The mission of fighting is the mission of every Muslim and an individual obligation on every Muslim man and woman, that they determine their capacity and exert their effort according to it; Allāh does not burden a soul beyond its capacity. And they must raise the level of that capacity by preparing themselves and cooperating with those they trust among their Muslim brothers.

As for the mission of incitement, it is the mission of everyone according to their ability. It is an obligation on every individual, even those whom Allāh excused from Jihād, the people with excuses whom Allāh the Exalted excused from fighting, saying: {There is no blame upon the weak nor upon the ill nor upon those who do not find anything to spend if they are sincere to Allāh and His Messenger. There is no cause [for blame] against the doers of good. And Allāh is Forgiving and Merciful} (At-Tawbah: 91). He excused them on the condition: {if they are sincere to Allāh and His Messenger} and called that from them excellence (iḥsān), saying: {There is no cause [for blame] against the doers of good}.

However, the specialized mission of incitement falls on the shoulders of those qualified for it. Their mission is to form cells for calling to Jihād and exhorting to it, and to facilitate the means for people to do so by providing them with information, guidance, and programs. These cells are what we call the brigades of incitement, provided that those in charge of these brigades understand that undertaking the mission of incitement does not absolve them of the obligation of fighting, unless they are special cases of scholars dedicated to the call and Jihād with knowledge, thought, and intention, as Allāh the Exalted said: {And it is not for the believers to go forth [to battle] all at once. For there should separate from every division of them a group [remaining] to obtain understanding in the religion and warn their people when they return to them that they might be cautious} (At-Tawbah: 122). Among the main tasks of the brigades of incitement in the Global Islamic Resistance Call are the following:

(1) Disseminating the books and messages of the Global Islamic Resistance Call by every possible means of publication, to deliver them to the widest possible circle of segments and components of the Muslim nation.

(2) Disseminating everything that would help the nation in Jihād, such as training curricula, military preparation, military courses, and methods of popular resistance. We will try, Allāh willing, to facilitate appendices for this in the series of books and messages of the Resistance Call.

(3) Translating these messages, books, and curricula into major living Islamic languages such as Turkish, Urdu, Indonesian, Malay, and other languages of the numerous Muslim peoples. This is the task of those sons of these nationalities and ethnicities who are proficient in Arabic. Also, translating these writings and messages into major living languages used by Muslims, such as English, French, Spanish, Russian, and German. This is the task of those who are proficient in these languages and Arabic in a masterful way that enables them to perform secure translation, especially verifying the translations of religious texts and religious edicts, as this level requires knowledge of both languages, in addition to a high level of understanding of religious texts and the language of religious discourse.

(4) Disseminating all thought that would kindle the spirit of resistance, including: Religious edicts of past and contemporary scholars on Jihād against enemies and those who assist them by any means.

Religious edicts of scholars and writings of Islamic thinkers who call for dissociating from disbelievers, boycotting them, and boycotting those who cooperate with them in every field.

Poetry, literature, anthems, intellectual writings, and any literary, intellectual, cultural, or artistic activity that spreads the spirit of resistance.

Two very, very important matters must be noted:

(1) Not to issue any statement, book, religious edict, or work under the specific name "Global Islamic Resistance Call," so that nothing contradictory to its methodology, which we have defined and published under the name of the Global

Islamic Resistance series, is ignorantly or intentionally attributed to it. Rather, what they deem supportive of the resistance should be published under the names of its authors or a general, real, or operational name, as its authors choose. This is a very important matter. As for the brigades that carry out operations, they should not add more in their statements than claiming responsibility for the operation in the name of the Resistance Brigades and the specific name of the brigade, without any intellectual, political, or religious media message.

(2) Commitment, when publishing such literature, activities, and religious edicts, even if under the names of their authors, to the principles of the Global Islamic Resistance Call and its doctrinal foundations laid out in the Resistance Charter and its methodological theory, and explained in the foundations of its political theory and general strategy outlined in its political theory, and its other foundations detailed in our other specific literature. All this is in line with the clandestine situation imposed on us by the current security and operational reality of the overwhelming campaigns. When this crisis clears, we will work on that through a declared religious, media, and political body with its components, names of its writers, and administration, Allāh the Exalted willing. As long as we are in the stage of clandestine Jihād and secret resistance, both in fighting and incitement, these controls must be adhered to so that the call is not diverted by the intention of deliberate corrupters who are infiltrated, or by the ignorance of impulsive individuals, some of whom, through their ignorance, cause greater harm than the depravity of the depraved, as stated in the tradition: "Indeed, the ignorant person, through his ignorance, causes greater harm than the depravity of the depraved." I affirm here the disassociation of anyone affiliated with this call, and my personal disassociation, from anything that contradicts the foundations and principles of the call, which we have clearly explained, and for which we have provided evidence from the Qur'ān, the Sunnah, and the requirements of benefits and harms, based on the lessons of previous Jihād experiences and the path and tribulations of the Islamic awakening.

Media and Incitement Methods and Ideas for Reviving the Global Islamic Resistance Call:

First: Regarding the Content of the Discourse:

Attention and focus on collecting materials in the following areas:

1. Qur'ānic texts that exhort to fighting and Jihād and mention the reward for its doer and the punishment for the one who refrains from it, and texts from the Prophetic Sunnah in the same vein.
2. Religious edicts of past and contemporary scholars on the obligation of Jihād, especially defensive Jihād, the jurisprudence of Jihād, its rulings, etiquette, and related matters.
3. Collecting stories from the biography of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), from the biographies of military expeditions, and stories from the entire Islamic history that exhort to fighting and remind of the glories, tragedies, and major calamities of the Muslims.
4. Focusing on the history of the first Crusades, their events, facts, literature, and course, as many of today's events and parties are a repetition of history.
5. Focusing on contemporary colonial Crusades since the beginning of the sixteenth century, especially the campaigns of major colonial powers since the eighteenth century, their events, history, and stories of our ancestors' Jihād against contemporary Westerners in all Arab and Islamic countries.

6. Collecting stories of tragedies, aggression, massacres, and destruction caused by modern colonialism in our countries, with facts, statistics, and evidence, especially from their sources and books that acknowledged it.
7. Mentioning the history of contemporary conspiracies against the Islamic world by colonialists and Orientalist movements, and the relationship of Orientalism and intellectual invasion with colonialism and its course.
8. Mentioning the role of intellectual Westernization campaigns, contemporary secular ideologies, their parties, thinkers, callers, and figures from among the sons of our Arab and Islamic world, and their intellectual and political role in serving colonialism and destroying the nation.
9. Mentioning the facts of the Zionist Jewish onslaught against the Islamic world since the Balfour Declaration, Zionist migrations to Palestine, the stages of Israel's establishment, the stages and history of the Arab-Israeli conflict, then the history of the conspiracies of so-called "peace with the Jews" and normalization with them, and its military, political, economic, cultural, and social programs, and its devastating impact on the Islamic world.
10. Mentioning the facts of the contemporary American onslaught against the Islamic world since the launch of the New World Order, its methods, and its fields. Defining America and its corruption on earth in all fields of civilization, life, and science, its massacres, and its onslaught against humanity since it launched into the world during World War II until today, and exposing its civilizational flaws in all their dimensions to Muslims. Mentioning the role of its contemporary European and Western allies, especially the main components of NATO, and the reality of their deception, cunning, and participation in the current invasion.

11. Paying attention to mentioning the history of the Islamic awakening and its achievements in all its schools in preserving the nation's religion and its components; the conflicts, experiences, scenes, martyrs, figures, and history of the awakening in every country, by the people of that country and those who witnessed those experiences, especially the Jihād-oriented ones, and spreading the nation's awareness of its contemporary history.
12. Paying attention to publishing contemporary resistance literature: poetry, prose, anthems, art, and everything that would foster the spirit of enthusiasm, boldness, and Jihād.
13. Being alert to the axes of contemporary American intellectual and cultural invasion and its means of intellectual and social corruption, its means via the Internet and satellite channels, and the role of the fifth column of Westernized and Americanized individuals, explicitly and those who attack Islām, its thought, and heritage in the name of moderation and centrism, and the advocates of contemporary American Islām.
14. Spreading security awareness and its books, publishing summaries of them, and educating Muslims about the enemies' security methods in infiltrating our societies and fighting the resistance.
15. Spreading military culture, its books, summaries of its books, contemporary military schools, guerrilla warfare and its methods, popular resistance methods and its weapons, and exchanging contemporary experiences in confronting these overwhelming American campaigns.
16. Publishing the dimensions of American campaigns in every field: in the field of military hegemony, political conspiracies, economic plunder, cultural and social civilizational destruction, and ways to combat all of that.

17. Publishing the atrocities of American campaigns, their actions, the actions of their allies, and their atrocities to stir up determination, honor, and zeal in the nation.
18. Disseminating religious edicts of scholars and small, useful materials by sending them via email to various segments of the nation.
19. Sending messages of advice and reminder to those who have deviated and are cooperating with American campaigns in all their civilizational fields in general.
20. Sending messages of threat and warning to institutions and personalities dealing with American-Western-Zionist campaigns in every field.
21. Sending concise exhortative messages supported by pictures and evidence to various institutions, circles, and personalities in different segments of the nation.

These are just examples to open horizons, and blessing is in the creativity of those working with Allāh's guidance.

Second: Ideas for Methods of Delivering the Discourse

I will mention the basic methods:

- (1) Exploiting the capabilities of the Internet, email, and international communication networks to deliver all this information, exchange it, convey it to its intended recipients, and enter discussion forums, while paying attention to security when using these networks. This is a dangerous area that requires attention by not broadcasting sensitive materials from fixed locations or opening monitored sites from personal numbers.
- (2) Exploiting the media race in Arab, Islamic, and international satellite channels to deliver media materials such as statements, religious edicts, information, and anything that satellite channels might agree to publish, as well as through seminars, interviews, dialogues, and direct contact, while observing composure, etiquette, scholarly approach, and the margins of freedom in those satellite channels.

(3) Exploiting the capabilities of computers to disseminate all materials through books, newsletters, lectures, pictures, and video films, large quantities of which can be loaded onto compact electronic discs and sent by mail, personal exchange, or via the Internet.

(4) Benefiting from mosques, lessons, sermons, and public gatherings at every possible level in addressing Muslims.

(5) Publishing printed leaflets and research and circulating them among Muslims, especially the popular segments that do not use modern means of communication, as well as distributing cassettes and video films in those circles.

Selected Evidences for Incitement and Arousing Determination:

The Obligation of Enjoining Good and Forbidding Evil:

Imām al-Jaṣṣāṣ said in Aḥkām al-Qurʾān, from which we quote in abridged form: Allāh the Exalted said: {And let there be [arising] from you a nation inviting to [all that is] good, enjoining what is right and forbidding what is wrong, and those will be the successful} (Āl ʿImrān: 104).

Abū Bakr [al-Jaṣṣāṣ] said: This verse contains two meanings. First: The obligation of enjoining good and forbidding evil. Second: That it is a collective obligation (fard kifāyah), not an individual obligation on everyone, if others undertake it. This is due to His saying: {And let there be [arising] from you a nation}, the reality of which implies some and not others, indicating it is a collective obligation; if some perform it, it is lifted from the rest.

Allāh the Exalted has mentioned enjoining good and forbidding evil in other places in His Book. He, the Almighty and Majestic, said: {You are the best nation produced [as an example] for mankind. You enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong and believe in Allāh} (Āl ‘Imrān: 110). And He said, narrating from Luqmān: {O my son, establish prayer, enjoin what is right, forbid what is wrong, and be patient over what befalls you. Indeed, [all] that is of the matters [requiring] determination} (Luqmān: 17). And Allāh the Exalted said: {And if two factions among the believers should fight, then make settlement between the two. But if one of them oppresses the other, then fight against the one that oppresses until it returns to the command of Allāh. And if it returns, then make settlement between them in justice and act justly. Indeed, Allāh loves those who act justly} (Al-Ḥujurāt: 9). And He, the Almighty and Majestic, said: *{Cursed were those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel by the tongue of David and of Jesus, the son of Mary. That was because they disobeyed and [habitually] transgressed. * They used not to forbid one another from wrongdoing that they did. How wretched was that which they were doing}* (Al-Mā’idah: 78-79). These verses and their likes necessitate the obligation of enjoining good and forbidding evil, and it has levels: The first is changing it by hand if possible. If not possible, and one fears for oneself if one denounces it by hand, then one must denounce it with one's tongue. If that is not possible for the reasons we described, then one must denounce it with one's heart.

It is narrated from Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī who said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) say: "Whoever among you sees an evil, and is able to change it with his hand, let him change it with his hand. If he is not able, then with his tongue. If he is not able, then with his heart, and that is the weakest of faith."

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Jarīr al-Bajalī from his father, that the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "No people among whom sins are committed, while they are more numerous and stronger than those who commit them, and then they do not change it, but Allāh will afflict them all with punishment from Him."

It is narrated from ‘Abdullāh ibn Mas‘ūd who said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "The first defect that entered upon the Children of Israel was that a man would meet another man and say, 'O you, fear Allāh and leave what you are doing, for it is not lawful for you.' Then he would meet him the next day, and that would not prevent him from being his companion in eating, drinking, and sitting. When they did that, Allāh the Exalted struck their hearts against one another." Then he said: {Cursed were those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel by the tongue of David and of Jesus, the son of Mary. That was because they disobeyed and [habitually] transgressed} (Al-Mā'idah: 78), to His saying: {transgressors}. Then he said: "Nay, by Allāh, you must enjoin good and forbid evil, and you must restrain the hand of the oppressor, and compel him to the truth forcefully, and confine him to the truth strictly."

Abū Dāwūd said, and added to it: "Or Allāh will surely strike your hearts against one another, then He will curse you as He cursed them." So the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) informed that a condition of forbidding evil is to denounce it, then not to sit with one who persists in disobedience, nor eat with him, nor drink with him. What the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) mentioned of that was an explanation of His ta‘āla saying: {You see many of them becoming allies of those who disbelieved} (Al-Mā'idah: 80). So by their eating with them and sitting with them, they were abandoning the forbidding of evil, due to His ta‘āla saying: {They used not to forbid one another from wrongdoing that they did. How wretched was that which they were doing} (Al-Mā'idah: 79). This is despite what the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) mentioned of denouncing it with his tongue, except that this did not negate it with his sitting, eating, and drinking with him. It has been narrated from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him). Abū Bakr said, after praising Allāh ta‘āla and lauding Him: O people, you recite this verse and misplace it: {O you who have believed, upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves. Those who have gone astray will not harm you when you have been guided} (Al-Mā'idah: 105). And we heard the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) say: "Indeed, when people see an oppressor and do not restrain his hands, Allāh is about to afflict them all with punishment." Muḥammad ibn Bakr narrated to us (...) Abū Umayyah ash-Sha'bānī narrated to me, he said: I asked Abā Tha'labah al-Khushanī, and said: O Abā Tha'labah, what do you say about this verse: {upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves}? He said: By Allāh, you have asked an expert about it. I asked the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) about it, and he said: "Rather, enjoin one another to do good and forbid one another from evil, until you see avarice obeyed, desire followed, this world preferred, and every person with an opinion admiring his own opinion. Then upon you is [to care for] yourself, and leave the common folk. For indeed, beyond you are days of patience; patience therein is like grasping a burning coal. The one who acts [righteously] among them will have the reward of fifty men who do as he does." He said: And another added to me: He said: O Messenger of Allāh, the reward of fifty of them? He said: "The reward of fifty of you." In these narrations is an indication that enjoining good and forbidding evil have two states: a state in which it is possible to change and remove the evil, so it is obligatory for whoever can remove it with his hand to do so. Removing it by hand can be in various ways: among them, if he cannot remove it except with the sword, and it comes to taking the life of the perpetrator of the evil, he must do that. Like one who sees a man intending to kill him or another, or to take property, or intending illicit sexual relations with a woman, or the like, and he knows that he will not desist if he denounces him verbally or fights him with less than a weapon, then he must kill him; due to the saying of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): "Whoever among you sees an evil, let him change it with his hand." So if he cannot change it with his hand except by killing the one persisting in this evil, he must kill him, it is an obligation upon him. If he predominantly thinks that if he denounces it with his hand and repels him without a weapon, he will desist, it is not permissible for him to proceed to kill him. If he predominantly thinks that if he denounces it by repelling with his hand or by word, he will be resisted, and he will not be able thereafter to repel him, and he cannot remove this evil except by proceeding to kill him without warning him, then he must kill him. Ibn Rustum mentioned from Muḥammad regarding a man who usurped another man's property: "You are permitted to kill him until you retrieve the property and return it to its owner." Likewise, Abū Ḥanīfah said regarding a thief who takes property: "You are permitted to pursue him until you kill him if he does not return the property." Muḥammad said: And Abū Ḥanīfah said regarding a robber who breaks into houses: "You are permitted to kill him." And he said regarding a man who wants to pull out your tooth, he said: "Then you may kill him if you are in a place where people will not help you." This which we have mentioned is indicated by His ta'āla saying: {then fight against the one that oppresses until it returns to the command of Allāh} (Al-Ḥujurāt: 9). So He commanded fighting them and did not lift it from them until after they return to the command of Allāh ta'āla and abandon their oppression and evil. And the saying of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him): "Whoever among you sees an evil, let him change it with his hand" also necessitates that; because he has commanded changing it with his hand in any way possible, so if he cannot change it except by killing, he must kill him until he removes it.

Likewise, we have said regarding those who impose taxes and levies that they take from people's property: their blood is permissible, and it is obligatory for Muslims to kill them. Any individual among the people may kill whoever he can among them without warning him, nor addressing them verbally beforehand; because it is known from their condition that they are not receptive if they are proceeding with that despite knowing its prohibition. And whenever one who wants to denounce them warns them, they will resist him until it is not possible to change the evil they are upon. So it is permissible to kill whoever among them persists in that, and it is also permissible to leave them for one who fears that if he proceeds to kill them, he will be killed; except that he must avoid them, be harsh with them as much as possible, and shun them.

The Ḥadīth of Abā Tha‘labah al-Khushanī, which we presented earlier, also indicates this; because he (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Enjoin one another to do good and forbid one another from evil, until you see avarice obeyed, desire followed, this world preferred, and every person with an opinion admiring his own opinion. Then upon you is [to care for] yourself, and leave the common folk." Meaning, and Allāh knows best: if they do not accept that and follow their whims and opinions, then you are at liberty to leave them, and upon you is [to care for] yourself and leave the matter of the common folk. And he permitted abandoning verbal denunciation for one in this state. It was narrated from ‘Ikrimah that Ibn ‘Abbās said to him: I am at a loss to know what happened to those who refrained from admonishing among the People of the Sabbath. I said to him: I will inform you of that, read the second verse, His ta‘āla saying: {We saved those who forbade evil} (Al-A‘rāf: 165). He said: So he said to me: You are correct, and he clothed me in a garment. Ibn ‘Abbās deduced from this that Allāh destroyed those who did evil and those who did not forbid it, thus placing those who refrained from denouncing evil in the same position as its perpetrators regarding punishment.

Makram ibn Aḥmad al-Qāḍī narrated to us, he said: Aḥmad ibn ‘Aṭīyyah al-Kūfī narrated to us, he said: Al-Ḥimmānī narrated to us, he said: I heard Ibn al-Mubārak say: When news of the killing of Ibrāhīm aṣ-Ṣā’igh reached Abū Ḥanīfah, he wept until we thought he would die. I was alone with him, and he said: By Allāh, he was a wise man, and I used to fear this matter for him. I said: And how did it happen? He said: He used to come and ask me, and he was very self-sacrificing in obedience to Allāh and very scrupulous. Sometimes I would offer him something, and he would ask me about it, and not be satisfied with it, nor taste it, and sometimes he would be satisfied with it and eat it. He asked me about enjoining good and forbidding evil, until we agreed that it is an obligation from Allāh ta‘āla. He said to me: Extend your hand so I may pledge allegiance to you. The world darkened between me and him. I said: Why? He said: He called me to one of the rights of Allāh, and I refused him, saying to him that if one man undertakes it alone, he will be killed, and it will not rectify the people's affairs. But if he finds righteous helpers and a man to lead them who is trustworthy in the religion of Allāh and does not deviate. He said: And he used to demand that every time he came, like a creditor demanding payment from a persistent debtor, every time he came to me, he would demand it of me. I would say to him: This is a matter that cannot be rectified by one person; the prophets could not bear it until it was ordained from heaven. This is an obligation unlike other obligations; because other obligations can be performed by a man alone, but this, whenever a man commands it alone, he risks his blood and exposes himself to being killed, so I fear for him that he might contribute to his own killing. And if a man is killed, no one else will dare to expose himself, but he waits. The angels said: {They said, "Will You place upon it one who causes corruption therein and sheds blood, while we declare Your praise and sanctify You?"} (Al-Baqarah: 30).

Then he went out to Marw where Abū Muslim was, and he spoke to him harshly. Abū Muslim seized him, but the jurists and worshippers of Khurāsān gathered around him until they secured his release. Then he went back to him, and Abū Muslim rebuked him. Then he went back to him again and said: I find nothing better to do for Allāh ta'āla than to strive against you. I will strive against you with my tongue, for I have no strength with my hand, but Allāh sees me, and I detest you for His sake. So Abū Muslim killed him.

End of quote from the abridged Aḥkām al-Qur'ān by al-Jaṣṣāṣ.

Al-Jaṣṣāṣ, may Allāh have mercy on him, added:

No one among the scholars and jurists of the Muslim nation, their predecessors or successors, has denied the obligation of this, except for a group from the literalists (al-Ḥashw) and ignorant proponents of Ḥadīth. They denied fighting the rebellious faction and enjoining good and forbidding evil with weapons, and they called enjoining good and forbidding evil a "discord" (fitnah) if it required carrying arms and fighting the rebellious faction, despite what they had heard in the saying of Allāh ta'āla: {then fight against the one that oppresses until it returns to the command of Allāh} and what the wording necessitates of the obligation to fight it with the sword and otherwise. They claimed, moreover, that the ruler should not be denounced for oppression, injustice, and killing a soul that Allāh has forbidden; rather, only someone other than the ruler should be denounced verbally or by hand without weapons. Thus, they became a greater evil upon the nation than its opposing enemies, because they made people refrain from fighting the rebellious faction and from denouncing the ruler for oppression and injustice, until that led to the dominance of the wicked, indeed the Magians, and enemies of Islām, until the frontiers were lost, oppression spread, lands were ruined, religion and the world were lost, and heresy (Zandaqah), extremism, and the doctrines of Dualism, Khurramism, and Mazdakism appeared. What brought all this upon them was abandoning enjoining good and forbidding evil and denouncing the unjust ruler. And Allāh is the One whose help is sought.

It is narrated from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī who said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "The best Jihād is a word of justice before an unjust ruler or an unjust commander." Muḥammad ibn 'Umar narrated to us, he said (...): I heard Abū Ḥanīfah say: I narrated to Ibrāhīm aṣ-Ṣā'igh from 'Ikrimah from Ibn 'Abbās: The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "The master of martyrs is Ḥamzah ibn 'Abd al-Muṭṭalib, and a man who stands up to an unjust ruler, commands him and forbids him, and is killed for it."

Al-Ḥasan said: The Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "Whoever enjoins good or forbids evil is Allāh's caliph on His earth, the caliph of His Messenger, and the caliph of His Book." And from Durrah bint Abī Lahab, she said: A man came to the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) while he was on the pulpit and said: Who are the best of people, O Messenger of Allāh? He said: "Those among them who most enjoin good, most forbid evil, are most God-fearing, and most maintain kinship ties."

It is narrated from Abū Hurayrah who said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) said: "It is not permissible for a believer to humiliate himself." They said: O Messenger of Allāh, and what is humiliating himself? He said: "He exposes himself to affliction that he cannot bear." I say: Ibn Mājah narrated it from ‘Alī ibn Zayd ibn Jud‘ān from Al-Ḥasan ibn Jundub from Ḥudhayfah from the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), and both have been spoken about. It was narrated from some of the Companions that he said: If a man sees an evil that he cannot denounce, let him say three times: O Allāh, this is an evil. If he says that, he has done what is upon him. Ibn al-‘Arabī claimed that whoever hopes for its removal and fears for himself from changing it by beating or killing, it is permissible for him according to most scholars to venture into this danger. If he does not hope for its removal, then what benefit is there in it? He said: What I hold is that if the intention is sincere, let him venture forth however it may be and not care. I say: This contradicts what Abū ‘Umar mentioned of the consensus. This verse indicates the permissibility of enjoining good and forbidding evil despite the fear of being killed. And Allāh ta‘āla said: {And enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong, and be patient over what befalls you}. This is an indication of harm.

Anas ibn Mālik narrated: It was said: "O Messenger of Allāh, when do we abandon enjoining good and forbidding evil?" He said: "When what appeared in the nations before you appears among you." We said: O Messenger of Allāh, and what appeared in the nations before us? He said: "Rule among your young ones, immorality among your elders, and knowledge among your worthless ones." Zayd said: The interpretation of the meaning of the Prophet's (peace and blessings be upon him) saying, "And knowledge among your worthless ones," is when knowledge is among the dissolute. Narrated by Ibn Mājah. End of quote.

Imām Ibn Taymiyyah said in his Fatāwā regarding enjoining good and forbidding evil:

Allāh the Exalted said: {And the believing men and believing women are allies of one another. They enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong} (At-Tawbah: 71). For this reason, Abū Hurayrah said: "You were the best of people for people, you bring them in chains and fetters until you admit them to Paradise." So He, glorified be He, clarified that this nation is the best of nations for people, for they are the most beneficial to them and the greatest in doing good to them, because they perfected enjoining good upon people and forbidding them from evil in terms of quality and quantity, as they enjoined every good and forbade every evil to everyone, and they established that through Jihād in the way of Allāh with their lives and their wealth, and this is the perfection of benefit.

Likewise, enjoining good and forbidding evil is not obligatory on every single individual, but it is a collective obligation (kifāyah), as indicated by the Qur'ān. And since Jihād is part of its completion, Jihād is also likewise. If those who are supposed to fulfill its obligation do not do so, then every capable person sins according to his ability, as it is obligatory on every person according to his ability, as the Prophet said: "Whoever among you sees an evil, let him change it with his hand. If he is not able, then with his tongue. If he is not able, then with his heart, and that is the weakest of faith."

If this is so, it is known that enjoining good and forbidding evil, and completing it with Jihād, is one of the greatest good deeds that we have been commanded to do. Therefore, it is said: Let your enjoining of good and your forbidding of evil not be an evil itself. If it is one of the greatest obligations and recommended acts, then obligations and recommended acts must have their benefit outweighing their harm, for with this the Messengers were sent and the Books were revealed, and Allāh does not love corruption. Rather, everything Allāh has commanded is goodness (rectitude/goodness). Allāh has praised goodness, those who promote goodness (almuṣliḥīn), and those who believe and do righteous deeds, and He has condemned the corrupters (al-mufsidīn) in more than one place. So, where the harm of enjoining and forbidding is greater than its benefit, it is not something Allāh has commanded, even if an obligation has been abandoned and a prohibition has been committed. For the believer must fear Allāh regarding His servants, and he is not responsible for their guidance. This is the meaning of His ta‘āla saying: {O you who have believed, upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves. Those who have gone astray will not harm you when you have been guided}. Guidance is only completed by fulfilling obligations. If the Muslim fulfills what is obligatory upon him of enjoining good and forbidding evil, as he fulfills other obligations, the misguidance of the misguided will not harm him. This is sometimes done with the heart, sometimes with the tongue, and sometimes with the hand. As for the heart, it is obligatory in every situation, as there is no harm in doing it, and whoever does not do it is not a believer, as the Prophet said: "and that is the lowest or weakest of faith." And he said: "Beyond that, there is not a mustard seed's worth of faith." It was said to Ibn Mas‘ūd: Who are the living dead? He said: "The one who does not recognize good nor denounce evil."

If this is the standard for every righteous deed, then the one who enjoins good and forbids evil must be like this in his own right, and his action is not righteous unless it is with knowledge and understanding. As ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz said: "Whoever worships Allāh without knowledge causes more corruption than rectification." And as in the Ḥadīth of Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, may Allāh be pleased with him: "Knowledge is the leader of action, and action is its follower." This is clear, for intention and action, if not based on knowledge, are ignorance, misguidance, and following whims, as mentioned before. This is the difference between the people of Jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic ignorance) and the people of Islām. So, there must be knowledge of good and evil and differentiation between them. There must also be knowledge of the state of the one being commanded and forbidden. And it is part of rectitude to approach enjoining and forbidding through the straight path, which is the closest way to achieving the objective.

And in that, gentleness is necessary, as the Prophet said: "Gentleness is not in anything except that it adorns it, and harshness is not in anything except that it mars it." And he said: "Indeed, Allāh is gentle and loves gentleness in all matters, and He gives for it what He does not give for harshness." It is also necessary to be forbearing and patient with harm, for harm will inevitably befall him. If he is not forbearing and patient, what he corrupts will be more than what he rectifies, as Luqmān said to his son: {And enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong and be patient over what befalls you. Indeed, that is of the matters [requiring] determination}. For this reason, Allāh commanded the Messengers, who are the leaders of enjoining good and forbidding evil, to be patient, as He said to the Seal of the Messengers. Indeed, that is coupled with conveying the message, for when he was first sent, the Sūrah Yā Ayyuhā al-Muddaththir was revealed to him after Sūrah Iqra', by which he was made a prophet. He said: *{O you who covers himself [with a garment], * Arise and warn, * And your Lord glorify, * And your clothing purify, * And uncleanness avoid, * And do not confer favor to acquire more, * But for your Lord be patient}*. So He began the verses of sending to creation with the command to warn and ended them with the command to be patient. Warning itself is enjoining good and forbidding evil, so it is known that patience is necessary after that. And He said: {And be patient over what they say and avoid them with gracious avoidance}. {So be patient, as were those of determination among the messengers}. {So be patient for the decision of your Lord and do not be like the companion of the fish}. {And be patient, and your patience is not but through Allāh. And do not grieve over them}. {And be patient, for indeed, Allāh does not allow to be lost the reward of those who do good}.

So, these three are necessary: knowledge, gentleness, and patience. Knowledge before enjoining and forbidding, gentleness with it, and patience after it, although each of the three is concomitant in these states. This is as stated in the tradition from some of the Salaf, and they narrated it as Marfu' (attributed to the Prophet), mentioned by Qāḍī Abū Ya'lā in Al-Mu'tamad: "No one enjoins good and forbids evil except one who is knowledgeable in what he enjoins, knowledgeable in what he forbids, gentle in what he enjoins, gentle in what he forbids, forbearing in what he enjoins, and forbearing in what he forbids." Let it be known that commanding these qualities in enjoining good and forbidding evil is something that imposes difficulty on many souls, so one might think that this absolves him of it and he abandons it. This harms him more than enjoining without these qualities, or perhaps less. For abandoning an obligatory command is a sin. So, one who moves from a sin to a greater sin is like one seeking refuge from the scorching heat in the fire. And one who moves from a sin to a sin is like one moving from a false religion to a false religion; the second may be worse than the first, or it may be lesser, or they may be equal. Thus, you find the one who is negligent in enjoining and forbidding, and the one who transgresses in it; the sin of this one may be greater, or the sin of that one may be greater, or they may be equal. It is known from the signs Allāh has shown us in the horizons and in ourselves, and by what He has testified in His Book, that sins are the cause of calamities. So the evils of calamities and retribution are from the evils of deeds, and that obedience is the cause of blessings, so good deeds are a cause for Allāh's goodness. Allāh ta'āla said: {And whatever strikes you of disaster - it is for what your hands have earned; but He pardons much}. And Allāh ta'āla said: {What comes to you of good is from Allāh, but what comes to you of evil, [O man], is from yourself} (An-Nisā': 79). And Allāh ta'āla said: {Indeed, those of you who turned back on the day the two armies met, it was Satan who caused them to slip because of some [blame] they had earned. But Allāh has already forgiven them} (Āl 'Imrān: 155). And He said: {Or is it that when a disaster struck you [on the day of Uḥud] when you had struck [the enemy] with one twice as great, you said, "From where is this?" Say, "It is from yourselves."} (Āl 'Imrān: 165). And He said: {Or He may destroy them for what they earned; but He pardons much} (Ash-Shūrā: 34). And He said: {And if evil touches them because of what their hands have sent forth, indeed, man is ever ungrateful} (Ash-Shūrā: 48). And Allāh ta‘āla said: {And Allāh would not punish them while you, [O Muḥammad], are among them, and Allāh would not punish them while they seek forgiveness} (Al-Anfāl: 33).

From the Legacy of the Martyred Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām in the Field of Incitement.

We excerpt from the words of a man who dedicated his life to performing the obligation of Jihād and exhorting Muslims to it, by his good example himself, by his tongue and speeches, and by what he wrote with his pen, leaving a rich legacy of calling to perform this obligation. Our martyred Shaykh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām, may Allāh have mercy on him, said:

Jihād with Wealth:

There is no doubt that Jihād with one's self is of a higher rank than Jihād with wealth. Therefore, the wealthy at the time of the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him), such as ‘Uthmān and ‘Abd ar-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf, may Allāh be pleased with them, were not exempt from participating with their persons, because the refinement of souls and the cultivation of spirits are achieved at a high level in the midst of battle. Thus, the Prophet (peace and blessings be upon him) advised one of his companions, saying: "...and upon you is Jihād, for it is the monasticism of Islām." Therefore, when the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) was asked: "Will a man be tried in his grave?" He said: "The flashing of swords over his head is enough of a trial for him."

Therefore, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) warned against being preoccupied with worldly affairs at the expense of Jihād. He once pointed to a ploughshare and said: "This does not enter the house of a people except that Allāh introduces humiliation into it."

And in the Ṣaḥīḥ: "When you engage in the ʿīnah transaction (a form of interest-based sale), take hold of the tails of cattle, are content with agriculture, and abandon Jihād, Allāh will impose humiliation upon you which He will not remove until you return to your religion."

And in the Ṣaḥīḥ as well: "Do not acquire estates, lest you become desirous of the world." An estate (ḍayʿah) is real property or a craft. In these Ḥadīth, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) combined the allurements of the world and causes of preoccupation: agriculture, trade with usury and the trick of ʿīnah, animal production, industry, and crafts. Preoccupation with these at a time when Islām is facing a battle for existence or eradication is considered forbidden and a religious transgression.

As for Jihād with wealth, it is an obligation if those engaged in Jihād need it. It is an obligation on women and in the wealth of minors, even if Jihād is a collective obligation, as Ibn Taymiyyah decided.

Therefore, it is forbidden for people to save when there is a need for wealth. Indeed, Ibn Taymiyyah was asked: "If wealth is insufficient for feeding the hungry and for Jihād, the abandonment of which causes harm, what should be done?" He said: "We prioritize Jihād even if the hungry die, as in the issue of human shields (tatarus), and even more so, for there – in human shields – we kill them by our action, whereas here they die by Allāh's action."

Al-Qurṭubī said: "Scholars have agreed that if a need befalls Muslims after the payment of Zakāh, it is obligatory to spend wealth on it." Mālik said: "It is obligatory for people to ransom their prisoners even if it consumes all their wealth, and this is also a consensus."

Preserving religion is prioritized over preserving lives, and preserving lives is prioritized over preserving wealth. The wealth of the rich is not more precious or valuable than the blood of those engaged in Jihād. Let the rich pay attention to Allāh's ruling regarding their wealth, where Jihād is in dire need, and the religion and lands of Muslims are exposed to annihilation, while the rich are drowned in their desires. If only the rich would fast for one day from their desires, withhold their hands from squandering wealth on luxuries, and divert it to those engaged in Jihād who are dying from cold, whose feet are frostbitten, who do not find their daily sustenance, nor ammunition to defend themselves and protect their blood.

Conclusion:

First: Jihād with one's self is an individual obligation on all Muslims on earth.

Second: No one needs permission from anyone for Jihād; parents do not have authority over their child in this regard.

Third: Jihād with wealth is an individual obligation, and saving is forbidden as long as Jihād needs Muslims' wealth.

Fourth: Abandoning Jihād is like abandoning prayer and fasting; indeed, abandoning Jihād is more severe in these days. Ibn Rushd transmitted the consensus that when Jihād becomes an individual obligation, it is stronger than going for the obligatory Ḥajj.

Inaction and Blindness:

In conclusion, we say: The issue is not the abundance of texts or the profusion of evidence; rather, the matter is related to the hearts. If Allāh gives it light, it sees the truth and it becomes clear therein. If the hearts are darkened, they no longer see. {For indeed, it is not eyes that are blinded, but blinded are the hearts which are within the breasts} (Al-Ḥajj: 46). {There has come to you enlightenment from your Lord. So whoever will see does so for [the benefit of] his own soul, and whoever is blind [does harm] against it. And [say], "I am not a guardian over you."} (Al-An'ām: 104).

This insight of the hearts into divine guidance and signs comes as a result of piety, obedience, and striving in worship. This insight sprouts in the land of the heart, by which one distinguishes between truth and falsehood, the truthful and the liar. Allāh ta'āla said: {Indeed in that are signs for those who discern} (Al-Hijr: 75).

Every scholar who prefers this world and desires it must inevitably speak untruthfully about Allāh in his religious edicts and judgments, in his reports and obligations, because the rulings of the Lord, glorified be He, often come contrary to people's purposes, especially the people of leadership and those who follow desires, for their purposes are not achieved except by opposing the truth, especially if a shubaha (doubt/specious argument) arises for him. Then the doubt and desire converge, passion flares up, the image is obscured, and the face of truth is obliterated. If the truth is apparent, with no obscurity or doubt in it, he proceeds to oppose it and says: I have an escape through repentance. Concerning these and their likes, Allāh ta'āla said: {Then there succeeded them a posterity who inherited the Scripture, but they took [for themselves] the fleeting gains of this lower life, saying, "It will be forgiven for us." And if [another] fleeting gain like it came to them, they would take it. Was not the covenant of the Scripture taken from them that they would not say about Allāh except the truth, and they studied what was in it? And the home of the Hereafter is better for those who fear Allāh; so will you not use reason?} (Al-A'rāf: 169).

For following whims blinds the eye of the heart, so it does not distinguish between Sunnah and innovation (bid'ah), or it inverts it, so it sees innovation as Sunnah and Sunnah as innovation. This is the affliction of scholars when they prefer this world and follow leadership and desires, as mentioned in Al-Fawā'id, p. 113.

These verses apply to them, except their saying: {And recite to them the news of him to whom we gave Our signs, but he detached himself from them; so Satan pursued him, *and he became of the deviators. * And if We had willed, We could have raised him thereby, but he adhered to the earth and followed his own desire. So his example is like that of the dog: if you chase him, he pants, or if you leave him, he [still] pants. That is the example of the people who denied Our signs. So relate the stories that perhaps they will give thought}* (Al-A'rāf: 175-176).

Therefore, texts alone are not sufficient; insight of the heart is necessary to see the truth.

When the heart's attachment to the world increases, and the sins of the soul that bears it multiply, a covering (rān) forms on it, because every sin is a black spot on the heart, and the black spots continue to multiply until the covering (the black sheath) forms, which prevents light from reaching this heart.

When the heart is darkened, the image of things does not appear in its reality, so the truth becomes obscure and its image does not appear, and the heart may be inverted, seeing truth as falsehood and falsehood as truth.

Therefore, piety is necessary for the criterion (furqān) to appear, for the heart to become pure, and for things to appear clearly and distinctly on its mirror. {O you who have believed, if you fear Allāh, He will grant you a criterion and will remove from you your misdeeds and forgive you. And Allāh is the possessor of great bounty} (Al-Anfāl: 29). Therefore, when a matter was problematic for them and perplexed them, they would say: Ask the people of the frontiers (ahl ath-thughūr), for they are the closest people to Allāh. They asked Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal: Whom should we ask after you? He said: Ask Abā Bakr al-Warrāq, for he has piety – as he is considered – and I hope he will be guided to the answer.

Justifications for Jihād:

One who looks at the reality of Muslims today finds that their greatest calamity is abandoning Jihād (love of the world and hatred of death). Therefore, tyrants have dominated the necks of Muslims in every region and over every land, because the disbelievers fear nothing but fighting: {So fight in the cause of Allāh; you are not held responsible except for yourself. And rouse the believers that Allāh may restrain the might of those who disbelieve. And Allāh is greater in might and stronger in [exemplary] punishment} (An-Nisā': 84).

We call upon Muslims and urge their steps to fight for many reasons, chief among them:

1. So that disbelief does not prevail.
2. Due to the scarcity of men [willing to fight].
3. Fear of the Hellfire.
4. To fulfill the obligation and respond to the divine call.
5. In adherence to the righteous predecessors (as-Salaf aṣ-Ṣāliḥ).
6. To establish the solid base that will be a launching point for Islām.
7. To protect the oppressed on earth.
8. In aspiration for martyrdom.

1. So that Disbelief Does Not Prevail:

In the noble verse: {And fight them until there is no fitnah and [until] the religion, all of it, is for Allāh. And if they cease - then indeed, Allāh is Seeing of what they do} (Al-Anfāl: 39).

If fighting stops, disbelief (kufr) will prevail, and discord (fitnah), which is polytheism (shirk), will spread.

2. Due to the Scarcity of Men:

The crisis of the Islamic world is a crisis of men who can bear responsibility and carry the burdens of the trust. As stated in the Ṣaḥīḥ: "People are like a hundred camels, among which you can hardly find one fit for riding." That is, among every hundred camels, you will not find one that can carry you on your journeys. It is narrated that 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, said to a select group of his companions: Make a wish. Each one wished for something. Then they said: Make a wish, O Commander of the Faithful. He said: I wish I had this house full of men like Abū 'Ubaydah. The men who know are few, those who act are fewer, those who engage in Jihād are rarer and more exceptional, and those who are patient on this path are hardly mentioned.

We hope from our brothers who have not been able to break free from the cage of social customs, have not shaken off the debris of traditions from their heads, and have not cast off the burdensome legacies of defeated generations under the pressure of bitter reality and before the cunning and evil Orientalist attack – I say to these brothers: if they do not come forth to us themselves, then at least let them allow those whose souls hover over the land of Jihād to reach it with their bodies. Therefore, the time for men has come, and this is a station of action, not mere talk. So leave aside plundering that is sound in its chambers... And bring forth a narrative, what is the narrative of the travelers.

Great affairs and painful, grave calamities have befallen the Muslims. So leave talk about food and styles of speech, but tell me about this momentous matter and what Muslims have done for it.

Matters, if a child were to contemplate them... The child's temples would turn grey. Are Muslim women taken captive in every land... While the lives of Muslims are pleasant?

Does not Allāh and Islām have a right to be defended by young and old?

3. Fear of the Hellfire:

Allāh, Almighty and Majestic, says: {If you do not go forth, He will punish you with a painful punishment and replace you with another people, and you will not harm Him at all. And Allāh is over all things competent} (At-Tawbah: 39).

Ibn al-‘Arabī said: "The painful punishment is in this world through the enemy's domination, and in the Hereafter with the Fire."

Al-Qurṭubī said: It has been said that what is meant by this verse is the obligation of mobilizing when there is a need, the manifestation of disbelievers, and the strengthening of their might. Allāh, Almighty and Majestic, says: *{Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?" They will say, "We were oppressed in the land." The angels will say, "Was not the earth of Allāh spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?" For those, their refuge is Hell - and evil it is as a destination. * Except for the oppressed among men, women, and children who cannot devise a plan nor are they guided to a way - * For those it is expected that Allāh will pardon them, and Allāh is ever Pardoning and Forgiving}* (An-Nisā’: 97-99).

Al-Bukhārī narrated with his chain of transmission from ‘Ikrimah: Ibn ‘Abbās informed me that some Muslims were with the polytheists, increasing the numbers of the polytheists at the time of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him). An arrow would come, shot, and hit one of them, killing him. So Allāh ta‘āla revealed: {Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?" They will say, "We were oppressed in the land." The angels will say, "Was not the earth of Allāh spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?"...}

If the believers in Makkah – who held fast to their religion but did not emigrate, and went out [with the polytheists to Badr] out of shyness and fear of the disbelievers, thus increasing the numbers of the polytheists, and then some of them were killed – deserved Hell according to Al-Bukhārī's narration, then what about the millions of nominal Muslims who are subjected to severe torment and live the life of grazing livestock, unable to repel aggression against their honor, blood, or wealth? Indeed, one of them cannot even control his beard to let it grow because it is an apparent Islamic "accusation." Indeed, he cannot be alone in [deciding] his wife's dress to lengthen it according to the Sharī'ah because it is a crime for which one is seized by the forelocks and feet. He cannot teach the Qur'ān to three young Muslims in the house of Allāh because it is an "unlawful gathering" in the custom of Jāhiliyyah. Indeed, in some so-called Islamic countries, he cannot cover his wife's hair, nor can he prevent intelligence agents from taking his daughter by the hand after a part of the night has passed, under the cover of pitch-darkness, to wherever they wish! And can he refuse an order issued by the tyrant in which this individual is offered as a cheap sacrifice on the altar of this tyrant's desires?

Are not these millions living humiliated, degraded, and oppressed, and the angels take them in death while they are wronging themselves? What will be their answer if the angels ask them, {In what [condition] were you?} Will they not say, {We were oppressed in the land}? Weakness is not an excuse before the Lord of the Worlds; rather, it is a crime whose perpetrator deserves Hell. Allāh has excused the elderly, children, minors, and women who find no means of escape, do not know the way to the land of honor, cannot emigrate to the abode of Islām, nor reach the base of Jihād. I will turn my face from a land wherein... My tongue is bound and my heart is locked. And indeed, the essence of resolve and sound judgment for a man... If the sun reaches him, is to move on.

Jihād and emigration for Jihād are an integral part of the nature of this religion. A religion without Jihād cannot stand firm on any land, nor can its tree straighten on its trunk. The inherent nature of Jihād, which is from the core of this religion and has its weight in the balance of the Lord of the Worlds, is not a transient circumstance of that period in which the Qur'ān was revealed, but rather a necessity accompanying this caravan guided by this religion.

Professor Sayyid Quṭb says in Fī Zīlāl al-Qur'ān (In the Shade of the Qur'ān) (2/742) in the commentary of this verse: "If Jihād were a transient circumstance in the life of the Muslim nation, it would not have occupied all these sections of the core of Allāh's Book in such a style! Nor would it have occupied all these sections of the Sunnah of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) in such a style. If Jihād were a transient circumstance, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) would not have said that word to every Muslim until the Day of Resurrection: "Whoever dies without having fought (in Jihād) or having conceived the idea of fighting in his mind, dies on a branch of hypocrisy." (Narrated by Abū Hurayrah)."

Allāh, glorified be He, knows that this is a matter disliked by kings! And He knows that those in power must resist it, because it is a path other than their path, and a methodology other than their methodology, not only in that time but today, tomorrow, in every land, and in every generation! And Allāh, glorified be He, knows that evil is audacious, cannot be fair, and cannot let good grow, no matter how peaceful and conciliatory the path this good takes. For the mere growth of good poses a danger to evil, and the mere existence of truth poses a danger to falsehood. Evil will inevitably resort to aggression, and falsehood will inevitably defend itself by trying to kill and suffocate truth by force! This is an inherent nature, not a temporary circumstance; this is an innate disposition, not a transient state.

Hence, Jihād is necessary... it is necessary in every form... It must begin in the realm of conscience, then manifest itself to encompass the realm of reality, actuality, and testimony... There must be an encounter between falsehood, fortified by numbers, and truth, adorned with preparedness... Otherwise, the matter would be suicide or a farce unbecoming of believers.

4. Responding to the Divine Call:

Allāh ta‘āla said: {Go forth, whether light or heavy, and strive with your wealth and your lives in the cause of Allāh. That is better for you, if you only knew} (At-Tawbah: 41).

Al-Qurṭubī mentioned in his commentary (8/150) ten interpretations for "light or heavy" (khifāfan wa thiqālan) in this verse:

1. Narrated from Ibn ‘Abbās: young men and old men.
2. Narrated from Ibn ‘Abbās and Qatādah: active and inactive.
3. The light: the rich, and the heavy: the poor, said by Mujāhid.

The correct understanding of the verse, in our view, is that people were commanded collectively, meaning: go forth whether movement is easy for you or difficult... It is narrated that Ibn Umm Maktūm came to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings be upon him) and said to him: Is it upon me to go for military expedition? He said: Yes, until Allāh ta‘āla revealed: {There is no blame upon the blind}.

These statements are merely examples regarding lightness and heaviness. No rational person doubts that our situation in Afghanistan and Palestine, indeed in most parts of the Islāmic world, falls under the purview of this verse. Modern exegetes, jurists, and legal theorists have unanimously agreed that if an enemy enters an Islāmic land, or a land that was once Dār al-Islām (the Abode of Islām), it becomes obligatory upon the inhabitants of that town to go out and confront the enemy. If they refrain, fall short, become lazy, or are insufficient in number, the individual obligation (farḍ ‘ayn) expands to those nearest to them. If these also fall short or refrain, then to those nearest to them, and so on, until the individual obligation encompasses the entire earth. It is not permissible for anyone to abandon it, just like prayer (ṣalāh) and fasting (ṣawm). This obligation is such that a son may go out without his father's permission, a debtor without his creditor's permission, a woman without her husband's permission, and a slave without his master's permission. The individual obligation remains continuous until the land is purified from the filth of the disbelievers; however, a woman's departure requires a maḥram (a male guardian).

To the best of my limited knowledge, I have not found any book of jurisprudence (fiqh), exegesis (tafsīr), or Ḥadīth that does not stipulate this situation. None of the Salaf (pious predecessors) said that this situation is a collective obligation (farḍ kifāyah) or that parental permission is required. The sin is not lifted from the necks of Muslims as long as any piece of land that was once Islāmic remains in the hands of the disbelievers. Only those who engage in Jihād are saved from sin.

So, anyone who abandons Jihād today is abandoning an obligatory duty, like one who breaks the fast in Ramaḍān without an excuse, or like a wealthy person who withholds the obligatory charity (zakāh) from his wealth. Indeed, abandoning Jihād is more severe.

As Ibn Taymiyyah says: "There is nothing more obligatory after faith than repelling the attacking enemy who corrupts the religion and the worldly life."

The clear truth, from which there is no escape, is the statement of Abū Ṭalḥah when he read: {Go forth, whether light or heavy} (Al-Tawbah: 41). He said: "Young and old, Allāh did not listen to anyone's excuse." Then he said to his sons: "O my sons, prepare me for battle." His sons replied: "May Allāh have mercy on you. You fought alongside the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) until he passed away, with Abū Bakr until he passed away, and with ‘Umar until he passed away. We will fight on your behalf." He said: "No. Prepare me." So he went to fight, and he died at sea. They did not find an island to bury him on until after seven days. They buried him there, and his body had not changed, may Allāh be pleased with him.

Al-Qurṭubī states in his exegesis (7:151): "If Jihād becomes an individual obligation due to the enemy's conquest of a region or their arrival at the heartland (the core of the territory), then it becomes incumbent upon all the inhabitants of that land to mobilize and go out to meet them, whether light or heavy, young or old, each according to their capacity. This applies to one who has a father, proceeding without his permission, and to one who has no father.

No one capable of going out, whether a fighter or one who can increase the numbers, should stay behind. If the people of that town are unable to resist, such that they know they lack the strength to confront and repel them, the obligation expands. Likewise, everyone who knows of their weakness against their enemy and knows that he can reach them and aid them is also obligated to go out to them.

For all Muslims are as one hand against others. So, if the people of the area where the enemy has descended and occupied it undertake to repel the enemy, the obligation is lifted from others.

And if the enemy approaches Dār al-Islām without entering it, it is also incumbent upon them (the Muslims) to go out to him, until the religion of Allāh is manifest, the core territory (al-bayḍah) is protected, the domain (al-ḥawzah) is preserved, and the enemy is humiliated. There is no disagreement on this." End of quotation.

How beautiful are the verses of al-Nābighah al-Ja'dī, addressing his wife who was pleading with him to stay with his family:

She spent the night, seated, reminding me of Allāh, while tears flowed in streams from the corners of her eyes.

O daughter of my uncle, the Book of Allāh has compelled me to go forth, reluctantly; can I prevent what Allāh has ordained?

If I return, it is the Lord of creation who brings me back; and if I meet my Lord, then seek a replacement.

I was not lame or blind that I might be excused, nor enfeebled by illness, unable to find a way.

5. Following the Pious Predecessors

Jihād was a way of life for the Pious Predecessors, and the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was the master of the mujāhidīn and the leader of the noble and blessed warriors. When the battle intensified, they would seek protection with the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), and he would be the closest of them to the enemy. The number of his military expeditions (maghāzī) in which he himself participated was twenty-seven. He fought in nine of them himself: Badr, Uḥud, al-Muraysīʿ, al-Khandaq (the Trench), Qurayẓah, Khaybar, the Conquest of Makkah, Ḥunayn, and al-Ṭāʾif. This is according to the opinion that Makkah was conquered by force. The expeditions (sarāyā) he dispatched were forty-seven, and it is said that he also fought Banū al-Naḍīr.

This means that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) would go out on an expedition or send out a company approximately every two months or less.

The noble Companions followed the Sunnah of the noble Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him). The Noble Qurʾān was cultivating this generation with a Jihād-oriented upbringing, protecting them from becoming engrossed in worldly life, just as one protects a person bitten by a snake from water. Al-Ḥākim narrated in al-Mustadrak (2/275), which he authenticated and al-Dhahabī agreed with, from Aslam Abū ʿImrān who said: "A man from the Muhājirīn – in Constantinople – charged at the enemy's ranks until he penetrated them. Abū Ayyūb al-Anṣārī was with us, and some people said: 'He has cast himself into destruction with his own hands.' Abū Ayyūb replied: 'We are more knowledgeable about this verse; it was revealed concerning us. We accompanied the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), witnessed battles with him, and supported him. When Islām spread and became manifest, we, the Anṣār, gathered together out of affection and said: "Allāh has honored us with the companionship of His Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) until Islām spread and its followers became numerous. We had preferred him over our families, wealth, and children. Now the war has laid down its burdens, so let us return to our families and children and reside there." Then it was revealed concerning us: {And spend in the way of Allāh and do not throw yourselves with your own hands into destruction} (Al-Baqarah: 195). So, destruction lay in remaining with family and wealth and abandoning Jihād.'" 'Ikrimah narrated that Ḍamrah ibn al-ʿĪṣ – who was among the oppressed in Makkah and was ill – when he heard what Allāh had revealed about emigration (hijrah), said: "Take me out." So a bed was prepared for him, he was placed on it and taken out. He died on the way at al-Tanʿīm, about six kilometers from Makkah.

Al-Ṭabarī narrated from someone who saw al-Miqdād ibn al-Aswad in Homs on a money-changer's chest, his corpulence overflowing the chest, as he was preparing for an expedition. It was said to him: "Allāh has excused you." He replied: "The Sūrah of Mobilization has come upon us: {Go forth, whether light or heavy} (Al-Tawbah: 41)."

Al-Zuhrī said: "Saʿīd ibn al-Musayyib went out for an expedition, having lost one of his eyes. He was told: 'You are ill.' He replied: 'Allāh has called forth the light and the heavy. If I cannot fight, I will increase the numbers and guard the belongings.'"

It is narrated that some people saw a man in the expeditions to Shām (the Levant) whose eyebrows drooped over his eyes due to old age. They said to him: "O uncle, Allāh has excused you." He replied: "O my nephew, we have been commanded to mobilize, light and heavy."

Consider Ibrāhīm ibn Adham, the renowned Ṣūfī; when he sensed death approaching, he said: "String my bow for me." He died with it in his hand and was buried on one of the islands in the sea in the land of the Rūm (Byzantines).

And ‘Abdullāh ibn al-Mubārak used to travel a distance of two thousand six hundred kilometers, on foot or riding his animal, to fight in the way of Allāh on the frontiers of the Muslims.

Zuhayr ibn Qumayr al-Marwazī said: "I have craved meat for forty years, but I will not eat it until I enter the land of the Rūm and eat it from the spoils of the Rūm."

And ‘Urwah ibn al-Ja‘d, the judge of Kūfah, had seventy horses tethered in his house for Jihād.

And Muḥammad ibn Wāsi‘ was among the devout worshippers, Ḥadīth narrators, warriors, and those who garrisoned the frontiers (murābiṭīn). The commander Qutaybah ibn Muslim al-Bāhilī said of him: "The finger of Muḥammad ibn Wāsi‘ pointing to the sky in battle is dearer to me than a hundred thousand famous swords and strong, vibrant youths."

And Aḥmad ibn Ishāq al-Sulamī says: "I know for certain that I have killed a thousand Turks with this sword of mine, and were it not an innovation (bid‘ah), I would have ordered it to be buried with me."

And Abū ‘Abdullāh ibn Qādūs, due to the large number of Christians of al-Andalus he killed, it was such that if a Christian watered his horse and it refused to drink, he would say to it: "What is wrong with you? Did you see Ibn Qādūs in the water?"

And Badr ibn ‘Ammār killed a lion with his whip, about which al-Mutanabbī praised him:

O you who dusts the mighty lion with his whip, for whom have you saved the polished, sharp sword?

Graziani, the Italian commander, said of ‘Umar al-Mukhtār: "‘Umar al-Mukhtār fought 263 battles against our soldiers in twenty months, and his total number of battles reached a thousand."

Consider Shaykh Muḥammad Farghalī, a mujāhid from the Muslim Brotherhood. When he entered the city of Ismaīliya in Egypt, the English would declare a state of emergency in their camps. The English offered five thousand pounds for his head, dead or alive.

Yūsuf Ṭal‘at, another mujāhid from the Muslim Brotherhood, earned the name "the Butcher of the English" for the numerous Englishmen he killed in the Suez Canal area. ‘Abd al-Nāṣir, president of Egypt (1952-1969), executed them both, seemingly to appease his American patrons.

6. Establishing a Solid Foundation for Dār al-Islām

Establishing a Muslim society on a piece of land is as essential for Muslims as water and air. This Dār (abode or state) will only come into being through an organized Islāmic movement that commits to Jihād in practice and as a motto, and takes up fighting as its fabric and covering.

The Islāmic movement will not be able to establish a Muslim society except through a general popular Jihād. The Islāmic movement serves as its beating heart and thinking mind. It is like a small detonator that ignites a large explosive charge. The Islāmic movement unleashes the ummah's (nation's) latent energies and the wellsprings of goodness stored in its depths.

The Companions, may Allāh be pleased with them, were very few in number compared to the general Muslim population who overthrew the throne of Kisrā (Chosroes) and shattered the glory of Qayṣar (Caesar). Indeed, the tribes that apostatized from Islām during the time of al-Ṣiddīq (Abū Bakr) were dispatched by ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb – after they declared their repentance – to fight the Persians.

Ṭalḥah ibn Khuwaylid al-Asadī – who had previously claimed prophethood – became one of the prominent heroes of al-Qādisiyyah. Sa’d chose him for the mission of reconnoitering the Persians, and he displayed outstanding courage.

As for the handful of officers whom some might imagine could establish a Muslim society, this is a flight of fancy, or an illusion bordering on the impossible, amounting to nothing more than a repetition of ‘Abd al-Nāṣir's tragedy with the Islāmic movement.

The popular Jihādī movement, despite the length of the path, the bitterness of suffering, the immensity of sacrifices, and the gravity of calamities, purifies souls. These souls then rise above the debased reality of the earth, and concerns transcend petty disputes over dirhams, immediate gains, and trivial possessions. Animosities vanish, spirits are refined, and the caravan ascends from the declining slope to the lofty summit, far from the stench of clay and the conflict of base desires.

Along the path of Jihād, leaders are selected, and competencies emerge through giving and sacrifice. Men demonstrate their courage and their willingness to expend themselves.

Do not think glory is a wineskin and a songstress; glory is nothing but war and the daring, initial strike.

As concerns become elevated, souls rise above trivialities. Great matters become the aspiration of hearts and the hope of peoples.

If you venture for a sought-after honor, do not be content with less than the stars.

For the taste of death in a trivial matter is like the taste of death in a great one.

The cowardly see cowardice as prudence, but that is the deception of a base nature.

The nature of societies is exactly like water: in stagnant water, algae and scum float to the surface, whereas moving water does not carry scum on top. Leaders in stagnant societies cannot be up to the responsibility because they do not emerge through action, sacrifice, exertion, and giving. Abū Bakr, ‘Umar, ‘Uthmān, and ‘Alī (may Allāh be pleased with them) only emerged through noble deeds and immense sacrifices. Therefore, Abū Bakr did not need an election campaign when the ummah unanimously chose him. As soon as the soul of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) departed to the Highest Companion in Paradise, eyes turned to the arena and found none better than Abū Bakr, may Allāh be pleased with him.

The ummah that engages in Jihād pays a heavy price and reaps the ripe fruit; it is not easy for it to relinquish what it has gained through sweat and blood. As for those who impose themselves on the people through the first communiqué of a military coup orchestrated behind the scenes in embassies, it is easy for them to squander everything.

He who takes a country without war will find it easy to surrender the country.

For a Jihādī ummah led by exceptional individuals who emerged through a long Jihādī movement, it is not easy to neglect its leaders or plot to overthrow them. Nor is it easy for its enemies to make it doubt the path of its heroes. The long Jihādī movement makes all members of the ummah feel that they have paid the price and participated in the sacrifice for the establishment of the Islāmic society. Thus, they become faithful guardians of this nascent society, for whose birth pangs the entire ummah has suffered.

An Islāmic society must be born; birth requires labor; and labor involves pain.

7. Protecting the Oppressed on Earth

One of the motives for Islāmic Jihād is the protection of the oppressed on earth and the lifting of injustice from them.

{And what is [the matter] with you that you fight not in the cause of Allāh and [for] the oppressed among men, women, and children who say, "Our Lord, take us out of this city whose people are oppressors, and appoint for us from Yourself a protector, and appoint for us from Yourself a helper"?} (Al-Nisā': 75). The meaning of the verse is: And what is [the matter] with you that you fight not in the cause of Allāh and in the cause of the oppressed.

How can there be peace, how can a Muslim be at ease, while Muslim women are with the aggressing enemy?

Those who say, when they wish to express sorrow, the utmost of speech: "Would that we had never been born."

The jurists have agreed that Jihād becomes an individual obligation (farḍ 'ayn) with person and property if a Muslim woman is taken captive. In Al-Bazzāziyyah it is stated: "If a woman is taken captive in the East, it is obligatory upon the people of the West to liberate her."

Would that, if they do not defend the religion out of zeal, they would at least, out of protective jealousy, guard the honor of their women.

And if they abstain from the reward when the battle rages, why do they not then come, desiring the spoils?

As another said:

Are Muslim women taken captive on every frontier, and yet the life of Muslims remains pleasant?

Do Allāh and Islām not have a right to be defended by young and old?

Islām came to establish justice on earth: {We have already sent Our messengers with clear evidences and sent down with them the Scripture and the balance that the people may maintain [their affairs] in justice. And We sent down iron, wherein is great military might and benefits for the people, and so that Allāh may make evident those who support Him and His messengers unseen. Indeed, Allāh is Powerful and Exalted in Might} (Al-Ḥadīd: 25).

8. Aspiring for Martyrdom and High Stations in Paradise

It is mentioned in the authentic Ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad and al-Tirmidhī from al-Miqdām ibn Maʿdīkarib, attributed directly to the Prophet (marfūʿ): "The martyr has seven distinctions with Allāh: he is forgiven with the first gush of his blood; he sees his place in Paradise; he is adorned with the garment of faith; he is married to seventy-two ḥūr al-ʿīn (maidens of Paradise); he is protected from the punishment of the grave; he is secured from the Great Terror; a crown of dignity is placed on his head, one ruby of which is better than the world and all that is in it; and he will intercede for seventy members of his household." (This Ḥadīth is found in Ṣaḥīḥ al-Jāmiʿ, no. 5058).

Al-Bukhārī narrated from Abū Hurayrah that the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Indeed, in Paradise there are one hundred levels that Allāh has prepared for the mujāhidīn in the way of Allāh. The distance between two levels is like the distance between the sky and the earth. So, when you ask Allāh, ask Him for al-Firdaws." (This is recorded in Fatḥ al-Bārī, 6/9).

9. Jihād Preserves the Ummah's Honor and Lifts Humiliation from It

It is stated in the authentic Ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad from Ibn ʿUmar, attributed directly to the Prophet (marfūʿ): "When people become stingy with the dinar and the dirham, engage in ʿīnah transactions (a form of usurious sale), follow the tails of cattle (i.e., become preoccupied with agriculture and worldly pursuits), and abandon Jihād in the way of Allāh, Allāh will inflict upon them a humiliation that He will not lift until they return to their religion." (This is found in Ṣaḥīḥ al-Jāmiʿ, no. 688).

10. Jihād Preserves the Ummah's Prestige and Repels the Plots of Its Enemies

{So fight, [O Muḥammad], in the cause of Allāh; you are not held responsible except for yourself. And incite the believers [to fight] that Allāh may restrain the might of those who disbelieve. And Allāh is greater in might and stronger in punishment.} (Al-Nisāʾ: 84).

In the authentic Ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad and Abū Dāwūd from Thawbān: "The nations are about to call one another against you from every horizon, just as diners call one another to a dish." It was asked: "O Messenger of Allāh, will it be because of our small number on that day?" He said: "No, but you will be like the scum carried down by a torrent. Weakness (wahn) will be cast into your hearts, and fear will be removed from the hearts of your enemy, because of your love for the world and your dislike of death." (This is found in Ṣaḥīḥ al-Jāmi', no. 8035).

11. In Jihād Lies the Rectification of the Earth and Its Protection from Corruption

{And if Allāh had not checked one set of people by means of another, the earth would have been corrupted.} (Al-Baqarah: 251).

12. In Jihād Lies the Protection of Islāmic Rites

{[They are] those who have been evicted from their homes without right, only because they say, "Our Lord is Allāh." And were it not that Allāh checks the people, some by means of others, there would have been demolished monasteries, churches, synagogues, and mosques in which the name of Allāh is much mentioned. And Allāh will surely support those who support Him. Indeed, Allāh is Powerful and Exalted in Might.} (Al-Ḥajj: 40).

13. And in Jihād Lies the Protection of the Ummah from Punishment, Transmutation, and Replacement

{If you do not go forth, He will punish you with a painful punishment and replace you with another people.} (Al-Tawbah: 39). (Note: The verse number in the original text is 92, but the content matches 39. Assuming 39 is correct based on common knowledge of this verse).

14. And in Jihād Lies the Wealth of the Ummah and the Increase of Its Resources

"My provision has been placed under the shadow of my spear." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

15. And Jihād is the Pinnacle of Islām

"And its topmost part is Jihād." (An authentic Ḥadīth from Mu‘ādh). It is the monasticism of this ummah. "And upon you is Jihād, for it is the monasticism of Islām." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

16. Jihād is Among the Best Acts of Worship, and Through It, the Muslim Attains the Highest Ranks

Abū Faḍl ibn Ziyād said: "I heard Abū ‘Abdullāh Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal, when mentioning the matter of the enemy, weep and say: 'There is no act of righteousness better than it.'" Others said of him: "Nothing equals encountering the enemy, and engaging in combat itself is the best of deeds. Those who fight the enemy are the ones who defend Islām and their sanctities. So what deed is better than it? People are secure while they are in fear, and they have offered their very souls."

It is reported in al-Bukhārī (6/9), the Ḥadīth: "Indeed, in Paradise there are one hundred levels that Allāh has prepared for the mujāhidīn in the way of Allāh. The distance between two levels is like the distance between the sky and the earth."

Based on our limited knowledge and little understanding, we believe that Jihād in a situation like the current one in Afghanistan is an individual obligation (farḍ ‘ayn) in person and property, as decided by the jurists of the four schools of thought without exception, along with the majority of exegetes, Ḥadīth scholars, and legal theorists.

Ibn Taymiyyah says in Al-Fatāwā al-Kubrā (4/608): "If the enemy enters the lands of Islām, there is no doubt that it is obligatory to repel them, upon those closest, then those next closest..."

He also says in Majmū‘ al-Fatāwā (28/358): "If the enemy intends to attack the Muslims, repelling them becomes obligatory upon all those targeted and upon those not targeted, as Allāh the Exalted says: {And if they seek help of you for the religion, then you must help} (Al-Anfāl: 72). Just as the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) commanded the support of a Muslim. This applies whether a man is a mercenary for fighting or not. This is obligatory according to ability upon everyone, with their person and their wealth, whether few or many, walking or riding. Just as when the enemy approached the Muslims in the year of the Trench, Allāh did not permit anyone to abandon it."

The texts of the jurists of the four schools of thought are explicit and decisive on this, admitting no interpretation, without ambiguity or vagueness.

Ibn ‘Ābidīn al-Ḥanafī says in his Ḥāshiyah (3/238): "If the enemy attacks a frontier of Islām, it becomes an individual obligation upon those near it. As for those further away from the enemy, it is a collective obligation if they are not needed. If they are needed, because those near the enemy are unable to resist the enemy, or they are not unable but are lazy and do not engage in Jihād, then it becomes an individual obligation upon those who are next to them – an individual obligation like prayer and fasting, and they are not permitted to abandon it. Then upon those next, and so on, until it becomes an individual obligation upon all the people of Islām, east and west, in this gradual manner."

Similar clear and explicit rulings were given by al-Kāsānī al-Ḥanafī in Badā’i‘ al-Ṣanā’i‘ (7/72), Ibn Nujaym al-Ḥanafī in Al-Baḥr al-Rā’iq (5/72), and Ibn al-Humām in Fath al-Qadīr (5/191).

If you wish, refer to Ḥāshiyat al-Dasūqī (Mālikī) (2/174), Nihāyat al-Muḥtāj by al-Ramlī (Shāfi‘ī) (8/58), and Al-Mughnī by Ibn Qudāmah (Ḥanbalī) (8/345).

Perhaps some people find justification for themselves in the fact that many Afghans are not at an acceptable Islāmic level of upbringing, and they excuse themselves from participation due to some violations.

However, the response to this is that the jurists have stipulated that Jihād is obligatory even with an army containing many transgressors.

This is one of the principles of Ahl al-Sunnah wa al-Jamā‘ah: "Fighting alongside every righteous and unrighteous ruler." And "Indeed, Allāh supports this religion with a sinful man, and with peoples who have no share (of good in the Hereafter)." This has been the way of the best of this ummah, past and present, and it is obligatory upon every legally responsible person.

Not fighting alongside commanders (even if they are transgressors) or with an army containing many transgressors is the path of the Ḥarūriyyah – a faction of the Khawārij – and their likes, who follow the path of corrupt piety stemming from a lack of knowledge (Majmū‘ al-Fatāwā of Ibn Taymiyyah, 28/506).

Some people excuse themselves by saying that their presence in their own country is necessary for education and teaching. We present to them the statement of al-Zuhrī: "Sa‘īd ibn al-Musayyib went out for an expedition, having lost one of his eyes. He was told: 'You are ill.' He replied: 'Allāh has called forth the light and the heavy. If I cannot fight, I will increase the numbers and guard the belongings.'"

Whose status and work can compare to that of the master of the Tābi‘īn (Successors), the inheritor of prophetic knowledge through his father-in-law – Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him? The flood has reached the hilltops, the situation has exceeded all bounds, and matters have become severe for the Muslims. So when will the mobilization be?! And until when will there be inaction?!

If the jurists issue fatwas, as stated in Al-Bazzāziyyah: "If a woman is taken captive in the East, it is obligatory upon the people of the West to liberate her."

Then what fatwa do our scholars issue regarding the thousands of young women whose honor is violated in their private chambers?

And what answer do they give regarding the women who throw themselves into the Kunar River in Laghman to escape the violation of their honor at the hands of the Red soldiers, because it is not permissible for a woman, by scholarly consensus, to surrender to captivity if she fears for her honor?

Or do you not fear that the tables will turn on you and the matter will reach your own honor? The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) says: "No man forsakes a Muslim in a situation where his honor is disparaged and his sanctity violated, except that Allāh the Exalted will forsake him when he desires His support. And no one supports a Muslim in a situation where his honor is disparaged and his sanctity violated, except that Allāh will support him in a situation where he loves His support." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd). So fear Allāh concerning your honor.

Ḥibbān ibn Mūsā said: "We went out with Ibn al-Mubārak, garrisoned in Shām. When he saw the people's devotion to worship, fighting, and daily expeditions, he turned to me and said: 'To Allāh we belong and to Him we shall return! For the lives we have spent and the nights and days we have passed in the knowledge of al-khaliyyah and al-bariyyah (technical terms for types of divorce), while we have left here the gates of Paradise open!'"

This is Ibn al-Mubārak, who used to garrison for two months or more each year, leaving his trade and Ḥadīth circles to go out for ribāṭ (garrison duty). Because he had not garrisoned for his entire life, being preoccupied with knowledge instead of ribāṭ, he said this. So what will those say who have not fired a single shot in the way of Allāh?!

If the final illness – which afflicted the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) – did not distract him from reminding the Companions to dispatch the expedition of Usāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him.

And when Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq tried to dispatch Usāmah's expedition, the Companions tried to dissuade him from his resolve. He then said his famous words:

"By Him besides Whom there is no other god, if dogs were to drag the feet of the wives of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), I would not hold back an army that the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) dispatched, nor would I furl a banner that the Messenger of Allāh unfurled."

And Allāh willed that the last counsels of the Companion of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) would be to urge people to Jihād. Abū Bakr summoned ‘Umar in the last hours of his life, saying: "Listen, O ‘Umar! I will tell you something, then act upon it. I hope to die this very day – and it was a Monday. If I die, do not let evening come until you have mobilized the people with al-Muthannā. And if I am delayed until night, do not let morning come until you have mobilized the people with al-Muthannā. Let not any calamity – however great – distract you from the affair of your religion and the command of your Lord. You saw me when the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) passed away and what I did, though creation had not been afflicted with a similar loss. By Allāh, if I had delayed in carrying out the command of His Messenger, Allāh would have forsaken us and punished us, and Madīnah would have been set ablaze."

Abū Bakr – the best of people after the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) – realized that delaying the execution of Allāh's command and the command of His Messenger (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) to mobilize for Jihād results in abandonment and leads to loss.

This is the Book of Allāh judging between us, and this is the Sunnah of His Messenger (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) speaking and bearing witness against us. And this is the guidance of his Companions in their understanding of the importance of Jihād in this religion. Do we have any comment on these abundant, clear, decisive texts?

The thief has reached the inner chambers of the believing women. Shall we let him?!
Violate honor, corrupt values, and uproot principles?!

"Oh, Wa Mu'taṣimāh!" cried out from the mouths of orphaned girls.

It reached their ears, but it did not touch the chivalry of al-Mu'taṣim.

The Russians have taken two hundred and five thousand Afghan Muslim children to raise them on communist ideology and to instill atheism in their depths. The Americans have decided to open six hundred schools and have undertaken the education and upbringing of one hundred and five thousand Afghan children inside and outside the country. I say – and to Allāh belongs the command before and after – these American efforts bore fruit within twenty years, and they came to us with Karzai (in 2002) with an army of these Americanized Afghans who were educated in their schools and country.

So where are the callers to Islām? And where are the Muslim educators? What have they prepared to save the Muslim generation, and to care for this blessed and great generation?

The jurists have stipulated that the lands of the Muslims are like a single country. If any part of the Muslims' lands is exposed to danger, the entire body of the Islāmic ummah must rush to protect this part that has been exposed to the invasion of germs.

What burden would it be for the scholars if they incited the youth to Jihād?

Especially since incitement is an obligation.

{And incite the believers} (Al-Nisā': 84).

What burden would it be for the callers if they dedicated a year of their lives to living among the mujāhidīn, guiding and directing them?

What burden would it be for university students if they postponed a year of their studies to attain the honor of Jihād, and to contribute themselves to establishing the religion of Allāh on earth? *{They were satisfied to be with those who stay behind, and their hearts were sealed over, so they do not understand. * But the Messenger and those who believed with him fought with their wealth and their lives. Those will have [all] good things, and it is those who are the successful.}* (Al-Tawbah: 87-88).

What burden would it be for the Imāms if they gave sincere advice to those who seek their counsel about going forth in the way of Allāh with their blood and souls?

Until when will the believing youth be discouraged and hindered from Jihād? The youth whose hearts are ablaze with fire, bursting with enthusiasm, and inflamed with zeal to water the soil of the Muslims with their pure blood. The one who forbids a youth from Jihād is no different from the one who forbids him from prayer and fasting.

Does not the one who forbids Jihād fear that he may fall – even indirectly – under the general meaning of the noble verse: *{Allāh already knows those among you who hinder [others] and those [hypocrites] who say to their brothers, "Come to us," and they do not come to battle except for a few, * Being miserly toward you. And when fear comes, you see them looking at you, their eyes revolving like one being overcome by death. But when fear departs, they lash you with sharp tongues, miserly toward [any] good. Those have not believed, so Allāh has rendered their deeds worthless, and that is for Allāh easy.}* (Al-Aḥzāb: 18-19).

What burden would it be for mothers if each of them offered one of her sons in the way of Allāh, to be a source of honor for her in this world and a treasure for her in the Hereafter through intercession?

What burden would it be for fathers if they sent one of their sons to grow up in the factories of heroes, the fields of men, and the arenas of combat? Let one of them consider that Allāh created him barren; thus, from the gratitude for the blessing (of children), he should pay the zakāh of his children as thanks to his Lord.

Souls He created, and wealth He provided, so why be miserly towards the Lord of the Worlds? Being miserly with what the Owner possesses, despite the firm belief that: "No soul will die until it completes its appointed term and its provision."

What burden would it be for Muslims if they inscribed in the records of their deeds and the register of their good actions, days of ribāṭ (garrison duty) and hours of fighting?

It is established in the authentic Ḥadīth: "A day of ribāṭ in the way of Allāh is better than fasting a month and praying its nights." And in a ḥasan (good) Ḥadīth: "A day of ribāṭ in the way of Allāh is better than a thousand days spent in other stations, where one prays its nights and fasts its days." And in the authentic Ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad and al-Tirmidhī, found in Ṣaḥīḥ al-Jāmi' (no. 4503): "Standing for an hour in the line of battle in the way of Allāh is better than standing in prayer for sixty years."

So, O brothers in Islām, come forward to protect your religion, support your Lord, and elevate the Sunnah of your Prophet.

O beloved brother: Draw your sword, mount your steed, and wipe the shame from your ummah. If you do not carry this burden, then who will? O noble brother:

The slumber in humiliation has lasted too long, so where is the roar of the lions?

The vultures have become like eagles, while we are in the humiliation of slaves.

The humiliation of slaves comes from submission, not from iron chains.

So when will we revolt against the shackles? When will we revolt against the shackles?

So, O cavalry of Allāh, ride forth!!!

O dear brother: {There was certainly in their stories a lesson for those of understanding.} (Yūsuf: 111).

The bloody story of Bukhārā, the wounded narrative of Palestine, burnt Aden, captive Ogaden, the sorrowful tales of al-Andalus, painful Eritrea, bereaved Bulgaria, Sudan with its tragic Horn, Lebanon torn to shreds, Somalia, Burma, Chad, and Caucasia with its deep wounds, Uganda, Zanzibar, Indonesia, and Nigeria with their epics and tragedies – these are the best lessons for us. Will we learn from what has passed before it is too late? Or will the patterns of history repeat themselves upon us while we swallow humiliation, and we perish as they perished, and we are lost as they were lost? We hope from Allāh that the Russians will be defeated in Afghanistan {and that they will be defeated on their own in Iraq and elsewhere}, and retreat, frustrated. But if the other outcome occurs, then woe to me, what calamity will befall the Muslims?

Abū Dāwūd narrated with a strong chain from Abū Umāmah, attributed directly to the Prophet (marfū'): "Whoever does not fight in an expedition, or equip a fighter, or look after a fighter's family with goodness, Allāh will afflict him with a calamity before the Day of Resurrection."

{Indeed, in that is a reminder for whoever has a heart or who listens while he is present [in mind].} (Qāf: 37, not 45 as in original text; 37 is standard for this verse).

Have I conveyed the message? O Allāh, bear witness. Have I conveyed the message? O Allāh, bear witness? Have I conveyed the message? O Allāh, bear witness.

1. If the enemy enters Muslim lands, Jihād becomes an individual obligation (farḍ 'ayn) according to all jurists, exegetes, and Ḥadīth scholars.
2. If Jihād becomes an individual obligation, there is no difference between it and prayer (ṣalāh) and fasting (ṣawm) according to the three Imāms (Abū Ḥanīfah, Mālik, al-Shāfi'ī), while the Ḥanbalīs give precedence to prayer. It is stated in Bulghat al-Sālik li-Aqrab al-Masālik fī Madhhab al-Imām Mālik: "Jihād in the way of Allāh to elevate the word of Allāh ta'āla is a collective obligation (farḍ kifāyah) every year. If some undertake it, it is lifted from the rest. It becomes specific – meaning it becomes an individual obligation like prayer and fasting – by the command of the Imām and by the enemy attacking a locality of a people."

It is stated in Majma' al-Anhur in the Ḥanafī school: "If sufficiency (in fulfilling the collective obligation) is not achieved except by all the people, then it becomes an individual obligation like prayer."

It is stated in Ḥāshiyat Ibn 'Ābidīn (Ḥanafī) (2/238): "And it is an individual obligation if the enemy attacks a frontier of Islām, so it becomes an individual obligation like prayer and fasting, and they are not permitted to abandon it."

3. If Jihād becomes an individual obligation, parental permission is not required, just as parental permission is not sought for performing the dawn prayer or fasting Ramaḍān.
4. There is no difference between one who abandons Jihād without an excuse when it has become an individual obligation and one who breaks the fast of Ramaḍān without an excuse.
5. Paying money does not substitute for Jihād with one's person, no matter the amount paid, and the obligatory duty of Jihād incumbent upon him is not lifted. Just as it is not permissible to pay a sum of money to a poor person to fast on one's behalf or to pray, so too is Jihād with one's person.
6. Jihād is a lifelong obligation, like prayer and fasting. Just as it is not permissible to fast one year and break the fast another, or pray one day and skip another, so too with Jihād: it is not permissible to engage in Jihād for one year and abandon it for years if one has the capacity.
7. Jihād now is an individual obligation with person and property in every place seized by the disbelievers, and the individual obligation remains continuous until every piece of land that was once Islāmic is liberated.

8. The word Jihād, when used unqualifiedly, means fighting with weapons, as Ibn Rushd stated and the four Imāms agreed.
9. The readily understood meaning of the phrase "in the way of Allāh" (fī sabīl Allāh) is Jihād, as Ibn Ḥajar stated in Fatḥ al-Bārī (6/22).
10. Their statement, "We have returned from the lesser Jihād – fighting – to the greater Jihād – Jihād of the self," which they repeat on the basis that it is a Ḥadīth, is a false, fabricated Ḥadīth with no basis. It is merely a saying of Ibrāhīm ibn Abī ‘Ablah, one of the Tābi‘īn, and it contradicts the texts and reality.
11. Jihād is the pinnacle of Islām and is preceded by stages: before it is emigration (hijrah), then preparation (i‘dād) – training – then ribāṭ (garrisoning the frontiers), then fighting. Emigration is concomitant with Jihād. In the authentic Ḥadīth narrated by Aḥmad from Junādah, attributed directly to the Prophet (marfū‘): "Emigration does not cease as long as Jihād continues." As for ribāṭ, which is residing on the enemy's borders to protect Muslims, it is a necessity for fighting, because battles do not occur every day. A person may be stationed for a long period and engage in one or two battles during this time.
12. Jihād today is an individual obligation with person and property upon every Muslim. The Islāmic ummah remains sinful until the last Islāmic land is liberated from the hands of disbelief. Only the mujāhidīn are saved from sin.
13. Jihād in the time of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was of various types. The Battle of Badr was recommended (mandūb - desirable). The Battle of the Trench and Tabūk were individual obligations upon every Muslim; he mobilized the ummah. The Trench was because the disbelievers invaded the land of Islām. As for the Battle of Khaybar (7 AH), it was a collective obligation, and the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) only permitted those who had witnessed al-Ḥudaybiyah (6 AH) to attend.

14. As for Jihād in the days of the Companions and the Tābi‘īn, most of its instances were collective obligations because they were new conquests.

15. As for Jihād with one's person today, all of it is an individual obligation.

16. Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, has not excused anyone from Jihād except the sick, the lame, the blind, the child who has not reached puberty, the woman who does not know the way of Jihād and emigration, and the elderly. Even the severely ill, the lame, and the blind, if they can reach the training camps to join the mujāhidīn, teach them the Qur’ān, narrate Ḥadīth to them, and encourage them, it is better for them to come, as ‘Abdullāh ibn Umm Maktūm did at Uḥud and al-Qādisiyyah. Others besides these have no excuse before Allāh, whether an employee, a craftsman, a businessman, or a major merchant. These are not excused from abandoning Jihād with their persons and from contributing their wealth.

17. Jihād is a collective act of worship, and every group must have a leader (amīr). Obedience to the leader in Jihād is a necessity. One must accustom oneself to adhering to the obedience of the leader: "You must listen and obey in your hardship and your ease, in what you like and what you dislike, and when others are given preference over you." (Narrated by Muslim).

Ruling on Those Who Deter from Jihād

One who deters from Jihād is like one who deters from fasting. And whoever advises a capable Muslim [against it].

It is best to shun those who discourage from Jihād and not to enter into discussions with them that lead to arguments which harden the hearts.

Shaykh al-Islām Ibn Taymiyyah says in Majmū‘ al-Fatāwā (15/313): "The sum of hijrah (emigration/abandonment) is the abandonment of evils and their perpetrators. Likewise, shunning the callers to innovations, shunning the dissolute, and shunning those who mix with them or assist them. Similarly, those who abandon Jihād, without which there is no benefit for them, are punished by being shunned by others for not assisting them in righteousness and piety. Fornicators, homosexuals, those who abandon Jihād, people of innovation, and wine drinkers – all of these, and those who associate with them, are harmful to the religion of Islām, and there is no cooperation with them in righteousness or piety. So, whoever shuns them is abandoning what is commanded and doing what is forbidden."

(Consider with whom the Imām equated the one who abandons Jihād! Glory be to Allāh!)

Ruling on the Fear of Interrogation by Security Agencies upon a Mujāhid's Return to His Hometown

This matter is never an excuse because it is based on conjecture and doubt, and certainty is not removed by doubt. Jihād is a certainty, and fear of interrogation by intelligence agencies is a doubt. Likewise, even if one is certain that the intelligence agencies will interrogate him, this is not an excuse that lifts the sin of refraining from Jihād. This is because the duress (ikrāh) considered valid in Sharī‘ah, which lifts the sin of abandoning obligatory duties, is "compelling duress that leads to loss of life or limb," meaning that which involves death or the cutting off of a limb.

Similarly, the fear of security agencies in countries whose passport one holds – even if one is certain that if he returns and is caught, they will kill him or cut off one of his limbs – this is not an acceptable excuse before Allāh. In this case, he must leave his country for the land of Jihād:

{Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves - [the angels] will say, "In what [condition] were you?" They will say, "We were oppressed in the land." The angels will say, "Was not the earth of Allāh spacious [enough] for you to emigrate therein?" For those, their refuge is Hell - and evil it is as a destination.} (Al-Nisā': 97, not 96-99 as in original text; 97 is the start of this specific quote). (Source: Al-Dhakhā'ir, vol. 1, p. 194).

Ruling on One Who Has a Disability That Prevents Him from Fighting but Not from Working in Other Fields

The individual obligation is not lifted from the lame or the non-bedridden sick, because they can work in fields such as health and education, which is a vast domain. The mujāhidīn now are in greater need of callers (du'āt) than they are of food, weapons, and medicine.

Ibn al-Humām stated in Fath al-Qadīr (5/441): "As for the one who is able to go out but not to fight, he should – meaning, he must – go out to increase the numbers, for in this there is intimidation of the enemy."

If going out to increase the numbers is obligatory, then how much more so is going out to teach the mujāhidīn the rulings of their religion? Indeed, this is more obligatory and a greater individual duty. (End of quote. This is cited from Al-Dhakhā'ir al-ʿIzām, vol. 1, pp. 179-194).

Presenting to the Servants the Virtues of Jihād

The Virtue of Martyrdom

1. His blood smells like musk: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, no one is wounded in the way of Allāh – and Allāh knows best who is wounded in His way – but he will come on the Day of Resurrection with the color of blood and the fragrance of musk." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

Glory be to Allāh, we have seen this from many martyrs; the fragrance of their blood is like musk.

2. The dearest drops to Allāh: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Nothing is dearer to Allāh than two drops or two traces: a teardrop shed out of fear of Allāh, and a drop of blood shed in the way of Allāh. As for the two traces, they are a trace (of hardship) in the way of Allāh, and a trace (of performing) an obligatory duty from the duties prescribed by Allāh." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

The word Jihād, when used unqualifiedly, as Ibn Rushd says: "The word Jihād, when used unqualifiedly, means fighting the disbelievers with the sword until they embrace Islām or pay the jizyah (tribute) willingly while they are subdued."

3. The martyr wishes to return to the world: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "No servant dies who has good stored with Allāh and would wish to return to the world, even if he were to possess the world and all that is in it, except the martyr. Because of what he sees of the virtue of martyrdom, he would wish to return to the world and be killed another time." In another wording: "to be killed ten times, because of the honor he sees."
4. Ḥārithah is in the highest Firdaws: The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said to Umm Ḥārithah bint al-Nu'mān, whose son had been killed with him on the day of Badr and she asked him about his whereabouts: "He is in the highest Firdaws (level of Paradise)." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).
5. Their souls are in the crops of green birds: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The souls of the martyrs are in the bodies of green birds that have lanterns hanging from the Throne. They roam freely in Paradise wherever they wish, then they return to those lanterns. Their Lord looks upon them and says: 'Do you desire anything?' They say: 'What could we desire when we roam freely in Paradise wherever we wish?' He does this with them three times. When they see that they will not be spared from being asked, they say: 'O Lord, we want You to return our souls to our bodies so that we may be killed in Your way once more.' When He sees that they have no further need, they are left." (Narrated by Muslim).

Al-Qāḍī said: "This indicates that souls are enduring and do not perish, so the Muhsin (doer of good) is blessed, and the evildoer is punished. The Qur'ān and the narrations have affirmed this, and it is the doctrine of Ahl al-Sunnah. The souls of the martyrs are in the crops of green birds. As for others, their station is shown to them morning and evening, as mentioned in the Ḥadīth of Ibn 'Umar, and as stated regarding the people of Pharaoh: {The Fire, they are exposed to it morning and evening} (Ghāfir: 46)."

It was said: Rather, what is meant is all believers who enter Paradise now, based on the generality of the Ḥadīths. It was also said: Rather, the souls of believers are in the courtyards of their graves. And it was said: The part of the body that experiences bliss is where the soul remains.

6. Qualities of the martyr: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Indeed, the martyr has distinctions with Allāh – seven qualities –: he is forgiven with the first gush of his blood; he sees his place in Paradise; he is adorned with the garment of faith; he is married to houris (ḥūr al-ʿīn); he is protected from the punishment of the grave; he is secure from the Great Terror; a crown of dignity is placed on his head, one ruby of which is better than the world and all that is in it; he is married to seventy-two houris; and he intercedes for seventy members of his relatives."

7. Martyrs of Uḥud: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "When your brothers were afflicted at Uḥud, Allāh placed their souls in the bodies of green birds that frequent the rivers of Paradise, eat its fruits, and take shelter in lanterns in the shade of the Throne. When they found the goodness of their food, drink, and resting place, they said: 'Would that our brothers knew what Allāh has done for us, so that they would not be ascetic regarding Jihād nor hold back from war.' Allāh said: 'I will inform them about you.' So Allāh revealed to His Messenger these verses: {And never think of those who have been killed in the cause of Allāh as dead} (Āl 'Imrān: 169)." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

The Martyrs are Alive:

We have seen some clear signs that tangibly indicate that the martyrs are alive.

8. Martyrs on Bāriq River: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The martyrs are on Bāriq – a river at the gate of Paradise – in a green dome. Their provision comes out to them from Paradise morning and evening." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

This means their provisions are presented to their souls, so spirit and joy reach them, just as the Fire is presented to the people of Pharaoh morning and evening, so pain reaches them.

Al-Qurṭubī said in Al-Jāmi': "Perhaps these are the martyrs who had debts and had the means to pay them but did not, or did not leave a will for them to be paid."

9. Martyrdom is better than cities and villages: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "To be killed in the way of Allāh is dearer to me than possessing the people of permanent settlements and nomadic tents." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

10. The martyr does not feel pain: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The martyr does not feel the touch of being killed except as one of you feels the touch of a pinch." (Narrated by Aḥmad). In an authentic narration: "The martyr does not feel the touch of being killed except as one of you feels a pinch."

11. Stations of the martyrs: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The best of martyrs are those who fight in the first rank, and do not turn their faces away until they are killed. Those will tumble in the high chambers of Paradise, and your Lord will laugh at them. If your Lord laughs at a servant in any situation, there will be no reckoning for him."

12. The slain are three types: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The slain are three types: A believing man who strives with his wealth and his self in the way of Allāh until, when he meets the enemy, he fights them until he is killed. That is the tested martyr in Allāh's tent beneath His Throne; the prophets do not surpass him except by the degree of prophethood. And a man who has committed many sins and transgressions, strives with his self and his wealth in the way of Allāh until he meets the enemy and fights until he is killed. That is a cleansing that erases his sins and transgressions; indeed, the sword erases sins. And he will be admitted through whichever of the gates of Paradise he wishes, for it has eight gates, and Hell has seven gates, and some are better than others. And a hypocritical man who strives with his self and his wealth until, when he meets the enemy, he fights in the way of Allāh until he is killed. That one is in the Fire; indeed, the sword does not erase hypocrisy."

So where are the mujāhidīn who want to wash their sins with swords?

13. Which killing is best?: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was asked: "Which killing is best?" He said: "He whose blood is shed and whose horse is hamstrung in the way of Allāh." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

14. Master of the martyrs: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The master of the martyrs is Ḥamzah ibn 'Abd al-Muṭṭalib, and a man who stands up to a tyrannical ruler, commands him (to do good) and forbids him (from evil), and is killed by him." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

This indicates the status of enjoining good and forbidding evil in Islām.

Denouncing evil and injustice in society is obligatory, even towards a Muslim ruler if he is unjust or dissolute. As for a disbelieving ruler, it is not permissible to remain silent about him under any circumstances, nor is his authority permissible, and rebelling against him is an obligation upon the entire ummah.

15. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The souls of the martyrs are in green birds, feeding on the fruits of Paradise." (Narrated by al-Tirmidhī).

16. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Bury the slain in their places of death." (Narrated by the Four Imāms of Ḥadīth).

The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said this regarding the martyrs of Uḥud. Jābir said: "While I was among the onlookers, my aunt came with my father and my maternal uncle, carrying them on a camel. She entered Madīnah with them to bury them in our graveyards. A man came shouting: 'Indeed, the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) commands you to return the slain and bury them in their places of death, where they were killed.' So we returned and buried them among the slain where they were killed. Then, during the caliphate of Mu'āwiyah ibn Abī Sufyān, a man came to me and said: 'O Jābir, by Allāh, Mu'āwiyah's workers have unearthed your father, and part of him has become visible.' I went to him and found him just as I had left him; nothing had changed in him. I reburied him. So it became a Sunnah for martyrs to be buried in their places of death." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

17. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Five types of people who die are martyrs: one killed in the way of Allāh is a martyr; one who drowns in the way of Allāh is a martyr; one who dies from an abdominal disease in the way of Allāh is a martyr; one who dies from plague in the way of Allāh is a martyr; and a woman who dies in childbirth in the way of Allāh is a martyr." (Narrated by al-Nasā'ī).

18. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Whoever sincerely asks Allāh for martyrdom, Allāh will cause him to reach the stations of the martyrs, even if he dies on his bed." (Narrated by Muslim).
However, sincerity in seeking martyrdom involves making preparations: {And if they had intended to go forth, they would have prepared for it [some] preparation} (Al-Tawbah: 46).

As for ten years passing over the Jihād in Afghanistan, with the road safe and the borders open, and one does not reach Peshawar, we hope Allāh forgives him if he thinks he is sincere in seeking martyrdom. Did you not see that Bedouin who said to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him): "I follow you on the condition that I am struck here – (pointing to his throat) – and enter Paradise." The Bedouin was struck where he had indicated, and the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "He was sincere with Allāh, so Allāh was sincere with him."

19. In the Ḥadīth of Umm Ḥarām bint Miḥān: "She went out with her husband 'Ubādah ibn al-Ṣāmit on a military expedition, the first time Muslims sailed the sea with Mu'āwiyah. When they returned from their expedition, heading home, they disembarked in Shām. An animal was brought near her to ride, but it threw her off, and she died."

This also indicates that the ruling for one returning from an expedition is the same as for one going to it.

20. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:

"Whoever is killed defending his property is a martyr; whoever is killed defending his blood (life) is a martyr; whoever is killed defending his religion is a martyr; and whoever is killed defending his family is a martyr." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd).

This is called in jurisprudence: repelling an assailant (daf' al-ṣā'il), who is one who attacks with force against honor, lives, and property.

The four jurists agreed on the obligation to repel an assailant against honor.

As for an assailant against life or property, it is obligatory to repel him according to the majority of scholars, with the preponderant opinion in the Mālikī and Shāfi'ī schools, even if it leads to killing the Muslim assailant.

Al-Jaṣṣāṣ said: "We know of no disagreement that if a man draws a sword against another man to kill him unjustly, it is upon the Muslims to kill him (the assailant)."

Ibn Taymiyyah said: "The attacking enemy who corrupts religion and worldly life, there is nothing more obligatory after faith than repelling him."

How many victims has ignorance of this Sharī'ah ruling cost the Muslims, because an informer would take a man's wife in the middle of the night, and the husband would not kill him for fear of shedding the blood of a Muslim man!

21. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:

"Whoever is killed defending against an injustice is a martyr."

This is explained by the Ḥadīth narrated by Muslim from Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him): A man came to the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) and said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what if a man comes intending to take my property?" He said: "Do not give him your property." He asked: "What if he fights me?" He said: "Fight him." He asked: "What if he kills me?" He said: "Then you are a martyr." He asked: "What if I kill him?" He said: "He is in the Fire."

Wishing for Martyrdom

22. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, were it not that some believing men would not be pleased to stay behind me, and I find nothing to mount them on, I would not have stayed behind any expedition that fights in the way of Allāh. By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, I would love to be killed in the way of Allāh, then be brought back to life, then be killed, then be brought back to life, then be killed, then be brought back to life, then be killed." (Narrated by al-Nasā'ī).

In another narration: "But I do not find enough mounts for them, nor do they find enough, so they would follow me, and they would not be pleased to stay behind after me."

Al-Ḥākim narrated with an authentic chain from Jābir: "Whenever the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) mentioned the Companions of Uḥud, he would say: 'By Allāh, I wish I had gone forth with my companions at the foot of the mountain.'"

23. "An expedition by sea is better than ten expeditions by land. Whoever crosses the sea is as if he has crossed all valleys, and one who faints (from seasickness)

in it is like one who is covered in his own blood (i.e., a martyr)." (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).

24. "The martyr is forgiven every sin except debt."

Al-Qurṭubī said: "The debt for which its owner is kept from Paradise – and Allāh knows best – is that for which he left means of repayment but did not arrange for it, or he was able to pay but did not, or he incurred it through extravagance or foolishness and died without repaying it. As for one who incurred debt for a legitimate need due to poverty or hardship and died without leaving means of repayment, Allāh will not keep him from Paradise, if Allāh wills."

The martyr who is kept from Paradise, his soul will be by a river at the gate of Paradise called Bāriq, in a green dome, and their provision will come out to them morning and evening – and Allāh knows best – as al-Qurṭubī said.

Here a question arises: So, which is preferable for a debtor: to go forth in the way of Allāh or to work until he repays the debt and then go forth?

Here one says, and with Allāh is success: If a single handspan of Muslim lands is occupied, Jihād becomes an individual obligation. Here, the debtor goes out without the permission of his creditor, and the son without the permission of his father. This is a point of agreement among the predecessors and successors of this ummah.

The debtor should consider: if he does not have the means to repay his debt, he should go forth and not wait to repay the debt. If the debtor has the means to repay his debt, he should consider: if he thinks that if the creditor receives his due, he will use the money for Jihād, then it is obligatory to repay the debt to him, to achieve both benefits: repayment and Jihād.

This was the fatwa of Ibn Taymiyyah in Al-Fatāwā al-Kubrā (4/183).

Ibn Taymiyyah said: "Jihād is obligatory upon women if there is capacity in them, and likewise from the wealth of minors if the enemy attacks, for repelling their harm from the religion, life, and honor is obligatory by consensus."

25. A martyr who never prostrated to Allāh once: From Abū Hurayrah: "Amr ibn Uqaysh had interest (ribā) due to him from the pre-Islāmic era, and he disliked embracing Islām until he collected it. On the day of Uḥud, he came and asked: 'Where are my cousins?' They said: 'At Uḥud.' He asked: 'Where is so-and-so?' They said: 'At Uḥud.' He asked: 'Where is so-and-so?' They said: 'At Uḥud.' So he put on his armor, mounted his horse, and headed towards them. When the Muslims saw him, they said: 'Stay away from us, O 'Amr!' He said: 'I have believed.' He fought until he was wounded. He was carried to his family, wounded. Sa'd ibn Mu'ādh came and said to his ('Amr's) sister: 'Ask him: Was it out of tribal loyalty or anger for them, or anger for Allāh?' He replied: 'Rather, out of anger for Allāh and His Messenger.' He died and entered Paradise. He had never performed a single prayer to Allāh."

26. A martyr killed by his own weapon: From Salamah ibn al-Akwa', who said: "On the day of Khaybar, my brother fought fiercely. His own sword recoiled upon him and killed him. The companions of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) spoke about that, doubting him: 'A man who died by his own weapon.' The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: 'He died striving and as a mujāhid.' Ibn Shihāb said: Then I asked a son of Salamah ibn al-Akwa', and he narrated to me from his father something similar, except that he said: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: 'They have lied. He died striving and as a mujāhid, and he has his reward twice.'"

Virtues of Emigration (Hijrah)

1. Continuation of emigration until the Day of Resurrection: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Emigration does not cease as long as Jihād continues." (Narrated by Aḥmad). And the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Emigration will not cease as long as the disbelievers are fought."

This indicates that emigration is linked to Jihād. The truth is that Jihād is inseparable from emigration, and emigration continues until the Day of Resurrection because Jihād continues until the Day of Resurrection.

2. The command to emigrate: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Allāh commanded Yaḥyā ibn Zakariyyā with five words, and I command you with five things that Allāh commanded me: the community (jamā'ah), listening, obedience, emigration (hijrah), and Jihād in the way of Allāh."

Al-ʿAynī said: "Emigration in Sharīʿah is departing from the land of the disbelievers to the land of Islām out of fear of tribulation (fitnah) and seeking to establish the religion."

Ibn Ḥajar said: It has occurred in Islām in two ways:

- Moving from a land of fear to a land of security, as in the emigration to Abyssinia.
- Moving from a land of disbelief to a land of faith, and that was after the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) settled in Madīnah. The Messenger (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) arranged the necessary matters indispensable for reaching Jihād. They are stages beginning with the community (jamā'ah), because Jihād is a collective act of worship, so there must be a community. There is no community without a leader (amīr), and no leadership without listening and obedience. Then comes emigration, which is the essential step for Jihād, because it is the sign of sincerity in freeing oneself from earthly impediments and breaking shackles. As for Jihād, it is the pinnacle of Islām.

3. Satan fights emigration because it is the path to Paradise: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Satan sat for the son of Ādam in his paths. He sat for him on the path of Islām and said: 'Will you embrace Islām and leave your religion and the religion of your fathers and forefathers?' But he disobeyed him and embraced Islām. Then he sat for him on the path of emigration and said: 'Will you emigrate and leave your land and your sky? The emigrant is like a horse on a tether.' But he disobeyed him and emigrated. Then he sat for him on the path of Jihād and said: 'Will you engage in Jihād? It is an exertion of self and wealth, so you will fight and be killed, then your wife will be married (to another) and your wealth will be divided.' But he disobeyed him and engaged in Jihād. Whoever does that, it is incumbent upon Allāh to admit him to Paradise. Whoever is killed, it is incumbent upon Allāh to admit him to Paradise. If he drowns, it is incumbent upon Allāh to admit him to Paradise. If his animal throws him off (and he dies), it is incumbent upon Allāh to admit him to Paradise."
4. His share in Paradise increases according to his distance from his birthplace: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "When a man dies away from his birthplace, a distance is measured for him in Paradise from his birthplace to where his trace ended." (Narrated by Aḥmad).
5. The Messenger (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) guarantees houses in Paradise for the emigrant: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "I am a guarantor for whoever believes in me, embraces Islām, and emigrates, of a house in the outskirts of Paradise, a house in the middle of Paradise, and a house in the highest chambers of Paradise. Whoever does that has not left any good unsought nor any evil unescaped. He dies wherever Allāh wills for him to die."

6. The Messenger's (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) disavowal of whoever resides with polytheists: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The covenant of protection is removed from whoever resides with the polytheists in their lands."

It is not permissible to live in a land where a Muslim cannot manifest the rites of his religion, such as prayer, fasting, and zakāh. Emigration is obligatory from every land where the laws of disbelief prevail to a land where the laws of Islām are implemented. In the end times, one should choose the land with the least sin and the most precaution for the safety of honor, religion, and property. It is not permissible to live under the rule of an enemy of the religion such that a Muslim fears for his religion, family, and property.

7. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Whoever associates with a polytheist and lives with him is like him." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd).

Ibn Taymiyyah said: "Resemblance and conformity in outward matters lead to resemblance and conformity in inward matters. Participation in outward matters leads to affinity and harmony, even if the place and time are distant. This is a perceptible matter. Accompanying them and residing with them, even for a little, is a cause for acquiring their morals. Since it is a likely cause of corruption, hidden and not easily defined, the ruling (of prohibition) was attached to it (residence with them). Residing with them outwardly is a cause and a likely source of resembling them in blameworthy morals and actions, and even in beliefs themselves. Thus, one who resides with a disbeliever becomes like him. Also, participation in outward matters engenders a type of love, affection, and allegiance in the inward."

8. The emigrant is granted Paradise regardless of how he dies: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Whoever sets out in the way of Allāh and dies or is killed, or his horse or camel throws him off, or a venomous creature bites him, or he dies on his bed by any means Allāh wills, he is a martyr and he will have Paradise."

Virtue of Preparation and Archery

1. 'Uqbah ibn 'Āmir says: I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) say: "Lands will be opened for you, and Allāh will suffice you. So let none of you fail to amuse himself with his arrows." (Narrated by Muslim).
2. Fuqaym al-Lakhmī said to 'Uqbah ibn 'Āmir: "You go back and forth between these two targets, and you are old, and it is difficult for you." 'Uqbah said: "Were it not for words I heard from the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him), I would not have undertaken it." Al-Ḥārith said: I asked Ibn Shamāmah: "What was that?" He said: "Whoever learns archery and then abandons it is not one of us, or he has indeed disobeyed." (Narrated by Muslim).

Reward for Archery:

3. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Any Muslim who shoots an arrow in the way of Allāh, whether it hits or misses, will have a reward like that of freeing a slave from the descendants of Ismā'īl. And any man who grows grey (i.e., old) in the way of Allāh, it will be a light for him." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).

4. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"Everything that is not a remembrance of Allāh is diversion and play, except for four things: a man playing with his wife, a man training his horse, a man walking between two archery targets, and a man teaching swimming."
(Narrated by al-Nasā'ī).
Meaning, these four are permissible forms of diversion.
5. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"Lands will be opened for you, and Allāh will suffice you. So let none of you fail to amuse himself with his arrows." (Narrated by Muslim).
6. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The Prophet (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) passed by a group of people from Aslam who were practicing archery and said: 'Shoot, O sons of Ismā'īl, for your father was an archer.'" (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).
7. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"Diversion is in three things: training your horse, shooting your bow, and playing with your family."
8. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"Whoever excels in archery and then abandons it has abandoned one of the blessings."
9. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"Practice archery, for it is the best of your games." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).
10. 'Uqbah ibn 'Āmir says: I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) say while on the pulpit: "{And prepare against them whatever you are able of power.}" (Al-Anfāl: 60). Indeed, power is archery! Indeed, power is archery! Indeed, power is archery!" (Narrated by Muslim).
This Ḥadīth is one of the signs of prophethood, because archery with arrows in the time of the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) was not the predominant means in battles, as most of the battle tools used were the sword and the spear.

As for today, projectiles (ramy) are the predominant means in modern warfare, starting from the bullet of a pistol and rifle, through artillery and mortars, and ending with missiles.

Virtue of Ribāṭ (Garrisoning the Frontier)

1. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Four types of people will have their rewards continue after their death: one who dies garrisoning (murābiṭan) in the way of Allāh; one who teaches knowledge, his deeds will continue to benefit him as long as it is acted upon; one who gives charity, its reward will continue for him as long as it exists; and a man who leaves behind a righteous child who prays for him." (Narrated by Aḥmad). This is a great reward and a lofty station, that a person dies and his deeds continue to accrue for him until the Day of Resurrection. We ask Allāh, Glorified is He, not to deprive us of martyrdom in His way, and that our end may be in the land of ribāṭ. Indeed, He is All-Hearing, Near, Responsive. Ribāṭ was so named because they used to tie (yarbiṭūn) their horses beside them, awaiting a battle in which they would charge or defend on the frontiers. So, staying on the frontier was called ribāṭ, even if there were no horses.
2. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "A month of ribāṭ is better than fasting for a lifetime. Whoever dies garrisoning in the way of Allāh will be safe from the Great Terror, his provision will be brought to him, he will be refreshed from Paradise, and the reward of a garrisoned soldier will continue for him until Allāh resurrects him." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).

Ibn al-ʿArabī said: "Security from the trial of the grave is a great virtue not granted except to the martyr and the one performing ribāṭ."

3. "A day of ribāṭ in the way of Allāh is better than fasting a month and praying its nights. Whoever dies during it will be protected from the trial of the grave, and his deeds will continue to grow for him until the Day of Resurrection."

Aḥmad said: "Nothing, in my view, equals Jihād and ribāṭ: defending the Muslims and their sanctities, and strengthening the people of the frontier and the people of expeditions. Ribāṭ is the root and branch of Jihād, and Jihād is superior to it due to the hardship, fatigue, and difficulty."

Al-Qurṭubī said in Al-Jāmiʿ: "As for those who permanently reside on the frontiers with their families, who build and earn a living there, although they are protectors, they are not considered murābiṭīn (those performing ribāṭ in the specific sense)."

Ibn ʿAṭīyyah said, and Ibn Khuwayz Mindād said: "Ribāṭ has two states: a state where the frontier is secure and fortified, where it is permissible to reside with family and children; and if it is not secure, it is permissible to perform ribāṭ there if one is capable of fighting, but one should not move family and children there."

4. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Every deed ceases for its doer when he dies, except for the one garrisoning in the way of Allāh, for his deeds will grow for him, and his provision will continue for him until the Day of Resurrection." (Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī).

Al-Munāwī said: "Ribāṭ and its reward apply to one who goes to the frontier to guard the Muslims there for a period, not to those who reside there permanently, even if they are protectors and garrisoned."

Ibn Ḥajar said: "There is a point to consider in this, because that place might be his homeland, and he intends to stay there to repel the enemy." Ibn Ḥajar's words refer to one who is prepared to repel the enemy, being trained, ready, and possessing the weapons to defend, not one who lives there for his salary, job, trade, or agriculture.

5. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "A servant is not granted anything better or more expansive than patience."

I have included the Ḥadīth on patience in the context of ribāṭ because ribāṭ is based on a major foundation, which is patience.

Ribāṭ is restraining the self on the frontiers, where you intimidate the enemy and he intimidates you, awaiting a battle. Jihād – fighting – has ribāṭ as its pillar. Battles are few, while ribāṭ is extended and long. With prolonged waiting, the soul becomes bored and weary, especially where movement is scarce, the weather is harsh, and life is rough. We have found that the greatest problem we face in Jihād is that the brothers do not persevere through the long ribāṭ. The brothers garrisoned on the borders would not stay long and could not endure the patience required for ribāṭ, so they would come down from the frontiers to the city of Peshawar. A mujāhid's stay in the city corrupts his morale, reduces his reward, and he might loosen his tongue, thereby nullifying his reward, and might return sinning instead of rewarded, as mentioned in the authentic Ḥadīth: "He did not return with sufficiency (i.e., with his reward intact)."

6. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Whoever dies garrisoning in the way of Allāh, Allāh will continue his righteous deeds that he used to perform, and his provision will be continued for him, he will be safe from the tempters (in the grave), and Allāh will resurrect him on the Day of Resurrection safe from terror." (Narrated by Ibn Mājah).

Ibn Ḥabīb said: "Ribāṭ is a branch of Jihād, and the greater the fear at that frontier, the greater the reward."

Abū ‘Amr said: "Jihād was legislated to shed the blood of the polytheists, and ribāṭ was legislated to preserve the blood of the Muslims. Preserving the blood of the Muslims is dearer to me." This indicates that he considered it preferable to Jihād.

7. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:

"Faith is patience and magnanimity." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

Patience is restraining the self from its desires and bridling it from its whims. Generosity is purifying the self from the filth of its avarice.

8. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Aid comes from Allāh according to the need, and patience comes from Allāh according to the trial." (Narrated by Ibn Shāhīn).

This Ḥadīth explained to me the patience of the Afghan mujāhidīn during these ten years, while calamities were grinding their nerves and crushing their bones, and the millstone of war was turning, leaving nothing it came upon except that it made it like decaying remains, turning every house into a place of mourning and orphanage. Despite that, their resolve did not weaken, nor did their determination falter. It is the casting of patience upon afflicted hearts.

9. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "A night of ribāṭ in the way of Allāh is better than a thousand days spent in other stations."

As for the other narration: The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Whoever performs ribāṭ for a night in the way of Allāh, it will be for him like a thousand nights of fasting and prayer."

Ibn al-‘Arabī said: Al-Tirmidhī narrated from ‘Uthmān, authenticated: from the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) that he said: "A day of ribāṭ in the way of Allāh is better than a thousand days spent in other stations." So he made the good deed of Jihād equivalent to a thousand.

[Texts on] Jihād, Fighting, and Preparation

1. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "The tourism of my ummah is Jihād in the way of Allāh." (Narrated by Abū Dāwūd).
2. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "There are people in Madīnah whom we left behind; we did not traverse a mountain pass or a valley except that they were with us. Their excuse (illness or valid reason) held them back." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

This means that a sincere intention coupled with an excuse acceptable to Allāh carries a great reward. A sincere intention means that were it not for the excuse, the required action would have been performed. Therefore, it is stated in the Ḥadīth from the Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him): "When a servant falls ill or travels, what he used to do when he was resident and healthy is written for him."

3. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Allāh has guaranteed for whoever goes out in His way – nothing makes him go out except faith in Me and belief in My Messengers – that I will return him with whatever reward or spoils he gains, or I will admit him to Paradise. Were it not that I would impose hardship on my ummah, I would not have stayed behind any expedition. And I would love to be killed in the way of Allāh, then be brought back to life, then be killed, then be brought back to life, then be killed." (Agreed upon).
4. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said: "Seek the response to supplication at the meeting of armies, the establishment of prayer, and the falling of rain." (Narrated by al-Shāfiʿī).

5. The Messenger of Allāh (peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him) said:
"When people become stingy with the dinar and the dirham, engage in 'īnah transactions, follow the tails of cattle, and abandon Jihād in the way of Allāh, Allāh will inflict upon them a humiliation that He will not lift from them until they return to their religion." (Narrated by Aḥmad).

6. "The best of people during times of tribulation is a man holding the reins of his horse behind the enemies of Allāh, terrifying them and they terrifying him; or a man secluded in the desert, fulfilling the right of Allāh that is upon him."
 (Narrated by al-Ḥākim).
 Al-Nawawī said: The school of al-Shāfi'ī and most scholars is that mixing (with people) is better (3/4042) on the condition of safety. Al-Nawawī also said: This indicates the virtue of seclusion during days of tribulation, unless one has the strength to remove the tribulations, in which case it is incumbent upon him to strive to remove them, either individually or collectively.
 And in the Ḥadīth: "The believer who mixes with people and is patient with their harm is better than the believer who does not mix with people and is not patient with their harm."
 The mujāhid achieves both aspects: he achieves seclusion (from worldly distractions) and he achieves the worship of Jihād, which is the pinnacle of Islām.

7. "Wretched is the slave of the dinar, the slave of the dirham, and the slave of fine garments. If he is given, he is pleased; if he is not given, he is displeased. Wretched and relapsed! If he is pricked by a thorn, may he not find anyone to remove it. Glad tidings to a servant holding the reins of his horse in the way of Allāh, his hair disheveled, his feet dusty. If he is in the vanguard, he is in the vanguard; if he is in the rearguard, he is in the rearguard. If he asks for permission, he is not granted permission; if he intercedes, his intercession is not accepted." (Narrated by al-Bukhārī).

Ibn Ḥajar said in Fatḥ al-Bārī (6/83): "'If he is in the vanguard, he is in the vanguard' means: if he is assigned to the vanguard, he remains there, or he is in the reward of the vanguard. It was said: It is for emphasis, meaning if he is in the vanguard, he is in a great matter. What is intended is its consequence, meaning he must fulfill its requirements and be preoccupied with the specifics of his duty."

Ibn al-Jawzī said: This means he is obscure and does not seek prominence. It is as if he said: If he is on guard duty, he continues in it. His statement: "If he asks for permission, he is not granted it" indicates abandoning the love of leadership and fame, and the virtue of obscurity and humility. The sāqah is the rear of the army.

8. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Our Lord is pleased with a man who went on a military expedition in the path of Allāh, and his companions were defeated. He knew what was upon him (his duty), so he returned until his blood was shed. Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, says to His angels: 'Look at My servant; he returned out of desire for what is with Me and out of reverence for what is with Me until his blood was shed.'" (Reported by Abū Dāwūd).

This indicates that it is recommended for a Muslim to engage in Jihād even if alone, and even if he is certain of being killed, if there is a benefit for the Muslims in that, such as raising their morale or inflicting harm upon their enemies. This also indicates that it is recommended for Muslims to carry out suicide operations, that is, martyrdom operations, in which they are certain of death, if there is a benefit for Islām in doing so. It has been established that some of the Companions plunged into the ranks of the disbelievers alone.

9. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A prophet among the prophets went on a military expedition and said to his people: 'No man who has married a woman and wishes to consummate the marriage with her, but has not yet done so, should follow me. Nor anyone who has built houses but has not yet raised their roofs. Nor anyone who has bought pregnant sheep or goats and is awaiting their offspring.' So he went on the expedition and approached the village around the time of the afternoon prayer, or close to it. He said to the sun: 'You are commanded, and I am commanded. O Allāh, hold it back for us.' So it was held back until Allāh granted him victory." (Agreed upon).

This is evidence that one must devote oneself to Jihād, because a soul attached to the world will not exert all its energy nor give its full potential. The prophet mentioned is Joshua son of Nun, and the village is Jerusalem.

10. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A naval expedition is better than ten land expeditions. Whoever crosses the sea is as if he has crossed all the valleys, and one who is seasick on it is like one who struggles in his own blood." (Reported by al-Ḥākim).
11. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A morning or an evening expedition in the path of Allāh is better than the world and what is in it." (Agreed upon). {In another narration}: "Better than all that the sun rises upon and sets upon." (Agreed upon).

The end of the Ḥadīth in al-Bukhārī is: "If a woman from the people of Paradise were to look down upon the people of the earth, she would illuminate what is between them and fill it with fragrance, and the scarf on her head is better than the world and what is in it."

Ibn al-Muhallab said: "Better than the world" means that the reward for this short time in Paradise is better than the entire duration of the world.

Similarly, it is reported in al-Bukhārī from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ that he said: "The space of a bow in Paradise is better than all that the sun rises upon and sets upon."

The length of a bow (qāb al-qaws) is one cubit (46 cm). This means that the space of one of your whips in Paradise, signifying that a short time and a small space in the Hereafter are better than a long time and a large space in this world, is to belittle this world, encourage asceticism regarding it, and foster a desire for Jihād.

Al-Qurṭubī said: This means that the reward obtained for a single step taken in Jihād is better for its doer than the world and all that is in it, were it gathered for him in its entirety.

12. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The warrior in the path of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, the pilgrim performing Ḥajj, and the pilgrim performing 'Umrah are Allāh's delegation; He called them, and they answered Him, so He gave them." (Reported by Ibn Mājah).

13. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There are two types of military expeditions: As for the one who fights seeking the countenance of Allāh Almighty, obeys the leader, spends the best of his wealth, is lenient with his partner, and avoids corruption in the land, then his sleep and his wakefulness are all reward. But as for the one who fights out of pride, ostentation, and for reputation, disobeys the leader, and spreads corruption in the land, he will not return even breaking even." (Reported by Abū Dāwūd and al-Nasā'ī).

14. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Standing in the ranks for battle in the path of Allāh for an hour is better than standing in prayer for sixty years." (Reported by Ibn 'Adī and Ibn 'Asākir).

15. From Rāshid ibn Sa'd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from a man among the Companions, that a man said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is the matter with the believers that they are tried in their graves, except for the martyr?" He ﷺ said: "The flashing of swords above his head is a sufficient trial for him."

(Reported by al-Nasā'ī).

16. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Standing for an hour in the path of Allāh is better than standing in prayer on the Night of Decree near the Black Stone."
(Reported by Ibn Mājah).

17. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Seek the response to supplication at the meeting of armies, the establishment of prayer, and the falling of rain."
(Reported by al-Shāfi'ī).

18. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "When he (the Prophet ﷺ) went on a military expedition, he would say: 'O Allāh, You are my support and You are my helper; by You I move, by You I attack, and by You I fight.'" (Reported by Aḥmad).

19. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "He (the Prophet ﷺ) used to like to meet the enemy when the sun had passed its zenith." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).

20. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A morning or an evening expedition in the path of Allāh is better than the world and what is in it. And the space of the bow of one of you, or the place of his foot, in Paradise is better than the world and what is in it. If a woman from the women of Paradise were to look down upon the earth, she would fill what is between them with fragrance and illuminate what is between them, and the scarf on her head is better than the world and what is in it." (Agreed upon).

21. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The length of a whip of one of you from Paradise is better than what is between the heaven and the earth." (Reported by Aḥmad).

22. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "For the one who is seasick, there is the reward of a martyr, and for the one who drowns, there is the reward of two martyrs." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).
23. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "This religion will not cease to stand firm, with a group of Muslims fighting for it, until the Hour is established." (Reported by Muslim).
24. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The feet of a servant do not become dusty in the path of Allāh but that the Fire is forbidden for him." (Reported by the Four Imāms).
25. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The likeness of the mujāhid in the path of Allāh – and Allāh knows best who strives in His path – is like that of the one who fasts, prays, and is constant, who does not cease from fasting or charity until the mujāhid returns. Allāh Almighty guarantees for the mujāhid in His path that if He takes his soul, He will admit him to Paradise, or He will return him safely with reward or spoils." (Agreed upon).
- "And Allāh knows best who strives in His path" is an admonition on the importance of sincerity and truthfulness (Reference 8156/5).
- Ibn al-ʿArabī said: "The meaning in this is that due to the constant worry and inevitable anger he inflicts upon the enemy's heart, his deed is continuous, while other deeds are subject to periods of weakness and interruption."
26. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The likeness of the mujāhid in the path of Allāh – and Allāh knows best who strives – is like that of one who fasts, stands in prayer, is humble, bows, and prostrates." (Reported by al-Nasāʾī).
27. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Among the best livelihoods for people is that of a man holding the reins of his horse in the path of Allāh, flying on its back whenever he hears a call to arms or a cry for help, he flies upon it seeking death and martyrdom in its likely places. And a man with a small flock of sheep on one of these mountain peaks, or in the belly of one of these valleys, establishing prayer, giving zakāh, and worshipping his Lord until certainty (death) comes to him, not being among people except for good." (Reported by Muslim).

28. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Two groups of my ummah (community) Allāh has protected from the Fire: a group that will invade India, and a group that will be with Jesus son of Mary, peace be upon him." (Reported by al-Nasā'ī).

29. Salamah ibn Nufayl al-Kindī said: "I was sitting with the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ when a man said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, people have neglected horses and laid down their weapons, saying there is no Jihād, the war has laid down its burdens.' The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ turned his face and said: "They have lied! Now, now fighting has come! There will not cease to be a group from my ummah fighting for the truth, and Allāh will divert the hearts of some people for them, and He will provide for them from them, until the Hour is established and until the promise of Allāh comes. And goodness is tied to the forelocks of horses until the Day of Resurrection." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).

30. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The space of a whip of one of you in Paradise is better than the world and what is in it." Then he recited: {So he who is drawn away from the Fire and admitted to Paradise has attained his desire. And what is the life of this world except the enjoyment of delusion} (Āl 'Imrān:185). (Reported by al-Tirmidhī).

31. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever goes out for an expedition in the path of Allāh, the dust that settles on him will be like musk for him on the Day of Resurrection." (Reported by Ibn Mājah).

32. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever fights in the path of Allāh for the duration of time between two milkings of a she-camel, Paradise becomes binding for him. Whoever sincerely asks Allāh for martyrdom in His path, then dies or is killed, he will have the reward of a martyr. Whoever is wounded in the path of Allāh, or suffers a calamity, it will come on the Day of Resurrection as profusely as it ever was, its color the color of saffron and its scent the scent of musk. And whoever develops a boil or abscess in the path of Allāh, he will bear the seal of the martyrs." (Reported by Abū Dāwūd).
33. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The best Jihād is that of one whose horse is hamstrung and whose blood is shed." (Reported by Aḥmad).
34. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "I advise you to fear Allāh, for it is the head of every matter. And upon you is Jihād, for it is the monasticism of Islām. And upon you is the remembrance of Allāh and the recitation of the Qur'ān, for it is your spirit in heaven and your mention on earth." (Reported by Aḥmad).
35. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ "used to take a bit of camel fur from the side of a camel from the spoils of war and say: 'I have no share in it except like that of any one of you. Beware of embezzlement from spoils, for embezzlement from spoils will be a disgrace for its perpetrator on the Day of Resurrection. Return the thread and the needle and what is more than that. And strive in Jihād in the path of Allāh Almighty, against the near and the far, in residence and in travel, for Jihād is a gate from the gates of Paradise. Indeed, Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, delivers from worry and grief through it. And establish the limits of Allāh upon the near and the far, and let not the blame of any blamer deter you in the cause of Allāh.'" (Reported by ‘Abdullāh ibn Aḥmad).
36. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Do you know the first group from my ummah to enter Paradise?" I said: "Allāh and His Messenger know best." He said: "The emigrants will come on the Day of Resurrection to the gate of Paradise and ask for it to be opened. The keepers will say to them: 'Have you been judged?' They will say: 'For what should we be judged when our swords were on our shoulders in the path of Allāh until we died upon that?' He said: "So it will be opened for them, and they will take a midday nap therein before other people enter it."

(Reported by al-Ḥākim).

37. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Nations are about to call one another against you just as diners call one another to their bowl." A questioner asked: "Will it be because of our small number on that day?" He said: "Rather, you will be numerous on that day, but you will be like the scum carried down by a flood. Allāh will remove the awe of you from the hearts of your enemy, and Allāh will cast weakness into your hearts." A questioner asked: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is weakness?" He said: "Love of the world and hatred of death." (Reported by Abū Dāwūd).

38. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever believes in Allāh and His Messenger, establishes prayer, and fasts Ramaḍān, it is a right upon Allāh to admit him to Paradise, whether he strives in Jihād in the path of Allāh or sits in the land in which he was born." They said: "O Messenger of Allāh, should we not give people this good news?" He said: "Indeed, in Paradise there are one hundred levels which Allāh has prepared for the mujāhidīn in the path of Allāh. The distance between two levels is like the distance between the heaven and the earth. So when you ask Allāh, ask Him for al-Firdaws, for it is the middle of Paradise and the highest part of Paradise – I think he said – above it is the Throne of the Most Merciful, and from it gush forth the rivers of Paradise." (Reported by al-Bukhārī).

39. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A group from my ummah will not cease to fight for the truth, unharmed by those who oppose them, until the Hour comes while they are upon that." (Reported by Muslim).

40. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A man from among the Companions of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ passed by a mountain path where there was a small spring of fresh water. He was pleased with it and said: 'If only I could withdraw from people and stay in this path. But I will not do so until I ask permission from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ.' He mentioned that to the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, who said: 'Do not do it. For the standing of one of you in the path of Allāh is better than his prayer in his house for seventy years. Do you not love that Allāh should forgive you and admit you to Paradise? Go on military expeditions in the path of Allāh. Whoever fights in the path of Allāh for the duration of time between two milkings of a she-camel, Paradise becomes binding for him.'" (Reported by al-Tirmidhī).
41. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The Hour will not be established until the Muslims fight the Jews, and the Muslims will kill them, until the Jew hides behind a tree or a stone, and the stone or the tree will say: 'O Muslim, O servant of Allāh, this is a Jew behind me, so come and kill him,' except for the Gharqad tree, for it is one of the trees of the Jews." (Reported by Muslim).
42. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Two will not meet in the Fire: a Muslim who killed a disbeliever then acted rightly and moderately. And two things will not gather in the belly of a believer: dust in the path of Allāh and the heat of Hell. And two things will not gather in the heart of a believing servant: faith and envy." (Reported by al-Nasā'ī and Aḥmad).
43. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Allāh will not cease to plant in this religion a seedling, employing them in His obedience until the Day of Resurrection." (Reported by Aḥmad and Ibn Mājah).

44. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There are three whom it is a right upon Allāh to help: the mujāhid in the path of Allāh, the slave who has a contract for freedom and intends to fulfill it, and the one who marries seeking chastity." (Reported by Aḥmad).
45. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A man came to the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ and said: 'Direct me to an action that is equivalent to Jihād.' He said: 'I do not find one.' He said: 'Are you able, when the mujāhid goes out, to enter your mosque and stand in prayer without ceasing and fast without breaking?' He said: 'And who is able to do that?'" (Reported by al-Bukhārī).
46. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "It was said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, which of the people is best?' The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'A believer who strives in Jihād in the path of Allāh with his self and his wealth.' They said: 'Then who?' He said: 'A believer in one of the mountain passes, who fears Allāh and leaves people safe from his evil.'" (Reported by al-Bukhārī).

The scholars differed regarding seclusion and avoiding mixing with people. Most scholars said that mixing is better, on the condition of being safe from tribulations. This is the opinion of al-Shāfi'ī, for the prophets, peace and blessings be upon them, used to mix with people, and this was the state of the majority of the Companions, the Successors, and the ascetics. By mixing, they obtained benefits such as attending Friday and congregational prayers, visiting the sick, and circles of remembrance. In the authentic Ḥadīth, the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The believer who mixes with people and is patient with their harm is better than the believer who does not mix with people and is not patient with their harm."

A group of scholars said: Seclusion is better than mixing, especially during times of tribulation and wars among Muslims.

47. From Umm Ḥarām, may Allāh be pleased with her, that she heard the Prophet ﷺ say: "The first army from my ummah to raid by sea, they have made Paradise binding upon themselves." She said: "I said: 'O Messenger of Allāh, am I among them?' He said: 'You are among them.' Then the Prophet ﷺ said: 'The first army from my ummah to raid Caesar's city, they are forgiven.' I said: 'Am I among them, O Messenger of Allāh?' He said: 'No.'" (Reported by al-Bukhārī).

This Ḥadīth is one of the miracles of prophethood.

48. From al-Barā' who said: "A man from Banū al-Nabīt – a tribe of the Anṣār – came and said: 'I bear witness that there is no god but Allāh and that you are His Messenger.' Then he advanced and fought until he was killed. The Prophet ﷺ said: 'This one did little work but was greatly rewarded.'" (Reported by Muslim).

49. From Abū Bakr ibn 'Abdullāh ibn Qays, from his father, who said: "I heard my father, while in the presence of the enemy, say: 'The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, the gates of Paradise are under the shades of swords." A man of shabby appearance stood up and said: 'O Abū Mūsā, did you hear the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say this?' He said: 'Yes.' So he returned to his companions and said: 'I bid you farewell (lit. I recite Salām upon you).' Then he broke the scabbard of his sword and threw it away, then he walked with his sword towards the enemy and struck with it until he was killed." (Reported by al-Bukhārī).

50. Al-Nu'mān ibn Bashīr said: "I was near the pulpit of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ when a man said: 'I do not care if I do no other deed after Islām except to provide water for the pilgrims.' Another said: 'I do not care if I do no deed after Islām except to maintain the Sacred Mosque.' And another said: 'Jihād in the path of Allāh is better than what you have said.' 'Umar rebuked them and said: 'Do not raise your voices near the pulpit of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, and it is Friday. But when I have prayed the Friday prayer, I will go in and ask his opinion about what you have differed on.' Then Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, revealed: {Have you made the providing of water for the pilgrim and the maintenance of al-Masjid al-Ḥarām like [the deeds of] one who believes in Allāh and the Last Day and strives in the cause of Allāh? They are not equal in the sight of Allāh. And Allāh does not guide the wrongdoing people} (Al-Tawbah:19)." (Reported by Muslim).

51. Aslam Abū 'Imrān said: "We went on an expedition from Madīnah intending Constantinople. 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Khālīd ibn al-Walīd was in command of the group, and the Romans had their backs to the city wall. A man charged at the enemy, and the people said: 'Wait, wait! There is no god but Allāh! He is throwing himself into destruction by his own hands!' Abū Ayyūb said: 'This verse was revealed about us, the Anṣār. When Allāh gave victory to His Prophet and made Islām manifest, we said: "Let us stay with our properties and improve them." Then Allāh Almighty revealed: {And spend in the way of Allāh and do not throw [yourselves] with your [own] hands into destruction} (Al-Baqarah:195). So, throwing oneself into destruction by one's own hands meant that we would stay with our properties, improve them, and abandon Jihād.' Abū 'Imrān said: 'Abū Ayyūb continued to strive in Jihād in the path of Allāh until he was buried in Constantinople.'"

In al-Tirmidhī's narration, Faḍālah ibn 'Ubayd is mentioned instead of 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Khālīd ibn al-Walīd. (Reported by Abū Dāwūd).

Caring for the Families of Mujāhidīn and Martyrs

1. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever among you looks after the family and property of one who has gone out (for Jihād) with goodness, will have half the reward of the one who has gone out." (Reported by Muslim). The one who has gone out refers to the warrior or mujāhid in the path of Allāh.

2. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "I and the one who sponsors an orphan, whether related to him or not, will be like this in Paradise (and he gestured with his index and middle fingers, holding them slightly apart). And the one who strives on behalf of the widow and the poor is like the mujāhid in the path of Allāh." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).
3. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The most beloved of people to Allāh are those who are most beneficial to them. And the most beloved of deeds to Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, is joy that you bring to a Muslim, or that you relieve him of a burden, or pay off a debt for him, or drive away hunger from him. And for me to walk with my Muslim brother in his need is more beloved to me than to perform i'tikāf (seclusion for worship) in the mosque for a month. Whoever restrains his anger, Allāh will conceal his faults. Whoever suppresses his rage – even if he wished to vent it, he could – Allāh will fill his heart with satisfaction on the Day of Resurrection. Whoever walks with his Muslim brother in his need until he establishes it for him, Allāh will make his feet firm on the day when feet will slip. And indeed, bad character spoils deeds just as vinegar spoils honey." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).
4. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The one who strives on behalf of the widow and the poor is like the mujāhid in the path of Allāh, or like the one who stands in prayer at night and fasts during the day." (Agreed upon).
5. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "I declare inviolable the right of the two weak ones: the orphan and the woman." (Authenticated by al-Ḥākim).
6. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "While a dog was circling a well, almost dying of thirst, a prostitute from the Children of Israel saw it. She took off her leather sock, drew water for it with it, and gave it to drink. So she was forgiven because of that." (Reported by al-Bukhārī).

7. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim; he does not betray him, nor lie to him, nor forsake him. Everything of a Muslim is sacred to another Muslim: his honor, his wealth, and his blood. Piety is here (pointing to his chest). It is sufficient evil for a man to despise his Muslim brother." (Reported by al-Tirmidhī).
8. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A Muslim is the brother of a Muslim; he does not oppress him nor hand him over (to an enemy). Whoever is in need of his brother, Allāh will be in his need. Whoever relieves a Muslim of a burden, Allāh will relieve him of a burden from the burdens of the Day of Resurrection because of it. And whoever conceals (the faults of) a Muslim, Allāh will conceal him on the Day of Resurrection." (Agreed upon).
9. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The most beloved of people to Allāh Almighty are those who are most beneficial to people. And the most beloved of deeds to Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, is joy that you bring to a Muslim, or that you relieve him of a burden, or pay off a debt for him, or drive away hunger. And for me to walk with a brother in his need is more beloved to me than to perform i'tikāf in this mosque – meaning the mosque of Madīnah – for a month. Whoever restrains his anger, Allāh will conceal his faults. Whoever suppresses his rage – even if he wished to vent it, he could – Allāh will fill his heart with hope on the Day of Resurrection. Whoever walks with his brother in a need until it is met for him, Allāh will make his feet firm on the day when feet will slip. And indeed, bad character spoils deeds just as vinegar spoils honey." (Reported by al-Ṭabarānī).

The Sanctity of the Wives of Mujāhidīn

1. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Or is it that every time we set out in the path of Allāh, one of them stays behind, bleating like the bleating of a billy goat, granting one of them (a woman) a small amount of milk?!! By Allāh, I will not gain power over any one of them except that I will make an example of him." (Reported by Aḥmad).
2. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The sanctity of the wives of the mujāhidīn to those who stay behind is like the sanctity of their own mothers. There is no man among those who stay behind who looks after the family of a man from the mujāhidīn and then betrays him concerning them, except that he will be made to stand before him on the Day of Resurrection, and it will be said to him: 'He looked after your family in your absence, so take from his good deeds whatever you wish.' He will then take from his deeds whatever he wishes. So what do you think (will be left for him)?" (Reported by Muslim).

Types of Jihād

1. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Satirize Quraysh, for it is more severe upon them than the shooting of arrows." (Agreed upon).
2. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Satirize the polytheists, for the Holy Spirit (Jibrīl) is with you," he said this to Ḥassān. (Agreed upon).
3. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, one of the greatest forms of Jihād is a word of justice spoken to an unjust ruler." (Reported by al-Tirmidhī).
This is because one who engages in Jihād against the enemy alternates between hope and fear, whereas one who commands good to a ruler may expose himself to torment and sometimes death. Thus, it is superior due to the predominance of fear. Furthermore, the injustice of a ruler affects a large multitude, so if one restrains him, he has brought benefit to many people, unlike killing a disbeliever.

A ruler (sulṭān) is one who possesses authority and coercive power.

4. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, the believer strives in Jihād with his sword and his tongue." (Reported by Aḥmad).

Jihād with the tongue includes the fatwā (legal ruling) of scholars on the obligation of Jihād, especially when it opposes the whim of the ruler. Here, the fatwā becomes very difficult upon the soul, as it may cost the scholar his position or even his life. Therefore, only the truthful, knowledgeable, and practicing scholars should be consulted in matters of Jihād.

Ibn Taymiyyah said in Fatāwā al-Kubrā (Vol. 4, p. 185): "It is obligatory in matters of Jihād to consider the opinion of people of sound religion who have experience in worldly affairs, not those who are predominantly focused on the outward aspects of religion, so their opinion should not be taken, nor the opinion of religious people who have no experience in worldly affairs." This means that it is a condition for one who issues fatwās on matters of Jihād to be capable of sound deduction, sincere, and to know the nature of the battle and the conditions of its people.

5. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Strive against the polytheists with your wealth, your selves, and your tongues." (Reported by Aḥmad).

When Jihād is mentioned without qualification, it refers to fighting the disbelievers with weapons until they embrace Islām or pay the jizyah (poll tax).

"With your wealth" means by equipping the warriors. "Your selves" means by fighting with weapons. "Your tongues" means by satirizing the disbelievers and being harsh with them. This does not contradict the general prohibition against reviling the polytheists lest they revile the Muslims.

It is mentioned in the commentary: by threatening them with killing, capture, plunder, and other such things; by humiliating them and reviling them if it does not lead to Allāh Almighty being reviled; by supplicating against them for defeat and failure, and for the Muslims for victory and spoils; and by inciting people to military expeditions and the like.

And now, Jihād with the tongue also involves presenting Jihād in the clearest image, and repelling the media campaigns against it, such as the rabid campaigns we see against the Afghan Jihād. It involves preventing the distortion of Jihād, the character assassination of its figures, or the denigration of its symbols, and refuting the discouragers, obstructers, those who cause others to abandon support, and those who spread fear and dismay.

6. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "One dirham has surpassed one hundred thousand dirhams: a man who had two dirhams took one of them and gave it in charity, and a man who had abundant wealth took from its breadth one hundred thousand and gave it in charity." (Reported by al-Nasā'ī).

Ibn Taymiyyah was asked: If wealth is insufficient for both feeding the hungry and for Jihād, the abandonment of which would cause harm, we prioritize Jihād even if the hungry die, as in the issue of tatarus (disbelievers using some Muslims as human shields during combat), and this is even more fitting. For in that case, we kill them by our action, whereas here they die by the action of Allāh.

7. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Fight to protect your property until you secure your property or you are killed and become one of the martyrs of the Hereafter." (Reported by Aḥmad).
8. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Whoever is approached for his property and is fought, and he fights back and is killed, he is a martyr." (Reported by Ibn Mājah).

Ibn Jarīr said: This is the clearest explanation and most evident proof of the permission for one whose property is unjustly sought to fight his oppressor, and an encouragement to do so, whoever he may be, because the station of martyrdom is great. Thus, fighting thieves and bandits is required, and abandoning it is abandoning the prohibition of evil. And there is no evil greater than killing a believer and unjustly taking his property.

9. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The likeness of the one who upholds the limits of Allāh and the one who violates them (and in a narration: transgresses them – and is lenient regarding them –) is like that of a people who drew lots for their places on a ship – at sea. Some of them got the upper part, and some of them got the lower and rougher part. Those who were in the lower part, when they wanted to draw water, had to pass by those above them – and they were annoyed by this. In another narration, those in the lower part would go up to draw water and pour it on those in the upper part. Those in the upper part said: 'We will not let you come up and annoy us.' So they (in the lower part) said: 'What if we make a hole in our portion and draw water from it without annoying those above us (and in a narration: and without passing by our companions and annoying them)?' So one of them took an axe and began to make a hole in the bottom of the ship. They came to him and said: 'What are you doing?' He said: 'You were annoyed by me, and water is necessary.' If they leave them to do what they want, they will all perish. And if they take them by their hands (restrain them), they will be saved, and all of them will be saved."
(Reported by al-Bukhārī).

10. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said to him: "You will have for it seven hundred bridled she-camels in Paradise." (Reported by Abū Nuʿaym).

11. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "It is indeed good for a man to die defending his right." (Reported by Aḥmad).

For he dies as a martyr, as mentioned in the preceding Ḥadīth. This is a martyr of the Hereafter. As for us, we treat him as an ordinary deceased person: we wash him, shroud him, and pray over him, meaning he has the reward of a martyr, with a difference between the two types of martyrdom and the two types of reward.

12. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, among my ummah are people who will be given rewards like the rewards of the first of them, for they will forbid evil." (Reported by Aḥmad).

This means that Allāh will reward a group of Muslims who come later just as He rewards the Companions who supported Islām and established its society.

The Messenger of Allāh's ﷺ Definition of Jihād as Fighting

13. 'Amr ibn 'Anbasah, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: A man asked: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is Islām?" He ﷺ said: "That your heart submits, and that the Muslims are safe from your tongue and your hand." He asked: "Which Islām is best?" He ﷺ said: "Faith." He asked: "And what is faith?" He ﷺ said: "That you believe in Allāh, His angels, His Books, His Messengers, and the resurrection after death." He asked: "Which faith is best?" He ﷺ said: "Migration (Hijrah)." He asked: "And what is migration?" He ﷺ said: "That you abandon evil." He asked: "Which migration is best?" He ﷺ said: "Jihād." He asked: "And what is Jihād?" He ﷺ said: "That you fight the disbelievers when you meet them." He asked: "Which Jihād is best?" He ﷺ said: "One whose horse is hamstrung and whose blood is shed." The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then there are two deeds which are the best of deeds, except for one who does the like of them: an accepted Hajj or an 'Umrah." (Reported by Aḥmad). End quote from Al-Dhakhā'ir al-'Izām (Vol. 1, pp. 252-276).

Justifications and Motives for Fighting

From Abū Mūsā, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ was asked about a man who fights out of bravery, a man who fights for show, and a man who fights for reputation – which of these is in the path of Allāh? He ﷺ said: "Whoever fights so that the word of Allāh is supreme, he is in the path of Allāh." (Reported by the Five Imāms).

From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: A man said: "O Messenger of Allāh, a man intends Jihād in the path of Allāh while also seeking some worldly gain." He ﷺ said: "He has no reward." He repeated this three times, and each time he ﷺ said: "He has no reward." (Reported by Abū Dāwūd).

Verses:

1. {And fight them until there is no fitnah and [until] the religion, all of it, is for Allāh} (Al-Baqarah:193).
2. {It is He who sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to manifest it over all religion, although those who associate others with Allāh dislike it} (Al-Şaff:9).
{They want to extinguish the light of Allāh with their mouths, but Allāh will perfect His light, although the disbelievers dislike it} (Al-Şaff:8).
3. {And We have not sent you except comprehensively to mankind as a bringer of good tidings and a warner} (Saba':28).
4. {And We have not sent you, [O Muḥammad], except as a mercy to the worlds} (Al-Anbiyā':107).

This religion came as a universal declaration for all humanity, announcing that its sphere of action is humankind – every human – on the earth – all the earth.

Therefore, Jihād is an imperative necessity that accompanies it whenever we wish to convey it to people or spread it throughout the regions of the world, because it will face major obstacles upon which the entity of Jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic ignorance) is founded.

It will face formidable obstacles: political, social, economic, ethnic, and geographical. A religion that came to save humanity cannot stand idly by, conveying its message merely by tongue while leaving Jāhiliyyah with weapons and spears. This is because Jāhiliyyah itself will mobilize to protect its entity and uproot Islām from its foundations. {They want to extinguish the light of Allāh with their mouths...}.

Whether Jāhiliyyah mobilizes or not, Islām must set forth with its inherent movement, which is indispensable for the law of tadāfu‘ (repelling/mutual checking): {And were it not for Allāh checking some people by means of others, the earth would have been corrupted, but Allāh is full of bounty to the worlds} (Al-Baqarah:251).

The law of tadāfu‘ between truth and falsehood is what preserves a sound life; otherwise, life would stagnate and rot, and corruption would appear on land and sea because of what the hands of people have earned: {If you do not do so, there will be fitnah on earth and great corruption} (Al-Anfāl:73). This means that if loyalty among believers, Jihād, and migration in the path of Allāh do not occur, polytheism will pervade the earth.

The law of tadāfu‘ is the Islamic interpretation of history and events. Islām did not come to be merely the religion of the Arabian Peninsula, or the religion of the Arabs alone, and then subsequently remain confined within the corners of the Peninsula, defending its borders and protecting its peripheries. The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ was sent to the red and the black (all of humanity).

Jihād is a necessity for protecting religious rites, preserving acts of worship, and the places where they are performed: {And were it not for Allāh checking some people by means of others, monasteries, churches, synagogues, and mosques in which the name of Allāh is much mentioned would have been demolished. And Allāh will surely support those who support Him...} (Al-Ḥajj:40).

Thus, tamkīn (establishment) in the land is an imperative necessity and an obligatory duty for the protection of worship: {Those who, if We give them authority in the land, establish prayer...} (Al-Ḥajj:41).

The audacity of the enemies of Allāh reached the point where Atatürk announced the conversion of the Hagia Sophia mosque into a museum, banned the adhān (call to prayer) in Arabic, prohibited prayer in public, and imposed unveiling on every woman who dealt with the state or studied in its schools.

The arrogance of ‘Abd al-Ḥakīm ‘Āmir reached the extent that he distributed instructions to mosque preachers to refrain from speaking about the Pharaoh of Moses.

The conceit of the Nuṣayrī (Alawite) Ḥāfiẓ al-Asad, president of Syria, led him to declare the death penalty as punishment for anyone proven to be a member of the Muslim Brotherhood.

The disdain and mockery of values led one of them to establish nudist clubs, calling them "Zero in Morals"!

Jamāl Sālim, one of the aides of Egyptian President ‘Abd al-Nāṣir, declared his mockery of the Noble Qur’ān, asking Professor al-Huḍaybī to recite Al-Fātiḥah backwards.

Ḥamzah al-Basyūnī, ‘Abd al-Nāṣir's intelligence chief in Egypt, stated to those who sought refuge in Allāh during torture: "If Allāh Himself came, I would put Him in the cell!"

It is a laughable, deadly farce for someone to say that the function of Islām is to stand as a preacher to the likes of these, advising them with the tongue and having no concern for the spear, because {There is no compulsion in religion} (Al-Baqarah:256).

Islām must have clarification by the tongue, and the removal of barriers before its call by the spear.

Yes, there is no compulsion in religion after demolishing the obstacles that prevent Islām from reaching people, prevent people from entering this religion, and enslave them to other than the Lord of the worlds. Indeed, truth abhors geographical boundaries and is not content to be confined within narrow limits invented by geographers. Truth challenges sound human intellects and says to them: What is wrong with you that you say a particular issue is valid on this side of the mountain or river, but it is false if it crosses to that other shore?

The function of Islamic Jihād can be summarized in three points:

1. Spreading the Islamic call – this is the most important and its foundation.
2. Protecting Dār al-Islām (the Abode of Islām) which it establishes to be a launching point for its call and a safe haven for its ideology.
3. Rescuing the oppressed on earth.

{And what is [the matter] with you that you fight not in the cause of Allāh and [for] the oppressed among men, women, and children who say, "Our Lord, take us out of this city whose people are oppressors and make for us from Yourself a protector and make for us from Yourself a helper"?} (Al-Nisā':75).

The value of the land itself is that it has no value or weight in the view of Islām unless the methodology of Allāh prevails in it, His Sharī'ah governs it, and His religion dominates it.

The martyr Sayyid Quṭb says: "Land is considered valuable in the Islamic methodology when it is a haven for the creed, a field for the methodology, an abode for Islām, and a launching point for the liberation of humankind. It is true that protecting Dār al-Islām is protection for the creed, the methodology, and the society in which the methodology prevails. However, it is not the ultimate goal, nor is its protection the final aim of the Islamic Jihād movement. Rather, it is the means for establishing the kingdom of Allāh therein, then for taking it as a base for launching towards the entire earth, and towards the human race which is the subject of this religion, and the earth is its vast domain."

Makkah – which includes the Ancient House and whose love was in his ﷺ heart – is left if it becomes barren, unable to sprout greenery or yield fruit. Jihād in Islām cannot be a defense of a piece of land, or of an ethnicity or nationality. It is a defense of the call and the creed which must encompass the entire earth, and of the religion which Allāh wills to make manifest over all others. It is the right of Islām to move forth proactively. Islām is not the creed of a nation nor the system of a homeland, but rather a divine methodology and a global system. It has the right to move to demolish the barriers between systems and conditions that shackle human freedom of choice.

Islām is a realistic religion that confronts corrupt perceptions and beliefs with clear verses, and counters the power of Jāhiliyyah and authority with strength, movement, and the spear.

Attention must be paid to some important points on the path of Jihād:

The Path to Jihād

The path to Jihād for spreading the religion of Allāh throughout the regions of the world must begin with a clear call to pure Tawhīd, and to the clarification of "Lā ilāha illā Allāh" (There is no god but Allāh) in people's souls. This includes Tawhīd of Lordship (Rubūbiyyah) – knowledge and affirmation – and affirming Allāh's uniqueness in His actions, by affirming His oneness in providing sustenance, determining lifespans, giving life and causing death, and in power.

Tawhīd of Names and Attributes (al-Asmā' wa al-Ṣifāt), whereby we affirm for Allāh the Most Beautiful Names and Lofty Attributes, without figurative interpretation (ta'wīl), negation (ta'ṭīl), anthropomorphism (tashbīh), or representation (tamthīl), as has been reported in the Book and the Sunnah. This is done without deriving new names for Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic. So, we do not say that Allāh is Jābir (Mender/Compeller) although His name is al-Jabbār (The Compeller), so we do not name someone 'Abd al-Jābir. Nor do we say, "O Sātir (Concealer)," because His attribute reported in the Sunnah is al-Sittīr (The Concealer).

This call is the sum of the call of the Messengers, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon them.

{And We sent not before you any messenger except that We revealed to him that, "There is no deity except Me, so worship Me."} (Al-Anbiyā':25).

This call to Tawhīd begins from the very first moment by people gathering upon it. When a group of people gathers around it, sacrificing for its sake and living for the purpose of its elevation, the Jāhiliyyah around them mobilizes to crush it and crush them. Thus, the battle between truth and falsehood commences. Some people fall along the way, some are tried, some are martyred, and some endure, carrying the banner and the torch. These are the ones whom Allāh grants victory and establishes in the land, making them a screen and an instrument for the victory of His Sharī'ah.

{[They continued] until, when the messengers despaired and were certain that they had been denied, there came to them Our victory, and We saved whom We willed. And Our punishment cannot be repelled from the people who are criminals} (Yūsuf:110).

It is necessary to search for a suitable piece of land upon which the religion of Allāh can be established. Callers must focus their efforts and their Jihād upon it until Allāh grants them permission for victory and opens the way for them with dominance.

This land will be Dār al-Islām, a launching point for its call, a haven for its ideology, and a conducive environment for its growth. Therefore, it is essential to clarify the following points regarding this issue:

1. The silence of Jāhiliyyah regarding the truth and its truce with it is contrary to the Sunnah of Allāh in life and the opposite of His law of tadāfu<sup>ʿ</sup>. If there is silence, it is an incidental matter and for a limited time.

{And never will the Jews or the Christians approve of you until you follow their religion. Say, "Indeed, the guidance of Allāh is the [only] guidance." If you were to follow their desires after what has come to you of knowledge, you would have against Allāh no protector or helper} (Al-Baqarah:210).

It is impossible for the soul to live for long in a corrupt society without moving to remove and change it.

2. The victory of Allāh does not descend except after prolonged affliction and severe trial.

{Or do you think that you will enter Paradise while such [trial] has not yet come to you as came to those who passed on before you? They were touched by poverty and hardship and were shaken until [even their] messenger and those who believed with him said, "When is the help of Allāh?" Unquestionably, the help of Allāh is near} (Al-Baqarah:215).

Those who expect victory to descend upon them behind their desks while they are sitting on their chairs do not understand the Sunnah of Allāh in societies nor His law in calls to faith.

The Afghans have, to date, offered between one million and over one million two hundred thousand martyrs, and they have not yet achieved the victory of Allāh's religion, nor have they been able to establish His Sharīʿah in life.

3. Prolonged patience with the oppression of Jāhiliyyah, suppressing the ardent breaths from emerging from the depths, and sighs from relieving the chests –

I say that some may think prolonged patience is beneficial for the calls, but they do not know that it is lethal to souls. This is especially true if accompanied by severe panic, excessive caution bordering on obsession, and debilitating cowardice leading to slow, gradual death.

Zeal is first suppressed, then it withers, then it diminishes, then it dies. When it dies, the person transforms into a lifeless corpse that neither denounces evil nor recognizes good, or as it is stated in the Ḥadīth: "His face never once reddened with anger for the sake of Allāh."

Cowards see cowardice as intellect... And that is the deception of a base nature.

Prolonged patience with evils while you are engrossed in your lethal secrecy leads to daily habituation to the tyrannical Jāhiliyyah. Finally, it leads to a familiarity that distorts the natural disposition (fiṭrah) and reverses perception: "How will you be when you see good as evil and evil as good?" This familiarity that kills the Islamic sensibility in the heart is the disease that afflicts many silent callers. Moreover, it leads to disagreement among callers and the fragmentation of workers on this path. "When the Children of Israel fell into disobedience, their scholars forbade them, but they did not desist. So they ate with them and drank with them, and Allāh struck the hearts of some of them against others, and He cursed them on the tongue of David and Jesus son of Mary." Then he ﷺ recited the verse: {Cursed were those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel by the tongue of David and of Jesus, the son of Mary. That was because they disobeyed and [habitually] transgressed} (Al-Mā'idah:78).

And he ﷺ said: "Nay, by Allāh, you must enjoin good and forbid evil, and you must seize the hand of the oppressor, and you must compel him to the truth"

forcefully, and confine him to the truth strictly, or Allāh will strike the hearts of some of you against others and will curse you as He cursed them."

Indeed, the matter has reached further than that, where one who is zealous for the sacred limits and proclaims the truth is labeled as reckless and impulsive, while the silent one is described as committed and balanced!

One of the callers said to me: "I stayed in an office for two years with another employee, and he did not know my orientation during that time." I said: "Then you did not speak a single word during those two years about the truth you carry within you!"

Consider if the Companions had acted as many of the secret callers do today, do you think Islām would have spread beyond the borders of Makkah?

If Bilāl had remained silent, if Yāsir and Sumayyah had prevaricated, if ‘Uthmān ibn Maẓ‘ūn had outwardly surrendered, and if Abū Bakr had accepted the condition of Ibn al-Dughunnah – who granted Abū Bakr protection on the condition that he not raise his voice in reciting the Qur’ān because his voice affected the youth of the Quraysh neighborhood – I say, if these individuals had remained silent in the face of the tyranny and despotism of Jāhiliyyah, Islām could not have emerged from the valley of Makkah and surpassed al-Ḥarūrā’.

Bilāl's finger pointing to the sky, while he was under severe torture, repeating: "One... One..." was an earthquake to disbelief from its depths and a shaking of the tree of Jāhiliyyah from its roots.

Calls do not triumph in their initial stages except by "the voice of the spirit," not by the voice of reason, as Mālik Bennabi says. The stage of reason is subsequent to the stage of "the voice of the spirit," which impels to sacrifice and motivates devotion.

The voice of reason says to Bilāl: "Deceive Umayyah ibn Khalaf, and tell him you are upon the religion of al-Lāt and al-‘Uzzā. Then at night, come to Muḥammad ﷺ, your true leader, your guide, and your pioneer, and tell him: 'I laughed at Umayyah and deceived him, so he counted me among his followers and left me alone.'"

But calls do not triumph with such cleverness and politics. They suffer setbacks and are shattered if there is no one to nourish them with blood and build them with skulls and limbs.

Callers have begun to repeat on their tongues: "This one is emotional," "This one is good-hearted," and "This one is impulsive," as if these qualities, upon which true Jihād is based, have become a disgrace and a blame in the eyes of those who do not know the ways of calls to faith.

Secrecy is necessary at the outset, caution is necessary along the path, and self-control is necessary during the journey. But secrecy in the call of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ had a short duration, which it soon transcended to open proclamation. Caution is necessary with mobilization – {Take your precautions and go forth} (Al-Nisā’<sup>3</sup>:71) – not the caution that leads to paralysis, panic, and death.

And self-control during the journey is not about concealing the creed or obscuring the principle; this is something from which none of the Companions restrained themselves.

Presenting the call and making the religion public was the practice of every Muslim after the revelation of Allāh Almighty's words: {Arise and warn} (Al-Muddaththir:2). Patience has its limits, and silence has its extent, otherwise it distorts the natural disposition and kills zeal.

4. The battle against Jāhiliyyah with weapons and spears is not possible unless it is preceded by the battle of clarification and the tongue. And sacrificing oneself and giving one's soul on the battlefield does not occur except after expending time and wealth.

Those who are unable to walk a few meters will perish if they try to cover miles.

Those who wait for a handful of officers to establish for them the religion of Allāh on earth while they issue orders to them amidst playing with their children and wives, and being preoccupied with counting money and registering properties – these people think that establishing societies, changing souls, individuals, and hearts, and building and refining spirits can be achieved with such ease and at such a cheap price of sacrifice!

5. The battle and Jihād in the path of Allāh are what distinguish leaders and bring forth men through sacrifices. The status of Abū Bakr among the Muslims, such that his election was by near consensus, did not come by chance or arbitrarily. Rather, events highlighted Abū Bakr, sacrifices distinguished him, and stances, trials, and tribulations elevated him. That is why ‘Umar said on the day of Tabūk, after he had brought half of his wealth and saw that Abū Bakr had brought all of his wealth, and said to the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ when he asked him: "What have you left for your family?" He replied: "I have left them Allāh and His Messenger!" At that moment, ‘Umar said: "I never competed with Abū Bakr in any matter except that Abū Bakr surpassed me." Abū Bakr did not need an election campaign, nor to be part of a list of candidates, because his stature had already become prominent during the journey and along the path. He no longer needed to buy consciences with money, nor to mislead souls with the glitter of media and the polishing of deeds.

Stagnant societies are like stagnant water; only scum, algae, and lichens float on them. Thus, the leadership of stagnant societies that do not mobilize for fighting floats up, rotten and corrupt. As for the Jihād-striving society, it is like flowing water and a running river; it refuses to carry scum or to have filth float on its surface.

How can I equate an ordinary person, a merchant or a wealthy man, who comes from Saudi Arabia or the oil-producing countries to offer his wealth with his own hand, and give his zakāh himself to the mujāhidīn and inquires about their conditions – how can I equate him with a caller who comes to Pakistan to take an exam in one of its universities, and stays for a month or two waiting for the date of his master's thesis defense, or for his university registration to be considered, without dedicating even a week to the mujāhidīn?

I say to myself: This caller no longer has any burning concern for this religion in his soul, nor any zeal that would drive him to care about the affairs of the Muslims. My heart cannot believe that this person is one of the callers. Indeed, that ordinary person is far better than this caller whose time has been prolonged, so his heart has hardened. I hope he is not among the defiantly disobedient, for "Whoever does not care about the affairs of the Muslims is not one of them." End quote from Al-Dhakhā'ir al-'Izām (Vol. 1, pp. 653-657).

This concludes the words of our Shaykh, the martyr, may Allāh honor his resting place and gather us with him in the highest companionship in 'Ilīyyīn, with the Prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous. And excellent are those as companions.

Counsels, Responses, and Glad Tidings

Firstly: Counsels and Warnings:

1. Beware of neglecting to constantly monitor your intentions, sincerity, and self-accountability.
2. Beware of neglecting to instill the Jihādī creed in its details into the hearts and minds of the mujāhidīn.
3. Beware of neglecting comprehensive cultivation, especially in matters of worship according to the Sharīʿah, and ethical conduct.
4. Beware of wrongly declaring Muslims to be unbelievers, and beware of rushing to declare specific individuals as unbelievers.
5. Beware of confusing the domains of Jihād with weapons and spears with the domains of Jihād with proof and clarification.
6. Beware of confronting the scholars of the ruler and the misguided leaders of the Awakening without proof and clear evidence.
7. Beware of not exercising extreme caution regarding the blood of Muslims while fighting unbelievers and apostates.
8. Beware of neglecting the rulings of Jihād, its etiquettes, and the ethics of Islām towards friend and foe.
9. Beware of anything that would cause the resistance and the mujāhidīn to lose the public opinion of Muslims.
10. Beware of targeting neutrals in this confrontation, even if they are unbelievers.

11. Beware of transforming the detachments of the Resistance Call into centralized, hierarchical organizations.
12. Beware of any detachment of the Resistance Call issuing policy or media statements in the name of the Global Islamic Resistance Call. This is solely for the Central Guidance Office.
13. Beware of affiliating with the institutions of the occupation or the ruling tyrants who govern by other than what Allāh has revealed, under the pretext of serving the interest of the call and resisting the occupation or tyrants.
14. Beware of overt Jihād concentrated on open fronts or in specific areas, except out of necessity, unless America's military power collapses and its hegemony, especially air dominance, ends.
15. Beware of laxity in the security of communications of all kinds: telephone, wireless, and internet.
16. Beware of loving rumors and divulging secrets, and neglecting the motto: "Knowledge according to need."
17. Beware of abandoning the obligation of fighting and deceiving oneself by merely inciting others to it.
18. Beware of preoccupation with polemics and intellectual battles with Muslims, especially outside the sphere of confrontation.
19. And upon you is the fear of Allāh Almighty in secret and in public, for the best provision is piety. And upon you is to have excellent reliance upon Him and to resort to Him. Do not abandon remembrance, for it is a protective shield and a means for Allāh's company. Do not forget the weapon of supplication, for it is our sharpest weapon and the essence of worship. Know that what Allāh wills, occurs, and what He does not will, does not occur. And there is no might nor power except with Allāh, the Most High, the Most Great.

Secondly: Foreseeing the Future and Textual and Factual Glad Tidings:

As we conclude this book with its final chapter, we attempt to discern the causes of victory and trace the glad tidings that herald our inevitable triumph over our enemies, as successively conveyed in the book of Allāh Almighty and in the Ḥadīth of the truthful, the confirmed, peace and blessings be upon him. This is also indicated by political realities and conditions in the lands of Muslims and their unbelieving enemies alike. We begin with evidence from reality and conclude by foreseeing the future through Prophetic Ḥadīth and noble reports concerning the news of the End Times – which has cast its shadow upon us – and the accounts of great battles, tribulations, and signs of the Hour's approach.

Sheikh ‘Abdullāh ‘Azzām stated under the heading:

Glad Tidings of Islām’s Victory:

Empirical Evidence for the Collapse of Western Civilization:

Western man assumed leadership of humanity after a fierce battle with the Church, and after paying a heavy price to break the tight shackles with which it had bound him. He saw with his own eyes the flower of Europe's societies being burned in public streets by the ecclesiastical inquisition courts. Thus, he grew resentful of the Church and its god, shook off the accumulated dust of centuries, and set forth, unswerving, accepting no tutelage from religion or party, unwilling to believe in anything that would tie his hands or restrict his mind. He fought against religious thought and the unseen.

However, the spiritual hunger that was somewhat satisfied by this Western man's attendance at church, his belief in the afterlife, and his encounters with clergymen, this hunger was no longer satiated after Western man disbelieved in the Church and its men. A huge spiritual vacuum resulted. Europe tried to establish reason as a god to fill this terrible psychological void, erecting a statue to the god of reason in a French city – the image of the most beautiful woman in Paris. It pushed forward figures like Hegel and Nietzsche to fill the void through the "idealistic rational" school of thought, but to no avail.

Then came Comte to install nature as a god in place of the Church, but the result of his attempt was no different from previous ones. Finally, Marx came to establish economics as a god to fill the vacuum, interpret history, and analyze the course of the human race. All these attempts met with abject failure.

Leopold Flam Dans, in his book Man and the Tragic, Torn Conscience, says: "Man belonging to our age believes in nothing, does not think, or has not yet thought, but he knows a lot... The end of Christianity also constitutes the end of other ideologies like Marxism, which is therefore undergoing a deep crisis. This crisis is by no means a sign of life, but a sign of death."

The thinker Lamennais says: "The entire human race is rapidly marching towards destruction... It is in its final throes, like a poor wounded man for whom no cure is hoped. The abundance of errors in our civilization is dragging it to its doom." Hence, the reason for the collapse of Western civilization is clear and simple: it was established without religion, and it cast its Lord behind its back.

{And he whom Allāh sends astray - for him there is no guide. For them is punishment in the life of this world, and the punishment of the Hereafter is more severe. And they have from Allāh no protector.} (Ar-Ra'd:33-34)

The French philosopher Bergson says: "The separation of religion from science is an inevitable annihilation for both." Bernard Shaw says: "I have always known that civilization needs a religion, and that its life or death depends on it." Similarly, the English writer Colin Wilson, in his book The Outsider (meaning the rebel), put his finger on the disease, saying: "St. Paul's solution is considered unacceptable for a civilization in the mid-twentieth century, a civilization with high mechanical development spanning three centuries, accompanied by a great void that civilization does not know how to spend" – meaning, to fill. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-ʿIzām, vol. 1, p. 756).

Alexis Carrel, in his book Man, The Unknown, says: "The anxiety and worries suffered by the inhabitants of modern cities are generated by their political, economic, and social systems. The environment that science has created for man does not suit him because it was established without regard for man himself."

Bertrand Russell adds concerning human misery: "The animals of our world are overwhelmed with joy and happiness, while humans were more deserving of this happiness than animals, but they are deprived of its blessing in the modern world.

Today, this blessing and happiness have become impossible." MacNeil says:

"Western civilization is in the final stage of its life, resembling a beast whose ferocity has reached its peak in violating what is moral, and whose aggression – against the heritage of a_n_cestors and everything sacred and forbidden – has reached its climax. Then it plunged its claws into its own entrails, tore them out, and began to chew and masticate them between its jaws with utmost rage and vindictiveness."

The spiritual emptiness and void in Western life, the absence of a great purpose for human endeavor, and the denial of the God to whom one turns in times of hardship and sorrow – all these have led the West to a painful destiny and a sad, grievous end.

It is misery, internal disintegration, nervous tension, fear, and the haunting specter of war dominating imaginations. It is an escape from life to alcohol, then to drugs, and finally, this wretched, miserable life must be ended by suicide, which is a public declaration that the misery in the soul has become unbearable, as did Jacob Marino, Ernest Hemingway, Nietzsche, and others. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-ʿIzām, vol. 1, p. 758).

The Tragedy of Western Thought:

One who follows Western writers, especially avant-garde writers or pioneers of the theater of the absurd from among the existentialists, sees wonders of anxiety and distress through their lines, which reek of pain and are wrung with sorrow.

Despair, anxiety, sorrow, pain, boredom, absurdity, disintegration, tragedy, and misery – these terms are hardly absent from a single page of these writers. Read, if you wish, the French writer Camus in his plays: The Rebel, The Misunderstanding, State of Siege. Camus says: "We should believe in nothing in this world except wine, which is death to the world. Destroy everything; we must abolish everything. Abolition and overthrow are my gospel." The American Arthur Miller says in his play After the Fall: "The most innocent place in my country is the mental hospital, and perfect innocence is madness." The French writer Salacrou says: "The gods have no work but to trifle with human wreckage."

Read also, if you wish, the plays of the Frenchman Jean-Paul Sartre: No Exit, The Dead without Burial, Dirty Hands, The Respectful Prostitute, The Condemned of Altona. Read his books: The Death of the Soul, The Age of Reason, The Flies. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-ʿIzām, vol. 1, p. 758).

The Frenchman Ionesco says: "Reality is an unbearable, painful nightmare." Peruse his book: Killer Without Cause. Death is the problem of problems in the view of Western writers. Death evokes terror because it is a terrible event in itself. Indeed, it renders all preceding life absurd and ridiculous, as Samuel Beckett says in his book Happy Days. Thus, despair, absurdity, pain, and anxiety are the hallmark of Western life.

Heidegger believes that true life lies in despair, while Sartre believes that true life lies beyond despair. Sartre even says: "Man is, in his essence, anxiety."

As for Nietzsche, the German philosopher, he sees man as torn between submission and rebellion; his existence is a rupture and a negation, an absurd world. He finds salvation only in madness, which delivers him from his present misery. Nietzsche believes that despair and anxiety are permanent conditions for human greatness.

As for Kierkegaard, the pioneer of existential philosophy, he says: Existence means that we inevitably suffer despair and anxiety, and whoever chooses despair chooses himself in his eternal value. Thus, we find that he attempted suicide repeatedly.

Consciousness always appears in the form of anxiety, and despair is the limit to which it leads. Deadly melancholy remained with Kierkegaard until death. One of his books is titled Fear and Trembling, and a research paper of his is titled Despair or Sickness Unto Death.

These are the main features of the world today, which are clearly embodied in the works of great writers and litterateurs: chaos gripping the world, scattering whatever remains of order and striving to tear apart the remaining spiderwebs of Western values. Man today sees this tragic, chaotic hurricane engulfing humanity, destroying its entity, and crushing its humaneness. A tyrannical, overwhelming mechanism has turned man into a machine, crushing all experiences of the spirit and conscience. A deaf collectivism has eliminated every ambition for individuality, genius, excellence, and creativity. There is a terrible imbalance between matter and spirit, a distressing Western isolation in the face of a deaf world unresponsive to its pleas, and a collapse and downfall in all political, social, and military systems that hold the reins of the world today, in addition to global fear of destruction, wars, atomic bombs, and a Machiavellianism that sacrifices all morality and values for the sake of interest.

The words of the English writer Osborne in his play The Entertainer are the best expression of the state of Western man: "We are exhausted, lost deadbeats. We are drunken madmen. We are fools. We are insignificant." (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 759).

Allāh's Law in Societies:

Allāh's law for human life neither fails nor errs, and Allāh's law for man neither falters nor deceives. {And whatever misfortune befalls you, it is because of what your hands have earned} (Ash-Shūrā:30). Calamities result from deviation from Allāh's path.

Sins are calamities and pains. {So when they forgot what they had been reminded of, We opened to them the doors of every [good] thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they were given, We seized them suddenly, and they were [then] in despair. So the people who wrongdoing were eliminated. And praise to Allāh, Lord of the worlds.} (Muḥammad:38).

These are three stages that Europe has passed through, and all materialistic, secular civilizations pass through:

1. Fleeing from Allāh.
2. The opening of the doors of everything to them: production and creativity in one or many aspects.
3. The stage of atrophy, decay, and then replacement. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 759).

The words of freedom, democracy, and national interest used to stir the feelings of the masses in Europe, and armies marched to colonize peoples and drain their resources and blood.

Then came the First and Second World Wars, and Europe lost about sixty million of its finest youth on the battlefields. The war ended, and the youth lost every value they had clung to. These words ended; life no longer had any meaning. The Jazz Age began around 1920. The youth replaced the rivers of blood shed in the war with rivers of wine, which became their only escape from empty anxiety. The youth rushed to enjoy and satisfy their bestial sexual urges and animalistic frenzy. Society became desperately in need of hospitals for dreadful venereal diseases, and in need of psychology and hospitals for nervous and mental illnesses.

Calamities of the Spiritual Void:

We see that the spiritual void and emptiness have produced the following:

1. Indulgence in alcoholic beverages.
2. Addiction to drugs.
3. Nervous and mental illnesses.
4. Rebellion and non-belonging to civilization.
5. Crimes.
6. Sexual frenzy and venereal diseases.
7. Suicide.

Here are some astounding figures about the diseases of civilization:

1. In America (in the 1940s), the number of alcohol addicts annually was 42 million.
2. Those who used drugs (in 1975) constituted 19% of the American population. Those who used drugs (in 1978) constituted 49% of the American population.
3. The number of patients in mental hospitals in the United States is 750,000, occupying 55% of all hospital beds. The number of those exempted by the U.S. Armed Forces in World War II due to psychological and mental disorders was 43% of the total, which equaled 980,000. The number of those who failed military service examinations was 960,000.

As for Sweden: It is one of the most advanced countries in the world in terms of per capita income and social security, yet it has the highest rate of psychological and mental illnesses. The percentage of mentally, nervously, and psychologically ill people is 25% of Sweden's population! The state spends 30% of its budget on their treatment. The percentage of employees who leave their jobs due to these illnesses equals 50% of all those who leave employment.

4. As for rebellion, what we witness of phenomena like the Beatles and Hippies suffices.
5. As for crimes, in America, according to its official statistics, there were 110,257 crimes in 1975.
6. As for sex, its diseases, and its frenzy, one can speak endlessly. In New York, there were 120,829 abortions in 1974, a rate of 1,138 abortions per 1,000 live births, and 67% of those who had abortions were unmarried. In New York, there are 1,200,000 homosexuals. A survey of homosexuals of both sexes was conducted at the University of Los Angeles, California, and the percentage was 84%. The number of hospitals designated for venereal diseases in the United States was 652, exceeding all hospitals for all diseases except tuberculosis.

Mawdūdī, may Allāh have mercy on him, quoted from the Encyclopaedia Britannica that in the 1940s, 90% of American youth were infected with syphilis. I used to keep in my pocket a picture of an American youth, twenty-one years old, who married his grandmother, aged seventy-seven. The church in a village near Los Angeles performed their marriage ceremony!

President Kennedy stated in 1962 that 85.7% of the youth applying for military service were unfit because the desires in which they were immersed had corrupted their medical and psychological fitness.

America's future is in danger because its youth are dissolute, debauched, and drowned in desires, which will render them incapable of carrying out the tasks entrusted to them.

The Collapse in the Communist East:

As for the atheist Communist East, one can speak endlessly regarding:

1. Suppression of freedoms, muzzling of mouths, counting of breaths, surveillance devices in homes, and human misery caught between the jaws of hunger and terrorism.
2. Economic collapse and lack of provisions in the markets, despite all the people's blood and sweat pouring into the pockets of the ruling clique. The former Soviet Union used to import 15.8 million tons of wheat annually from America. The former Soviet Union used to import 1,508 million tons of wheat annually from America. In Romania, the budget deficit in 1967 was 215 million pound sterling, and worker productivity in Romania was 33%-50% of that of Italian and French workers. The result of the referendum conducted by Dubček, Secretary of the Communist Party in Czechoslovakia, was that 90% of the people favored abolishing the Communist Party from government because the party was: selfish, cowardly, and its members had bad consciences. After Lenin's decrees in 1917 to subordinate agricultural, industrial, and commercial properties, institutions, banks, workers, and their committees, a major economic deterioration occurred, where production collapsed to 20% of what it had been, and the currency reached 1% of its pre-revolution value.
3. Brain drain and flight of intellects, despite the Iron Curtain imposed on the people and depriving individuals even of passports.
4. The misery suffered by workers and all classes except the custodians of the Communist Party and their senior magnates who monopolize power and wealth, while the rest of the nation is deprived of a simple, ordinary life. This led the people of misery and the lost nation in communist societies to turn to alcohol with a strange voracity unprecedented in history, as a way to soothe their sorrows and forget their worries and wretchedness.

The tree of materialism, with its Western utilitarian secular branch and its Eastern atheistic branch, is eroding today, and decay is gnawing at it from every side and part of its being.

The rot began from its earliest days because it was built on no foundation, constructed without guidance. Its Western planter wanted to defy its nature and innate disposition, thinking he could change its hue by planting it without irrigation. He wanted to plant bananas in Eskimo lands, and pine and apples at the equator, but he failed abjectly. His efforts and toil went to waste, and his labor became scattered dust because he challenged the will of Allāh and His law, and was thus vanquished.

The Westerner planted his civilization far from Allāh, suffocating the spirit within it from the first moment. So it turned out dead, without spirit; materialistic, without life; with no blood flowing in its veins.

Western civilization was born with a paralyzed brain, and the Westerner thought he could cure this paralysis. But as time advanced and days passed, the paralysis became apparent in its limbs and the defect in all its parts.

I perceive the withering in both branches of civilization (Western and Eastern), but I see that the atrophy and yellowing in the Eastern branch are more severe and extensive. This is with my assertion – and Allāh knows best – that the tree, with its branches, will wither, and the time of its final fall is not far, because it is the Sunnah of Allāh. {And We had already destroyed generations before you when they wronged} (Yūnus:13). {Indeed, Allāh does not amend the work of corrupters} (Yūnus:81).

The Sunnah of Allāh and His law proceed upon every civilization. The law runs through societies, life, and living beings: {Due to arrogance in the land and plotting of evil; but the evil plot does not encompass except its own people. Then do they await except the way [i.e., fate] of the former peoples? But you will never find in the way [i.e., established course] of Allāh any change, and you will never find in the way of Allāh any alteration.} (Fāṭir:43).

Western man became arrogant in the land and exalted himself, plotted evil, and manifested corruption in the lands. So he reaped the harvest of what his hands had sown. {But the evil plot does not encompass except its own people}.

He reaped thorns and misery, anxiety and tribulation. From the seeds of doubt, he harvested thorns. From the seeds of abandoning Allāh, he produced regret and loss, pain and ruin, perdition, confusion, and suicide.

I say: I perceive the withering in the Eastern branch to be more severe, even though it is younger in age. I see it twisting upon itself, rapidly declining, and losing the remainder of its life moment by moment. Therefore, I expect the collapse of Communism – the Eastern branch – to be faster, and Allāh knows best. This is because the remaining breezes of freedom in the Western branch, the remaining pens that still criticize and warn, the remaining minds that were not placed within the iron collar, still point to the terrible end. The remaining muzzled mouths still cry out and warn of the deadly abyss into which humanity will fall.

So Europe, in both its parts, is now in a phase of replacement and change. But who is nominated to inherit Western man in leading humanity? And what civilization is this that will advance, by its Lord's permission, to save mankind? It is Islām, the religion of Allāh which He has approved for people as a path and a leader. {This day I have perfected for you your religion and completed My favor upon you and have approved for you Islām as religion.} (Al-Mā'idah:3). {And whoever holds firmly to Allāh has [indeed] been guided to a straight path.} (Āl 'Imrān:101).

Spengler says: "Civilization has astronomical cycles; it sets here to rise there. A new civilization is about to rise in the most magnificent form; it is the civilization of Islām, which possesses the strongest, pure, universal spiritual power."

There are texts in the Qur'ān and Sunnah that support this conclusion and affirm this truth. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 760).

Textual Glad Tidings Announcing the Victory of Islām and Muslims in the Qur'ān and Sunnah:

There are many texts that reassure the soul and signal that Islām will advance to save all of humanity, Allāh willing.

A. In the Noble Qur'ān: (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 760).

1. {They want to extinguish the light of Allāh with their mouths, but Allāh refuses except to perfect His light, although the unbelievers dislike it. It is He who has sent His Messenger with guidance and the religion of truth to manifest it over all religion, although those who associate others with Allāh dislike it.} (At-Tawbah:32-33).

Al-Shāfi'ī said: "Allāh will surely make His religion prevail over all religions until Allāh alone is worshipped by it, and that is when Allāh wills." So, Allāh willing, this religion must encompass the earth to prevail over all religion. This light must dispel the darkness of ignorance that has covered the earth. There is nothing else, because it is the religion of Allāh that satisfies the soul, harmonizes with the innate nature, brings comfort to the self, and settles the conscience. As Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, has shown in the justifications for its sovereignty and spread, it is guidance and the religion of truth. Therefore, it is no wonder that truth is firm and falsehood is perishing.

{Rather, We hurl the truth against falsehood, and it destroys it, and thereupon it is [seen to be] perishing. And for you is woe from that which you describe.} (Al-Anbiyā':18).

2. Truth is inherent in the earth and the soul, while falsehood is an intruding appendage in the earth and the soul as well.

{Have you not considered how Allāh presents an example, [making] a good word like a good tree, whose root is firmly fixed and its branches [high] in the sky? It produces its fruit all the time, by permission of its Lord. And Allāh presents examples for the people that perhaps they will be reminded. And the example of a bad word is like a bad tree, uprooted from the surface of the earth, not having any stability.} (Ibrāhīm:24-25).

3. Truth is beneficial and endures, while falsehood is vanishing foam. {He sends down from the sky, rain, and valleys flow according to their capacity, and the torrent carries a rising foam. And from that [ore] which they heat in the fire, desiring adornments and utensils, is a foam like it. Thus Allāh presents [the example of] truth and falsehood. As for the foam, it vanishes, [being] cast off; but as for that which benefits the people, it remains on the earth. Thus Allāh presents examples.} (Ar-Ra'd:17).

B. As for the Prophetic Glad Tidings, they are numerous, and here are some of them:

1. Thawbān (may Allāh be pleased with him) narrated: The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, Allāh gathered the earth for me, and I saw its easts and its wests. And indeed, the dominion of my ummah (nation) will reach what was gathered for me from it." (Reported by al-Tirmidhī).
2. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "This matter [Islām] will certainly reach what the night and day reach. Allāh will not leave a house of mud bricks or a tent of camel hair but He will cause this religion to enter it, with the honor of an honored one or the humiliation of a humiliated one: honor by which Allāh honors Islām, and humiliation by which Allāh humiliates unbelief." (Reported by Aḥmad).

3. Narrated Abū Qabīl: "We were with ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ when he was asked which of the two cities would be conquered first, Constantinople or Rome? ‘Abdullāh called for a chest of his that had rings. He said: He took out a book from it. Then ‘Abdullāh said: While we were around the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) writing, the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) was asked which of the two cities would be conquered first, Constantinople or Rome? The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The city of Heraclius will be conquered first," meaning Constantinople." (Reported by Aḥmad).
4. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Prophethood will remain among you for as long as Allāh wills it to remain, then Allāh will raise it when He wills to raise it. Then there will be a biting monarchy, and it will remain for as long as Allāh wills it to remain, then Allāh will raise it when He wills to raise it. Then there will be a tyrannical monarchy, and it will remain for as long as Allāh wills it to remain, then He will raise it when He wills to raise it. Then there will be a caliphate upon the prophetic methodology." Then he fell silent.

These Ḥadīth reassure the heart that this religion will return to save tormented humanity, take it by the hand from the deep abyss to the lofty ascent, purify it, comfort it, and restore to it its lost humanity. Man will find himself reborn, tasting happiness and tranquility, and feeling that he is a noble creature, Allāh willing. There is a Ḥadīth reported by al-Bazzār with an authentic chain, similar in wording to the fourth Ḥadīth: "Indeed, the beginning of your religion was prophethood and mercy, which will remain among you for as long as Allāh wills it to remain, then Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will raise it. Then there will be a biting monarchy among you for as long as Allāh wills it to remain, then Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will raise it. Then there will be a caliphate upon the prophetic methodology, acting among the people according to the Sunnah of the Prophet. Islām will cast its anchor firmly in the earth.

The inhabitants of heaven and the inhabitants of earth will be pleased with it. The sky will not withhold any of its raindrops but will pour them down abundantly, and the earth will not withhold any of its plants and blessings but will bring them forth."

There are many authentic Ḥadīth indicating the end of the Jews in Palestine, and that the army that will fight them will be a Muslim army, to the extent that trees and stones will say: "O Muslim, O servant of Allāh, there is a Jew behind me, so kill him."

In the narration of al-Bazzār, whose narrators are trustworthy, men of the Ṣaḥīḥ, as mentioned in Majma' al-Zawā'id by al-Haythamī in the seventh volume: "You will be east of the river, and they will be west of it." The narrator of the Ḥadīth comments: "We did not know where Jordan was on the earth back then."

This means that the region before the decisive battle must be ruled by Islām, and Islām must dominate the soldier, the commander, the ruler, and the ruled, evidenced by the fact that trees and stones will call out: "O Muslim, there is a Jew behind me, so kill him."

Narrations have come indicating that the return of Muslims to Allāh, their submission to His law, and their Jihād in His cause, will occur when tribulations begin in the blessed land, where the Muslim community will be, and where the encampment of the Muslims will be established.

In the narration of Imām Aḥmad and Abū Dāwūd: "A group of my ummah will continue to be manifest upon the truth, vanquishing their enemy. Those who oppose them or the hardships that afflict them will not harm them, until the command of Allāh comes while they are in that state." They asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, where are they?" He said, "In Bayt al-Maqdis (Jerusalem) and the environs of Bayt al-Maqdis." Part of the Ḥadīth is in the two Ṣaḥīḥs, and the rest of the Ḥadīth came through numerous narrations outside the two Ṣaḥīḥs.

Al-Bayhaqī included a chapter in his Sunan titled: "Chapter on the Manifestation of the Prophet's Religion (peace be upon him) over all other religions" (vol. 9, p. 177). Sheikh Sa'īd Ḥawwā said: "This religion will be victorious, and it must launch from a solid land upon which this religion is represented as a living reality. This land, which represents northern Afghanistan along with Eastern and Western Turkistan, is named 'Turan.' It produced the Turks who ruled the Islamic world for five centuries with Islām. From the land of Afghanistan emerged Maḥmūd al-Ghaznawī, who ruled India and destroyed Somnath. From it emerged Aḥmad Shāh Bābā, who ruled eastern Iran, Afghanistan, and India."

So, will the change begin from Palestine and the blessed land (Bilād al-Shām)? Or will it begin from Khorasan (Afghanistan)? This is in the knowledge of the All-Knowing, the Wise.

The torn and tormented West has cries of distress, and its remaining finger above the water's surface before the imminent drowning beseeches the East to come forward with its religion to save it.

The Russian novelist Solzhenitsyn says: "The only way towards correcting the deviated materialistic path of contemporary Western man is for man to return to faith in a power that dominates human destiny, which defines for him his moral and social values and responsibilities, as well as faith in the existence of high, objective moral values that are comprehensive for all humans, and which transcend all considerations of individual freedom that knows no bounds."

Do you not see with me that Solzhenitsyn is indicating to us that we should present him with this divine Sharī'ah that will save him, even against his will, and drag him to happiness, whether he likes it or not?

And here is the French thinker DéPaquitier, nominating Islām as the sole savior of humanity, saying: "The West has never known Islām. Since the advent of Islām, the West has adopted a hostile stance towards it and has not ceased to slander and denounce it to find justifications for fighting it. This distortion has resulted in crude notions about Islām becoming entrenched in the Western mentality. There is no doubt that Islām is the monotheism (Tawhīd) that the contemporary world needs to rid itself of the labyrinths of contemporary materialistic civilization, which, if it continues, must end in the destruction of man." (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 765).

How Today Resembles Yesterday:

The religion of Allāh is being fought in its own lands, and battles are waged against it known to the common and the elite. The callers to Allāh are displaced, imprisoned, killed, and shackled by their own kinsmen who speak their language and are of their own skin.

But the West fears the future of this religion – the West in both its Crusader and Eastern atheistic parts. Add to this the terrifying fear from which the limbs of global Zionism tremble due to the Islamic current in the region. It warns, cautions, screams, and plans to confront the approaching Islamic tide.

Ben-Gurion says: "We do not fear the socialisms, nationalisms, or monarchies in the region. We only fear Islām, this giant that has slept for a long time and has begun to stir in the region. I fear that a new Muḥammad will appear in the region."

Gibb says in his book Whither Islām?: "Islamic movements usually develop with astonishing, amazing speed. They erupt suddenly before observers discern from their signs anything that would cause them to be suspicious of their matter. Islamic movements lack nothing but leadership and the appearance of a Saladin." (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 767).

Factual Glad Tidings in Real Life:

The latter half of the twentieth century is characterized by a humble, devout return to Allāh. A return of souls thirsting for the irrigation of this religion, a return of those who despaired of all earthly systems, for man has become desperate with all human experiments.

Capitalism with its democracy has failed, liberalism with its branches has collapsed. Man has disbelieved in all that Western philosophers have presented. Nature could not fill the void left by the religion of the Church after it was met with stubbornness and hostility. Marx did not succeed in solving the riddle of man, nor did he satisfy his hunger to know his secrets, intricacies, and depths.

All systems have fallen because they clashed with human nature.

Man has disbelieved in philosophy and its philosophers, in opinions and their thinkers. Western and Eastern man has lost any goal to which he can cling in life. Humans no longer have a higher ideal to which they can adhere and for which they can strive. The Westerner no longer repeats "O Allāh" on his tongue during his crises and calamities, nor does he resort to a god, a church, or Christ, so misery has accumulated in his heart.

Hence, this bewildered, desperate, anxious man who has no goal, does not know why he lives. As came in a survey in America in response to the question: "What is your goal in life?" 80% answered: "I don't know." 20% said: "To accumulate wealth."

From here, thinkers in the West began to call for a return to religion. A survey by the Italian Communist Party showed that 70% of them frequent the church.

The communist who denied Allāh and religions, his suppressed feelings and crushed innate nature, overwhelmed by arrogance and stubbornness, forced him to return to the church to repeat the hymns after the priest. Pope John Paul II visited his birthplace, Poland, in June 1979, which had been ruled by communism for over thirty years. Western newspapers wrote: "The Nine Days That Shook the World." The odyssey he undertook over nine days was no longer just an exciting chapter in human history, but became the greatest confrontation in the modern crisis between atheist forces and overwhelming feelings of faith.

An elderly Catholic woman in Warsaw, Poland, says: "We have been a Catholic nation for a thousand years, and we will remain so forever."

The yearning for Allāh is ingrained in the depths of human nature; tools of terror or means of temptation will not erase it. Resorting to the Creator is the disposition (ṣibghah) upon which Allāh created people, His innate nature (fiṭrah) upon which He created people. There is no altering the creation of Allāh.

As for the Eastern world, which was ruled by Islām and whose children were planned to remain distant from Allāh and His religion, and for whom it was designed that they disbelieve in all unseen thought, especially the educated among them – as the West thought it would produce secular, hedonistic, amoral generations, to the extent that Zwemer boasted at the beginning of the World Missionary Conference in Jerusalem in 1933, saying:

"Your mission is to remove the Muslim from Islām so that he becomes a creature with no connection to Allāh, and consequently, no connection to the morality upon which nations depend for their lives. You have prepared youth in the lands of Islām who do not know the connection to Allāh, nor do they want to know it. You have removed the Muslim from Islām, and consequently, the Islamic youth emerged according to what colonialism wanted for them: not concerned with great matters, loving comfort and laziness, and not directing their concern in the world except towards desires. If they learn, it is for desires; if they accumulate wealth, it is for desires; and if they attain the highest positions, it is in the pursuit of desires that they generously spend what they value most."

Zwemer says: "When colonial policy, since 1882, eliminated educational programs in primary schools, it removed the Qur'ān from them, then the history of Islām. Thus, it produced a generation that is neither Muslim, nor Christian, nor Jewish; a disturbed generation, materialistic in its goals, not believing in any creed, and not recognizing any sanctity for religion or homeland."

Hamilton Gibb, the English Orientalist, said in his book Whither Islām? in 1932: "The Islamic world will, within a short period, become irreligious in all aspects of its life."

This is what the West expected from future generations. They returned, rubbing their hands in joy, when they saw groups of graduates from their universities who cared nothing for religion, nor were concerned with morality or values. But they plot, and Allāh plots. {And they plot, and Allāh plots. And Allāh is the best of plotters.} (Al-Anfāl:30).

{And they plotted a plot, and We plotted a plot, while they perceived not. Then look how was the outcome of their plot - that We destroyed them and their people, all of them.} (An-Naml:50-51).

They spent their wealth, perfected their plans, and devised their schemes to produce an irreligious – secular – generation. Its masters expected that the crushing of Islām in the region would be at its hands. They established universities, imposed mixing of sexes, excluded the truthful – bearers of values and morals – from all sensitive positions, and brought close to them the advocates of permissiveness, atheism, secularism, and corruption, appointing them as judges and masters. They created halos around them and inflated dwarfs until they became giants in the eyes of the rabble and common folk. But did they achieve what they wanted? Was Islām completely excluded from the life of the individual, family, and society? Yes, they reaped some of the bitter fruits of their arduous efforts, but only for a time. {Indeed, those who disbelieve spend their wealth to avert [people] from the way of Allāh. So they will spend it; then it will be for them a [source of] regret; then they will be overcome. And those who have disbelieved - unto Hell they will be gathered.} (Al-Anfāl:36).

The schools they planned for have returned to pushing throngs towards Allāh. The generation has returned, repentant, humble, devoted, and sincere to its Lord.

The universities, whose curricula they diligently supervised and thought would be centers of destruction, have come to present models of sincere, committed youth who sacrifice everything for their creed and religion.

The universities have become like Pharaoh's court, where Moses (peace be upon him) was raised to demolish Pharaoh's throne with his own hands and pull the rug from under his feet.

The magic was nullified, and the magicians fell down in prostration, saying, "We believe in the Lord of Aaron and Moses." And they said to Pharaoh after he threatened them with death: {They said, "Never will we prefer you over what has come to us of clear proofs and [over] He who created us. So decree whatever you are to decree. You can only decree for this worldly life."} (Ṭāhā:72).

The magic of Western civilization no longer deceives the eyes or captivates the minds. The eyes of the generation have opened to the light of Islām, and their insights have opened to accept the truth. The magic was nullified, and the falsehood became clear, after the truth emerged and its light shone upon hearts and souls.

Wherever you turn now on the globe, you find a return to Allāh, and souls thirsting for religion, seeking to find shade in its shelter after being exhausted by the scorching midday heat and weary from long wandering in a state of confusion.

As for the East, which was a land of Islām, judged by its Sharī'ah, and then gradually distanced from its religion through inducement and intimidation, you now find souls determined to follow the path of Allāh, no matter how high the price, as long as these souls have applauded the materialistic Western civilization that has gone bankrupt. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-ʿIzām, vol. 1, p. 770).

I was in Cairo during my doctoral studies in 1971. At Cairo University – which had about one hundred and twenty thousand students – there was only one female student wearing Islamic dress. Today, after a few years, we see wonders at the same university, as the number of those wearing Islamic dress exceeds 15,000 girls. Among them are groups, numbering in the thousands, who wear the niqāb – meaning they cover their faces. You see similar numbers at Alexandria University, and if you go to Assiut University, Minya, and so on throughout the Arab and Islamic world, you find youth searching for their heritage and religion, seeking the path to their Lord.

The Islamic book is the most popular book in the markets. Therefore, printing press owners – even Christian ones – have turned to it. It was common talk among booksellers in Beirut and elsewhere that if one of them was on the verge of bankruptcy, his colleagues would advise him, saying: "Print a quantity of Sayyid Quṭb's In the Shade of the Qur'ān."

The Islamic book has swept the market, and books of cheap literature and licentious poetry have become unsalable. Makkah al-Mukarramah has truly become the qiblah (direction) of the youth – apart from prayer. Their trips, excursions, and spending official holidays consist of performing 'umrah (minor pilgrimage) to the Ancient House, supplicating at the Black Stone and the Multazam, and visiting the Prophet's Mosque and the Prophet's grave (peace be upon him). (Al-Dhakā'ir al-'Izām, vol. 1, p. 770).

Likewise, there is a great shift from nationalist, secular, and communist parties to the Islamic movement, as is happening now in the occupied territories. Wherever time finds you – noon or afternoon – in the corridors of any college in the universities or any hospital, the sound of the adhān (call to prayer) proclaiming "Allāhu Akbar" (Allāh is Greater) will reach your ears.

Islamic thought and the Islamic voice have become the topic of intellectual forums in the East and West. Those in positions of authority and organizations in the Islamic world are trying to clothe themselves in the garb of Islām, seeking points of similarity between their reality and Islamic life.

Islamic manifestations, Islamic rituals, Islamic life – in joys and sorrows, the ‘aqīqah (sacrifice for a newborn), the beard, separating women from men in lecture halls.

Refraining from offering cigarettes at funerals and celebrations, and shunning engagement rings, especially gold ones.

Investigating the lawful and unlawful in imported canned foods, slaughtering methods, sweets, pastries, soap, frozen meats, and refreshments.

Scrutinizing foods and drinks for the absence of pork fat and alcohol. The spread of Qur’ān tapes and Islamic seminars have become social phenomena.

Mosques are filled with youth, trips are organized for Islamic missionary work, and people are called to the Qur’ān and Sunnah.

Pride in Islamic thought, and the transition of youth committed to their religion from a defensive role to a challenging one, and moving Islamic thought from a stage of bashfulness to a stage of prominence and pride.

Those who used to write about Islām portrayed it as if it were accused in the dock, defending it, and justifying issues like divorce, polygamy, and Jihād. For them, Jihād was defensive – meaning, defense of the borders of the Arabian Peninsula and its surroundings.

The confrontation of this religion with the People of the Book was treated as if it were a historical issue that passed and ended. Do you not see now that Islām has begun to rub Crusaderism in the mud? Yes, Muslims now take pride in declaring that Jihād was legislated to protect the call and spread it to all parts of the earth to save humanity from the worship of servants to the worship of Allāh, from the narrowness of this world to the vastness of this world and the Hereafter, and from the injustice of religions to the justice of Islām.

And Jihād continues until the Day of Resurrection; neither the injustice of a tyrant nor the justice of a just ruler can abolish it. You see the truth of this throughout the Islamic East. Muslims used to seek points of similarity between Islām and contemporary systems, bestowing upon Islām a new name every day, a new color, and dyeing it with a faded hue that quickly disappears. For a period, they called Islām "democratic," and at another, they called it "socialist." Indeed, during the Hitlerite invasion of the world, they clung to some points in Nazism to color Islām with them. But now, Muslim youth present Islām as a solution to the problems and issues of the contemporary world. The youth have become certain of the collapse of Western systems, starting with capitalism and democracy, and ending with socialism and communism. (Al-Dhakā'ir al-‘Izām, vol. 1, p. 771).

End of the quotation from our Shaykh, the martyr, may Allāh have mercy on him.

The Seal of Musk

We conclude this book with the seal of musk.

We include herein a selection of excerpts from what has been reported in the most important books of the Sunnah concerning Prophetic traditions about the conditions of people in the End Times, which has cast its shadow upon us, its events, and what will occur therein. Also included are reports of great battles and tribulations with the enemies of this ummah, especially the great battles with the Romans and the Jews. And reports concerning the emergence of al-Mahdī to fill the earth with equity and justice after it had been filled with oppression and tyranny, and the portents that precede him, and the events that accompany and follow him. Also included are traditions concerning the signs of the Hour, and what precedes them, such as the emergence of al-Dajjāl, the descent of ʿĪsā ibn Maryam (Jesus, son of Mary), peace be upon him, and the emergence of Yaʿjūj and Maʿjūj. Then the final signs of the Hour, such as the emergence of the Beast, then the rising of the sun from its place of setting, then the Hour. We ask Allāh for a good ending in this world and the Hereafter.

For the sake of benefiting well from these selections, I preface them with the following important observations and notes:

1. The selections have been arranged such that the order begins with the authentic from the books of Sunnah: al-Bukhārī, then Muslim, then the remaining six books, then other sources – may Allāh have mercy on their authors. If a Ḥadīth is repeated in the sources, I have contented myself with the one reported in the most authentic source. And Allāh knows best.
2. I have transmitted the text of the traditions, mentioning only their narrator from the Prophet (peace be upon him), without citing the chain of narration, for brevity. Whoever wishes may refer to the sources.
3. It is known that the minority of what has been reported in the traditions concerning Ḥadīth of great battles, tribulations, and signs of the Hour, from the total reported, are of the rank of authentic (ṣaḥīḥ) and good (ḥasan) Ḥadīth. The majority of them are from Ḥadīth whose authenticity has been questioned, or are weak Ḥadīth. I have included them for general interest, especially those that informed of conditions that have occurred, or whose portents our conditions indicate the possibility of their occurrence, for general interest on the authority of their narrators. Whoever wishes to scrutinize these Ḥadīth may refer them to specialists in Ḥadīth sciences.
4. There are traditions that speak of details and signs whose time – and Allāh knows best – is approaching, such as the Ḥadīth about the emergence of the Black Banners, al-Mahdī, the great battles with the Romans, and the fighting of the Jews, and the signs that precede and accompany them. I have included them so that those interested may be aware of them if they occur. There are many Ḥadīth about the signs of the Hour that were classified as weak according to the rules of Ḥadīth science, but their authenticity was proven by the occurrence of what they foretold. So, not every weak Ḥadīth is unproven in its attribution to the Prophet (peace be upon him), and not every accused narrator has failed to narrate some authentic Ḥadīth.

5. There are many Ḥadīth in which the Prophet (peace be upon him) foretold events that would happen, and they have indeed happened, such as the news of the great tribulation, and some events that followed concerning states, kingdoms, and incidents, like signs of certain individuals or kings and their conditions. Some events like the plague of ‘Amwās, the conquests of the Romans and Persians, etc., the fighting of people with faces like hammered shields from among the Turks, and news of the Tatar invasion. Some signs like the news of fire emerging from a volcano in the Ḥijāz, the light of which was seen from Buṣrā in Syria (which occurred in 654 AH and was chronicled by scholars), etc. For brevity, I have not included those traditions whose news has already occurred – despite their beauty – as they are among the miracles of prophethood and strengthen faith. I have contented myself with tracing what we anticipate occurring, and Allāh Almighty knows best about the authenticity of the reports and the time of their occurrence if they are authentic.
6. What I do not doubt in conclusion – and Allāh knows best – is that we have entered the time of great battles and tribulations, and the portents of many of those reported events. This gives knowledge of these traditions great importance, to seek guidance from his (peace be upon him) example, and to be keen on salvation. And to join the group of strangers holding fast to their religion, manifest upon the truth, unharmed by those who forsake them or oppose them, until the command of Allāh comes while they are upon what pleases Him. And to be patient with what the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) informed about their conditions, their outcome, what they will encounter, and what Allāh has prepared for them as a reward. May Allāh make us and you among them by His grace, favor, and generosity. Indeed, He is All-Hearing, All-Responding.

I have categorized these selections – while preserving the presentation of what is reported in the Ṣaḥīḥs and Sunan in each chapter – to include the following chapters:

- (1) Corruption of conditions in the End Times.
- (2) Corruption of most scholars in the End Times.
- (3) The strangeness of the righteous in the End Times.
- (4) Signs of the Hour.
- (5) The emergence of al-Mahdī and his signs, news of the Black Banners, and the reign of al-Qaḥṭānī.
- (6) Great battles with the Romans.
- (7) The emergence of al-Dajjāl and the descent of ‘Īsā ibn Maryam (peace be upon him).
- (8) The emergence of Ya’jūj and Ma’jūj.

And now to those noble Ḥadīth and related news and traditions.

A Tour with Selections of Ḥadīth, Narrations, and Reports Regarding the Events of the End Times, Including Great Battles, Tribulations, and Signs of the Hour's Approach:

Imām Muslim narrated in his Ṣaḥīḥ from Shaqīq, from Ḥudhayfah, who said: "Then the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) stood among us in a place and left nothing that would occur in that place of his until the establishment of the Hour but he spoke of it. He who memorized it, memorized it, and he who forgot it, forgot it. My companions here know it. And indeed, something of it occurs which I had forgotten, then I see it and remember it, just as a man remembers the face of another man if he has been absent from him, then when he sees him, he recognizes him."

Ibn Ḥibbān narrated in his Ṣaḥīḥ from ‘Amr ibn Akhtab, who said: "Then the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) led us in the morning prayer, then he ascended the pulpit and delivered a sermon until noon approached. Then he descended and prayed, then he ascended the pulpit and delivered a sermon to us until afternoon approached. Then he descended and prayed, then he ascended the pulpit and delivered a sermon to us until the sun set. So he informed us of what had been and what is to be. The most knowledgeable among us is the one who memorized the most."

The Corruption of Conditions in the End Times and the Tribulation of Believers Therein

Al-Bukhārī:

- 6652 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, from the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: "Then time will draw close, knowledge will decrease, stinginess will be cast, tribulations will appear, and al-harj will increase." They asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, what is it?" He said, "Killing, killing."

- 1777 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) that the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, faith will retreat to Madīnah just as a snake retreats to its hole."

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim:

- 6673 - Narrated by Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, who said: "People used to ask the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) about good, and I used to ask him about evil for fear that it might overtake me. So I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, we were in a state of ignorance (jāhiliyyah) and evil, then Allāh brought us this good. Will there be any evil after this good?' He said, 'Yes.' I said, 'And will there be any good after that evil?' He said, 'Yes, but it will be tainted (dakhn).' I said, 'What is its taint?' He said, 'People who guide without my guidance; you will recognize some of their actions and disapprove of others.' I said, 'Will there be any evil after that good?' He said, 'Yes, callers at the gates of Hell. Whoever responds to them, they will throw him into it.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, describe them to us.' He said, 'They are of our own skin and speak our language.' I said, 'What do you command me to do if I live to see that?' He said, 'Adhere to the main body (jamā'ah) of Muslims and their leader (imām).' I said, 'What if they have no main body and no leader?' He said, 'Then keep away from all those factions, even if you have to bite onto the root of a tree until death overtakes you while you are in that state.'"
- 6675 - Zayd ibn Wahb narrated that Ḥudhayfah told us: "The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) told us two Ḥadīth. I have seen one of them, and I am awaiting the other. He told us that trustworthiness (amānah) descended into the core of men's hearts. Then they learned from the Qur'ān, then they learned from the Sunnah. And he told us about its removal. He said, 'A man will sleep a wink, and trustworthiness will be snatched from his heart, and its trace will remain like the trace of a speck. Then he will sleep another wink, and it will be snatched, and its trace will remain like the trace of a blister, like an ember you roll over your foot, and it swells, and you see it bulging, but there is nothing in it.' People will conduct business, and hardly anyone will fulfill the trust. It will be said, 'Among such-and-such a tribe, there is an honest man.' And it will be said of a man, 'How intelligent he is, how charming he is, how firm he is!' yet there will not be in his heart faith equal to a mustard seed. There was a time when I did not care with whom I dealt. If he was a Muslim, his Islām would make him deal honestly with me. If he was a Christian, his governor would make him deal honestly with me. But today, I would not deal except with so-and-so and so-and-so."

- 6696 - Narrated by Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, who said: "The hypocrites today are worse than they were in the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him). At that time, they used to conceal (their hypocrisy), but today they display it openly."
- 6697 - Narrated by Ḥudhayfah, who said: "Hypocrisy was only in the time of the Prophet (peace be upon him)... As for today, it is unbelief after faith."
- 6699 - Saʿīd ibn al-Musayyib said that Abū Hurayrah (may Allāh be pleased with him) informed him that the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The Hour will not be established until the buttocks of the women of Daws wiggle around Dhū al-Khalaṣah." Dhū al-Khalaṣah was the idol of Daws which they used to worship in the Jāhiliyyah.
- 2889 - Narrated by Abū Asmā' from Thawbān, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, Allāh gathered the earth for me, and I saw its easts and its wests. And indeed, the dominion of my ummah will reach what was gathered for me from it. And I was given the two treasures, the red and the white. And I asked my Lord for my ummah that He not destroy it by a widespread famine, and that He not impose upon them an enemy from outside themselves who would wipe them out. And my Lord said, 'O Muḥammad, when I decree a matter, it is not repelled. And I have granted for your ummah that I will not destroy them by a widespread famine, and that I will not impose upon them an enemy from outside themselves who would wipe them out, even if all those in its regions – or he said, between its regions – gather against them, until some of them destroy others, and some of them take others captive.'"

- 2905 - Narrated by Nāfi' from Ibn 'Umar that he heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), while facing the East, say: "Behold, indeed the tribulation is from here! Behold, indeed the tribulation is from here, from where the horn of Satan rises!"
- 2905 - Sālim ibn 'Abdullāh ibn 'Umar said: "O people of Iraq, how you ask about minor matters yet commit major ones! I heard my father, 'Abdullāh ibn 'Umar, say: I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say, 'Indeed, the tribulation will come from here' – and he gestured with his hand towards the East – 'from where the two horns of Satan rise. And you will be striking each other's necks. Indeed, Moses killed the one he killed from Pharaoh's people by mistake, so Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, said to him: {And you killed a man, so We saved you from distress, and We tried you with a [severe] trial}.'"
- Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, this world will not pass away until a man passes by a grave, rolls over it, and says, 'I wish I were in the place of the occupant of this grave,' and it is not due to religion but due to tribulation."
- 2908 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, this world will not pass away until a day comes upon people when the killer will not know why he killed, nor the killed why he was killed." It was said, "How will that be?" He said, "Al-Harj (chaos/killing). The killer and the killed will be in the Fire."

- 2948 - Mu'āwiyah ibn Qurrah traced it back to Ma'qil ibn Yasār, who traced it back to the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: "Worship during al-harj (chaos/killing) is like emigrating to me."

Sunan al-Tirmidhī:

- 2168 - Narrated by Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, who said: "O people, you recite this verse: {O you who have believed, upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves. Those who have gone astray will not harm you when you have been guided}. And I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say, 'Indeed, if people see an oppressor and do not take him by his hands (i.e., stop him), Allāh is about to encompass them all with a punishment from Him.'"
- 2177 - Narrated by a man from Ṭāwūs from Umm Mālik al-Bahziyyah, who said: "The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) mentioned a tribulation and described its nearness. She said, I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, who are the best of people during it?' He said, 'A man with his livestock, fulfilling its due right and worshipping his Lord, and a man holding the reins of his horse, terrifying the enemy and being terrified by them.'"
- 2188 - Narrated by 'Abdullāh ibn Mas'ūd, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "There will emerge in the End Times a people young in age, foolish in mind, reciting the Qur'ān, but it will not go beyond their throats. They will speak the words of the best of creation, yet they will pass out of the religion as an arrow passes out of the prey."

Sunan Abī Dāwūd:

- 4242 - Narrated by 'Umayr ibn Hānī' al-'Ansī, who said he heard 'Abdullāh ibn 'Umar say: "We were sitting with the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), and he mentioned tribulations, speaking extensively about them, until he mentioned the tribulation of the saddlebags (fitnat al-aḥlās). A questioner asked, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what is the tribulation of the saddlebags?' He said, 'It is flight and war. Then the tribulation of ease (fitnat al-sarrā'), its smoke will be from under the feet of a man from my household who claims to be from me but is not from me; indeed, my allies are the pious. Then people will unite under a man like a hip on a rib (i.e., an unstable agreement). Then the overwhelming tribulation (fitnat al-duhaymā') which will not leave anyone of this ummah without striking him a blow. When it is said to have ended, it will extend. A man will be a believer in the morning and an unbeliever in the evening, until people are divided into two encampments: an encampment of faith with no hypocrisy in it, and an encampment of hypocrisy with no faith in it. When that happens, then await al-Dajjāl from that day or the next."
- 4244 - Narrated by Naṣr ibn 'Āṣim from Subay' ibn Khālīd, who said: "I came to Kūfah at a time when good things were being imported from Tustar, bringing mules from there. I entered the mosque and saw a group of men, and a man sitting whom you would recognize, if you saw him, as being from the men of Ḥijāz. I said, 'Who is this?' The people scowled at me and said, 'Do you not know this man? This is Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, the companion of the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him).' Ḥudhayfah then said, 'People used to ask the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) about good, and I used to ask him about evil.' The people stared at him intently. He said, 'I see what you disapprove of. I said, "O Messenger of Allāh, this good that Allāh has given us, will there be evil after it as there was before it?" He said, "Yes." I said, "What is the protection from that?" He said, "The sword." I said, "O Messenger of Allāh, then what will happen?" He said, "If Allāh has a caliph on earth who strikes your back and takes your wealth, obey him. Otherwise, die while biting onto the stump of a tree." I said, "Then what?" He said, "Then al-Dajjāl will emerge, with him a river and a fire. Whoever falls into his fire, his reward is assured and his burden removed. And whoever falls into his river, his burden is assured and his reward removed." I said, "Then what?" He said, "Then it is the establishment of the Hour.""

- 4252 - Narrated by Abū Asmā' from Thawbān, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, Allāh gathered the earth for me – or he said, my Lord gathered the earth for me – and I saw its easts and its wests. And indeed, the dominion of my ummah will reach what was gathered for me from it. And I was given the two treasures, the red and the white. And I asked my Lord for my ummah that He not destroy it by a widespread famine, and that He not impose upon them an enemy from outside themselves who would wipe them out. And my Lord said to me, 'O Muḥammad, when I decree a matter, it is not repelled. And I will not destroy them by a widespread famine, nor will I impose upon them an enemy from outside themselves who would wipe them out, even if all those from between its regions – or he said, its regions – gather against them, until some of them destroy others, and until some of them take others captive. And I only fear for my ummah the misguided leaders. And when the sword is placed in my ummah, it will not be lifted from them until the Day of Resurrection. And the Hour will not be established until tribes from my ummah join the polytheists, and until tribes from my ummah worship idols. And indeed, there will be in my ummah thirty liars, each of them claiming to be a prophet, but I am the seal of the Prophets; there is no prophet after me. And a group of my ummah will continue upon the truth.' Ibn 'Īsā said: 'Manifest, unharmed by those who oppose them, until the command of Allāh comes.'"

- 4256 - Narrated by ‘Uthmān al-Shahḥām, who said Muslim ibn Abī Bakrah narrated to me from his father, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, there will be a tribulation in which the one lying down will be better than the one sitting, and the one sitting better, and the one standing better than the one walking, and the one walking better than the one hastening." He said, "O Messenger of Allāh, what do you command me?" He said, "Whoever has camels, let him join his camels. Whoever has sheep, let him join his sheep. Whoever has land, let him join his land." He said, "What about one who has none of these?" He said, "Let him take his sword and strike its edge against a rock, then let him escape as much as he can."

Sunan Ibn Mājah:

- 3932 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr, who said: "I saw the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) circumambulating the Ka‘bah and saying, 'How good you are and how good is your fragrance! How great you are and how great is your sanctity! By Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad, the sanctity of a believer is greater in the sight of Allāh than your sanctity – his wealth, his blood, and that we should not think ill of him.'"
- 3948 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Whoever fights under a blind banner, calling to tribalism (‘aṣabiyyah) or getting angry for tribalism, his death is a death of Jāhiliyyah."
- 3949 - Narrated by ‘Abbād ibn Kathīr al-Shāmī from a woman among them called Fusaylah, who said she heard her father say: "I asked the Prophet (peace be upon him), 'O Messenger of Allāh, is it part of tribalism (‘aṣabiyyah) for a man to love his people?' He said, 'No, but it is part of tribalism for a man to support his people in oppression.'"

- 3961 - Narrated by Abū Mūsā al-Ash‘arī, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, before the Hour there will be tribulations like patches of dark night, in which a man will be a believer in the morning and an unbeliever in the evening, or a believer in the evening and an unbeliever in the morning. The one sitting during them will be better, and the one standing during them will be better than the one walking, and the one walking during them will be better than the one hastening. So break your bows, cut your bowstrings, and strike your swords against stones. If anyone enters upon one of you, let him be like the better of Adam's two sons."
- 3967 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "There will be a tribulation that will decimate the Arabs; its slain will be in the Fire. The tongue during it will be more severe than the strike of a sword."
- 3969 - Narrated by ‘Alqamah ibn Waqqāṣ, who said: "A man of high standing passed by him, and ‘Alqamah said to him, 'You have kinship and you have a right. I have seen you visiting these rulers and speaking in their presence whatever Allāh willed you to speak. I heard Bilāl ibn al-Ḥārith al-Muzanī, the companion of the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), say that the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said, 'Indeed, one of you may speak a word pleasing to Allāh, not thinking it will reach what it reaches, and Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will decree His pleasure for him because of it until the Day of Resurrection. And indeed, one of you may speak a word displeasing to Allāh, not thinking it will reach what it reaches, and Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will decree His wrath upon him because of it until the day he meets Him.'" ‘Alqamah said, 'So watch out, woe to you, what you say and what you speak of, for many a word I have refrained from speaking because of what I heard from Bilāl ibn al-Ḥārith.'"

- 3973 - Narrated by Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, who said: "I was with the Prophet (peace be upon him) on a journey. One morning, I was close to him as we were traveling, and I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, tell me of an action that will admit me to Paradise and distance me from the Fire.' He said, 'You have asked about something great, but it is easy for whom Allāh makes it easy. Worship Allāh, associating nothing with Him; establish prayer; give zakāh; fast Ramaḍān; and perform Ḥajj to the House.' Then he said, 'Shall I not guide you to the gates of goodness? Fasting is a shield, charity extinguishes sin as water extinguishes fire, and a man's prayer in the middle of the night.' Then he recited: {Their sides forsake their beds...} until he reached {...as a reward for what they used to do.} Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of the head of the matter, its pillar, and its peak?' [I said, 'Yes, O Messenger of Allāh.'] He said, 'Jihād.' Then he said, 'Shall I not inform you of what controls all of that?' I said, 'Yes.' He took hold of his tongue and said, 'Restrain this.' I said, 'O Prophet of Allāh, will we be held accountable for what we say?' He said, 'May your mother be bereaved of you, O Mu‘ādh! Does anything cause people to be thrown onto their faces in the Fire except the harvests of their tongues?'"
- 3977 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "The best livelihood for people is that of a man holding the reins of his horse in the way of Allāh, flying on its back whenever he hears a call to arms or a cry for help, flying towards it seeking death or martyrdom in its likely places. And a man with a small flock of sheep on a mountaintop or in the bottom of a valley, establishing prayer, giving zakāh, and worshipping his Lord until certainty (death) comes to him, having nothing to do with people except for good."

Islām Began as Something Strange

- 3986 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Islām began as something strange and will return to being strange, so glad tidings to the strangers."
- 3988 - Narrated by Abū al-Aḥwaṣ from ‘Abdullāh, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, Islām began as something strange and will return to being strange, so glad tidings to the strangers." It was asked, "And who are the strangers?" He said, "Those who are estranged from their tribes."

Those for Whom Safety from Tribulations is Hoped

- 3989 - Narrated by Zayd ibn Aslam from his father, from ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb: "That he went out one day to the mosque of the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) and found Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal sitting at the grave of the Prophet (peace be upon him), weeping. He asked, 'What makes you weep?' He said, 'Something I heard from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) makes me weep. I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say, "Indeed, the slightest showing off (riyā‘) is shirk (polytheism). And whoever shows enmity to a friend of Allāh has declared war against Allāh. Indeed, Allāh loves the righteous, the pious, the obscure – those who, if absent, are not missed, and if present, are not invited nor recognized. Their hearts are lamps of guidance; they emerge from every dark, dusty place."'"
- 3990 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Umar, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "People are like a hundred camels, among which you can hardly find a single riding beast."

The Division of Nations

- 3992 - Narrated by ‘Awf ibn Mālik, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The Jews split into seventy-one sects, one of which is in Paradise and seventy are in the Fire. The Christians split into seventy-two sects, seventy-one of which are in the Fire and one is in Paradise. By Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad, my ummah will split into seventy-three sects, one of which is in Paradise and seventy-two are in the Fire." It was asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, who are they?" He said, "The main body (al-jamā'ah)."

- 4001 - Narrated by ‘Ā’ishah, who said: "While the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) was sitting in the mosque, a woman from Muzaynah entered, strutting in her adornments in the mosque. The Prophet (peace be upon him) said, 'O people, forbid your women from wearing adornments and strutting in the mosque, for the Children of Israel were not cursed until their women wore adornments and strutted in the mosques.'"
- 4019 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Umar, who said: "The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) approached us and said, 'O company of Muhājirīn (emigrants), there are five things which, if you are afflicted with them – and I seek refuge with Allāh that you should encounter them: Immorality never appears openly among a people to the extent that they publicize it, except that plague and diseases that were not known among their ancestors who passed away will spread among them. They do not cheat in weights and measures except that they are afflicted with years of drought, severity of provisions, and the tyranny of their rulers over them. They do not withhold the zakāh of their wealth except that rain is withheld from the sky, and were it not for the animals, it would not rain. They do not break the covenant of Allāh and the covenant of His Messenger except that Allāh will set upon them an enemy from other than themselves who will take some of what is in their hands. And as long as their leaders do not rule by the Book of Allāh and choose from what Allāh has revealed, Allāh will cause their conflict to be among themselves.'"

- 4020 - Narrated by Abū Mālik al-Ash‘arī, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "People from my ummah will certainly drink wine, calling it by other names. Musical instruments and female singers will play over their heads. Allāh will cause the earth to swallow them and will transform some of them into apes and pigs."
- 4021 - Narrated by al-Barā’ ibn ‘Āzib, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Then Allāh will curse them, and the cursers will curse them." He said, "(Meaning) the creatures of the earth."
- 4049 - Narrated by Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Islām will wear out as the embroidery of a garment wears out, until it is not known what fasting, prayer, ritual, or charity is. The Book of Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will be taken away in one night, so that not a single verse of it will remain on earth. And groups of people will remain, the old man and the old woman, saying, 'We found our fathers upon this word: "Lā ilāha illAllāh" (There is no god but Allāh), so we say it." Ṣilah said to him, 'What good will "Lā ilāha illAllāh" do them when they do not know what prayer, fasting, ritual, or charity is?' Ḥudhayfah turned away from him. Then he repeated it to him three times, and each time Ḥudhayfah turned away from him. Then he turned to him on the third time and said, 'O Ṣilah, it will save them from the Fire' – three times."
- 4054 - Narrated by Ibn ‘Umar that the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: "Indeed, when Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, intends to destroy a servant, He removes modesty from him. When modesty is removed from him, you will not find him except hateful and hated. When you do not find him except hateful and hated, trustworthiness is removed from him. When trustworthiness is removed from him, you will not find him except treacherous and betraying. When you do not find him except treacherous and betraying, mercy is removed from him."

When mercy is removed from him, you will not find him except accursed and damned. When you do not find him except accursed and damned, the bond of Islām is removed from him."

- 4058 - Narrated by Anas ibn Mālik from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), who said: "My ummah will be in five strata. For forty years, they will be people of righteousness and piety. Then those who follow them, up to one hundred and twenty years, will be people of mutual mercy and connection. Then those who follow them, up to one hundred and sixty years, will be people of mutual turning away and severing ties. Then al-harj, al-harj (chaos, killing). Salvation, salvation!"

Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Ḥibbān:

- 6703 - Narrated by Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī that the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "You will surely follow the ways of those who came before you, span by span, and cubit by cubit, to the extent that if they were to enter a lizard's hole, you would enter it." We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, (do you mean) the Jews and the Christians?" The Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said, "Who else?"
- 6704 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "Hasten to do good deeds before tribulations come like patches of dark night, in which a man will be a believer in the morning and an unbeliever in the evening, or an unbeliever in the morning and a believer in the evening, selling his religion for a worldly gain."
- 6706 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him), who said: "If you knew what I know, you would laugh little and weep much. Hypocrisy will appear, trustworthiness will be lifted, mercy will be withdrawn, and the trustworthy will be accused. The dark calamity (al-sharaf al-jawn) has descended upon you." They asked, "What is the dark calamity, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Tribulations like patches of dark night."

- 6715 - Narrated by Abū Umāmah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The bonds of Islām will be undone one by one. Whenever a bond is undone, people will cling to the one that follows it. The first of them to be undone will be the ruling (al-ḥukm), and the last of them will be the prayer (al-ṣalāh)."
- 6726 - Narrated by Abū Hurayrah, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "A time will surely come when a man will not care how he acquires wealth, whether by lawful or unlawful means."
- 6729 - Narrated by ‘Imrān ibn Ḥuṣayn, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The best of my ummah is the generation in which I was sent, then those who follow them. Then Allāh knows best whether he mentioned the third or not. Then a people will arise who will bear witness without being asked to bear witness, make vows but not fulfill them, betray trusts and not be trusted, and obesity will spread among them."
- 6754 - Abū ‘Āmir and Abū Mālik al-Ash‘arī heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say: "There will certainly be among my ummah people who will consider lawful silk, wine, and musical instruments."
- 6760 - Narrated by Anas ibn Mālik, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The Hour will not be established until people boast about (the adornment of) mosques." Mention of the report that among the signs of the End Times is people engaging in worldly talk in their mosques.
- 6761 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "There will be in the End Times a people whose talk in their mosques will be about worldly matters; Allāh has no need of them."

- 6767 - Narrated by ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr, who said the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) said: "The Hour will not be established until you copulate in the road like donkeys copulate." I said, "Will that indeed happen?" He said, "Yes, it will certainly happen."
- 6768 - Narrated by Anas ibn Mālīk, who said one day: "Shall I not narrate to you a Ḥadīth that no one after me will narrate to you, which I heard from the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him)? I heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say: 'The Hour will not be established – or among the conditions of the Hour is – that knowledge will be lifted, ignorance will increase, wine will be drunk, adultery will appear, men will decrease, and women will increase until for fifty women there will be one guardian.'"

Mawārid al-Zam’ān ilā Zawā’id Ibn Ḥibbān by al-Haythamī:

- 1836 - Narrated by Jābir from the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: "Indeed, Iblīs has despaired of being worshipped by those who pray, but (he strives) in sowing discord among them."
- 1842 - Narrated by Abū Sa’īd al-Khudrī from the Prophet (peace be upon him), who said: "Let not fear of people prevent any of you from speaking or uttering the truth if he sees it or knows it." Abū Sa’īd said, "Tribulation continued to afflict us until we reached a point where we would convey (the truth) in secret."
- 1845 - He heard Abū Sa’īd al-Khudrī mention that he heard the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) say: "Indeed, Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will question the servant on the Day of Resurrection, even saying to him, 'What prevented you, when you saw evil, from denouncing it?' If Allāh prompts a servant with his argument, he will say, 'O Lord, I trusted in You and feared people,' or 'I feared people and trusted in You.'"

Al-Mustadrak ‘alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn (Abū ‘Abdullāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī):

- 8294 - Narrated by Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, who said: "I indeed know the people of two religions from the ummah of Muḥammad (peace be upon him) who are in the Fire: a people who say, 'If our predecessors were misguided, what is the point of five prayers in a day and night? It is only two prayers, 'Aṣr (afternoon) and Fajr (dawn).'' And a people who say, 'Faith is merely words, even if one commits adultery and even if one kills.'" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Sheikhs (al-Bukhārī and Muslim), though they did not report it.
- 8301 - ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ (may Allāh be pleased with them both) said: "We were discussing the conquest of Constantinople and Rome. ‘Abdullāh ibn ‘Amr called for a chest and opened it, saying, 'We were with the Messenger of Allāh (peace be upon him) writing, when a man said, "Which of the two cities will be conquered first, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "The city of Heraclius," meaning the city of Constantinople."" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Sheikhs, though they did not report it.
- 8302 From Jābir ibn ‘Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Prophet ﷺ said to Ka‘b ibn ‘Ujrah: "May Allāh protect you, O Ka‘b, from the leadership of the foolish." He asked, "And what is the leadership of the foolish, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Leaders who will come after me, who will not be guided by my guidance nor follow my Sunnah. Whoever affirms their lies and aids them in their oppression, then those are not from me, and I am not from them, and they will not come to my Basin. And whoever does not affirm their lies nor aid them in their oppression, then those are from me, and I am from them, and they will come to my Basin. O Ka‘b ibn ‘Ujrah, fasting is a shield, charity extinguishes sin, and prayer is an offering," or he said, "a proof. O Ka‘b ibn ‘Ujrah, flesh that grows from ill-gotten gains will never enter Paradise; the Fire is more deserving of it. O Ka'b ibn 'Ujrah, people are of two types: one who sells himself and thereby frees it, or," he said, "destroys it." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim) did not narrate it.

- 8303 From 'Awf ibn Mālik al-Ashja'ī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "While we were with the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ during the expedition of Tabūk, and the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ was in a tent made of leather, I passed by and he heard my voice. He said, 'O 'Awf ibn Mālik, enter.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, all of me or part of me?' He said, 'Rather, all of you.' So I entered. He said, 'O 'Awf, count six things before the Hour.' I said, 'What are they, O Messenger of Allāh?' He said, 'The death of the Messenger of Allāh.' 'Awf wept. Then the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said, 'Say one.' I said, 'One.' Then he said, 'And the conquest of Jerusalem. Say two.' I said, 'Two.' He said, 'And a death that will occur in my ummah like the murrain of sheep. Say three.' I said, 'Three.' He said, 'And the world will be opened up for them until a man is given a hundred (dīnārs) and he is dissatisfied with it. Say four.' I said, 'Four.' 'And a tribulation that will not leave any Muslim household without entering it. Say five.' I said, 'Five.' 'And a truce between you and Banī al-Aṣfar (the Byzantines/Romans). They will come to you under eighty banners, each banner with twelve thousand men. Then they will betray you, (the period of treachery being as long as) the gestation period of a woman.' When it was the year of 'Amwās, they claimed that 'Awf ibn Mālik said to Mu'ādh ibn Jabal, 'The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ told me to count six things before the Hour. Three of them have occurred, and three remain.' Mu'ādh said, 'This has a duration, but five things have overshadowed you. Whoever witnesses any of them and is then able to die, let him die: that open cursing appears on the pulpits, the wealth of Allāh is given for falsehood and slander, blood is shed without right, ties of kinship are severed, and a servant wakes up not knowing if he is misguided or guided.'" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim), and they did not narrate it.

- 8308 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "A time will come upon you when no one will be saved except one who supplicates like a drowning person." This chain of narration is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8314 From ‘Amr ibn Wābiṣah al-Asadī from his father, he said: "I was in Kūfah in my house when I heard at the door of the house, 'Peace be upon you, may I enter?' I said, 'And upon you be peace, enter.' When he entered, it was ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him. I said, 'O Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, what time is this for a visit?' And that was in the heat of midday. He said, 'The day seemed long to me, so I thought of someone to talk to.' He began to narrate to me from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, and I narrated to him. Then he began to narrate to me and said, 'I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "There will be a tribulation in which the sleeper is better than the one lying down, the one lying down is better than the one sitting, the one sitting is better than the one standing, the one standing is better than the one walking, the one walking is better than the one riding, and the one riding is better than the one rushing." I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and when will that be?' He said, 'That will be during the days of al-Harj (turmoil), when a man will not trust his companion.' I said, 'What do you command me if I reach that time?' He said, 'Restrain yourself and your hand, and enter your house.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, what if someone enters my house?' He said, 'Then enter your inner room.' I said, 'What if someone enters my inner room?' He said, 'Then enter your mosque and do like this' – and he grasped his wrist with his right hand – 'and say, "My Lord is Allāh," until you die upon that.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8325 From ‘Awf ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'My ummah will split into seventy-odd sects, the greatest of them in tribulation being a people who measure matters by their opinion, thereby prohibiting the lawful and permitting the unlawful.'" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8327 ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "You are in a time when the one who speaks the truth is better than the silent, and the one who stands for it is better than the one who sits. And after you will come a time when the silent one will be better than the speaker, and the one who sits will be better than the one who stands." A man then said, "O Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, how can it be that an action which is guidance if adopted today, becomes misguidance if adopted after today?" He said, "You have indeed done it. Consider this by the example of two men who passed by a people committing sins. Both of them disapproved, but one of you remained silent and was safe, while the other spoke up, saying, 'You are doing such-and-such and such-and-such.' So they seized him and took him to their authority. He did not cease, or they did not cease with him, until he adopted their way and acted as they did." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8331 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "O people, tribulations have overshadowed you like patches of a dark night. O people, in them," or he said, "from them, will be the owner of sheep eating from the head of his flock, and a man from behind the path holding the reins of his horse, eating from his sword." This is a mawqūf narration (stopped at the Companion) with an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8332 From Subay‘ ibn Khālīd, he said: Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "People used to ask the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ about good, and I used to ask him about evil. I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, this good that Allāh has given us, will there be evil after it as there was before it?' He said, 'Yes.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, then what is the protection from that?' He said, 'The sword.' I said, 'And will there be any remnant for the sword?' He said, 'Yes.' I said, 'Then what?' He said, 'Then a truce upon underlying discord, a community upon division. If Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, has a caliph on that day, who strikes your back and takes your wealth, then listen and obey. Otherwise, die biting onto the stump of a tree.' I said, 'Then what?' He said, 'The Dajjāl will emerge, and with him a river and a fire. Whoever falls into his fire, his reward is secured and his burden removed. And whoever falls into his river, his burden is due and his reward removed.' I said, 'Then what?' He said, 'Then it is but the establishment of the Hour.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8333 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Indeed, for tribulation there are halts and resurgences. Whoever among you can die in its halts, let him do so." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8337 From Abū Ḥumayd, he heard Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, say that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "You will indeed be sifted just as dates are sifted from the basket. Your best will depart, and your worst will remain. So die, if you are able." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8343 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "You will not cease to be in good as long as you do not have rulers who do not see any right for you except when they wish." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs.

- 8344 ‘Abd Allāh ibn Rāfi‘, the freed slave of Umm Salamah, said he heard Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, say he heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "If your life is prolonged, you will soon see a people who go out in Allāh's displeasure and return in His curse, in their hands something like the tails of cows." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8345 From Abū Bakr ibn Abī Zuhayr al-Thaqafī from his father, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say in his sermon: 'O people, you will soon distinguish the people of Paradise from the people of the Fire,' or he said, 'your best from your worst.' A man from the people asked, 'By what means, O Messenger of Allāh?' He said, 'By good praise and bad praise. You are witnesses of some of you over others.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8346 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There will be men at the end of this ummah who ride on plush saddles (al-mayāthir) until they come to the doors of their mosques. Their women will be clothed yet naked, on their heads like the humps of lean Bactrian camels. Curse them, for they are cursed. If there were an ummah after you, their women would serve them as the women of the ummahs before you served you." I said to my father, "What are al-mayāthir?" He said, "Large, soft saddles." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8348 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he mentioned the tribulation and said: "A man will leave his house with his religion intact and return with none of it. He will approach a man who possesses no harm or benefit for him or for himself, and he will swear to him by Allāh, 'You are truly such-and-such and such-and-such.' He will return, having not fulfilled any of his need, and having incurred Allāh's anger upon himself." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8349 From Abū Salamah from Abū Hurayrah from the Prophet ﷺ, who said: "By Him Who sent me with the truth, this world will not end until they experience landslides, transformation, and pelting." They asked, "And when will that be, O Prophet of Allāh, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you?" He said, "When you see women riding saddles, female singers proliferate, false testimony is given, Muslims drink from the gold and silver vessels of the polytheists, and men are content with men and women with women. Then be on your guard and prepare." He gestured thus with his hand and covered his face.
- 8350 From 'Āṣim ibn Ḍamrah from 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Five tribulations have been decreed for this ummah: a general tribulation, then a specific tribulation, then a general tribulation, then a specific tribulation, then comes the blind, deaf, overwhelming tribulation in which people will become like cattle." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration.
- 8351 From Abū Thawr, he said: "I came to Ḥudhayfah and Ibn Mas'ūd while they were discussing the tribulation in the mosque. Ibn Mas'ūd said: 'I did not think it would regress without a cupping-glass of blood being shed in it. Indeed, a man will be a believer in the morning and a disbeliever by evening, or a disbeliever in the morning and a believer by evening. He fights in the tribulation today, and Allāh causes him to die tomorrow. His heart will be inverted, and his backside will be exposed.' Ḥudhayfah said, 'You have spoken the truth. Thus did the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ narrate to us about the tribulation." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration.

- 8352 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he says the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "A time will come upon people when a man will be given a choice between incapacity and debauchery. Whoever reaches that time, let him choose incapacity over debauchery." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8360 I heard Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī, may Allāh be pleased with him, say that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, before you are tribulations like patches of a dark night. A man will be a believer in the morning and a disbeliever by evening, and a believer by evening and a disbeliever by morning. The one sitting in it is better than the one standing, the one standing in it is better than the one walking, and the one walking in it is better than the one rushing towards it." They asked, "What do you command us, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Be the fixtures of your houses." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it. And so on.
- 8365 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: "A time will come upon people when they will gather in mosques, and there will not be a believer among them." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8371 From Sahl ibn Mu'ādh ibn Anas from his father, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The ummah will remain upon the Sharī'ah as long as three things do not appear among them: as long as knowledge is not taken from them, the offspring of wickedness do not proliferate among them, and al-saqqārūn do not appear among them." They asked, "And who are al-saqqārūn, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Evil people who will be at the end of time; their greeting among themselves when they meet will be mutual cursing." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8382 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn al-Ṣāmit, he said: "I wished that my family, after they had their dinner and their evening drink, would wake up dead in their beds." It was said, "O Abū Fulān, are you not wealthy?" He said, "Yes, but I heard Abū Dharr say, 'Soon, O my nephew, if you live for a short while, you will see a man envied for his light circumstances just as the father of ten men is envied today. And soon, if you live for a short while, you will see a man whom the ruler does not know, nor brings near, nor honors, envied just as the one whom the ruler knows, brings near, and honors is envied today. And soon, O my nephew, if you live for a short while, a funeral procession will pass in the market, and a man will raise his head and say, "Oh, would that I were on its bier!"'" I said, "Do you know what is wrong with them?" He said, "What was it?" I said, "That is before a momentous event." He said, "Indeed, momentous, momentous, momentous." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8384 From Thawbān, may Allāh be pleased with him, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "The Hour will not be established for my ummah until tribes from it join the polytheists, and until tribes from it worship idols."
- 8392 From Sulaym ibn Qays al-Ḥanẓalī, he said: ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, addressed us and said: "Indeed, what I fear most for you after me is that an innocent man among you will be taken and marked like a camel is marked, and his flesh flayed like its flesh is flayed, and it will be said, 'He is a sinner,' while he is not a sinner." ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, who was below the pulpit, said, "And when will that be, O Commander of the Faithful? And by what will the calamity intensify, partisanship appear, offspring be taken captive, and tribulations grind them as a mill grinds its dregs, and as fire grinds wood?" He (ʿUmar) said, "And when will that be, O ʿAlī?" He (ʿAlī) said, "When the jurist seeks knowledge for other than religion, the learner learns for other than action, and the world is sought with the deeds of the Hereafter." Abān said: And al-Ḥasan narrated to us from Abū Mūsā al-Ashʿarī, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: The Prophet ﷺ said: "I fear al-Harj for you." They said, "What is al-Harj, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Killing." They said, "More than we kill today? Indeed, we kill so-and-so many polytheists in a day." The Prophet ﷺ said, "It is not the killing of polytheists, but your killing one another." They said, "While the Book of Allāh is among us?" He said, "While the Book of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, is among you." They said, "And while we have our intellects?" He said, "Indeed, the intellects of the common people of that time will be snatched away, and worthless dregs of people will remain, thinking they are upon something, while they are upon nothing."

- 8424 From ʿAbd al-Raḥmān ibn Bashīr al-Anṣārī, he said: "A man came and called out to Ibn Masʿūd, who bent over him. He said, "O Abā ʿAbd al-Raḥmān, when will I go astray while I am knowledgeable?" He said, "When you have rulers whom, if you obey them, they will lead you into the Fire, and if you disobey them, they will kill you." This is a mawqūf narration (stopped at the Companion) with an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8439 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet ﷺ, who said: "Deceitful years will come upon people, in which the liar will be believed, and the truthful will be disbelieved; the treacherous will be trusted, and the trustworthy will be deemed treacherous; and the Ruwaybiḍāh will speak." It was asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, and what is the Ruwaybiḍāh?" He said, "The insignificant man speaking about public affairs." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8441 From ‘Umayr ibn Hānī’ al-‘Absī, he said he heard ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both, say: "We were with the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, and he mentioned the tribulations, speaking extensively about them, until he mentioned the tribulation of al-Aḥlās (persistent tribulation)." A questioner asked, "What is the tribulation of al-Aḥlās?" He said, "It is a tribulation of flight and war. Then the tribulation of al-Sarrā’ (prosperity), then people will unite under a man (as unstably as) a hip on a rib. Then the tribulation of al-Duhaymā’ (the overwhelming dark one), which will not leave anyone of this ummah without striking him a blow. Whenever it is said to have ended, it will extend. A man will be a believer in it in the morning and a disbeliever by evening, until people become two camps: a camp of faith with no hypocrisy in it, and a camp of hypocrisy with no faith in it. When that happens, then await the Dajjāl from that day or the next." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8443 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "If one of you wishes to know whether tribulation has afflicted him or not, let him look: if he now considers lawful what he used to consider unlawful, then tribulation has afflicted him. And if he now considers unlawful what he used to consider lawful, then it has afflicted him." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8446 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Tribulation is presented to the hearts. Whichever heart rejects it, a white spot is marked on it. Whichever heart does not reject it, a black spot is marked on it. Then another tribulation is presented to the hearts. If the heart that rejected it the first time rejects it again, a white spot is marked on it. If it does not reject it, a black spot is marked. Then another tribulation is presented to the hearts. If the one who rejected it the first two times rejects it again, it becomes strong, white, and pure, and no tribulation will ever harm it. But if it did not reject it the first two times, it becomes black, relapses, and is inverted, so it does not recognize good nor condemn evil." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8447 From Ibrāhīm from ‘Alqamah, he said Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, said that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said to us: "I warn you of seven tribulations that will occur after me: a tribulation coming from Madīnah, a tribulation in Makkah, a tribulation coming from Yemen, a tribulation coming from al-Shām (Greater Syria), a tribulation coming from the East, a tribulation coming from the West, and a tribulation from the heart of al-Shām, which is the Sufyānī." Ibn Mas‘ūd said, "Some of you will witness its beginning, and some of this ummah will witness its end." Al-Walīd ibn ‘Ayyāsh said, "So the tribulation of Madīnah was from Ṭalḥah and al-Zubayr, the tribulation of Makkah was the tribulation of ‘Abd Allāh ibn al-Zubayr, the tribulation of al-Shām was from the Umayyads, and the tribulation of the East was from these people." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8448 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The first thing you will lose of your religion is humility, and the last thing you will lose of your religion is prayer. The bonds of Islām will be undone one by one. Women will pray while menstruating. You will follow the path of those before you, step by step, like one sandal follows another. You will not deviate from their path, nor will it deviate from you, until two sects remain from many sects. One of them will say, 'What is wrong with the five prayers? Those before us were misguided. Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, only said: {Establish prayer at the two ends of the day and in the early hours of the night} [Hūd 11:114]. Do not pray except three.' The other will say, 'The faith of believers in Allāh is like the faith of angels; there is no disbeliever or hypocrite among us.' It is incumbent upon Allāh to gather them both with the Dajjāl." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8459 Sālim ibn ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Umar narrates from his father that ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, used to say: "Indeed, Allāh began this matter, when He began it, with prophethood and mercy. Then it will return to a caliphate. Then it will return to authority and mercy. Then it will return to kingship and mercy. Then it will return to tyranny, where you will bite one another like donkeys bite. O people, upon you is military expedition and Jihād as long as it is sweet and green, before it becomes bitter and difficult, and becomes complete before it becomes remnants or debris. So when military expeditions are prolonged, spoils are consumed, and the unlawful is deemed lawful, then upon you is guarding the frontiers (al-ribāt), for it is the best of your Jihād."
- 8495 From Abū al-Za‘rā’ from Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "A time will come upon people when a man will be envied for his light circumstances just as a man is envied today for wealth and children." A man said to him, "What wealth will be best on that day?" He said, "A good weapon and a good horse with which he moves wherever he moves." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8518 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ recited: {When the victory of Allāh has come and the conquest, And you see the people entering into the religion of Allāh in multitudes} [Al-Naṣr 110:1-2]. Then the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "They will surely exit from it in multitudes just as they entered it in multitudes." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8536 From Ibn Abī Wā'il, he said 'Abd Allāh (Ibn Mas'ūd) said: "When the scale is diminished, rain is withheld. When fornication increases, killing increases and plague occurs. When lying increases, al-Harj (turmoil/killing) increases." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8539 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "There will be rulers over you who will punish you, and Allāh will punish them." This chain of narration is authentic, and they did not narrate it.
- 8541 From 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Know that you are where humankind differs between Babylon and al-Ḥīrah. Know that nine-tenths of good and one-tenth of evil are in al-Shām. Know that nine-tenths of evil and one-tenth of good are elsewhere. By Him in Whose hand is the soul of Ibn Mas'ūd, it will soon be that the most beloved thing on the face of the earth to one of you will be to have donkeys to transport his family to al-Shām." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8543 From Abū Sa'īd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ led us in the 'Aṣr prayer, then stood and delivered a sermon after 'Aṣr until sunset. Whoever memorized it, memorized it, and whoever forgot it, forgot it. He informed therein of what will be until the Day of Resurrection. He praised Allāh, the Exalted, and lauded Him, then said: 'Now then, indeed the world is sweet and green, and indeed Allāh, the Exalted, will make you successors in it and will see how you act. So beware of the world and beware of women. Indeed, the children of Ādam were created in various classes. Among them is he who is born a believer, lives as a believer, and dies as a believer. Among them is he who is born a disbeliever, lives as a disbeliever, and dies as a disbeliever. Among them is he who is born a believer, lives as a believer, and dies as a disbeliever."

And among them is he who is born a disbeliever, lives as a disbeliever, and dies as a believer. Indeed, anger is an ember ignited in the core of the son of Ādam. Do you not see the redness of his eyes and the swelling of his jugular veins? If any of you finds any of that, let him cling to the earth. Indeed, the best of men is he who is slow to anger and quick to cool down. And the worst of men is he who is quick to anger and slow to cool down. If a man is quick to anger and quick to cool down, then it is balanced by that. If a man is slow to anger and slow to cool down, then it is balanced by that. Indeed, the best of merchants is he who is good in payment and good in seeking payment. And the worst of merchants is he who is bad in payment and bad in seeking payment. If a man is good in payment and bad in seeking payment, then it is balanced by that. And if a man is bad in payment and good in seeking payment, then it is balanced by that. Indeed, let not fear of people prevent a man from speaking the truth if he knows it. Indeed, for every treacherous person there will be a banner on the Day of Resurrection according to his treachery. And indeed, the greatest treachery is the treachery of a general leader. Indeed, the banner of the treacherous will be at his backside. And indeed, the best Jihād is a word of truth spoken to an unjust ruler.' When it was near sunset, he said, 'Indeed, the likeness of what remains of the world compared to what has passed of it is like the likeness of what remains of your day compared to what has passed of it.'"

- 8548 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, from the Prophet ﷺ, that he used to say: "You will not cease to be in good as long as your Bedouins can do without your city dwellers. And the years and droughts will surely drive them until they are with you in the dwellings, and you will not prevent them due to the abundance of those among them who will provide for you. They will say, 'For long we were hungry while you were satisfied, and for long we suffered while you enjoyed comfort, so share with us today.' And the land will become difficult for you until your city dwellers envy your Bedouins because of the difficulty of the land. And the earth will tilt with you a tilt, from which whoever perishes will perish, and whoever remains will remain, until necks are freed. Then the earth will settle with you after that until the emancipators regret. Then the earth will tilt with you after that another tilt, in which whoever perishes will perish, and whoever remains will remain, until necks are freed. Then the earth will settle with you, and they will say, 'Our Lord, we emancipate! Our Lord, we emancipate!' Allāh will belie them, 'You lie! You lie! I emancipate.' And the latter part of this ummah will surely be tried with tremors. If they repent, Allāh will turn to them. And if they return (to sin), Allāh will return upon them with tremors, pelting, missiles, landslides, transformation, and thunderbolts. And when it is said, 'The people have perished! The people have perished!' then they have indeed perished. And Allāh, the Exalted, will not punish an ummah until it acts treacherously." They asked, "And what is its treachery?" He said, "They acknowledge sins but do not repent. And hearts will be content with what is in them of righteousness and wickedness, just as a tree is content with what is in it, until a doer of good cannot increase in his good deeds, nor can an evildoer seek to make amends. And that is because Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, said: {Nay! But on their hearts is the Rān (covering of sins and evil deeds) which they used to earn.} [Al-Muṭaffifīn 83:14]." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8554 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "I saw as if the pillar of the Book was removed from under my pillow, and I followed it with my sight, and behold, it was a shining light directed towards al-Shām. Indeed, faith, when tribulations occur, will be in al-Shām." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.

- 8557 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "O Allāh, may I not reach a time, or may a time not reach me, of a people who do not follow knowledge, nor are they modest before the forbearing. Their hearts are the hearts of non-Arabs, and their tongues are the tongues of Arabs." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8566 ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr narrated a Ḥadīth to me from the Prophet ﷺ, which I understood and wrote down with my own hand: "In the name of Allāh, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. This is what ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr narrated from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ. He said: 'Indeed, Allāh, the Exalted, does not love the obscene nor the one who strives to be obscene.' Then he said: 'By Him in Whose hand is the soul of Muḥammad, the Hour will not be established until obscenity and striving for obscenity appear, and bad neighborliness, and severing of kinship ties, and until the trustworthy is deemed treacherous, and the treacherous is trusted.' Then he said: 'Indeed, the likeness of the believer is like that of a date palm: it lands and eats what is good, then it falls and does not spoil nor break. And the likeness of the believer is like that of a piece of red gold: it is put into the fire and blown upon, yet it does not change, and it is weighed and does not decrease.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8572 From ‘Āṣim ibn ‘Amr from Abū Umāmah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet ﷺ, who said: "Then a group from this ummah will spend the night eating, drinking, and amusing themselves, and they will wake up having been transformed into swine. And landslides will surely occur with tribes therein and in houses therein, until they wake up and say, 'A landslide occurred tonight with Banū Fulān (the sons of so-and-so), a landslide occurred tonight in the house of Banū Fulān.' And pebbles of stone will be sent upon them as they were sent upon the people of the Elephant. And the barren wind will be sent upon them and will scatter them as it scattered those before them, because of their drinking of wine, their consumption of usury, their wearing of silk, their taking of female singers, and their severing of kinship ties." He (the narrator) said, "And he mentioned another characteristic which I have forgotten." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of Muslim, due to Ja'far.

- 8575 From Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Then I entered upon 'Ā'ishah, may Allāh be pleased with her, and a man was with her. The man said, 'O Mother of the Believers, narrate to us a Ḥadīth about the earthquake.' She turned her face away from him. Anas said, 'So I said to her, 'Narrate to us, O Mother of the Believers, about the earthquake.' She said, 'O Anas, if I narrate it to you, you will live grieving, and you will be resurrected when you are resurrected with that grief in your heart.' I said, 'O my mother, narrate to us.' She said, 'When a woman removes her clothes in her husband's house [in a blameworthy manner], she has torn what is between her and Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, of a veil. And if she perfumes herself for other than her husband, it will be fire and shame upon her. So when they deem fornication lawful, drink wine after this, and strike musical instruments, Allāh will become jealous in His heaven and will say to the earth, 'Quake with them!' If they repent and desist, then (it stops); otherwise, He demolishes it upon them.' Anas asked, 'As a punishment for them?' She said, 'As a mercy, blessing, and admonition for the believers, and as an exemplary punishment, wrath, and torment for the disbelievers.' Anas said, 'I have not heard a Ḥadīth after the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ that I was more pleased with than this Ḥadīth. Rather, I will live joyful and be resurrected when I am resurrected with that joy in my heart,' or he said, 'in my soul.'" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of Muslim, and they did not narrate it.

- 8577 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Then we have seen everything the Messenger of Allāh told us. He said, 'It will be said to men on the Day of Resurrection, 'Throw down your whips and enter Hellfire.'"
This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8584 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Then there will be rulers over you who will abandon from the Sunnah the likes of this' – and he pointed to the base of his finger – 'and if you abandon them, they will bring about the greatest calamity. And there has never been an ummah except that the first thing they abandon of their religion is the Sunnah, and the last thing they leave is prayer. And were it not that they feel ashamed, they would not pray.'" This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs, and they did not narrate it.
- 8591 From al-Aḥnaf ibn Qays, he said: "Then I was in Madīnah, and suddenly I saw a man from whom people were fleeing when they saw him. I said, 'Who are you?' He said, 'I am Abū Dharr, the companion of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ.' I said, 'Why do people flee from you?' He said, 'I forbid them from treasures with that which the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ used to forbid them.' He (al-Aḥnaf) said, 'I said, "Indeed, our stipends have increased today and reached a certain amount. Do you fear anything for us?" He said, "As for today, no. But it is soon to be the price of your religion. So when it is the price of your religion, then leave it and beware of it.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8600 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: "Then I was sitting, then the Prophet ﷺ mentioned the tribulation, or it was mentioned to him, and he said, 'When people's covenants have become corrupt, their trusts have diminished, and they have become like this' – and he interlaced his fingers – I stood up to him and said, 'What should I do then, O Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh make me your ransom?' He said, 'Control your tongue, sit in your house, take what you recognize (as good) and leave what you reject (as evil), and concern yourself with your own private affairs, and leave the affairs of the common people.'" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.

- 8660 From ‘Amr ibn Qays Sinān, he said: "Then I was with Abū al-Fawāris when I was a young lad, and I saw people gathered around a man. I said, 'Who is this?' They said, 'Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ.' I heard him narrate from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ that he said, 'Among the signs of the Hour's approach is that the wicked will be elevated and the good will be debased, speech will proliferate, and action will be stored away (i.e., diminished). And al-Shāh – that is, writings other than the Book of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic – will be recited to the people, and none among them will condemn it.' It was asked, 'What is al-Shāh?' He said, 'What has been written other than the Book of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic.'" And al-Awzā‘ī narrated it from ‘Amr ibn Qays al-Sakūnī.

Majma‘ al-Zawā‘id

By its author ‘Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- From ‘Iṣmah ibn Qays al-Sulamī, a companion of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ: "He used to seek refuge from the tribulation of the East. It was said to him, 'Then what about the tribulation of the West?' He said, 'That is greater and greater.'" This was narrated by al-Ṭabarānī, and in another narration with him also, it is mentioned that he used to seek refuge in his prayer from the tribulation of the West. Its narrators are trustworthy.
- From Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "You are upon clear proof from your Lord as long as two intoxications do not overcome you:

the intoxication of ignorance and the intoxication of love of worldly life. And you enjoin good and forbid evil and strive in the way of Allāh. But if love of the world prevails, you will not enjoin good, nor forbid evil, nor strive in the way of Allāh. Those who adhere to the Book and the Sunnah on that day will be like the first forerunners from the Muhājirīn and the Anṣār." Narrated by al-Bazzār.

- And from ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb that the Prophet ﷺ said: "You will be sifted until you become the dregs of people whose covenants have become corrupt and whose trusts have been ruined." One of us said, "So what about us, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "You act upon what you know, leave what you reject, and say, 'One, One! Aid us against those who wrong us and suffice us against those who oppress us.'" Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat, and its chain contains narrators I do not know.
- And from Umm Salamah, she heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "A time will surely come upon people when the truthful will be disbelieved and the liar will be believed; the trustworthy will be deemed treacherous and the treacherous will be trusted; a man will testify though not asked to testify, and a man will swear though not asked to swear. And the happiest of people in the world will be Luka‘ ibn Luka‘ (a base person, son of a base person) who does not believe in Allāh and His Messenger." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat and al-Kabīr; its chain includes ‘Abd Allāh ibn Ṣāliḥ, scribe of al-Layth, who is considered weak but has also been deemed trustworthy by some.
- From Ḥudhayfah, he said: "I said to the Prophet ﷺ, 'O Messenger of Allāh, when will enjoining good and forbidding evil be abandoned, while they are the two masters of the deeds of the righteous?' He said, 'When you are afflicted with what afflicted the Children of Israel.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and what afflicted the Children of Israel?' He said, 'When your best ones flatter your wicked ones, jurisprudence is found among your worst ones, and authority is in your young ones. At that point, a tribulation will envelop you; you will turn back, and it will turn back upon you." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat.

- From Abū Hurayrah, he said he heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say to Thawbān: "How will you be, O Thawbān, when the nations summon one another against you as you summon one another to a bowl of food from which you eat?" Thawbān said, "May my father and mother be sacrificed for you, O Messenger of Allāh! Is it because of our small number?" He said, "No, on that day you will be many, but al-wahn (weakness) will be cast into your hearts." They asked, "And what is al-wahn, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Your love of the world and your hatred of fighting." Narrated by Aḥmad, and al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat narrated something similar. Aḥmad's chain of narration is good.
- And from Marwān ibn Muḥann, he said: "We were sitting in the mosque when 'Ammār ibn Yāsir passed by us. We said, 'Narrate to us what you heard from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ.' He said, 'I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "There will be people after me who will seize power, and some of them will kill others over it." We said to him, 'If someone other than you had narrated this, we would not have believed him.' He said, 'Indeed, it will happen.'" Narrated by Aḥmad, al-Ṭabarānī, and Abū Ya'ālā. Its narrators are reliable, including Marwān, who is trustworthy.
- And from 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ led us in the Fajr prayer. When he finished his prayer, a man called out to him, 'When is the Hour?' The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ rebuked him and scolded him, saying, 'Be quiet!' Then, when it became bright, he raised his gaze to the sky and said, 'Blessed is its Raiser and its Governor.' Then he cast his gaze to the earth and said, 'Blessed is its Spreader and its Creator.' Then he said, 'Where is the questioner about the Hour?' A man knelt down on his knees and said, 'I, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you, asked you.' He said: 'That is when there is injustice from leaders, belief in stars, denial of divine decree, and until trust is taken as spoils, charity as a fine, and obscenity as an increase. At that point, your people will perish." Narrated by al-Bazzār, and its chain contains narrators I do not know.

- And from Anas ibn Mālik, he said: "Umm Sulaym used to treat the wounded in the army of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ. She said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, if only you would supplicate to Allāh for my son.' The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said, 'Anīs?' She said, 'Yes.' So he made me sit before him, wiped my head, and said, 'O Anīs, indeed the Muslims after me will found cities, among which they will found a city called al-Baṣrah. If you reach it, then beware of its place of amusement, its market, and the door of its ruler, for there will be in it a landslide, transformation, and pelting. The sign of that is that justice will die, injustice will spread in it, fornication will increase in it, and false testimony will spread in it." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat, and its chain contains a group of narrators I do not know.

By Abū Bakr ‘Abd Allāh ibn Muḥammad ibn Abī Shaybah al-Kūfī.

- 37181 From Abū al-Bakhtarī, he said: "Umar wrote to Abū Mūsā: 'Indeed, people have an aversion to their sultan, so I seek refuge in Allāh that hidden grudges, preferred worldly life, and followed desires should overtake me and you. And indeed, tribes will summon one another, and that is arrogance from Satan. If that happens, then the sword, the sword! The killing, the killing! They will say, "O people of Islām! O people of Islām!"'"
- 37193 From Shahr ibn ‘Aṭīyyah from Anas ibn Mālik, he said: "Indeed, there will be kings, then tyrants, then despots."

- 37202 From Salmān ibn Rabī'ah from 'Umar, he said: "Indeed, there will be rulers and officials whose companionship is disbelief."
- 37207 From Yaḥyā ibn Waththāb, Ḥudhayfah said: "By Allāh, no matter will come to them from which they cry out, except that another matter will follow it that will distract them from it."
- 37237 From 'Ubādah ibn al-Ṣāmit, he said: "That his wealth should decrease or his death be hastened." They said, "We have not seen a wisher who loves his beloved (as much)." He said, "I fear that rulers will overtake you such that if you obey them, they will lead you into the Fire, and if you disobey them, they will kill you." A man said, "Tell us who they are so we can gouge out their eyes." Shu'bah said, "Or throw dust in their faces." He ('Ubādah) said, "Perhaps you will reach them, and they will be the ones who gouge out your eye and throw dust in your face."
- 37281 From Rajā' ibn Ḥaywah from Mu'ādh, he said: "You have been tried with the tribulation of adversity and you were patient. You will soon be tried with the tribulation of prosperity. And indeed, what I fear most for you is the tribulation of women, when they adorn themselves with gold and wear the fine garments of al-Shām, thus exhausting the wealthy and burdening the poor with what he cannot find."
- 37347 From Ṭāriq ibn Shihāb, he said: "Khālīd ibn al-Walīd flogged a man for a prescribed punishment. The next day, he flogged another man for a prescribed punishment. A man said, 'This, by Allāh, is the tribulation! Yesterday he flogged a man for a prescribed punishment, and today he flogged a man for a prescribed punishment.' Khālīd said, 'This is not tribulation. Tribulation is when you are in a land where sins are committed, and you want to leave it for a land where sins are not committed, but you cannot find it.'"

- 37508 From Shahr ibn Ḥawshab, he said: "Abd Allāh (ibn Mas'ūd) was sitting with his companions, and their voices rose. Ḥudhayfah came and said, 'What are these voices, O Ibn Umm 'Abd?' He said, 'O Abā 'Abd Allāh, they mentioned the Dajjāl and we feared him.' Ḥudhayfah said, 'By Allāh, I would not care whether I met him or this black goat.' – 'Abd al-Malik (a narrator) referred to a goat eating date stones in the corner of the mosque. – 'Abd Allāh said to him, 'Why, may your father be for Allāh (an expression of admiration)?' Ḥudhayfah said, 'Because we are a believing people, and he is a disbelieving man, and Allāh will grant us victory and triumph over him. By Allāh, he will not emerge until his emergence is more beloved to a Muslim man than a cool drink to the thirsty.' 'Abd Allāh said, 'Why, may your father be for Allāh?' Ḥudhayfah said, 'Because of the severity of the trial and the roots of evil.'"
- 37547 From 'Imrān ibn Muslim from Yazīd ibn 'Amr: "He said, 'Indeed, among the signs of the Hour's approach is that construction will appear on the face of the earth, kinship ties will be severed, and a neighbor will harm his neighbor.'"
- 37548 From Abū Wā'il from 'Abd Allāh (ibn Mas'ūd), he said: "Among the portents of the Hour is that obscenity, striving for obscenity, bad character, and bad neighborliness will appear."
- 37549 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-Āṣ, he said: "Among the portents of the Hour is that speech will proliferate and action will diminish, the wicked will be elevated and the good will be debased, and al-Mathānī (writings other than the Qur'ān) will be recited to them, and no one among them will find fault with it." He (the sub-narrator) said, "I asked, 'What is al-Mathānī?' He said, 'Every book other than the Book of Allāh.'"
- Wakī' narrated to us from Shu'bah from Qatādah from Wa'shrūn ibn Saḥbān from Ṭarīf ibn Yazīd ibn Ṭarīf from Abū Mūsā, who said: "Indeed, before the Hour there will be days in which ignorance will descend and knowledge will be lifted, until a man will go to his mother and strike her with the sword out of ignorance."

- 37569 From 'Āmir, he said: "Ḥudhayfah was asked, 'Which tribulation is most severe?' He said, 'That good and evil are presented to you, and you do not know which of them to follow.'"
- 37588 From Mujālid from al-Sha'bī, he said: "The Hour will not be established until knowledge becomes ignorance and ignorance becomes knowledge."
- 37591 From Kharashah ibn al-Ḥurr, 'Umar said: "The Arabs will perish when the sons of Persian daughters reach puberty."
- 37592 Wakī' narrated to us from Hishām from his father from 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, who said: "The affair of the Children of Israel remained upright until the sons of captive foreign women grew up among them. They spoke among them based on opinion, so they went astray and led others astray."
- 37736 From Zādhān from 'Ulaym, he said: "We were with him on a roof, and with him was a man from the companions of the Prophet ﷺ, during the days of the plague. Swine began to pass by. He (the Companion) said, 'O plague, take me!' 'Ulaym said, 'Did not the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "Let none of you wish for death, for it is then the cessation of his deeds, and he cannot return to seek pardon?"" He (the Companion) said, 'I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "Hasten to (do good deeds before) death due to six things: the rule of the foolish, abundance of police, selling of judgment, making light of bloodshed, a new generation who take the Qur'ān as musical instruments, putting forward one to lead them in recitation for them even if he is the least of them in jurisprudence."'"

- 37742 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, he said: "Indeed, we find in the revealed Book of Allāh two groups in the Fire: a people who will be at the end of time, with them whips like the tails of cows, with which they strike people without offense. Nothing enters their bellies except what is vile. And women who are clothed yet naked, inclining (to evil) and inclining others (to it), who will not enter Paradise nor smell its fragrance."
- 37743 From Ibn ‘Abbās, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, there will be rulers whom you will recognize (their good deeds) and reject (their evil deeds). Whoever opposes them will be saved, whoever isolates himself from them will be safe or nearly so, and whoever mingles with them will perish."
- 37744 From al-Nu‘mān ibn Bashīr, he said: "Send for his family members who will defend against the corruption of the land." Ka‘b al-Aḥbār said to him, "Wait, do not do it! For indeed, it is in the revealed Book of Allāh that a people called al-Amlah will carry in their hands whips like the tails of cows. They will not smell the fragrance of Paradise. So do not be the first to send among them." He (al-Nu‘mān) said, "So he did (proceed)." I (a sub-narrator) said to Yaḥyā, "What is al-Amlah?" He said, "You call them al-Shuraṭ (police/guards) in Iraq."

Al-Durr al-Manthūr

By al-Suyūṭī.

- Al-Ḥākim narrated and authenticated it from Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, who said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "You will surely follow the ways of those before you, span by span, and cubit by cubit, so much so that if one of them entered a lizard's hole, you would enter it. And if one of them had intercourse with his wife on the road, you would do it."

- And Ibn Abī al-Dunyā narrated in Dhamm al-Malāhī (Condemnation of Musical Instruments) from Farqad al-Sabakhī, who said: "I read in the Torah that Jibrīl brought to Mūsā, peace be upon him: 'There will surely be transformation, pelting, and landslides in the ummah of Muḥammad, among the people of the Qiblah.' It was asked, 'O Abā Ya'qūb, what are their deeds?' He said, 'Their taking of female singers, their striking of tambourines, and their wearing of silk and gold. And it will not be long before you see primordial evil deeds. So be certain, prepare, and beware...' It was asked, 'What are they?' He said, 'Men being content with men, and women with women, and the Arabs desiring the vessels of the non-Arabs. At that point.' Then he said, 'By Allāh, and the Ruwaythah (insignificant ones) will be men from the sky with stones, with which they will be crushed in their paths and their tribes, as was done to the people of Lūṭ. And others will surely be transformed into apes and swine, as was done to the Children of Israel. And a people will surely be swallowed by the earth as Qārūn was swallowed.'"

By Abū 'Amr 'Uthmān ibn Sa'īd al-Muqri' al-Dānī.

- From al-Awzā'ī from 'Umayr ibn Hānī' that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There will be tribulations in which the believer will not be able to change (anything) with his hand or his tongue." A man said, "O Messenger of Allāh, will there be believers among them on that day?" He said, "Yes." He asked, "And how will that be, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "They will detest them (the evils) with their hearts." He asked, "And will that diminish anything from their faith?" He said, "No, except as the drop diminishes from the waterskin."
- From al-Ḥasan, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Before the great battle, there will be tribulations in which a man's heart will die just as his body dies."

- From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Ziyād from some of their shaykhs that the Prophet ﷺ said: "The most severe thing I fear for my ummah is not Satan, nor the Dajjāl, but the most severe thing I fear for them is the misguiding leaders."
- From al-Ḥasan, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "O ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, how will you be among the dregs of people, when their covenants have become corrupt, their trusts have become corrupt, and they have become like this?" – and the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ interlaced his fingers. He said, "O Messenger of Allāh, what do you command me?" He said, "I command you to fear Allāh, take what you recognize (as good), leave what you reject (as evil), concern yourself with your own special affairs, and beware of the common people."
- From ‘Arīf al-Hamdānī, he said: "I said to Ibn ‘Umar, 'Indeed, when we enter upon the rulers, we praise them with what is not in them. When we leave their presence, we supplicate to Allāh against them.' He said, 'We used to consider that hypocrisy.'"
- From ‘Abbād ibn Kathīr, tracing it back to the Prophet ﷺ, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Give glad tidings to those who flee with their religion, out of faith and seeking reward, from city to city, and from village to village, that they will be with me or with Ibrāhīm on the Day of Resurrection like these two" – and he joined his middle finger and the one next to it.
- From al-Awzā‘ī from Ḥassān ibn ‘Aṭīyyah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The wicked of my ummah will prevail over their best ones, until the believer among them hides himself just as the hypocrite hides himself among us."

- From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The Hour will not be established until the hypocrites of every tribe dominate it."

Al-Fitan

By Ibn Ḥammād (Nu‘aym ibn Ḥammād).

- From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There will be tribulations in my ummah until a man in it separates from his father and his brother, until a man is reproached for his trial just as an adulteress is reproached for her adultery."
- From Ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That he saw buildings on Abū Qubays and said, 'O Mujāhid, when you see the houses of Makkah appearing on its mountainsides and water flowing in its paths, then take your precaution.'"
- A man stood up to Khālīd ibn al-Walīd, may Allāh be pleased with him, in al-Shām while he was delivering a sermon and said: "Indeed, the tribulations have appeared." Khālīd said, "Not while Ibn al-Khaṭṭāb is alive, no! That will only be when people are in a land of trial and a land of trial, and a man tries to find a land that does not have the like of what he is fleeing from, but he does not find it. At that point, tribulations will appear."
- From al-Nu‘mān ibn Bashīr, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Indeed, before the Hour there will be tribulations like patches of a dark night. A man will be a believer in it in the morning and a disbeliever by evening, and a believer by evening and a disbeliever by morning. A people will sell their share of good for a meager worldly gain." Al-Ḥasan said, "By Allāh, other than Whom there is no god, I have indeed seen them: forms without intellects, bodies without understanding, moths of the fire and flies of greed. They go out for two dirhams and return for two dirhams. One of them sells his religion for the price of a she-goat."

- From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Four tribulations will come to you after me. In the first, bloodshed will be deemed lawful. In the second, bloodshed and wealth will be deemed lawful. In the third, bloodshed, wealth, and private parts will be deemed lawful. The fourth will be deaf, blind, and overwhelming, surging like the waves of the sea, until no one among the people finds a refuge from it. It will encompass al-Shām, cover Iraq, and strike the Arabian Peninsula with its hand and foot, and the ummah will be kneaded in it with affliction like leather is kneaded. Then no one among the people will be able to say, 'Stop! Stop!' Then, they will not recognize its end from one side except that it will break out from another side."
- From Arṭāh ibn al-Mundhir, he said: "It has reached us that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'There will be four tribulations in my ummah. My ummah will be afflicted in its latter part by successive tribulations. In the first, they will be afflicted with a trial until the believer says, "This is my destruction," then it will be uncovered. In the second, until the believer says, "This is my destruction," then it will be uncovered. In the third, whenever it is said to have ended, it will extend. And the fourth tribulation, you will turn to disbelief in it, when the fickle person is with this one at one time and with that one at another, without a leader or a community. Then the Messiah (Dajjāl), then the rising of the sun from its setting. And before the Hour, there will be seventy-two Dajjāls (deceivers), among them those whom only one man will follow."
- 93 From ‘Umayr ibn Hāni’, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The tribulation of al-Aḥlās involves war and flight. And the tribulation of al-Sarrā’ (prosperity), its smoke will emerge from beneath the feet of a man who claims to be from me, but he is not from me; indeed, my allies are the pious. Then people will unite under a man. Then there will be the tribulation of al-Duhaymā'. Whenever it is said to have ended, it will extend, until no house of the Arabs remains but it enters it. They will fight in it, not knowing whether they are fighting for truth or falsehood. They will remain like that until they become two camps: a camp of faith with no hypocrisy in it, and a camp of hypocrisy with no faith in it. When they gather, then look for the Dajjāl today or tomorrow."

- 115 From Abū Mūsā al-Ash'arī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ mentioned widespread killing before the Hour, until a man will kill his neighbor, his brother, and his cousin." They said, "Will we have our intellects on that day?" He said, "The intellects of most of the people of that time will be snatched away, and worthless dregs of people will remain, each one of them thinking he is upon something, while he is upon nothing."
- 124 From Kathīr ibn Murrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Among the signs of trial and portents of the Hour are that intellects will become estranged, understanding will decrease, anxiety will increase, the signs of truth will be lifted, and injustice will appear."
- 154 From Mu'ādh ibn Jabal, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "You will not see from the world except trial and tribulation. The affair will only increase in severity. You will not see from the leaders except harshness. And you will not see a matter that horrifies you except that what comes after it will belittle it by being more severe."
- 156 From 'Umayr ibn Ishāq, he said: "We used to discuss that the first thing to be lifted from people is intimacy."
- From Ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ mention a tribulation... so I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, when will that be?' He said, 'When a man does not trust his companion.'"

- From Mu'ādh ibn Jabal, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "When you see blood being shed without right, wealth being given for falsehood, doubt and mutual cursing appearing, and apostasy occurring, then whoever can die, let him die."
- 501 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "A time will come upon people when the believer in it will be more humiliated than a female slave. The most clever among them will be the one who maneuvers with his religion like a fox maneuvers."
- 625 From Ibn Mas'ūd, he said: "There will be a sign in ... and a star with a tail will appear."
- 679 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, he said: "There will be a tribulation in al-Shām in which their chiefs and nobles will rise. Then only a short time will pass until their foolish ones and lowly ones rise in it, until they enslave their chiefs and nobles just as they used to enslave them before that."

The Corruption of Scholars at the End of Time

Al-Bukhārī

- 100 - From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-ʿĀṣ, he said he heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "Then indeed, Allāh does not take away knowledge by snatching it from the servants, but He takes away knowledge by taking away the scholars, until, when no scholar remains, people will take ignorant leaders. They will be asked and will issue fatwās without knowledge, so they will go astray and lead others astray."

Sunan Abī Dāwūd

- 4336 ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then indeed, the first deficiency that entered upon the Children of Israel was that a man would meet another man and say, 'O so-and-so, fear Allāh and leave what you are doing, for it is not lawful for you.' Then he would meet him the next day, and that would not prevent him from being his eating companion, drinking companion, and sitting companion. When they did that, Allāh struck the hearts of some of them against others." Then he said: "{Cursed were those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel by the tongue of Dāwūd and ‘Īsā, son of Maryam} down to His saying {defiantly disobedient}." [Al-Mā'idah 5:78-81]. Then he said: "Nay, by Allāh, you will surely enjoin good, and you will surely forbid evil, and you will surely take the hand of the oppressor, and you will surely compel him to the truth with force, and you will surely confine him to the truth with force."
- 4337 From Abū ‘Ubaydah from Ibn Mas‘ūd from the Prophet ﷺ: "Then similarly, he added, 'Or Allāh will surely strike the hearts of some of you against others, then He will surely curse you as He cursed them.'" Abū Dāwūd said, "Al-Muḥāribī narrated it from al-‘Alā’ ibn al-Musayyab."
- 4338 From Qays, he said: "Abū Bakr said, after praising Allāh and lauding Him: 'Then, O people, you recite this verse and misplace its meaning: {O you who have believed, upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves. Those who have gone astray will not harm you when you have been guided} [Al-Mā'idah 5:105].'" He said, reporting from Khālīd: "And indeed, we heard the Prophet ﷺ say: 'Indeed, when people see an oppressor and do not take him by his hands, Allāh is about to encompass them all with a punishment.'" And ‘Amr said, reporting from Hushaym: "And indeed, I heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: 'There is no people among whom sins are committed, and they are able to change them but do not change them, except that Allāh is about to encompass them all with a punishment from Him." Abū Dāwūd said, "And Abū Usāmah and a group narrated it as Khālīd said." And Shu'bah said in it: "There is no people among whom sins are committed, while they [who could prevent it] are more numerous than those who commit them [the sins]."

- 4339 From Ibn Jarīr from Jarīr, he said he heard the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ say: "Then there is no man who is among a people in whose midst sins are committed, and they are able to change (the situation) for him but do not change it, except that Allāh will afflict them with a punishment before they die."
- 4341 Abū Umayyah al-Sha'bānī said: "Then I asked Abū Tha'labah al-Khushanī, 'O Abū Tha'labah, what do you say about this verse: {Upon you is [responsibility for] yourselves} [Al-Mā'idah 5:105]?' He said, 'Indeed, by Allāh, you have asked an expert about it. I asked the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ about it, and he said: "Rather, enjoin good and forbid evil until you see avarice obeyed, desire followed, worldly life preferred, and every possessor of an opinion admiring his own opinion. Then upon you is [to care for] yourself, and leave the common people. For indeed, beyond you are days of patience. Patience in them will be like grasping live coals. The one who acts [righteously] in them will have the reward of fifty men who do the like of his deed." Someone else added to my narration that the Prophet ﷺ was asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, the reward of fifty of them?" He said, "The reward of fifty of you."'"
- 4344 From 'Aṭīyyah al-'Awfī from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'Then the best Jihād is a word of justice spoken before an unjust ruler or an unjust emir.'"
- 4345 From al-'Urs ibn 'Amīrah Sinān from the Prophet ﷺ, who said: "Then when a sin is committed in the land, whoever witnesses it and detests it" – and once he said "denies it" – "is like one who was absent from it. And whoever is absent from it but is pleased with it, is like one who witnessed it."

Sunan Ibn Mājah

- 4006 From Abū 'Ubaydah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then indeed, when deficiency occurred among the Children of Israel, a man would see his brother committing a sin and forbid him from it. Then, the next day, what he had seen from him would not prevent him from being his eating companion, drinking companion, and associate. So Allāh struck the hearts of some of them against others, and the Qur'ān was revealed concerning them. He said: {Cursed were those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel by the tongue of Dāwūd and 'Īsā, son of Maryam} until He reached {And if they had believed in Allāh and the Prophet and what was revealed to him, they would not have taken them as allies; but many of them are defiantly disobedient.} [Al-Mā'idah 5:78-81]. He said, 'The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ was reclining; then, making the point decisively, he said: "No, until you take the hand of the oppressor and compel him to the truth with force."'"
- 4015 From Makḥūl from Anas ibn Mālīk, he said: "It was said, 'Then, O Messenger of Allāh, when do we abandon enjoining good and forbidding evil?' He said, 'When what appeared in the nations before you appears among you.' We said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and what appeared in the nations before us?' He said, 'Authority in your young ones, obscenity in your great ones, and knowledge in your base ones.' Zayd (a narrator) said, 'The interpretation of the Prophet's ﷺ saying, "And knowledge in your base ones," is when knowledge is with the dissolute.'"

- 4016 From al-Ḥasan from Jundub from Ḥudhayfah, he said: "The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: 'Then it is not fitting for a believer to humiliate himself.' They said, 'And how does he humiliate himself?' He said, 'He exposes himself to a trial that he cannot bear.'"
- 4048 From Ziyād ibn Labīd, he said: "Then the Prophet ﷺ mentioned something and said, 'That is at the time of the departure of knowledge.' I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, and how will knowledge depart while we recite the Qur'ān and teach it to our children, and our children will teach it to their children until the Day of Resurrection?' He said, 'May your mother be bereaved of you, Ziyād! I used to consider you among the most jurisprudent men in Madīnah. Are not these Jews and Christians reciting the Torah and the Gospel, yet they do not act upon anything within them?'"

Al-Mustadrak 'alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn

By Abū 'Abd Allāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī.

- 8356 From Abū Firās, 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "Indeed, O people, we used to know you when the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ was among us, when revelation was descending, and when news of you was conveyed among us. Indeed, the Prophet ﷺ has departed, and revelation has been lifted. We only know you by what I tell you. Indeed, whoever among you manifests good, we will think well of him and love him for it. And whoever among you manifests evil, we will think ill of him and detest him for it. Your secret affairs are between yourselves and your Lord. Indeed, a time came upon me when I thought that whoever recited the Qur'ān desired thereby Allāh, the Exalted, and what is with Him. But it has lately seemed to me that some people recite it desiring what is with people. So, desire what is with Allāh through your recitation and your deeds. Indeed, by Allāh, I do not send my governors to strike your bodies or take your wealth, but I send them to teach you your religion and your ways, to judge justly among you, and to distribute your spoils among you. Indeed, whoever has any of that injustice done to him, let him bring his case to me. By Him in Whose hand is the soul of ‘Umar, I will surely exact retribution for him from the governor." ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with him, then leaped up and said, "O Commander of the Faithful, what if a Muslim man was in charge of subjects and disciplined some of his subjects? Would you indeed exact retribution from him?" He said, "And why should I not exact retribution from him, when I saw the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ exacting retribution from himself? Indeed, do not strike them, lest you humiliate them. Do not withhold their rights from them, lest you cause them to disbelieve. Do not compel them to difficult tasks, lest you cause them tribulation. And do not station them in desolate places, lest you cause them to be lost." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of Muslim, and they did not narrate it.

- 8412 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, who said: "A time will come upon my ummah when reciters will be many and jurists will be few, knowledge will be taken away, and al-Harj (killing/turmoil) will be abundant." They asked, "What is al-Harj, O Messenger of Allāh?" He said, "Killing among you. Then after that, a time will come when men will recite the Qur’ān, but it will not go beyond their throats. Then after that, a time will come when the hypocrite, the disbeliever, the polytheist in Allāh, will argue with the believer using the like of what he (the believer) says." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, and they did not narrate it.
- 8440 From Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "There will be a tribulation in which wealth will be abundant, and the Qur’ān will be opened (widely available) until the believer and the hypocrite, the young and the old, the man and the woman recite it. A man will recite it secretly, but he will not be followed for it, so he will say, 'By Allāh, I will surely recite it openly.' Then he will recite it openly, but he will not be followed for it, so he will establish a mosque and innovate speech that is not in the Book of Allāh nor from the Sunnah of the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ. So beware of him and it, for indeed, everything innovated is misguidance."

Majma' al-Zawā'id

By its author 'Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- And from Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said to me: "O Abā Hurayrah, do not enter upon a ruler. But if you are compelled to do so, then do not transgress my Sunnah, and do not fear his sword or his whip if you command them to fear Allāh and obey Him." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat.
- And from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ, he said: "Let not fear of people prevent any of you from speaking the truth if he sees it, or from reminding of something great, for indeed, it does not bring an appointed term nearer nor does it distance provision." Al-Tirmidhī and Ibn Mājah narrated part of it. Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat, and its narrators are those from whom Shaykh al-Ṭabarānī narrated directly.
- And from Jābir and Abū Ayyūb al-Anṣārī, they both said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "There is no man who forsakes a Muslim in a situation where his honor is disparaged and his sanctity is violated, except that Allāh will forsake him in a situation where he loves His support. And there is no man who supports a Muslim in a situation where his honor is disparaged and his sanctity is violated, except that Allāh will support him in a situation where he loves His support." Narrated by Abū Dāwūd. Also narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsat, and its chain of narration is good.

Al-Muṣannaf fī al-Aḥādīth wa al-Āthār

By Abū Bakr ‘Abd Allāh ibn Muḥammad ibn Abī Shaybah al-Kūfī.

- 37206 Hilāl ibn Khabbāb Abū al-‘Alā’ informed us, he said: "I asked Sa‘īd ibn Jubayr, 'O Abā ‘Abd Allāh, what is the sign of the perishing of people?' He said, 'When their scholars perish.'"
- 37486 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Najīyy from ‘Alī, he said: "We were then with the Prophet ﷺ, sitting, while he was asleep. We mentioned the Dajjāl, and he awoke, his face reddened. 'More fearful for you, in my view, than the Dajjāl, are the misguiding leaders.'"
- 37731 From Mu‘ādh, he said: "There will be at the end of this time dissolute reciters, wicked ministers, oppressive trustees, and lying rulers."
- 37732 My grandfather Salamah ibn Qays narrated to me, he said: "I met Abū Dharr, and he said, 'O Salamah ibn Qays, three things I have memorized: Do not marry co-wives, for you will never be able to do justice, however eager you may be. Do not work as a charity collector, for the collector of charity may add or subtract. And do not frequent a person of authority, for you will not gain anything of their worldly benefits but that they will gain something better from your religion.'"
- 37733 Ḥudhayfah said: "Beware of the doors of rulers, for they are the stations of tribulations. Indeed, tribulation appears alluring when approaching but becomes clear when departing."

Al-Sunan al-Wāridah fī al-Fitan

- From Rawwād from Ibn Abī Ṣadaqah al-Yamānī, he said: "Before the Hour, lying rulers, wicked ministers, oppressive trustees, and dissolute reciters will be sent forth. Their desires will be divergent, their appearance like the appearance of monks, yet they will have no rest. Their hearts will be more putrid than carcasses. Allāh will afflict them with a dusty, dark tribulation in which they will wander confusedly like the confused, oppressive Jews."
- ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "A time is about to come upon people when nothing will remain of Islām but its name, and nothing will remain of the Qur’ān but its script. Their mosques on that day will be thriving but ruined of guidance. Their scholars will be the most evil of those under the canopy of heaven. From them, tribulation will emerge, and to them it will return..."
- From al-Ḥasan, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "This ummah will not cease to be under the hand of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic, and in His protection, as long as its reciters do not incline towards its rulers, its righteous ones do not praise its wicked ones, and its best ones do not insult its worst ones. If they do that, the Generous Allāh will lift His hand from them, then He will set their tyrants over them, who will inflict upon them evil torment, and He will strike them with poverty and want, and fill their hearts with terror."
- 376 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Zayd ibn Aslam from his father that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Jihād will not cease to be sweet and green as long as rain falls from the sky. And a time will come upon people when reciters among them will say, 'This is not a time for Jihād.' Whoever reaches that time, then it is an excellent time for Jihād." They said, "O Messenger of Allāh, will one (prominent reciter) say that?" He said, "Yes, one upon whom is the curse of Allāh, the angels, and all people."

The Strangeness of the Righteous at the End of Time

Sunan Ibn Mājah

- 4023 From Sa'd ibn Abī Waqqās, he said: "I said, 'Then, O Messenger of Allāh, which people are most severely tried?' He said, 'The Prophets, then the next best, then the next best. A servant is tried according to his religion. If he is firm in his religion, his trial is intensified. If there is weakness in his religion, he is tried according to his religion. The trial does not cease with the servant until it leaves him walking on the earth with no sin upon him.'"
- 4029 From Ḥudhayfah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then count for me everyone who has uttered [the testimony of] Islām." We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, do you fear for us while we are between six hundred and seven hundred?" The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said, "Indeed, you do not know; perhaps you will be tried." He (Ḥudhayfah) said, "So we were tried until a man among us would not pray except secretly."
- 4031 From Anas ibn Mālīk from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ that he said: "Then great reward comes with great trial. And indeed, when Allāh loves a people, He tries them. So whoever is content, for him is contentment. And whoever is discontent, for him is discontent."
- 4035 From Abū 'Abd Rabbih, he says he heard Mu'āwiyah say he heard the Prophet ﷺ say: "Then nothing remains of the world except trial and tribulation."
- 4036 From Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then deceitful years will come upon people, in which the liar will be believed and the truthful will be disbelieved; the treacherous will be trusted and the trustworthy will be deemed treacherous; and the Ruwaybiḍah will speak." It was asked, "And what is the Ruwaybiḍah?" He said, "The insignificant man speaking about public affairs."

- 4037 From Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then by Him in Whose hand is my soul, the world will not pass away until a man passes by a grave, rolls over it, and says, 'Oh, would that I were in the place of the occupant of this grave!' And it is not religious obligation that afflicts him, but only trial."
- 4038 From Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then you will indeed be sifted just as dates are sifted from their refuse. Your best will depart, and your worst will remain. So die, if you are able."
- 4039 From Anas ibn Mālīk that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the affair will only increase in severity, the world only in decline, and the people only in avarice. The Hour will not be established except upon the worst of people. And there is no Mahdī except 'Īsā ibn Maryam."

Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Ḥibbān

- 6779 From Sa'īd ibn al-Musayyib from Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the Hour will not be established until a single prostration is better than the world and what is in it."

Al-Mustadrak 'alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn, by Abū 'Abd Allāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī

- 8465 From Abū al-Aswad al-Du'alī, I heard 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr say: "It is imminent that no Arab will remain in the land of the non-Arabs except as one killed or a captive whose blood-money is to be decided." Zur'ah ibn Ḍamrah said, "Will the polytheists overcome Islām?" He (‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr) said, "From which (tribe) are you?" He said, "From Banū ‘Āmir ibn Ṣa‘ṣa‘ah." He said, "The Hour will not be established until the shoulders of the women of Banū ‘Āmir jostle each other around Dhū al-Khalaṣah (an idol)." He (Abū al-Aswad) said, "So he mentioned his saying to ‘Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb, and he said, "‘Abd Allāh knows best what he says,' three times." This is according to the conditions of al-Bukhārī.

The Signs of the Hour

Al-Bukhārī

- Anas said the Prophet ﷺ said: "The first of the portents of the Hour is a fire that will gather the people from the East to the West."
- 6702 From Abū Hurayrah, he said the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the Euphrates is about to uncover a treasure of gold. Whoever is present there should not take anything from it."
- 6704 From Abū Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the Hour will not be established until two great factions fight, and there is a great slaughter between them, their call being one; and until Dajjāls (impostors), liars, nearly thirty of them, are sent forth, each of them claiming to be a messenger of Allāh; and until knowledge is taken away, earthquakes increase, time draws near, tribulations appear, and al-Harj – which is killing – increases; and until wealth increases and overflows, so much so that the owner of wealth will be concerned about who will accept his charity, and until he offers it, and the one to whom he offers it says, 'I have no need of it'; and until people compete in constructing lofty buildings; and until a man passes by the grave of another man and says, 'Oh, would that I were in his place!'; and until the sun rises from its setting. When it rises and people see it – meaning, they will all believe – then that is when {no soul will benefit from its faith which had not believed before or earned good through its faith} [Al-An'ām 6:158]. And the Hour will surely be established while two men have spread out their cloth between them, but they will not buy or sell it, nor will they fold it up. And the Hour will surely be established while a man has gone off with the milk of his she-camel but will not drink it. And the Hour will surely be established while he is plastering his trough but will not water (his animals) from it. And the Hour will surely be established while he has raised his morsel to his mouth but will not eat it."

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim

- 2891 From Ḥudhayfah, he said: "Then the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ stood among us and delivered a sermon, leaving nothing that would occur from that time until the establishment of the Hour except that he spoke of it. Whoever memorized it, memorized it, and whoever forgot it, forgot it. My companions here know it. And indeed, something of it happens which I had forgotten, then I see it and remember it, just as a man remembers the face of another man when he has been absent from him, then when he sees him, he recognizes him."
- 2894 From Abū Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the Hour will not be established until the Euphrates uncovers a mountain of gold over which people will fight. Ninety-nine out of every hundred will be killed, and every man among them will say, 'Perhaps I will be the one who survives.'"
- 2901 From Ḥudhayfah ibn Asīd al-Ghifārī, he said: "Then the Prophet ﷺ came upon us while we were discussing. He said, 'What are you discussing?' We said, 'We are discussing the Hour.' He said, 'Indeed, it will not be established until you see ten signs before it.' He mentioned: the smoke, the Dajjāl, the Beast, the rising of the sun from its setting, the descent of 'Īsā ibn Maryam ﷺ, Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj (Gog and Magog), three landslides – a landslide in the East, a landslide in the West, and a landslide in the Arabian Peninsula – and the last of that will be a fire that will emerge from Yemen, driving the people to their place of assembly."

- 2909 From Abū Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then Dhū al-Suwayqatayn (the man with thin shanks) from Abyssinia will destroy the House of Allāh, Mighty and Majestic."
- 2922 From Abū Hurayrah that the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "Then the Hour will not be established until the Muslims fight the Jews, and the Muslims will kill them, until the Jew hides behind a stone or a tree, and the stone or the tree will say, 'O Muslim, O servant of Allāh, this is Zafar (a Jew) behind me, so come and kill him,' except for the Gharqad tree, for it is the tree of the Jews."
- 2940 From 'Urwah ibn Mas'ūd al-Thaqafī, he says: "I heard 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, and a man came to him and said, 'Then what is this Ḥadīth that you narrate, saying that the Hour will be established by such-and-such time?' He said, 'Subḥān Allāh (Glory be to Allāh)! or 'Lā ilāha illā Allāh (There is no god but Allāh)! or a similar phrase. 'I had almost resolved never to narrate anything to anyone again! I only said that you will soon see a momentous event: the House (Ka'bah) will be burned, and such-and-such will happen.' Then he said, 'The Messenger of Allāh ﷺ said: "The Dajjāl will emerge in my ummah and will remain for forty – I do not know if it is forty days, forty months, or forty years. Then Allāh will send 'Īsā ibn Maryam, who resembles 'Urwah ibn Mas'ūd. He will seek him (the Dajjāl) and destroy him. Then people will remain for seven years with no enmity between any two. Then Allāh will send a cold wind from the direction of al-Shām, and no one will remain on the face of the earth with an atom's weight of good or faith in his heart but it will seize him, even if one of you were to enter the heart of a mountain, it would enter it upon him until it seizes him." He ('Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr) said, 'I heard it from the Messenger of Allāh ﷺ.' He said, "Then the worst of people will remain, in the levity of birds and the nature of wild beasts. They will not recognize good nor condemn evil. Then Satan will appear to them in a form and say, 'Will you not respond?' They will say, 'What do you command us?' So he will command them to worship idols, and while they are in that state, their provision will be abundant and their life pleasant. Then the Trumpet will be blown, and no one will hear it but he will incline his neck and raise his neck.' He said, 'And the first one to hear it will be a man plastering the trough for his camels.' He said, 'He will fall unconscious, and the people will fall unconscious. Then Allāh will send – or he said, Allāh will send down – rain like dew or shade' – Nu'mān (a narrator) was the one who doubted – 'from which the bodies of people will grow. Then it will be blown a second time, and behold, they will be standing, looking on. Then it will be said, "O people, come to your Lord! {And stop them; indeed, they are to be questioned.}" [Al-Ṣāffāt 37:24]. He said, 'Then it will be said, "Bring out the contingent of the Fire." It will be asked, "From how many?" It will be said, "From every thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine." He said, "That is the Day that will make the children white-haired, and that is the Day when {the leg will be uncovered}.'"" [Al-Qalam 68:42].

The Story of al-Jassāsah

- 2942 Fāṭimah bint Qays, the sister of al-Ḍaḥḥāk ibn Qays, who was among the first emigrant women, said: He said to me, "Narrate to me a Ḥadīth you heard from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, without attributing it to anyone other than him." She replied, "If you wish, I shall do so." He said to her, "Indeed, narrate to me." She said: Then I married Ibn al-Mughīrah, who was one of the best youths of Quraysh at that time. He was struck down in the early period of Jihād with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. When I became a widow, ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn ‘Awf proposed to me, among a group of the companions of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, also proposed to me for his freed slave, Usāmah ibn Zayd. I had been told that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, "Whoever loves me, let him love Usāmah." When the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, spoke to me, I said, "My affair is in your hands, so marry me to whomever you wish." He said, "Move to Umm Sharīk." Umm Sharīk was a wealthy woman from the Anṣār, who spent generously in the way of Allāh, and guests would frequently stay with her. I said, "I will do so." He then said, "Do not do it. Umm Sharīk is a woman who has many guests, and I dislike that your headscarf should fall, or your garment be uncovered from your shins, and the people see something of you that you would dislike. Instead, move to your cousin, ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn Umm Maktūm." He was a man from Banū Fihir, the Fihir of Quraysh, and he was from the same clan as her. So I moved to him.

When my waiting period (‘iddah) ended, I heard the call of the caller of the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, proclaiming, "The prayer is being convened." So I went out to the mosque and prayed with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. I was in the row of women that was directly behind the men. When the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, finished his prayer, he sat on the pulpit, smiling, and said, "Let every person remain in his place of prayer." Then he asked, "Do you know why I have gathered you?" They replied, "Allāh and His Messenger know best." He said, "By Allāh, I did not gather you for something to desire or to fear, but I gathered you because Tamīm al-Dārī, who was a Christian man, came, pledged allegiance, and embraced Islām. He narrated to me a story that agrees with what I used to tell you about the False Messiah (al-Masiḥ al-Dajjāl). He told me that he sailed in a seafaring ship with thirty men from Lakhm and Judhām. The waves tossed them about in the sea for a month. Then they approached an island in the sea around sunset. They sat in the small boats of the ship and entered the island. They were met by a beast, very hairy, such that they could not distinguish its front from its back due to the abundance of its hair. They said, 'Woe to you! What are you?' It said, 'I am al-Jassāsah.' They asked, 'And what is al-Jassāsah?' It replied, 'O people, go to this man in the monastery, for he is most eager to hear news from you.' When it named a man for us, we were frightened of it, lest it be a female devil. We set off quickly until we entered the monastery, and there we found the largest human being we had ever seen, and the most securely bound. His hands were tied to his neck, and the area between his knees and his ankles was bound with iron. We said, 'Woe to you! What are you?' He said, 'You have managed to get news of me, so tell me, who are you?' They said, 'We are people from among the Arabs. We embarked on a seafaring ship, and the sea became turbulent, and the waves tossed us about for a month. Then we approached this island of yours. We sat in its small boats and entered the island. We were met by a beast, very hairy, such that one could not distinguish its front from its back due to the abundance of its hair. We said, 'Woe to you! What are you?' It said, 'I am al-Jassāsah.' We asked, 'And what is al-Jassāsah?' It replied, 'Proceed to this man in the monastery, for he is most eager to hear news from you.' So we came to you quickly, frightened of it, and we were not sure that it was not a female devil.' He said, 'Tell me about the date palms of Baysān.' We asked, 'About what aspect of them do you inquire?' He said, 'I ask you about its date palms, do they still bear fruit?' We told him, 'Yes.' He said, 'Soon they will not bear fruit.' He said, 'Tell me about the Lake of Tiberias (Buḥayrat Ṭabariyyah).' We asked, 'About what aspect of it do you inquire?' He said, 'Is there still water in it?' They said, 'It has abundant water.' He said, 'Soon its water will disappear.' He said, 'Tell me about the spring of Zughar.' They asked, 'About what aspect of it do you inquire?' He said, 'Is there water in the spring, and do its people cultivate with the water of the spring?' We told him, 'Yes, it has abundant water, and its people cultivate with its water.' He said, 'Tell me about the Prophet of the unlettered (Nabī al-Ummiyyīn); what has he done?' They said, 'He has emerged from Makkah and settled in Yathrib (Madīnah).' He asked, 'Did the Arabs fight him?' We said, 'Yes.' He asked, 'How did he deal with them?' So we informed him that he had overcome those of the Arabs who were near him, and they had obeyed him. He said to them, 'Has that indeed happened?' We said, 'Yes.' He said, 'It is better for them that they obey him. I will tell you about myself. I am the Messiah (al-Masīḥ). I am about to be permitted to emerge. I will emerge and travel throughout the earth. I will not leave any village without entering it within forty nights, except Makkah and Ṭaybah (Madīnah), for both are forbidden to me. Every time I want to enter one of them, an angel will meet me with a drawn sword in his hand, barring me from it. And on every pass leading to them, there are angels guarding them.'"

She (Fāṭimah) said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, striking the pulpit with his staff, said, "This is Ṭaybah, this is Ṭaybah, this is Ṭaybah — meaning Madīnah. Had I not told you this before?"

The people said, "Yes." He continued, "The Ḥadīth of Tamīm pleased me because it agreed with what I had told you about him (the False Messiah), and about Madīnah and Makkah. Indeed, he is in the Syrian Sea or the Yemeni Sea. No, rather, he is from the direction of the East – what is he from the direction of the East, what is he from the direction of the East, what is he," and he gestured with his hand towards the East.

She said: So I memorized this from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace.

Sunan Abī Dāwūd:

- 4350 From Sa‘d ibn Abī Waqqāṣ, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then I indeed hope that my nation will not be incapable before its Lord of Him delaying them half a day.” Sa‘d was asked, “And how long is half of that day?” He said, “Five hundred years.”

Ibn Mājah:

- 4066 From Aws ibn Khālid, from Abū Hurayrah, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then the Beast will emerge, and with it will be the ring of Sulaymān ibn Dāwūd and the staff of Mūsā ibn ‘Imrān, peace be upon them both. It will brighten the face of the believer with the staff and stamp the nose of the disbeliever with the ring, so much so that the people of a household will gather and one will say, ‘O believer!’ and another will say, ‘O disbeliever!’”
- 4070 From Ṣafwān ibn ‘Assāl, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then, towards the West, there is a gate that is open, its width is seventy years. That gate will remain open for repentance until the sun rises from its direction. When it rises from its direction, no soul’s faith will benefit it if it had not believed before or earned good through its faith.”

Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Ḥibbān:

- 6638 From ‘Amr ibn Akhtab, he said: “Then the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, led us in the morning prayer, then he ascended the pulpit and addressed us until noon approached. Then he descended, prayed, then ascended the pulpit and addressed us until afternoon approached. Then he descended, prayed, then ascended the pulpit and addressed us until the sun set. He informed us of what had been and what is to be, and the most learned among us is the one who memorized the most."

- 6700 From his father, from Abū Hurayrah, the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then the Hour will not come until turmoil (al-harj) increases, and until the land of the Arabs becomes meadows and rivers."
- 6701 From al-Miqdād ibn al-Aswad, he says he heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Then there will not remain on the face of the earth a house of baked clay or a tent of camel hair but Allāh will cause the word of Islām to enter it, either with the honor of an honored one or the humiliation of a humiliated one."
- 6842 From Abū Hurayrah, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then the Hour will not come until time contracts, so that a year will be like a month, a month like a week, a week like a day, a day like an hour, and an hour like the burning of a palm frond or fiber."
- 6844 From Abū Hurayrah, from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Then, by Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad, the Hour will not come until obscenity and stinginess appear, the trustworthy is betrayed and the traitor is trusted, the nobles (al-wu'ūl) perish and the lowly (al-tuḥūt) emerge." They asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, what are al-wu'ūl and al-tuḥūt?" He said, "Al-wu'ūl are the prominent and noble people, and al-tuḥūt are those who were under the feet of people, unknown."

- 6847 From Abū Wā'il, from 'Abd Allāh, he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Then among the most evil of people are those whom the Hour overtakes while they are alive, and those who take graves as places of worship."
- 6853 From Abū Hurayrah, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Then the Hour will not come until a red wind is sent from the direction of Yemen, by which Allāh will take every soul that believes in Allāh and the Last Day. People will not be alarmed by it due to the fewness of those who die from it – an old man in such-and-such tribe died, and an old woman in such-and-such tribe died. The Book of Allāh will be taken up and raised to the heaven, so not a single verse of it will remain on earth. The earth will vomit out its treasures of gold and silver, and no one will benefit from them after that day. A man will pass by it, kick it with his foot, and say, 'For this, those before us used to fight, and today it is of no benefit.'" Abū Hurayrah said: "And indeed, the first of the Arab tribes to perish will be Quraysh. By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, a man will soon pass by a sandal discarded in the refuse heap, pick it up with his hand, and then say, 'This was one of the sandals of Quraysh among the people.'"

- 8309 From Ḍamrah ibn Ḥabīb, that Ibn Zughb al-Iyādī narrated to him, he said: "I stayed with 'Abd Allāh ibn Ḥawālah al-Azdī, and he said to me while I was staying with him in his house, 'May you have no mother! Is it not enough for Ibn Ḥawālah to have one hundred [camels] granted to him every year?' Then he said, 'The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, sent us around Madīnah on foot to acquire spoils, but we returned without acquiring any. He noticed the hardship on our faces, so he stood up among us and delivered a sermon, saying, "O Allāh, do not entrust them to me, for I would be too weak for them; nor entrust them to themselves, for they would be incapable; nor entrust them to the people, for they would favor themselves over them." Then he said, "Greater Syria (al-Shām) and Persia, or Rome and Persia, will certainly be conquered for you, until one of you will have so many camels and so many cows, and until one of you is given one hundred dīnārs and he finds it dissatisfying." Then he placed his hand on my head or on the crown of my head and said, "O Ibn Ḥawālah, when you see the Caliphate has descended to the Holy Land, then earthquakes, calamities, and momentous events are near. The Hour on that day will be closer to people than this hand of mine is to this head of yours."" This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it. ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Zughb al-Iyādī is known among the Successors of the people of Egypt.

- 8317 From Wāthilah ibn al-Asqa‘, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "The Hour will not come until there are ten signs: a landslide in the East, a landslide in the West, a landslide in the Arabian Peninsula, the False Messiah (al-Dajjāl), the Smoke, the descent of Jesus son of Mary (‘Īsā ibn Maryam), Gog and Magog (Ya’jūj wa Ma’jūj), the Beast, the rising of the sun from its place of setting, and a fire that will emerge from the depths of Aden, driving people to their place of gathering, gathering even the smallest ants." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8373 From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Thunderbolts will increase as the Hour approaches, so that people will wake up and say, 'Who was struck by lightning last night?' and they will say, 'So-and-so" and so-and-so were struck.” This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to Muslim's criteria, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.

- 8375 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Ṣuḥār al-‘Abdī, from his father, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until tribes from among the Arabs are swallowed by the earth, and it will be said, ‘Who remains from Banū Fulān (the sons of so-and-so)?’” He said: “I knew when he said ‘tribes’ that it referred to the Arabs, because non-Arabs (al-‘ajam) are attributed to their villages.” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8378 From Ṭāriq ibn Shihāb, he said: We were sitting with ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, when his attendant came and said, "The prayer has been established." So he stood up, and we stood up with him. We entered the mosque and saw people bowing in the front of the mosque. He said "Allāhu Akbar," bowed, and walked, and we did as he did. He said: Then a man passed by hurriedly and said, "Peace be upon you, O Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān." He replied, "Allāh has spoken the truth, and His Messenger, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, has conveyed it." When we had prayed, he returned and entered his home, and we sat in his place waiting for him to come out. Some of us said to others, "Which of you will ask him?" Ṭāriq said, "I will ask him." So Ṭāriq asked him, saying, "The man greeted you, and you replied to him, 'Allāh has spoken the truth, and His Messenger, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, has conveyed it.'" ‘Abd Allāh said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: "Indeed, among the portents of the Hour will be selective greeting, the prevalence of trade to the extent that a woman will assist her husband in trade, and that a man will go out with his wealth to the ends of the earth, then return and say, ‘I have not profited anything.’"

- 8379 From Khārijah ibn al-Ṣalt al-Burjumī, he said: “I entered the mosque one day with ‘Abd Allāh, and the people were bowing. A man passed by and greeted him, and he said, ‘Allāh has spoken the truth, and His Messenger has spoken the truth. Allāh has spoken the truth, and His Messenger has spoken the truth.’ I asked him about that, and he said, ‘Indeed, the Hour will not come until mosques are taken as thoroughfares, until a man greets another man only out of acquaintance, until women and their husbands engage in trade together, and until horses and women become expensive, then they will become cheap and will not be expensive until the Day of Resurrection.’” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8407 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: “The Hour will not come until Allāh sends a wind that will not leave anyone with an atom’s weight of piety or restraint in their heart without taking their soul. Every people will join what their forefathers used to worship in the pre-Islamic era of ignorance (Jāhiliyyah). A remnant of dregs from among the people will remain, who neither enjoin good nor forbid evil, and they will fornicate in the roads like beasts. When that happens, Allāh’s anger upon the people of the earth will intensify, and He will establish the Hour.”
- 8413 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, he said: “A time will come upon people when no believer will remain except that he will have migrated to al-Shām (Greater Syria).” This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the criteria of both Shaykhs (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim), though they did not include it.
- 8415 From Abū Ghaṭafān, he said: “I heard ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, say: ‘Different mines will emerge. One of them, near the Ḥijāz, will be frequented by the most evil of people. It will be called Fir‘awn (Pharaoh). While they are working in it, gold will be uncovered, and its output will impress them. Then the earth will swallow it and them.” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.

- 8442 From Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, the Hour will not come until predatory animals speak to humans, and until a man’s whip-lash and shoe-strap speak to him, and his thigh informs him of what his family has done after him.” This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to Muslim's criteria, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8472 From his father, from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, Sufyān said: I do not know but that he attributed it to the Prophet. He said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until the land of the Arabs returns to being meadows and rivers.” This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to Muslim's criteria, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8490 From Abū Surayḥah al-Anṣārī, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “The Beast will have three emergences in time. It will first emerge in the farthest part of Yemen, and news of it will spread in the desert, but news of it will not enter the village, meaning Makkah. Then it will remain for a long time after that. Then it will emerge another time near Makkah, and news of it will spread among the people of the desert, and news of it will spread in Makkah. Then it will remain hidden for a long time. Then, while the people are in the most sacred of mosques, the most beloved to Allāh, and the most honored by Allāh, the Exalted – the Sacred Mosque (al-Masjid al-Ḥarām) – they will not be alarmed except by it being in a corner of the mosque, approaching and growing between the Black Stone (al-Rukn al-Aswad) and the Gate of Banī Makhzūm, to the right of one exiting, in the middle of that. People will scatter from it in different directions and together. A group of Muslims will stand firm for it, knowing that they cannot frustrate Allāh. It will emerge upon them, shaking dust from its head. It will begin with them, and it will clear their faces until it leaves them as if they were shining stars. Then it will go forth in the earth, no seeker can catch it, and no fugitive can escape it. So much so that a man will seek refuge from it in prayer, and it will come to him from behind and say, 'O so-and-so, now you pray?' He will turn to it, and it will mark him on his face, then depart. People will live as neighbors in their homes, accompany each other on their journeys, and share in wealth, the believer knowing the disbeliever, until the disbeliever says, 'O believer, pay me my due,' and the believer says, 'O disbeliever, pay me my due.'"

This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration and is the clearest Ḥadīth concerning the mention of the Beast of the Earth, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.

- 8493 From 'Aṭiyyah, from Ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, regarding His, the Almighty and Majestic's, saying: {And when the Word is fulfilled against them, We shall bring forth for them a beast from the earth} [Qur'ān 27:82], he said: "When they do not enjoin good and do not forbid evil."
- 8497 From Qatādah, from Shahr ibn Ḥawshab, he said: \"When the pledge of allegiance to Yazīd ibn Mu'āwiyah came, I said, 'If only I could go out to al-Shām (Greater Syria) and distance myself from the evil of this pledge.' So I went out until I reached al-Shām. I was informed of a gathering Nawf was holding, so I went to him. There was a man with impaired vision, wearing a khamīṣah (a type of garment), and it was 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both. When Nawf saw him, he stopped speaking. 'Abd Allāh said to him, 'Narrate what you were narrating.' He said, 'You are more entitled to narrate than I; you are a companion of the Messenger of* Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace.’ He said, ‘These rulers have forbidden us from narrating Ḥadīth.’ He said, ‘I implore you to narrate to us a Ḥadīth you heard from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace.’ He said: I heard him say, ‘There will be an emigration after an emigration. People will migrate to the place of Ibrāhīm’s emigration. None will remain on earth except the most evil of its inhabitants. Their lands will spew them out, and their own souls will find them repugnant. Allāh will gather them to the Fire with apes and swine. It (the Fire) will spend the night with them when they spend the night, and take its midday nap with them when they take theirs, and it will consume those who lag behind.’ He also said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say, ‘People from my nation will emerge from the East, reciting the Qur’ān, but it will not go beyond their throats. Every time a generation of them emerges, it will be cut off, until the False Messiah (al-Dajjāl) emerges among their remnants.’”

- 8515 From Thābit, from Anas, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until ‘Allāh, Allāh’ is no longer said on earth, and until a woman passes by a sandal, picks it up, and says, ‘This once belonged to a man,’ and until there is one guardian for fifty women, and until the sky rains but the earth does not produce vegetation.” This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to Muslim's criteria, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, that he said: “The Hour will not come until no one remains on the face of the earth for whom Allāh has any need, and until a woman is found openly fornicating in the middle of the road during the day, with no one denouncing it or changing it. The best among them on that day will be the one who says, 'If only you had moved her slightly away from the road.' That person among them will be like Abū Bakr and 'Umar among you."

This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.

Majma' al-Zawā'id by its author 'Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him:

- From 'Utayy al-Sa'dī, he said: I went out in search of knowledge until I reached Kūfah. There, I found 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd among the people of Kūfah. I asked about him and was directed to him. He was in its great mosque. I approached him and said, "Abā 'Abd al-Raḥmān, I have come to you, journeying to you, seeking knowledge from you, hoping that Allāh may benefit us with it after you." He asked me, "From which people are you?" I said, "A man from the people of Baṣrah." He asked, "From whom?" I said, "From this tribe of Banū Sa'd." He said, "O Sa'dī, I will narrate to you a Ḥadīth I heard from the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, when a man came to him and said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, shall I not guide you to a people with abundant wealth and great strength, from whom you can obtain ample or much wealth?' He asked, 'Who are they?' The man said, 'This tribe of Banū Sa'd, from the people of the sands.' The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, 'Hold on! For Banū Sa'd, by Allāh, possess a great fortune. Ask, O Sa'dī.' I said, 'O Abā 'Abd al-Raḥmān, does the Hour have any sign by which it can be known?' He had been reclining, but he sat up straight and said, 'O Sa'dī, you have asked me about what I asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. I said, 'O Messenger of Allāh, does the Hour have any sign by which it can be known?' He said, 'Yes, O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed the Hour has signs, and indeed the Hour has portents. Verily, among the signs and portents of the Hour are:

That the child will be a source of rage.

That the rain will be scorching.

That evil people will overflow abundantly.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that the traitor will be trusted, and the trustworthy will be betrayed.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that connections between distant people (al-aṭbāq) will be maintained, and kinship ties will be severed.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that every tribe will be led by its hypocrites, and every market by its wicked ones.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that prayer niches (maḥārīb) will be adorned, and hearts will be ruined.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that the believer in the tribe will be more humiliated than a small coin (al-naqd).

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that men will be content with men, and women with women.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is... and the conspiracy of women.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the portents and signs of the Hour is that the ruins of the world will be developed, and its developed areas will be ruined.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that musical instruments, pride, and the drinking of intoxicants will become apparent.

O Ibn Mas'ūd, indeed among the signs and portents of the Hour is that children born of fornication will increase.' I asked, 'Abā 'Abd al-Raḥmān, while they are Muslims?' He said, 'Yes.' I asked, 'Abā 'Abd al-Raḥmān, and the Qur'ān is among them?’ He said, ‘Yes.’ I asked, ‘Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, and how will that be?’ He said, ‘A time will come upon people when a man divorces his wife, but she continues to live with him based on her divorce, so they are both fornicators as long as they remain so.’” Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in Al-Awsat and Al-Kabīr.

- From ‘Awf ibn Mālik al-Ashja‘ī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “How will you be, O ‘Awf, when this nation splits into seventy-three sects, one in Paradise and the rest in the Fire?” I asked, “And when will that be, O Messenger of Allāh?” He said: “When debtors are the police (al-ghuramā’ al-sharat), slave-girls rule, lambs (ḥumlān, i.e., unqualified young people) sit on pulpits, the Qur’ān is taken as musical tunes, mosques are adorned and pulpits are raised, war booty (al-fay’) is taken as personal wealth, Zakāh is considered a fine, trust (amānah) is taken as spoils, religious knowledge is sought for purposes other than Allāh, a man obeys his wife, disobeys his mother, and distances his father, the last of this nation curses its first, the leader of the tribe is their most corrupt one, the chief of the people is their vilest one, and a man is honored out of fear of his evil. On that day, that will happen, and people will flee to al-Shām (Greater Syria) and to a city therein called Damascus, one of the best cities of al-Shām, which will protect them from their enemy.” I asked, “And will al-Shām be conquered?” He said, “Yes, soon. Then tribulations will occur after its conquest, then a dark, dusty tribulation will come, then tribulations will follow one another until a man from my household, called the Mahdī (the Guided One), emerges. If you reach him, then follow him and be among the guided ones (al-Mahdiyyīn).”
- From Abū Mūsā, he said: \“The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, was asked about the Hour while I was present. He said, ‘No one knows it except Allāh, and none can reveal its time except Him. But I will tell you about its portents and what precedes it. Verily, before it, there will be* tribulations and harj.’ It was asked, ‘O Messenger of Allāh, as for tribulations, we know them, but what is harj?’ He said, ‘In the Abyssinian tongue, it is killing. And that animosity will be cast among people, so no one will recognize another, people’s hearts will become dry, and they will remain restless, not recognizing good nor denouncing evil...’”

- From him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until the Qur’ān is a source of shame, time contracts, its bonds are broken, years and fruits diminish, the obscure (al-tuhmā) are trusted and the trustworthy are accused, the liar is believed and the truthful is disbelieved, and harj increases.” They asked, “What is harj, O Messenger of Allāh?” He said, “Killing. And oppression, envy, and stinginess will appear, affairs will differ among people, desires will be followed, judgment will be based on conjecture, knowledge will be taken away, ignorance will appear, the child will be a source of rage, winter will be like summer heat, obscenity will be proclaimed openly, and the earth will be irrigated with blood.”
- From Anas ibn Mālik, attributing it to the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Indeed, among the signs of the Hour is that the new moon of one night will be seen as if it were for two nights, mosques will be taken as thoroughfares, and sudden death will appear.” Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in Al-Ṣaghīr and Al-Awsat.
- From him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until the land of the Arabs becomes meadows and rivers, and until a rider travels between Iraq and Makkah fearing nothing but going astray from the road.” Narrated by Aḥmad, and its narrators are those of al-Ṣaḥīḥ.

- From him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The Hour will not come until time contracts, so that a year will be like a month, a month like a week, a week like a day, and a day like the burning of a rag.” Narrated by Abū Ya‘lā, and its narrators are those of al-Ṣaḥīḥ.

Al-Muṣannaf fī al-Aḥādīth wa al-Āthār by Abū Bakr ‘Abd Allāh ibn Muḥammad ibn Abī Shaybah al-Kūfī.

- 37232 From Ya‘lā ibn ‘Aṭā’, from his father, he said: I was holding the reins of ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr’s mount when he said: “How will you be when you demolish the House (the Ka‘bah), not leaving one stone upon another?” They asked, “While we are upon Islām?” He said, “While you are upon Islām.” He asked, “Then what?” He said, “Then it will be rebuilt better than it was. When you see Makkah with subterranean canals (kaẓā’im), and you see buildings rising above the mountain tops, know that the matter has overshadowed you.”
- 37552 Wakī‘ narrated to us from Sufyān, from ‘Uthmān ibn al-Ḥārith, from Abū al-Waddāk, he said: “Among the signs of the Hour’s approach is the swelling of the new moons.”
- 37556 Wakī‘ narrated to us from Ismā‘īl, from Qays, he said: “I have been informed that the Hour will not come until stones and trees say, ‘O believer, this is a Zafar (a disbeliever), this is a Christian, kill him.’”
- 37750 Yazīd ibn Hārūn narrated to us, he said: Ḥammād informed us from al-Jarīrī, from Ibn al-Muthannā, from Abū Umāmah, he said: “The Hour will not come until the evil people of al-Shām (Greater Syria) move to Iraq, and the best people of Iraq move to al-Shām.”

Al-Durr al-Manthūr by al-Suyūṭī:

- Al-Bukhārī narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that a Bedouin asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, "When is the Hour?" He said, "When trust is lost, then await the Hour." He asked, "O Messenger of Allāh, and how is it lost?" He said, "When command is entrusted to those unfit for it, then await the Hour."
- Ibn Mardawayh narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: **"A man came and asked, 'O Messenger of Allāh, when is the Hour?' He said, 'The one asked is no more knowledgeable than the asker.' He said, 'If only you would inform us of its portents...' He said, 'The convergence of markets.' I asked, 'And what is the convergence of markets?' He said, 'That people complain to one another about the scarcity of their earnings. Children of fornication will increase. Backbiting will spread. The wealthy man will be glorified. The voices of the corrupt will be raised in mosques. People of evil will become prominent, and fornication will appear.'"*
- Ibn Mardawayh and al-Daylamī narrated from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Among the portents of the Hour are bad neighborliness, severing of kinship ties, the sword being suspended from Jihād, and the world being sought through religion."
- Al-Bayhaqī narrated in Al-Ba‘th wa al-Nushūr from al-Ḥasan, he said: ‘Alī said: "I went out in search of knowledge and came to Kūfah. There I found ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him. I said, 'O Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, does the Hour have any sign by which it can be known?' He said, 'I asked the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, about that, and he said, 'Indeed, among the portents of the Hour is that the child will be a source of rage, the rain will be scorching, evil people will overflow abundantly, the liar will be believed, the traitor will be trusted, the trustworthy will be betrayed, every tribe and every market will be led by their wicked ones, prayer niches (maḥārīb) will be adorned, hearts will be ruined, men will be content with men, and women with women, the developed areas of the world will be ruined, and its ruins will be developed, tribulation will appear, usury will be consumed, musical instruments, treasures, and the drinking of intoxicants will appear, and police/informers (al-sharaṭ), slanderers (al-ghammāzūn), and backbiters (al-hammāzūn) will increase.””

- Abū Nu‘aym narrated in Al-Ḥilyah from Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Among the signs of the Hour’s approach are seventy-two traits:

When you see people neglecting prayer, losing trust, consuming usury, deeming lying permissible, taking bloodshed lightly, erecting lofty buildings, selling religion for worldly gain, severing kinship ties, governance becoming weak, falsehood becoming truth, silk becoming a common garment, injustice appearing, divorce becoming rampant, sudden death occurring, the treacherous being trusted, the trustworthy being deemed treacherous, the liar being believed, the truthful being disbelieved, slander abounding, rain becoming scorching, the child becoming a source of rage, the vile overflowing, the noble diminishing, princes and ministers being liars, trustees being traitors, leaders/informants (al-‘urafā’) being oppressors, and Qur’ān reciters being corrupt – when they wear sheep’s skins, their hearts will be more putrid than a carcass and more bitter than aloes. Allāh, the Exalted, will cover them with a tribulation in which they will stumble confusedly, walking with arrogance and slowness like the stumbling of the oppressive Jews. Gold coins (al-ṣafrā’, meaning dīnārs) will become prominent, and silver coins (al-bayḍā’) will be sought after. Sins will multiply, security will diminish, copies of the Qur’ān will be adorned, mosques will be decorated, minarets will be built tall, hearts will be ruined, intoxicants will be drunk, prescribed punishments will be suspended, the slave-girl will give birth to her mistress, you will see the barefoot, naked ones becoming kings, women participating with their husbands in trade, men imitating women and women imitating men, connection made for other than Allāh's sake, the believer will give testimony without being asked to testify, greetings given only to acquaintances, religious knowledge sought for purposes other than Allāh, the Hereafter's deeds sought for worldly gain, spoils of war taken as personal wealth, trusts taken as spoils, and Zakāh considered a burden. The leader of the people will be the vilest among them, a man will disobey his father, be harsh to his mother, harm his friend, and obey his wife. The voices of the corrupt will be raised in mosques, singing girls and musical instruments will be adopted, intoxicants will be drunk in the streets, oppression will be taken as a source of pride, judgment will be sold, the police/informers (al-sharaṭ) will be numerous, the Qur'ān will be taken as light tunes, and the later generations of this nation will curse its earlier ones. Then let them expect after that a red wind, swallowing by the earth, metamorphosis, pelting with stones, and signs."

- Ibn Mardawayh narrated from Ibn 'Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: **"The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, performed the Farewell Pilgrimage (Ḥajjat al-Wadā'), then he took hold of the ring of the Ka'bah's door and said, 'O people, shall I not inform you of the portents of the Hour?' Salmān, may Allāh be pleased with him, stood up to him and said, 'Inform us, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you, O Messenger of Allāh.'* He said, 'Indeed, among the portents of the Hour are the neglect of prayer, inclination with desires, and glorification of the wealthy man.' Salmān asked, 'And will this happen, O Messenger of Allāh?' He said, 'Yes, by Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad. At that time, O Salmān, Zakāh will be considered a fine, and war booty (al-fay') will be considered spoils. The liar will be believed, and the truthful will be disbelieved. The traitor will be trusted, and the trustworthy will be betrayed. The Ruwaybiḍah will speak.’ He (Salmān) asked, ‘And what is the Ruwaybiḍah?’ He said, ‘One who speaks about the affairs of the people when he did not speak before. Nine-tenths of them will deny the truth. Islām will depart until only its name remains, and the Qur’ān will depart until only its script remains. Copies of the Qur’ān will be adorned with gold. The males of my nation will become obese. Consultation will be with slave-girls. Sermons will be delivered on pulpits, and discourse will be for women. At that time, mosques will be adorned like churches and synagogues are adorned, minarets will be built tall, and rows (in prayer) will be numerous, but with hearts filled with mutual hatred, differing tongues, and abundant desires.’ Salmān asked, ‘And will that happen, O Messenger of Allāh?’ He said, ‘Yes, by Him in Whose Hand is the soul of Muḥammad. Then, after that, O Salmān, the believer among them will be more humiliated than a slave-girl; his heart will melt in his chest like salt melts in water because of the evil he sees but cannot change. Men will be content with men, and women with women. Young boys will be lusted after just as virgin girls are lusted after. At that time, O Salmān, there will be corrupt rulers, wicked ministers, and treacherous trustees. They will neglect prayers and follow desires. If you reach them, pray your prayers at their appointed times.’

‘Then, after that, O Salmān, captives will come from the East and captives from the West. Their bodies will be the bodies of humans, but their hearts will be the hearts of devils. They will not show mercy to the young nor respect the old. Then, after that, O Salmān, people will perform pilgrimage (Ḥajj) to this Sacred House. Their kings will perform pilgrimage for leisure and amusement, their rich for trade, their poor for begging, and their reciters for show and reputation.’ He (Salmān) asked, ‘And will that happen, O Messenger of Allāh?’ He said, ‘Yes, by Him in Whose Hand is my soul. Then, after that, O Salmān, lying will spread, a tailed star will appear, women will participate with their husbands in trade, and markets will converge.’ He (Salmān) asked, ‘And what is their convergence?’ He said, ‘Their stagnation and the scarcity of their profits. Then, after that, O Salmān, Allāh will send a wind containing serpents... which will snatch the leaders of the scholars because they saw evil and did not change it.’ He (Salmān) asked, ‘And will that happen, O Messenger of Allāh?’ He said, ‘Yes, by Him Who sent Muḥammad with the truth.’”

- ‘Abd al-Razzāq narrated in Al-Muṣannaf from Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: “By Allāh, the Hour will not come until you are ruled by one who does not weigh even ten mosquitoes on the Day of Resurrection.”
- Aḥmad, Ibn Mājah, and al-Ṭabarānī narrated from Bil-Ijmā‘ bint al-Ḥurr, she said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, say: “A time will come upon people when they will stand for an hour unable to find an Imām to lead them in prayer.”
- Ibn Abī al-Dunyā narrated from Abū al-Zāhiriyyah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: “The Hour will not come until two men go to do something, and one of them is transformed into an ape or a pig, but what happened to his companion does not deter the one who was saved from proceeding with his affair until he fulfills his desire! And until two men go to do something, and the earth swallows one of them, but what happened to his companion does not deter the one who was saved from proceeding with his affair until he fulfills his desire from it.”
- Ibn Abī al-Dunyā narrated from Mālik ibn Dīnār, he said: “It has reached me that there will be a wind and darkness at the end of time. People will flee to their scholars, only to find that they have been transformed.”
- Al-Tirmidhī narrated in Nawādir al-Uṣūl from Abū Umāmah, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “There will be a great terror in my nation, and people will turn to their scholars, only to find them as apes and swine.” Ibn Abī Shaybah narrated from Ḥudhayfah that he said: “You will indeed act like the Children of Israel; there will be nothing among them except that its like will be among you.” A man asked, “Will there be apes and swine among us?” He said, “And what ensures you against that, may you have no mother?”

Al-Sunan al-Wāridah fī al-Fitan:

- From al-Nazzāl ibn Sabrah, he said: “Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, ascended the pulpit, praised Allāh and lauded Him, then said, ‘O people, ask me before you lose me.’ He said this three times. Ṣa‘ṣa‘ah ibn Ṣūḥān al-‘Abdī stood up to him and said, ‘O Commander of the Faithful, inform us when the False Messiah (al-Dajjāl) will emerge.’ He said, ‘O Ibn Ṣūḥān, sit down. Allāh knows what you have said. The one asked about it is no more knowledgeable than the asker. However, it has signs, occurrences, and things that will follow one another like one sandal follows another. If you wish, I will inform you of its signs.’ He said, ‘It is about that I asked you, O Commander of the Faithful.’ He said, ‘Count with your hand, O Ṣa‘ṣa‘ah: when people neglect prayer and lose track of the new moons, deem lying permissible, consume usury, take bribes, construct lofty buildings, follow desires, sell religion for worldly gain, take bloodshed lightly, sever kinship ties, forbearance becomes weakness, oppression becomes a joy, rulers are corrupt, ministers are treacherous, their leaders/informants (‘urafā’uhum) are oppressors, their reciters are wicked, injustice appears, divorce increases, sudden death, slanderous speech, copies of the Qur’ān are adorned, mosques are decorated, minarets are built tall, rows (in prayer) are crowded, covenants are broken, hearts are ruined, women participate with their husbands in trade out of greed for the world, women abandon their outer garments (mayāzir) and imitate men, men imitate women, greetings are given only to acquaintances, testimony is given before being asked, they wear sheep's skins over wolves' hearts – their hearts are more bitter than aloes and more putrid than a carcass – and they seek worldly gain through deeds of the Hereafter, and religious understanding without true knowledge. Then salvation, salvation! Haste, haste! Caution, caution! Seriousness, seriousness! O Ṣa'ṣa'ah ibn Ṣūḥān, what an excellent dwelling on that day will be Bayt al-Maqdis (Jerusalem)! A time will surely come upon people when one of them will say, 'O if only I had a straw in a mud brick in the wall of Bayt al-Maqdis!' with women, greetings for acquaintance, testimony before being asked, wearing sheep's skins over wolves' hearts, their hearts more bitter than aloes and more putrid than a carcass, seeking worldly gain through deeds of the Hereafter, and religious understanding without true knowledge. Then salvation, salvation! Haste, haste! Caution, caution! Seriousness, seriousness! O Ṣa'ṣa'ah ibn Ṣūḥān, what an excellent dwelling on that day will be Bayt al-Maqdis. A time will surely come upon people when one of them will say, 'O if only I had a straw in a mud brick in the wall of Bayt al-Maqdis.'"

- 1874 From 'Alī, he said: "Increase your circumambulation of this House, for it is as if I see a bald man, with small ears and thin shanks, carrying a mattock, demolishing it."
- 1878 From Shurayḥ ibn 'Ubayd, from Ka'b, he said: "The Abyssinians will make an expedition, reaching the House. Then the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria) will go out to them and find that they have spread over the land. They will kill them in the valleys of Banī 'Alī, which are the mosques of Madīnah, until an Abyssinian is sold for a shamlah (a piece of cloth)." Ṣafwān said: And Abū al-Yamān narrated to me from Ka'b, he said: "...They will ruin the House and take the Maqām (Station of Ibrāhīm). They will be overtaken while doing so, and Allāh, the Exalted, will kill them.”

- 1879 ‘Abd al-Ṣamad ibn ‘Abd al-Wārith narrated to us from Ḥammād ibn Salamah, from ‘Alī ibn Zayd, from al-‘Uryān ibn al-Haytham, he heard ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr say: “The Abyssinians will emerge after the descent of Jesus son of Mary (‘Īsā ibn Maryam). Jesus will send a vanguard, and they (the Abyssinians) will be defeated.”
- 1880 Ibn Wahb narrated to us from Ibn Abī Dhi’b, from Sa‘īd ibn Sam‘ān, the freed slave of the family of so-and-so (Ibn Wahb named him), he said: I heard Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, narrate to Abū Qatādah from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “The Abyssinians will come and ruin the House, a ruin after which it will never be rebuilt, and they are the ones who will extract its treasure.”
- 1887 Ibn Wahb narrated to us from Ibn Lahī‘ah, from Abū Qabīl, he said: “Wardān went out one day from Maslamah ibn Makhlad, who was the governor of Egypt. He passed by ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr in a hurry. He called out to him and said, ‘Where are you going, O Abā ‘Ubayd?’ He said, ‘The governor sent me to Manf (Memphis) to bring him Pharaoh’s treasure.’ He said, ‘Go back to him, convey my greetings to him, and tell him that Pharaoh’s treasure is not for him nor for his companions. It is for the Abyssinians. They will come in their ships, intending to reach al-Fuṣṭāṭ (Cairo). They will proceed until they disembark at Manf. Allāh will reveal Pharaoh’s treasure to them, and they will take from it what they wish. They will say, ‘We do not seek better spoils than this.’ They will return, and the Muslims will go out in pursuit of them until they catch them. Allāh will defeat the Abyssinians, and the Muslims will kill and capture them, until an Abyssinian on that day will be sold for a garment (kisā’)...”

The Mahdī (the Guided One), His Signs, News of the Sufyānī, and the Emergence of the Qaḥṭānī:

Al-Bukhārī

- 6700 From Abū Hurayrah, that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then the Hour will not come until a man from Qaḥṭān emerges, driving people with his staff.”

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim:

- 2882 From ‘Ubayd Allāh ibn al-Qibṭiyyah, he said: Then al-Ḥārith ibn Abī Rabī‘ah and ‘Abd Allāh ibn Ṣafwān entered, and I was standing with Umm Salamah, the Mother of the Believers. They asked her about the army that will be swallowed by the earth, and that was during the days of Ibn al-Zubayr. She said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “A seeker of refuge will seek refuge in the House, and an army will be sent against him. When they are in a desert land, they will be swallowed by the earth.” I asked, “O Messenger of Allāh, what about one who was unwilling?” He said, “He will be swallowed by the earth with them, but he will be resurrected on the Day of Resurrection according to his intention.” Abū Ja‘far said: It is the desert of Madīnah.
- 2911 From Abū Hurayrah, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Then days and nights will not pass until a man called al-Jahjāh rules.”

Sunan Abī Dāwūd:

- 4282 From Zirr, from ‘Abd Allāh, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Then if only one day were to remain of the world,”

Zā'idah added in his narration of the Ḥadīth: "Allāh would lengthen that day," then they agreed, "until He sends in it a man from me, or from my household, whose name matches my name, and whose father's name matches my father's name." He added in the Ḥadīth of Fiṭr: "He will fill the earth with equity and justice just as it was filled with oppression and injustice."

- 4285 From Abū Naḍrah, from Abū Sa'īd al-Khudrī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then the Mahdī (the Guided One) is from me, with a broad forehead and a prominent nose. He will fill the earth with equity and justice just as it was filled with tyranny and oppression. He will rule for seven years."
- 4286 From Umm Salamah, the wife of the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Then there will be a dispute at the death of a Caliph, and a man from the people of Madīnah will flee to Makkah. Some people from Makkah will come to him and bring him out against his will. They will pledge allegiance to him between the Corner (al-Rukn) and the Station (al-Maqām). An army will be sent against him from al-Shām (Greater Syria), and it will be swallowed by the earth in al-Baydā', between Makkah and Madīnah. When people see that, the Abdāl (Substitutes) of al-Shām and the contingents (‘aṣā’ib) of the people of Iraq will come to him and pledge allegiance to him between the Corner and the Station. Then a man from Quraysh will arise, whose maternal uncles are from Kalb. He will send an army against them, and they (the Mahdī's forces) will overcome them. That is the expedition of Kalb, and woe to whoever does not witness the spoils of Kalb. He (the Mahdī) will distribute wealth and act among the people according to the Sunnah of their Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. Islām will cast its anchor to the earth. He will remain for seven years, then the Muslims will pray over him."

- From Hilāl ibn ‘Amr, he said: I heard ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, say: The Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “A man will emerge from beyond the river, called al-Ḥārith ibn Ḥarrāth. At his vanguard will be a man called Maṣṣūr, who will pave the way or establish power for the family of Muḥammad, just as Quraysh established power for the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. It is obligatory for every believer to support him,” or he said, “to respond to him.”

Ibn Mājah:

- 4082 From Ibrāhīm, from ‘Alqamah, from ‘Abd Allāh, he said: “Then while we were with the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, some youths from Banū Hāshim approached. When the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, saw them, his eyes welled up with tears and his color changed.” He (‘Abd Allāh) said, “I said, ‘We continue to see something in your face that we dislike.’ He said, ‘We are a household for whom Allāh has chosen the Hereafter over this world. Indeed, the people of my household will face affliction after me, until a people come from the East with black banners. They will ask for good but will not be given it. They will fight and be victorious. They will be given what they asked for, but they will not accept it until they hand it over to a man from my household. He will fill it (the earth) with justice as they had filled it with tyranny. Whoever among you reaches that time... even if crawling on snow.’”
- 4084 From Thawbān, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then three will fight over your treasure, all of them sons of a Caliph, but it will not go to any one of them. Then the black banners will appear from the East, and they will kill you in a way that no people have ever been killed before.” Then he mentioned something I do not remember, and said, "When you see him, pledge allegiance to him, even if crawling on snow, for he is Allāh's Caliph, the Mahdī (the Guided One)."

- 4085 From Ibrāhīm ibn Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafīyyah, from his father, from 'Alī, the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then the Mahdī (the Guided One) is from us, the People of the Household. Allāh will rectify him in a single night."
- 4088 From Abū Zur'ah 'Amr ibn Jābir al-Ḥaḍramī, from 'Abd Allāh ibn al-Ḥārith ibn Jaz' al-Zubaydī, the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then people will emerge from the East and pave the way for the Mahdī (the Guided One)," meaning his rule.
- 4094 From Kathīr ibn 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn 'Awf, from his father, from his grandfather, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "Then the Hour will not come until the nearest garrisons of the Muslims are at Būlā'." Then he, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said, "O 'Alī, O 'Alī, O 'Alī!" He ('Alī) said, "May my father and mother be sacrificed for you!" He said, "Indeed, you will fight Banū al-Aṣfar (the Byzantines/Romans), and those after you will fight them, until the vanguard of Islām, the people of the Ḥijāz, who do not fear the blame of any blamer in Allāh's cause, will go out to them. They will conquer Constantinople with glorification (tasbīḥ) and magnification (takbīr) of Allāh. They will acquire spoils the like of which they have never acquired, until they divide them by shield-fulls. Then a herald will come saying, 'The Messiah (False Messiah) has emerged in your lands.' But it is a lie. The one who takes (from the spoils believing the herald) will be regretful, and the one who leaves (them) will be regretful."

Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Hibbān:

- From Mujāhid, from Umm Salamah, she said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then there will be a dispute at the death of a Caliph, and a man from Quraysh, from the people of Madīnah, will go to Makkah. Some people from Makkah will come to him and bring him out against his will. They will pledge allegiance to him between the Corner (al-Rukn) and the Station (al-Maqām). An army will be sent against him from the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria), and when they are in al-Baydā’, they will be swallowed by the earth. When people hear of that, the Abdāl (Substitutes) of the people of al-Shām and the contingent (‘iṣābah) of the people of Iraq will come to him and pledge allegiance to him. A man from Quraysh will arise, whose maternal uncles are from Kalb. He will send an army against them, and they (the Mahdī’s forces) will defeat them and overcome them. He will divide their wealth among the people and act among them according to the Sunnah of their Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace. Islām will cast its anchor to the earth. He will remain for seven years.”
- 6823 From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Then the Hour will not come until the earth is filled with oppression and aggression. Then a man from my household or my progeny (‘itratī) will emerge and fill it with equity and justice just as it was filled with oppression and aggression.”

Al-Mustadrak ‘alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn by Abū ‘Abd Allāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī:

- 8328 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn al-Ḥārith, from Umm Salamah, may Allāh be pleased with her, she said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Allegiance will be pledged to a man from my nation between the Corner (al-Rukn) and the Station (al-Maqām), with a number like that of the people of Badr. The contingents (‘iṣab) of Iraq and the Abdāl (Substitutes) of al-Shām (Greater Syria) will come to him. An army from al-Shām will come against them, and when they are at al-Baydā’, they will be swallowed by the earth. Then a man from Quraysh, whose maternal uncles are from Kalb, will advance towards him, and Allāh will defeat them.” He said: “It used to be said that the truly disappointed on that day is the one who missed out on the spoils of Kalb.”

- 8329 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, attributed to the Prophet (marfū‘): “The deprived one is he who is deprived of the spoils of Kalb, even if it were a single camel tether. By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, their women will be sold on the steps of Damascus, until a woman is returned because of a fracture found in her leg.” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8434 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: “We came to the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, and he came out to us cheerful, joy evident on his face. We did not ask him about anything but he informed us of it, nor did we remain silent but he initiated speech with us, until some youths from Banū Hāshim passed by, among them al-Ḥasan and al-Ḥusayn. When he saw them, he embraced them, and his eyes overflowed with tears. We said, ‘O Messenger of Allāh, we continue to see something in your face that we dislike.’ He said, ‘We are a household for whom Allāh has chosen the Hereafter over this world. Indeed, the people of my household will face, after me, expulsion and dispersion in the lands, until black banners rise from the East. They will ask for the truth but will not be given it. Then they will ask for it but will not be given it. Then they will ask for it but will not be given it. They will fight and be victorious. Whoever among you or your descendants reaches that time, let him go to the Imām of my household, even if crawling on snow, for they are banners of guidance. They will hand it (authority) over to a man from my household whose name matches my name, and whose father's name matches my father's name. He will rule the earth and fill it with equity and justice just as it was filled with tyranny and oppression.”

- 8438 From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, the Prophet of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “A severe trial from their ruler will befall my nation in the end of time, a trial more severe than any heard of, until the vast earth becomes constricted for them, and until the earth is filled with tyranny and oppression. The believer will find no refuge to resort to from the oppression. Then Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, will send a man from my progeny (‘itratī) who will fill the earth with equity and justice just as it was filled with oppression and tyranny. The inhabitants of the heaven and the inhabitants of the earth will be pleased with him. The earth will not withhold any of its seeds but will bring them forth, nor will the sky withhold any of its raindrops but Allāh will pour them down upon them abundantly. He will live among them for seven, or eight, or nine years. The living will wish for the dead because of the good that Allāh, the Almighty and Majestic, will bestow upon the people of the earth.” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.
- 8530 ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: “The Sufyānī will appear over al-Shām (Greater Syria). Then there will be a battle between them at Qarqīsiyā, until the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth are satiated with their corpses. Then a breach will open upon them from behind them, and a group of them will advance until they enter the land of Khurāsān. The cavalry of the Sufyānī will advance in pursuit of the people of Khurāsān, and they will kill the Shī‘ah (partisans) of the family of Muḥammad, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, in Kūfah. Then the people of Khurāsān will emerge in search of the Mahdī (the Guided One)."

- 8531 From Thawbān, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "When you see the black banners emerging from the direction of Khurāsān, then go to them, even if crawling, for indeed among them is Allāh's Caliph, the Mahdī (the Guided One)." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the criteria of both Shaykhs (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim), though they did not include it.
- 8537 From 'Amr ibn Shu'ayb, from his father, from his grandfather, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "In Dhū al-Qa'dah, tribes will contend and depart. The pilgrims (Ḥajj) will be plundered, and there will be a great battle at Minā in which many will be killed and blood will flow, until their blood flows over the Jamrat al-'Aqabah. Their leader will flee and come between the Corner (al-Rukn) and the Station (al-Maqām). He will be pledged allegiance to while he is unwilling. It will be said to him, 'If you refuse, we will strike your neck.' A number like that of the people of Badr will pledge allegiance to him. The inhabitants of the heaven and the inhabitants of the earth will be pleased with them." Abū Yūsuf said: Muḥammad ibn 'Abd Allāh narrated to me from 'Amr ibn Shu'ayb, from his father, from 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, who said: "People will perform Ḥajj together and will be at 'Arafāt together without an Imām. While they are dismounted at Minā, something like a rabid dog will seize them. The tribes will rise against one another and fight until blood flows over al-'Aqabah. They will flee to the best among them and find him pressing his face to the Ka'bah, weeping, as if I can see his tears. They will say, 'Come, let us pledge allegiance to you.' He will say, 'Woe to you! How many covenants have you broken, and how much blood have you shed?' He will be pledged allegiance to unwillingly. If you reach him, then pledge allegiance to him, for he is the Mahdī (the Guided One) on earth and the Mahdī (the Guided One) in heaven.”

- 8580 From Ibn al-Musayyib, from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Then there will be a loud sound (haddah) in the month of Ramaḍān that will awaken the sleeper and startle the awake. Then a group (‘iṣābah) will appear in Shawwāl, then turmoil (ma‘ma‘ah) in Dhū al-Ḥijjah, then inviolable things will be violated in al-Muḥarram, then death in Ṣafar, then tribes will dispute in Rabī‘, then the utmost wonder will be between Jumādā and Rajab. Then a well-equipped she-camel will be better than a fortress that yields one hundred thousand.”
- 8586 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then a man called the Sufyānī will emerge from the depths of Damascus. Most of those who follow him will be from Kalb. He will kill until he rips open the bellies of women. Qays will gather against him, but he will kill them until he does not spare even the tail of a small hill. A man from my household will emerge in al-Ḥarrah. News of him will reach the Sufyānī, who will send a contingent of his army against him, but they (the Mahdī’s forces) will defeat them. The Sufyānī will then march towards him with his followers until, when he reaches a desert land, they will be swallowed by the earth, and none of them will survive except the one who informs about them.” This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration according to the criteria of both Shaykhs (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim), though they did not include it.
- 8658 From ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, he says: “Then there will be a tribulation from which people will be sifted as gold is sifted in the mine. So do not curse the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria), but curse their oppressors, for among them are the Abdāl (Substitutes). Allāh will send upon them a flood from the sky which will drown them, so that even if foxes were to fight them, they would overcome them. Then, after that, Allāh will send a man from the progeny of the Messenger, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, with twelve thousand if they are few, and fifteen thousand if they are many. Their sign or mark will be 'Amit, Amit' (Kill, Kill), under three banners. The people of seven banners will fight them, each banner-holder aspiring to kingship. They will fight and be defeated. Then the Hāshimī will appear, and Allāh will restore to the people their unity and blessings. They will remain in that state until the False Messiah (al-Dajjāl) emerges." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, though Al-Bukhārī and Muslim did not include it.

- 8659 From Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah, he said: "Then we were with 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, and a man asked him about the Mahdī (the Guided One). 'Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, said, 'Far from it!' Then he counted seven on his hand and said, 'He will emerge at the end of time, when a man says, "Allāh, Allāh," he will be killed. Allāh, the Exalted, will gather for him a people like scattered clouds. Allāh will unite their hearts. They will not feel estranged from anyone, nor will they rejoice at anyone joining them, their number being that of the companions of Badr. The earlier generations did not surpass them, nor will the later generations reach them, and their number will be that of the companions of Ṭālūt (Saul) who crossed the river with him." Abū al-Ṭufayl said: Ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah asked, "Do you want him?" I said, "Yes." He said, "Indeed, he will emerge from between these two wooden posts." I said, "By Allāh, I will not leave them until I die." So he died there, meaning Makkah, may Allāh, the Exalted, protect it. This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the criteria of both Shaykhs (Al-Bukhārī and Muslim), though they did not include it.

Majma‘ al-Zawā’id by its author ‘Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- From Umm Salamah, may Allāh be pleased with her, she said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “The king of the West will march to the king of the East and kill him. He will send an army to Madīnah, and they will be swallowed by the earth. Then he will send an army, and some people from Madīnah will be forgotten. A seeker of refuge will return from the Sanctuary (al-Ḥaram), and people will gather around him like scattered, incoming birds, until three hundred and fourteen men gather around him, including women. He will overcome every tyrant and son of a tyrant, and he will manifest such justice that the living will wish for their dead. He will live for seven years, then what is beneath the earth will be better than what is above it.” Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in Al-Awsat.
- From him... he said: My intimate friend Abū al-Qāsim, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, narrated to me, he said: “The Hour will not come until a man from my household emerges against them and strikes them until they return to the truth.” He (the narrator) said, I asked, “And how long will he rule?” He said, “Five and two.” He (the narrator) said, I asked, “What is five and two?” He said, “I do not know.” Narrated by Abū Ya‘lā.

Musnad al-Imām Aḥmad ibn Ḥanbal:

- From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “Then I give you glad tidings of the Mahdī (the Guided One), who will be sent to my nation amidst disputes among people and earthquakes. He will fill the earth with equity and justice just as it was filled with tyranny and oppression...”

Al-Muṣannaf fī al-Aḥādīth wa al-Āthār by Abū Bakr ‘Abd Allāh ibn Muḥammad ibn Abī Shaybah al-Kūfī.

- 37201 ‘Āsim al-Bajalī said: “Ask your Bikīlī – meaning Nawf – about the sign in Sha‘bān, the events in Ramaḍān, the distinguishing in Shawwāl, the good – meaning killing – and the turmoil in Dhū al-Qa‘dah, and the decree in Dhū al-Ḥijjah.”

Musnad al-Shāmiyyīn:

- 937 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “Then the Mahdī (the Guided One) will emerge, and upon his head will be an angel proclaiming, ‘This is the Mahdī (the Guided One), so follow him.’”

Ḥadīth on the Black Banners in the book Al-Bidāyah wa al-Nihāyah by Ibn Kathīr, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- From Thawbān, he said: The Messenger of Allāh said: “Then three will be killed over your treasure, all of them sons of a Caliph, but it will not go to any one of them. Then the black banners will come from Khurāsān, and they will kill them in a slaughter the like of which has not been seen. Then Allāh’s Caliph, the Mahdī (the Guided One), will come. When you hear of him, go to him and pledge allegiance, even if crawling on snow, for he is Allāh’s Caliph, the Mahdī (the Guided One).”
- From Thawbān, he said: The Messenger of Allāh said: “When the black banners approach from the direction of Khurāsān, then go to them, even if crawling on snow, for indeed among them is Allāh’s Caliph, the Mahdī (the Guided One).”

- From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd: **“That the Messenger of Allāh mentioned some youths from Banū Hāshim, and his eyes welled up with tears. He mentioned the banners and said, ‘Whoever reaches them, let him go to them, even if crawling on snow.’”*
- From ‘Alqamah, from ‘Abd Allāh, who is Ibn Mas‘ūd, he said: The Messenger of Allāh said: “Black banners will come from the East. The horses will wade through blood until they establish justice. They will demand justice but will not be given it. They will appear, and justice will be demanded from them, but they will not be given it.” This chain of narration is sound (ḥasan).
- From Abū Hurayrah, from the Messenger of Allāh, that he said: “Black banners will emerge from Khurāsān, which nothing will be able to turn back until they are planted in Īliyā’ (Jerusalem).” Al-Tirmidhī narrated it from Qutaybah with this chain and said it is gharīb (uncommon). Al-Bayhaqī and al-Ḥākim also narrated it.
- From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh said: “Then, at a break in time and the appearance of an era of tribulations, a man called al-Saffāḥ (the Shedder of Blood/Generous Giver) will emerge, and his giving of wealth will be in handfuls.”
- Indeed, Nu‘aym ibn Ḥammād narrated from Ibn Wahb, from Ibn Lahī‘ah, from Yazīd ibn ‘Amr al-Ma‘āfirī, from Qudūm al-Ḥimyarī, he heard Nufay‘ ibn ‘Āmir say: “Al-Saffāḥ will live for forty years. His name in the Torah is ‘Bird of the Sky.’”

Ibn Kathīr said: I say: This might be a description of the Mahdī (the Guided One) who will appear at the end of time, due to the abundance of blood he will shed – meaning spill – to establish justice and spread equity. And the black banners mentioned in these Ḥadīth, if they are authentic, are those that will be with the Mahdī, and the first appearance of his pledge of allegiance will be in Makkah. Then his supporters will be from Khurāsān, as happened in the past for al-Saffāḥ (the Abbasid Caliph). And Allāh, the Exalted, knows best. All this is contingent upon the authenticity of these Ḥadīth; otherwise, no chain among them is free from criticism. And Allāh, Most High and Exalted, knows best what is correct.

Al-Durr al-Manthūr by al-Suyūṭī:

- Ibn Abī Shaybah, Aḥmad, Abū Dāwūd, Abū Yaʿlā, and al-Ṭabarānī narrated from Umm Salamah, may Allāh be pleased with her, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “There will be a dispute at the death of a Caliph, and a man from the people of Madīnah will flee to Makkah. Some people from Madīnah will come to him and bring him out against his will. They will pledge allegiance to him between the Corner (al-Rukn) and the Station (al-Maqām). An army will be sent against him from al-Shām (Greater Syria), and it will be swallowed by the earth in al-Baydāʾ, between Makkah and Madīnah. When people see that, the Abdāl (Substitutes) of al-Shām and the contingents (ʿaṣāʾib) of the people of Iraq will come to him and pledge allegiance to him. Then a man from Quraysh will arise, whose maternal uncles are from Kalb. He will send an army against them, and they (the Mahdī’s forces) will overcome them. That is the expedition of Kalb, and woe to whoever does not witness the spoils of Kalb. He (the Mahdī) will distribute wealth and act among the people according to the Sunnah of their Prophet, and Islām will cast its anchor to the earth. He will remain for years, then the Muslims will pray over him.”
- Ibn Abī Shaybah narrated from Mujāhid, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: A man from the companions of the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, narrated to me: “That the Mahdī (the Guided One) will not emerge until the Pure Soul (al-Nafs al-Zakiyyah) is killed. When the Pure Soul is killed, those in the heaven and those on the earth will become angry with them. People will come to the Mahdī (the Guided One) and escort him as a bride is escorted to her husband on her wedding night. He will fill the earth with equity and justice. The earth will bring forth its vegetation, the sky its rain, and my nation will enjoy during his rule a blessing it has never enjoyed before.”

- Ibn Abī Shaybah narrated from Abū al-Jald, he said: “There will be a tribulation, followed by another tribulation. Indeed, in the latter one, it will be like the fruit of a whip, followed by the buzzing of the sword. Then after that, there will be a tribulation in which all inviolable things will be deemed permissible. Then the Caliphate will come to the best of the people on earth while he is sitting in his house here.”
- Ibn Abī Shaybah narrated from ‘Āṣim ibn ‘Umar al-Bujaylī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: “A man’s name will indeed be called out from the sky, which no humiliated person will deny, nor will any guide refrain from it.”

Al-Sunan al-Wāridah fī al-Fitan:

- From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Zurayr al-Ghāfiqī, from ‘Ammār ibn Yāsir, he said: “When the Turks advance upon you, and armies are mobilized against you, and your Caliph who gathers wealth dies, and a weak man is appointed as Caliph after him, who is then deposed after two years, and alliances are made with the Romans and the Turks, and wars appear on earth, and a caller calls out from the wall of Damascus, ‘Woe to the Arabs from an evil that has drawn near,’ and the western part of its mosque is swallowed by the earth until its wall collapses, and three individuals emerge in al-Shām (Greater Syria), all seeking kingship: a piebald man, a reddish-brown man, and a man from the household of Abū Sufyān who will emerge with Kalb and besiege the people in Damascus. The people of the West (Maghrib) will emerge, descending towards Egypt. When they enter, that will be the sign of the Sufyānī. Before that, one who calls for the family of Muḥammad will emerge. The Turks will leave the Peninsula (al-Jazīrah), and the Romans will settle in Palestine. The leader of the West will advance, killing men and capturing women, then he will return until he disembarks in the Peninsula to (confront) the Sufyānī.”

- From Ibn al-Daylamī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “It will be in...” They asked, “O Messenger of Allāh, in its beginning, its middle, or its end?” He said, “No, rather in the middle of the month of Ramaḍān, when the middle night is a Friday night. From the sky, seventy thousand will be struck unconscious, seventy thousand will go astray, seventy thousand will be blinded, seventy thousand will be deafened, seventy thousand will be muted, and seventy thousand virgins will be deflowered.” They asked, “So who will be safe, O Messenger of Allāh?” He said, “One who stays in his house, seeks refuge in prostration, and loudly proclaims the Takbīr (Allāhu Akbar).” He said, “And with him is another. The voice is Jibrīl, and the voice is Satan. The voice (of Jibrīl) is in Ramaḍān, the turmoil (ma‘ma‘ah) is in Shawwāl, the distinguishing of tribes is in Dhū al-Qa‘dah, pilgrims will be plundered in Dhū al-Ḥijjah, and al-Muḥarram – and what is al-Muḥarram? Its beginning is a trial, and its end is relief for my nation. A riding beast in that time upon which a believer escapes will be better than a fortress that yields one hundred thousand.”
- From Qatādah, he said: “The Mahdī (the Guided One) will be approached while he is in his house, and the people are in a tribulation where blood is shed. It will be said to him, ‘Rise up for us.’ He will refuse until he is threatened with death.

When he is threatened with death, he will rise up for them, and not even a cupping-glass full of blood will be shed on his account."

- ‘Āṣim narrated to us from Zirr, from ‘Abd Allāh, that the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "The world will not pass away until a man from my household, whose name matches my name, rules the world." I said, "O Abā ‘Abd al-Raḥmān, what does ‘matches’ (yuwāṭi’) mean?" He said, "Resembles."
- From Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah, he said: "A banner will emerge from Khurāsān, then another will emerge. Their garments will be... and ‘Uthmān will be at their vanguard. A man from Banū Tamīm will pave the way for the Mahdī’s (the Guided One’s) rule. Between his emergence and his handing over power to the Mahdī (the Guided One) will be seventy-two months."
- From Sufyān, from Abū Ishāq, from Nawf, he said: "On the banner of the Mahdī (the Guided One) will be written: ‘Allegiance is to Allāh.'"
- Ḍamrah narrated to us, he said: Ibn Shawdhab said: "He is only called the Mahdī (the Guided One) because he will be guided to a mountain in al-Shām (Greater Syria) from which he will extract scrolls from the Torah. He will argue with the Jews using them, and a group of Jews will embrace Islām at his hands."
- 286 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Qays ibn Jābir al-Ṣadafī, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: "After the tyrants, there will be a man from my household who will fill the earth with justice. Then the Qaḥṭānī will come after him. By Him Who sent me with the truth, he is not inferior to him."
- 625 From Ibn Mas‘ūd, he said: "There will be a sign in... and a tailed star will begin to appear."

- 626 From Makḥūl, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “In the sky, there will be a sign for two nights past... In Shawwāl, the momentous event (al-muhimmah), in Dhū al-Qa‘dah, the turmoil (al-ma‘ma‘ah), in Dhū al-Ḥijjah, the descents (al-nazā’il), and in al-Muḥarram – and what is al-Muḥarram?” ‘Abd al-Wahhāb ibn Bukht said: And it reached me that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “In Ramaḍān, a sign in the sky like a shining pillar. In Shawwāl, the calamity. In Dhū al-Qa‘dah, the annihilation. In Dhū al-Ḥijjah, the pilgrims will be plundered. Al-Muḥarram – and what is al-Muḥarram?”
- 630 Al-Walīd narrated to us from ‘Anbasah al-Qurashī, from Salamah ibn Abī Salamah, from Shahr ibn Ḥawshab, he said: It reached me that the Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “There will be in... and in Shawwāl, a momentous event. In Dhū al-Qa‘dah, tribes will fight. In Dhū al-Ḥijjah, pilgrims will be plundered. And in al-Muḥarram, a caller will call out from the sky, ‘Behold, the chosen one of Allāh from His creation is so-and-so, so listen to him and obey him.”
- 633 From Khālīd ibn Ma‘dān, he said: “A sign, a pillar of fire, will indeed appear, rising from the East, visible to all the people of the earth. Whoever reaches that time should prepare food for his family for a year.”
- 634 From Kathīr ibn Murrah al-Ḥaḍramī, he said: “The sign of the events in Ramaḍān is its mark in the sky, followed by disputes among people. If you reach it, then store as much food as you can.”
- 635 From al-Zuhrī, he said: “And during the rule of the second Sufyānī and his emergence, a sign will be seen in the sky.”
- 638 From Ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, who said: “When there is a loud cry

(ṣayḥah) in Ramaḍān, there will be turmoil (ma‘ma‘ah) in Shawwāl, distinguishing of tribes in Dhū al-Qa‘dah, and bloodshed in Dhū al-Ḥijjah and al-Muḥarram – and what is al-Muḥarram?” He said it three times. “Alas, alas! People will be killed therein in great turmoil (harjan harjan).” We asked, “And what is the loud cry, O Messenger of Allāh?” He said, “This will be in the middle of Ramaḍān, on a Friday night. It will be a loud sound (haddah) that will awaken the sleeper and make young women come out of their private chambers, on a Friday night in a year of many earthquakes. When you have prayed Fajr on Friday, enter your houses, lock your doors, cover your windows, wrap yourselves up, and cover your ears. When you sense the loud cry, fall down prostrating to Allāh and say, ‘Subḥān al-Quddūs, Subḥān al-Quddūs, Rabbunā al-Quddūs’ (Glory be to the Most Holy, Glory be to the Most Holy, Our Lord is the Most Holy). Whoever does that will be saved, and whoever does not do that will perish.”

- 642 From Ka‘b, he said: “A tailed star will rise from the East before the emergence of the Mahdī (the Guided One).” He said: And I was told from Sharīk that he said: “It reached me that before the emergence of the Mahdī (the Guided One), the sun will be eclipsed twice in the month of Ramaḍān.”
- 647 From Kathīr ibn Murrah, he said: “The sign of the events is in Ramaḍān, the commotion (al-haysh) in Shawwāl, the descents (al-nazā’il) in Dhū al-Qa‘dah, the turmoil (al-ma‘ma‘ah) in Dhū al-Ḥijjah, and its sign is a shining pillar of light in the sky.”
- 750 Al-Walīd ibn Muslim narrated to us, he heard a man from Tujīb, who heard Ibn al-Musayyib say: “The people of the West (Maghrib) must have a state, a state of disbelief (kufr).”

- 751 ...from one who narrates from Muḥammad ibn Kaʿb al-Quraṣī, he says:
"The people of the West (Maghrib) will rule, and they are the most evil of those who have ruled."

- 765 From Ḥudhayfah: "He said to the people of Egypt: 'When ʿAbd Allāh ibn ʿAbd al-Raḥmān comes to you from the West (Maghrib), you and they will fight over the bridge (al-qanṭarah), and there will be seventy thousand killed between you. He will indeed expel you from the land of Egypt and the land of al-Shām (Greater Syria), group by group (kafran kafran). An Arab woman will indeed be sold on the steps of Damascus for twenty dirhams. Then they will enter the land of Ḥimṣ and stay there for eighteen months, dividing wealth and killing males and females. Then a man, more evil than any the sky has shaded, will emerge against them, kill them, and defeat them until he drives them into the land of Egypt.'"

- 770 Al-Walīd narrated to us from Abū ʿAbd Allāh, from Muslim ibn al-Akhyal, from ʿAbd al-Karīm Abū Umayyah... from Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafīyyah, he said: "The vanguard of the people of the West (Maghrib) will enter the mosque of Damascus. While they are there, looking at its wonders, the earth will tremble, and the western part of its mosque will collapse. A village called Ḥarastā will be swallowed by the earth. Then, after that, the Sufyānī will emerge and kill them until he drives them into Egypt. Then he will return and fight the people of the East until he drives them back to Iraq."

- 772 From al-Zuhrī, he said: "When the black banners differ among themselves, the yellow banners will come to them. They will gather at the bridge (qanṭarah) of the people of Egypt. The people of the East and the people of the West will fight for seven (days/battles). Then the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they reach al-Ramlah. Something will happen between the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria) and the people of the West (Maghrib), and the people of the West will become angry and say, 'We came to support you, then you do what you do! By Allāh, we will leave you to face the people of the East.' They will alert you to the fewness of the people of al-Shām on that day in their eyes. Then the Sufyānī will emerge, and the people of al-Shām will follow him, and he will fight the people of the East."

- 776 From Ka'b, he said: "When the West (Maghrib) appears over Egypt, then the belly of the earth on that day will be better than its surface for the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria). Woe to the two armies, the army of Palestine and Jordan, and the land of Ḥimṣ, from Berbers who will strike with their swords up to the Gate of Perfume (Bāb al-ʿIṭr). The leader of the West is a lame man from Kindah."
- 778 From Ḥassān ibn ʿAṭīyah, he said: It used to be said: "When you see the yellow banners, then the belly of the earth on that day is better than its surface."
- From Ka'b, he said: "When you see the yellow banners disembarking at Alexandria, then they disembark at the center of al-Shām (Greater Syria), at that point a village from the villages of Damascus called Ḥarastā will be swallowed by the earth."
- 797 Ibn Ḥumayr narrated to us from al-Najāb, he said: "ʿAbd al-Raḥmān will emerge with the people of the West (Maghrib), and the Romans will have taken over Alexandria and be in it. They will fight them, defeat them, and expel them from it."
- 802 Al-Walīd narrated to us from Abū ʿAbdah al-Mushajjaʿī, from Abū, from a shaykh who lived during the Jāhiliyyah (pre-Islamic era of ignorance), he said: "The beginning of the Sufyānī's emergence will be from a village west of al-Shām (Greater Syria) called Andarā, with seven men."

- 804 From Ibn al-Ḥanafīyyah, he said: “Between the emergence of the black banner from Khurāsān, Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣālīḥ, the emergence of the Mahdī (the Guided One), and the handing over of power to the Mahdī (the Guided One) will be seventy-two months.”
- 808 From Ka‘b, he said: “A woman’s burden (i.e., son) will rule, his name is ‘Abd Allāh ibn Yazīd, and he is al-Azhar ibn al-Kalbiyyah, or al-Zuhrī ibn al-Kalbiyyah, the disfigured Sufyānī.”
- 810 From Arṭāh, he said: “The Sufyānī who dies, who first fights the black banners and the yellow banners in the center of al-Shām (Greater Syria), his emergence is from al-Mundarūn, east of Baysān, on a red camel, wearing a crown. He will defeat the group twice, then he will perish. He accepts tribute (jizyah), enslaves offspring, and rips open the bellies of pregnant women.”
- 812 From Muḥammad ibn Ja‘far, from ‘Alī, he said: “The Sufyānī is from the descendants of Khālīd ibn Yazīd ibn Abī Sufyān, a man with a large head, pockmarks on his face, and a white spot in his eye. He will emerge from the direction of the city of Damascus, in a valley called Wādī al-Yābis (the Dry Valley). He will emerge with seven men, one of whom will carry a knotted banner. Victory will be known in his banner. He will advance before it for thirty miles. No one who sees that banner and intends to oppose him will do so except that he will be defeated.”
- 832 From Arṭāh, he said: “In the time of the second Sufyānī, there will be the loud sound (haddah) until every people thinks that what is near them has been ruined.”
- 844 From ‘Ammār ibn Yāsir, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: “Then three individuals will emerge, all seeking kingship: a piebald man, a reddish- brown man, and a man from the household of Abū Sufyān who will emerge with Kalb and besiege the people in Damascus.”

- 845 From ‘Alī, he said: “Three banners will emerge in al-Shām (Greater Syria): the reddish-brown (al-Aṣḥab), the piebald (al-Abqa’), and the Sufyānī. The Sufyānī will emerge from al-Shām, and the piebald from Egypt. The Sufyānī will overcome them.”
- 846 From Dhū Qarnāt, he said: “People will differ in... and they will split into four groups: a man in Makkah, the Cā’idh (Seeker of Refuge); two men in al-Shām (Greater Syria), one of them the Sufyānī, and the other from the descendants of al-Ḥakam, blue-eyed and reddish-brown; and a tyrannical man from the people of Egypt. That makes four. A man from Kindah will become angry and go out to those in al-Shām. The army will come to Egypt and kill that tyrant, and he will crush Egypt like dung. Then he will send (an army) to the one in Makkah.”
- 847 From Ḥudhayfah, he said: “When the Sufyānī enters the land of Egypt, he will stay there for four months, killing and enslaving its people. On that day, wailing women will rise, one crying over the violation of their chastity, another crying over the killing of her children, another crying over her humiliation after honor, and another crying out of longing for her grave.”
- 850 From Ka’b, he said: “When there are two tremors in the month of Ramaḍān, three men from one household will rise up for it (power). One will seek it through tyranny, another will seek it through piety, tranquility, and dignity, and the third will seek it through killing, and his name is ‘Abd Allāh. Near the Euphrates, there will be a great gathering. They will fight over wealth, and seven out of every nine will be killed.”

- 851 From al-Zuhri, he said: “When the holders of the black banners and the people of the yellow banners meet at the bridge (al-qanṭarah), the defeat will be upon the people of the East. They will be defeated until they reach Palestine. The Sufyānī will emerge against the people of the East. When the people of the West (Maghrib) disembark in Jordan, their leader will die, and they will split into three factions: one faction will return whence it came, one faction will perform Ḥajj (pilgrimage), and one faction will stand firm. The Sufyānī will fight them, defeat them, and they will enter into his obedience.”
- 860 From al-Zuhri, he said: “The Sufyānī will receive allegiance from the people of al-Shām (Greater Syria). He will fight the people of the East and defeat them from Palestine until they reach Marj al-Ṣuffar. Then they will meet, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they reach Marj al-Thaniyyah. Then they will fight, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they reach al-Ḥiṣṣ. Then they will fight, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they reach the ruined city, meaning Qarqisiyā. Then they will fight, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they reach ‘Āqir Qūfā. Then they will fight, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East. The Sufyānī will seize the wealth. Then a sore will appear in the Sufyānī’s throat. He will enter Kūfah in the morning and leave it in the evening with his armies. When he is at the approaches of al-Shām, he will die. The people of al-Shām will rise up and pledge allegiance to Ibn al-Kalbiyyah, whose name is ‘Abd Allāh ibn Yazīd ibn al-Kalbiyyah, with sunken eyes and a disfigured face. News of the Sufyānī’s death will reach the people of the East, and they will say, ‘The state of the people of al-Shām has gone.’ They will rise up. News will reach Ibn al-Kalbiyyah, and he will rise up with his forces against them. They will fight at al-Alwiyyah, and the defeat will be upon the people of the East until they enter Kūfah. He will kill the fighters and enslave the offspring and women. Then he will ruin Kūfah. Then he will send an army from there to the Ḥijāz.”

- 867 From Arṭāh, he said: “The Sufyānī will kill everyone who disobeys him, saw them with saws, and cook them in pots for six months.” He said: “And the people of the East and the West will meet.”
- 894 From Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah, he said: “A black banner of Banū al-‘Abbās will emerge. Then another black banner will emerge from Khurāsān. Their caps will be black, and their clothes will be white. ‘Uthmān will be at their vanguard. A man called Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ or Ṣāliḥ ibn Shu‘ayb, from Tamīm, will defeat the companions of the Sufyānī until he disembarks at Bayt al-Maqdis (Jerusalem). He will pave the way for the Mahdī’s (the Guided One’s) rule and extend to him three hundred from al-Shām (Greater Syria). Between his emergence and his handing over power to the Mahdī (the Guided One) will be seventy-two months.”
- 897 From al-Ḥasan, he said: “A man will emerge in Rayy, of medium height, dark-skinned, a freed slave of Banū Tamīm, with a sparse beard, called Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ, with four thousand men. Their clothes will be white and their banners black. He will be at the vanguard of the Mahdī (the Guided One). No one will meet him but he will defeat them.”
- 898 From ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, may Allāh bless him and grant him peace, said: “A man from my household will emerge with nine banners, meaning in Makkah.”
- 899 From ‘Ammār ibn Yāsir, he said: “Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ will be on the banner of the Mahdī (the Guided One).”
- 901 From Abū Ja‘far, he said: “A young man from Banū Hāshim, with a mole on his right hand, will emerge from Khurāsān with black banners. Before him will be Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ, who will fight the companions of the Sufyānī and defeat them.”

- 902 From Ka‘b ibn ‘Alqamah, from an unnamed narrator, he said: “A youth, young in age, with a light beard, fair-skinned (al-Walīd did not mention ‘fair-skinned/yellow’), will emerge on the banner of the Mahdī (the Guided One). If he were to fight mountains, he would crush them.” Al-Walīd said: “...he would demolish them, until he disembarks at Īliyā’ (Jerusalem).”
- 903 Ka‘b said: “When a man rules Syria and another Egypt, and the Syrian and the Egyptian fight, and the people of Syria capture tribes from Egypt, and a man from the East advances with small black banners towards the ruler of Syria, he is the one who will give allegiance to the Mahdī.” Abū Qabīl said: “There will be a ruler in Ifrīqiyah for twelve years, then there will be a tribulation after him, then a dark-skinned man will rule, filling it with justice, then he will go to the Mahdī and give allegiance to him.”
- 907 ‘Alī said: “Black banners will emerge fighting the Sufyānī. Among them will be a young man from Banū Hāshim with a mole on his left shoulder. At their vanguard will be a man from Banū Tamīm called Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ, who will defeat his [the Sufyānī’s] companions.”
- 914 ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: “The Sufyānī and the Black Banners will meet. Among them [the Black Banners] will be a young man from Banū Hāshim with a mole on his left hand. At their vanguard will be a man from Banū Tamīm called Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ, at the Gate of Iṣṭakhr. A great battle will occur between them. The Black Banners will be victorious, and the Sufyānī’s cavalry will flee. At that point, people will wish for the Mahdī and seek him.”
- 915 Shurayḥ ibn ‘Ubayd, Rāshid ibn Sa‘d, Ḍamrah ibn Ḥabīb, and their elders said: “The Sufyānī will send his cavalry and soldiers, and they will reach the common lands of the East, from the land of Khurāsān and the land of Persia. The people of the East will revolt against them and fight them, and battles will occur between them in various places. When their fight against him [the Sufyānī] becomes prolonged, they will pledge allegiance to a man from Banū Hāshim, who will be in the farthest East at that time. He will emerge with the people of Khurāsān, with a man from Banū Tamīm, a client of theirs, at his vanguard. He will be sallow-complexioned with a sparse beard. He will go out to him [the Hāshimī] with five thousand men when news of his emergence reaches him, and he will pledge allegiance to him, and he [the Hāshimī] will place him at his vanguard. If he were to face the firmly-rooted mountains, he would demolish them. He and the Sufyānī's cavalry will meet, and he will defeat them and inflict a great slaughter upon them. He will continue to defeat them from town to town until he drives them back to Iraq. Then, there will be [another confrontation] between them and the Sufyānī's cavalry, and the Sufyānī will gain the upper hand. The Hāshimī will flee, and Shu'ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ will go out in hiding to Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem], preparing the way for the Mahdī when news of his [the Mahdī's] emergence towards Syria reaches him."

- 916 Al-Walīd narrated to us, he said: "It has reached me that this Hāshimī is the Mahdī's paternal half-brother. Some have said he is his paternal cousin."
- 917 Al-Walīd said, and some of them said: "He will not die, but after the defeat, he will go to Makkah. When the Mahdī appears, he will emerge with him."
- 920 From 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "A man from his [the Prophet's] household will emerge in the East before the Mahdī, carrying the sword on his shoulder for eight months, killing and mutilating. He will head towards Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem] but will not reach it before he dies."

- 912 From Abū Ja‘far, he said: "The Black Banners that advance from Khurāsān will encamp in Kūfah. When the Mahdī appears in Makkah, allegiance will be sent to the Mahdī."
- 922 From ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Sufyānī will write to the one who entered Kūfah with his cavalry, after having trampled it like a hide, ordering him to march to the Ḥijāz. He will march to Madīnah and put Quraysh to the sword, killing four hundred men from them and from the Anṣār. He will rip open bellies, kill children, and kill two siblings from Quraysh, a man and his sister named Muḥammad and Fāṭimah, and crucify them at the gate of the mosque in Madīnah."
- 923 ‘Alī said: "He [the Sufyānī] will send an army to Madīnah. They will seize whomever they can from the family of Muḥammad, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, and kill men and women from Banū Hāshim. At that point, the Mahdī and al-Mubayyaḍ will flee from Madīnah to Makkah. He will send [forces] in pursuit of them, but they will have reached the sanctuary of Allāh and His security."
- 932 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "There will be an incident in Madīnah in which Aḥjār al-Zayt will be submerged. Al-Ḥarrah, in comparison, will be like a whip's lash. He will then withdraw from Madīnah a distance of two barīds, and then allegiance will be pledged to the Mahdī."
- 934 Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with him, says: "The ruler of Madīnah will send an army against the Hāshimīs in Makkah, and they [the Hāshimīs] will defeat them. The Caliph in Syria will hear of this and dispatch a force to them, including six hundred chieftains. When they reach al-Baydā’ and camp there on a moonlit night, a shepherd will come, look at them, and marvel, saying, ‘Woe to the people of Makkah for what has befallen them!’ He will then return to his flock. When he comes back, he will see no one, for the earth will have swallowed them. He will say, 'Glory be to Allāh! They departed in a single hour!' He will go to their campsite and find a velvet cloth, part of which has been swallowed by the earth and part of which is on the surface. He will try to pull it out but will be unable to. He will then realize that the earth has swallowed them. He will set off to the ruler of Makkah and give him the good news. The ruler of Makkah will say, 'Praise be to Allāh! This is the sign you were told about.' Then they will march to Syria."

- 935 From Mujāhid, from Tubayʿ, he said: "A seeker of refuge will seek refuge in Makkah and will be killed. Then people will remain for a period of their time. Then another will seek refuge. If you reach him, do not fight him, for he is the army of the swallowing by the earth."
- 937 From Muḥammad ibn ʿAlī, he said: "There will be a seeker of refuge in Makkah, against whom seventy thousand will be sent, led by a man from Qays. When they reach al-Thaniyyah, and the last of them has entered while the first of them has not yet exited, Jibrīl will call out: 'O Baydā', O Baydā', O Baydā'!' – its east and west will hear – 'Seize them, for there is no good in them!' None will witness their destruction except a shepherd on a mountain, who will see them as they are swallowed. He will inform [others] about them. When the seeker of refuge hears of them [their destruction], he will emerge."
- 938 From Dhī Qurbāt, he said: "When the Sufyānī who is in Egypt hears [of the one in Makkah], he will send an army to the one in Makkah. They will devastate Madīnah more severely than [the incident of] al-Ḥarrah. When they reach al-Baydā', the earth will swallow them."
- From Abū Jaʿfar, he said: "When the Sufyānī learns of the killing of al-Nafs al-Zakiyyah (the Pure Soul) – and it was decreed for him – most Muslims will flee" from the sanctuary of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, to the sanctuary of Allāh Almighty in Makkah. When this news reaches him [the Sufyānī], he will send an army to Madīnah led by a man from Kalb. When they reach al-Baydā', the earth will swallow them. Their commander will escape. They mentioned that he is from Madhij, while some said from Kalb."

- 947 From Abū Qabīl, he said: "None of them will escape except a bearer of good news and a warner. As for the bearer of good news, he will come to the Mahdī in Makkah and his companions and inform them of what happened to them [the army]. The proof of this will be in his face, as his face will be turned to his nape. They will believe him because of his face being turned, and they will know that the people were swallowed by the earth. The second one will be similar, his face turned to his nape. He will come to the Sufyānī and inform him of what befell his companions. He [the Sufyānī] will believe him and know it is true because of the sign he sees in him. They are two men from Kalb."
- 951 From 'Alī ibn 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Abbās, he said: "The Mahdī will not emerge until the sun rises as a sign."
- 952 Ka'b said: "The sign of the Mahdī's emergence is banners advancing from the West, led by a lame man from Kindah."
- 953 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Sufyānī and the Mahdī will emerge like two racehorses. The Sufyānī will overcome what is near him, and the Mahdī will overcome what is near him."
- 956 From Abū Ja'far, he said: "The Sufyānī will not emerge until tyranny ascends."
- 957 From Maṭar al-Warrāq, he said: "The Mahdī will not emerge until Allāh is disbelieved in openly."

- From ‘Ammār ibn Yāsir, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The sign of the Mahdī is when the Turks advance against you, your caliph who amasses wealth dies and is succeeded by a weak one who is deposed two years after his pledge of allegiance, the western part of the Damascus mosque collapses, three individuals emerge in Syria, and the people of the Maghrib (West) march to Egypt. And that is the sign of the Sufyānī."
- 965 From ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "When a caller from the sky proclaims, 'The truth is with the family of Muḥammad,' at that point the Mahdī will appear on the tongues of people, they will drink of his love, and they will have no mention other than him."
- 970 Abū Hurayrah said: "The fourth tribulation will last for twelve years. It will clear when it clears, and the Euphrates will have receded to reveal a mountain of gold, over which seven out of every nine will be killed."
- 971 Ka‘b said: "Near the Euphrates, in the region of Syria or slightly beyond it, there will be a great gathering. They will fight over wealth, and seven out of every nine will be killed. This will be after the tremor (al-Haddah) and the collapse (al-Wāhiyah) in the month of Ramaḍān, and after the divergence of three banners, each of them seeking kingship for himself. Among them will be a man named ‘Abd Allāh."
- 972 Yaḥyā ibn Sa‘īd narrated to us from Ḍirār ibn ‘Amr from Ishāq ibn Abī Farwah from Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The fourth tribulation will last for eighteen years. Then it will clear when it clears, and the Euphrates will have receded from a mountain of gold upon which the nation will fall, and seven out of every nine will be killed over it."

- 974 From Abū Ja‘far, he said: "A caller from the sky will proclaim, 'Indeed, the truth is with the family of Muḥammad!' And a caller from the earth will proclaim, 'Indeed, the truth is with the family of ‘Īsā (Jesus)!’ – or he said al-‘Abbās, I am in doubt about it. The lower voice is only from Satan to confuse the people." Abū ‘Abd Allāh Nu‘aym expressed doubt.
- 975 He said: "The second one from the family of Abū Sufyān will be appointed as a commander for the pilgrimage season, and an expedition will be sent with him. When they are at the pilgrimage season, they will hear a caller from the sky: 'Indeed, the commander is so-and-so!' And a caller from the earth will proclaim: 'He lies!' And a caller from the sky will proclaim: 'He speaks the truth!' This will prolong, and they will not know which one to follow. But the one in the sky is to be believed – the second voice that calls from the sky the first time. So if you hear that, know that the word of Allāh is supreme, and the word of Satan is lowermost."
- 977 From Ibn al-Musayyib, he said: "There will be a tribulation in Syria, which will be its beginning. Then the affairs of the people will not be set right on anything, nor will they have a unified community, until a caller from the sky proclaims: 'Follow so-and-so!' and a hand will appear as a bearer of good news."
- 984 Al-Zuhrī said: "When the Sufyānī and the Mahdī meet for battle, on that day [a voice] from the sky [will say]: 'Indeed, the allies of Allāh are the companions of so-and-so,' meaning the Mahdī." Al-Zuhrī said: Asmā’ bint ‘Umayy said: "The sign of that day is that a hand will be extended from the sky, and people will look at it."
- 990 Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with him, was heard saying: "Allāh Almighty will send the Mahdī after despair, and even after people say, 'There is no Mahdī.' His supporters will be people from Syria, their number being three hundred and fifteen men, the same number as the Companions of Badr. They will march to him from Syria until they bring him out from the heart of Makkah, from a house near al-Ṣafā. They will pledge allegiance to him reluctantly. He will lead them in two units of prayer, the prayer of a traveler, then [the prayer of] residence, then he will ascend the pulpit."

- 991 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Allegiance will be pledged to the Mahdī between the Rukn (Corner) and the Maqām (Station of Ibrāhīm), without waking a sleeper or shedding blood."
- 992 Al-Zuhrī said: "In that year, two callers will call out: a caller from the sky, 'Indeed, the commander is so-and-so!' and a caller from the earth, 'He lies!' The supporters of the lower voice will fight until the roots of the trees are stained with blood. That is the day about which 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr said an army called the Army of the Packsaddles will tear the packsaddles and use them as shields. On that day, none will remain from the supporters of that higher voice except for a number like the people of Badr, three hundred and ten-odd men. They will be victorious, then they will go to their leader and find him with his back against the Ka'bah, his limbs trembling, seeking refuge in Allāh from the evil to which they call him. They will compel him to accept the allegiance. The supporters of the lower voice will return to Syria, saying, 'We fought a people the likes of whom we have never seen. They are but a small band.'"
- 993 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr said: "Indeed, there will be a tribulation while people are praying together, performing Ḥajj together, performing 'Arafah together, and sacrificing together. Then it will stir among them like a dog, and they will fight until blood flows at al-'Aqabah, and until the innocent person sees that his innocence will not save him, and the one who isolates himself sees that his isolation will not benefit him. Then they will compel a young man from Madīnah to go to Makkah. The people will bring him out from among them and pledge allegiance to him between the Rukn and the Maqām, while he is reluctant."

- 996 From ‘Alī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "When the Black Banners, in which is Shu‘ayb ibn Ṣāliḥ, defeat the Sufyānī's cavalry, people will wish for the Mahdī and seek him. He will emerge from Makkah, carrying the banner of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. He will pray two units of prayer after people have despaired of his emergence due to the prolonged affliction upon them. When he finishes his prayer, he will turn and say: ‘O people, affliction has persisted! O Ummah of Muḥammad, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, and O members of his household especially! We have been oppressed and wronged!’"
- 997 From ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Three notable individuals from Quraysh, from the Sufyānī's army, will go to Makkah. When news of the swallowing [of the army] reaches them, people from various lands will gather in Makkah for those three individuals, and one of them will be pledged allegiance to reluctantly."
- 999 From Abū Ja‘far, he said: "Then the Mahdī will appear in Makkah, at the time of ‘Ishā’, carrying the banner of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, his shirt, his sword, signs, light, and clarity. After praying ‘Ishā’, he will call out in his loudest voice, saying: ‘O people, I remind you of Allāh and your standing before your Lord. He has established the proof, sent the Prophets, revealed the Book, and commanded you not to associate anything with Him, to uphold obedience to Him and obedience to His Messenger, to revive what the Qur’ān has revived and to cause to die what it has caused to die, and to be helpers of guidance and supporters of piety. For the world’s annihilation and demise have drawn near, and it has announced its farewell. I call you to Allāh, to His Messenger, to acting by His Book, to causing falsehood to die, and to reviving his Sunnah.' He will then appear with three hundred and thirteen men, the number of the Companions of Badr, [gathering like] scattered autumn clouds, monks by night and lions by day. Allāh will open the land of Ḥijāz for the Mahdī, and he will free those of Banū Hāshim who were in prison. The Black Banners will encamp in Kūfah and send the pledge of allegiance to the Mahdī. The Mahdī will send his armies to the horizons, eradicate injustice and its people, the lands will become upright for him, and Allāh will open Constantinople at his hands."

- 1000 From 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said:
"When trade and roads are cut off and tribulations abound, seven learned men will emerge from different horizons by appointment. Allegiance will be pledged to each of them by three hundred and ten-odd men until they gather in Makkah. The seven will meet, and some will say to others, 'What brought you here?' They will say, 'We came in search of this man at whose hands these tribulations should subside and Constantinople should be opened. We know him by his name, his father's name, his mother's name, and his description.' The seven will agree on this and search for him. They will find him in Makkah and say to him, 'Are you so-and-so, son of so-and-so?' He will say, 'No, rather I am a man from the Anṣār,' until he slips away from them. They will describe him to experts and those knowledgeable about him, and it will be said, 'He is your man whom you seek, and he has gone to Madīnah.' They will search for him in Madīnah, but he will elude them and go to Makkah. They will search for him in Makkah and find him. They will say, 'You are so-and-so, son of so-and-so, and your mother is so-and-so, daughter of so-and-so. In you is such-and-such a sign, and you have slipped away from us once. Extend your hand so we may pledge allegiance to you.' He will say, 'I am not your man. I am so-and-so, son of so-and-so, the Anṣārī. Come with us, I will guide you to your man,' until he slips away from them. They will search for him in Madīnah, but he will elude them and go to

Makkah. They will find him in Makkah, then at the Rukn, and they will say, 'Our sin is upon you, and our blood is on your neck if you do not extend your hand for us to pledge allegiance to you. This is the army of the Sufyānī, which has set out in pursuit of us, led by a man from Jurm.' He will then sit between the Rukn and the Maqām, extend his hand, and allegiance will be pledged to him. Allāh will cast love for him into the hearts of people, and he will march with a people who are lions by day and monks by night."

- 1002 From Muḥammad ibn 'Alī, he said: "When the seeker of refuge in Makkah hears of the swallowing by the earth, he will emerge with twelve thousand men, among them the Abdāl, until they encamp at Īliyā' [Jerusalem]. The one who sent the army, upon receiving the news in Īliyā', will say, 'By Allāh's life, Allāh has indeed made this man a lesson. I sent to him what I sent, and they were swallowed by the earth. This is indeed a lesson and an insight.' The Sufyānī will offer him allegiance. Then he [the Sufyānī] will go out until he meets Kalb, who are his maternal uncles. They will taunt him for what he did, saying, 'Allāh clothed you with a shirt, and you took it off.' He will say, 'What do you think, should I ask him to annul the allegiance?' They will say, 'Yes.' So he will come to him in Īliyā' and say, 'Annul it for me.' He will say... 'Do it.' He will say, 'Yes.' He [the Mahdī] will say to him, 'Do you want me to annul it for you?' He will say, 'Yes.' So he will annul it. Then he [the Mahdī] will say, 'This is a man who has renounced my obedience.' He will then give orders concerning him, and he will be slaughtered on a stone slab in Īliyā'. Then he [the Mahdī] will march to Kalb and plunder them. The truly disappointed is he who is disappointed on the day of the plunder of Kalb."
- 1008 Al-Walīd ibn Muslim narrated to us, he said: A narrator told me that the Mahdī, the Sufyānī, and Kalb will fight in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem] when he [the Sufyānī] asks him to annul the allegiance. The Sufyānī will be brought as a captive, and he [the Mahdī] will order him to be slaughtered at the Gate of al-Rajjah. Then their women and spoils will be sold on the steps of Damascus.

- From ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mas‘ūd, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "Seven learned men, who had journeyed to Makkah from different horizons by appointment, will pledge allegiance to the Mahdī. Each of them had been pledged allegiance to by three hundred and ten-odd men. They will gather in Makkah and pledge allegiance to him. Allāh will cast love for him into the hearts of people. He will march with them. The Sufyānī's cavalry, led by a man from Jurm, will have set out towards those who pledged allegiance. When he [the Mahdī] leaves Makkah, he will leave his companions behind and walk in an izār (waist-wrapper) and a ridā' (upper garment) until he reaches the Jurmī and pledges allegiance to him. Kalb will make him [the Jurmī or Sufyānī implied] regret his allegiance, so he will come to him [the Mahdī] and ask him to annul the allegiance, and he will annul it. Then he [the Mahdī] will mobilize his armies to fight him and will defeat him. Allāh will defeat the Romans at his hands, and Allāh will remove tribulations at his hands, and he will settle in Syria."
- 1017 Ka'b said: "If you see a caliph in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem] and another below him, meaning in Damascus, do not follow the one below, for he is more astray than his family's donkey."
- 1019 ‘Abd al-Quddūs narrated to us from Abū Bakr, he said: Our elders narrated to me, they said: "The Sufyānī is the one who will hand over the caliphate to the Mahdī."
- 1020 Al-Ḥakam ibn Nāfi‘ narrated to us from Jarrāḥ from Arṭāh, who said: "Al-Ṣakhrī will enter Kūfah. Then news of the Mahdī's appearance in Makkah will reach him, so he will send an expedition from Kūfah to him, but it will be swallowed by the earth. None of them will survive except a bearer of good news to the Mahdī and a warner to warn al-Ṣakhrī. The Mahdī will advance from Makkah and al-Ṣakhrī from Kūfah towards Syria, as if they were two racehorses. Al-Ṣakhrī will outpace him and dispatch another force from Syria to the Mahdī. They will meet the Mahdī in the land of Ḥijāz, and he will stay there. It will be said to him, 'Proceed,' but he will dislike advancing and will say, 'Write to my cousin. If he renounces his obedience, then I am your leader.' When the letter reaches al-Ṣakhrī, he will submit to him and pledge allegiance. The Mahdī will march until he encampes in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. The Mahdī will not leave a single span of land in the hand of any man from Syria but will return it to the Ahl al-Dhimma (non-Muslim subjects) and will return all Muslims to Jihād. He will remain in that state for three years. Then a man from Kalb named Kinānah, with a star-like mark on his eye, will emerge with a group of his people. He will come to al-Ṣakhrī and say, 'We pledged allegiance to you and supported you, yet when you gained power, you pledged allegiance to our enemy. We will indeed go out and fight.' He [al-Ṣakhrī] will say, 'With whom shall I go out?' He [Kinānah] will say, 'No 'Āmirī woman whose mother is older than you will remain behind; no one with hooves or paws will stay back from you.' So he will depart, and the entire tribe of 'Āmir will depart with him until he encampes at Baysān. The Mahdī will send a banner against them, and the greatest banner in the time of the Mahdī will consist of one hundred men. They will encamp at Fāthūr Ibrāhīm. Kalb will array its cavalry, camels, and sheep. When the two cavalries confront each other, Kalb will turn their backs and flee. Al-Ṣakhrī will be captured and slaughtered on the ṣafā (smooth rock) that lies across the face of the earth, then at the church in the middle of the valley, at the end of the steps of Mount Zaytā, the bridge to the right of the valley, on the ṣafā that lies across the face of the earth. He will be slaughtered there like a sheep is slaughtered. The truly disappointed is he who is disappointed on the day of Kalb, until a virgin slave girl is sold for eight dirhams."

- 1022 Ka'b said: "The Mahdī will send [an army] to fight the Romans. He will be given the understanding of ten men. He will extract the Ark of the Covenant from a cave in Anṭākiyah (Antioch). In it will be the Torah that Allāh Almighty revealed to Mūsā (Moses), peace be upon him, and the Gospel that Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, revealed to ʿĪsā (Jesus), peace be upon him. He will judge between the People of the Torah by their Torah and between the People of the Gospel by their Gospel."
- 1023 Ka'b said: "He is only named the Mahdī (the guided one) because he guides to a hidden matter and extracts the Torah and the Gospel from a land called Anṭākiyah (Antioch)."
- 1030 Ka'b said: "The leaders of the Mahdī are the best of people. His supporters and those who pledge allegiance to him are from the people of Kūfān (Kufa) and Yemen, and the Abdāl of Syria. His vanguard is Jibrīl, and Mīkāʾil will reinforce. He will be beloved among creation. Allāh Almighty will extinguish the blinding tribulation, and the earth will be secure, so much so that a woman will perform Ḥajj with five women, with no man accompanying them, fearing nothing but Allāh. The earth will give its zakāh (due charity/produce), and the sky its blessings."
- 1031 Ṭāwūs said: "The sign of the Mahdī is that he will be strict with officials, generous with wealth, and merciful to the poor."
- 1035 Ka'b said: "He is only named the Mahdī because he is guided to scrolls from the scrolls of the Torah, which he will extract from the mountains of Syria. He will call the Jews to them, and a large group, then he mentioned about thirty thousand, will embrace Islām based on those books."

- 1036 From Muḥammad ibn Sīrīn: He mentioned a tribulation that will occur and said: "When that happens, stay in your homes until you hear of a leader better than Abū Bakr and 'Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them." It was said, "O Abū Bakr, better than Abū Bakr and 'Umar?" He said, "He was preferred over some Prophets."
- 1043 Al-Walīd narrated to us, he said: I heard a man narrating to some people, and he said: "The Mahdīs are three: the Mahdī of goodness, who is 'Umar ibn 'Abd al-'Azīz; the Mahdī of blood, at whose hands bloodshed will cease; and the Mahdī of religion, 'Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace be upon him, in whose time his ummah (community) will be safe."
- 1045 From Ṭāwūs, he said: "When the Mahdī comes, the Muhsin (doer of good) will be increased in his good deeds, and repentance will be accepted from the evildoer for his misdeeds. He will be generous with wealth to officials and merciful to the poor."
- 1050 From Sulaymān ibn 'Īsā, he said: "It has reached me that at the hands of the Mahdī, the Ark of the Covenant will appear from the Lake of Tiberias. It will be carried and placed before him in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. When the Jews see it, they will embrace Islām, except for a few of them. Then the Mahdī will die."
- 1053 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Allāh Almighty will set the Mahdī right in a single night."
- 1072 From al-Saqr ibn Rustum, from his father, he said: "The Mahdī is a man with joined, thin eyebrows (azajj), a bright, clear complexion (ablaj), and wide eyes (a'yan). He will come from the Ḥijāz until he stands on the pulpit of Damascus, and he will be eighteen years old."

- 1073 From ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The Mahdī's birthplace is in Madīnah, from the household of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. His name is my name, and his father's name is my father's name. His place of migration is Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. He will have a thick beard, kohl-lined eyes, and sparkling teeth. There will be a mole on his face. He will have an aquiline nose and a broad forehead. On his shoulder will be the sign of the Prophet. He will emerge with the banner of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, made of black, square, velvet brocade, which has a stone in it and has not been unfurled since the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, passed away, nor will it be unfurled until the Mahdī emerges. Allāh will support him with three thousand angels who will strike the faces and backs of those who oppose them. He will be sent forth when he is between thirty and forty years old."
- 1074 ‘Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: "He is a youth from Quraysh, of dark complexion, a robust man."
- 1095 From ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: "A man from the descendants of al-Ḥusayn will emerge from the East. If mountains were to confront him, he would demolish them and make paths through them."
- 1132 From al-Zuhrī, he said: "The Mahdī will live for fourteen years, then he will die a natural death."
- 1133 From ‘Alī, he said: "The Mahdī will govern the affairs of the people for thirty or forty years."
- 1138 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Qays ibn Jābir al-Ṣadafī, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The Qaḥṭānī is not without the Mahdī." (Or: "The Qaḥṭānī is not lesser than the Mahdī.")

- 1139 From Abū Hurayrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: "The days and nights will not pass until a man from Qaḥṭān drives the people."
- 1146 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Qays ibn Jābir al-Ṣadaḥī, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "There will be a man from my household who will fill the earth with justice as it was filled with tyranny. Then after him will come the Qaḥṭānī. By Him Who sent me with the truth, he is not inferior to him."
- 1190 Ka‘b said: "After the Mahdī, there will be a caliph from the people of Yemen, from Qaḥṭān, a brother of the Mahdī in his religion, who will act according to his actions. He is the one who will conquer the city of the Romans and acquire its spoils." Ka‘b said: "And a man from Banū Hāshim will rule the people in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. He will extinguish known practices (sunan) and innovate practices that did not exist, to the extent that you will not find a scholar narrating a single Ḥadīth. In his time, there will be swallowing by the earth and metamorphosis. Islām will return to being strange as it began strange. The one holding fast to his religion on that day will be like one grasping a hot coal or like one stripping thorns from a Qatād plant on a dark night. He will send his daughter to parade in the markets, accompanied by guards, wearing two gold anklets, her front and back not concealed. If any man were to speak about that, his neck would be struck."
- 1200 From Muḥammad ibn al-Ḥanafiyyah, he said: "A caliph from Banū Hāshim will reside in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem], filling the earth with justice. He will build Bayt al-Maqdis with a construction the like of which has never been built. He will rule for forty years. The truce with the Romans will occur at his hands in the last seven years of his caliphate. Then they will betray him. Then they will gather against him at al-'Umq, and he will die there of grief. Then a man from Banū Hāshim will rule after him. Then their [the Romans'] defeat and the conquest of Constantinople will be at his hands. Then he will march to Rūmīyah (Rome) and conquer it, and extract its treasures and the Table of Sulaymān ibn Dāwūd (Solomon son of David), peace be upon them both. Then he will return to Bayt al-Maqdis and settle there. The Dajjāl (Antichrist) will emerge in his time, and 'Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace be upon him, will descend and pray behind him."

- 1201 From Arṭāh: "At the hands of that caliph, who is a Yamānī (Yemenite), will be the expedition to India about which Abū Hurayrah spoke."
- 1214 From Arṭāh, he said: "It has reached me that the Mahdī will live for forty years, then die in his bed. Then a man from Qaḥṭān, with pierced ears, will emerge, following the conduct of the Mahdī. He will remain for twenty years, then he will die, killed by a weapon. Then a man from the household of the Prophet, peace be upon him, a Mahdī of good conduct, will emerge. He will conquer the city of Caesar, and he will be the last ruler from the ummah of Muḥammad, peace be upon him. Then the Dajjāl will emerge in his time, and 'Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace be upon him, will descend in his time."
- 1215 Ka'b said: "A king in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem] will send an army to India, conquer it, and take its treasures, making them adornments for Bayt al-Maqdis. The kings of India will be brought before him, defeated. That army will remain in India until the emergence of the Dajjāl."
- 1217 From 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Jubayr ibn Nufayr, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "The Messiah ibn

Maryam (Jesus son of Mary) will surely find men from my ummah who are like you, or the best of them are like you, or better."

- 1238 From Arṭāh, he said: "At the hands of that Yamānī caliph, at whose hands Constantinople and Rūmiyah (Rome) will be conquered, the Dajjāl will emerge. And in his time, ʿĪsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace be upon him, will descend. In his time, at his hands, will be the expedition to India. He is from Banū Hāshim. The expedition to India about which Abū Hurayrah spoke."
- 1976 ʿAlī ibn Abī Ṭālib said: "A man from the descendants of Ḥusayn, whose name is the name of your Prophet, will emerge. The inhabitants of heaven and earth will rejoice at his emergence." A man said to him, "O Commander of the Faithful, what is the Sufyānī's name?" He said, "He is from the descendants of Khālīd ibn Yazīd ibn Abī Sufyān, a man with a large head, pockmarks on his face, and a white spot in his eye. His emergence and the emergence of the Mahdī will occur without any ruler between them. He will hand over the caliphate to the Mahdī. He will emerge from Syria, from a valley in the land of Damascus called Wādī al-Yābis (the Dry Valley). He will emerge with seven men, one of whom carries a knotted banner. Victory will be known by his banner, which will advance thirty miles ahead of him. No one who sees that banner intending [to fight] him will fail to be defeated. He will come to Damascus, sit on its pulpit, draw close the jurists and Qurʾān reciters, put merchants and wealthy people to the sword, take the Qurʾān reciters as companions, and seek their help in his affairs. None of them will refuse him without being killed. He will dispatch an army to the East, another to the West, and another to Yemen. He will appoint a man from Banū Ḥārithah, called Qamar ibn ʿAbbād, a stout man with two braids, to command the army of Iraq. At his vanguard will be a man from his people, short, bald, and broad-shouldered. Those in Syria from the people of the East will fight him, and at that time, there will be a large contingent of them there. He will fight them between Damascus and a place called al-Bunayyah. The people of Ḥimṣ will be at war with the people of the East and their supporters. The Sufyānī will defeat them all. Then those in Damascus and Ḥimṣ will align with the Sufyānī. They and the people of the East will meet in a place in the land of Ḥimṣ called al-Badīn, beside Salīmah. Over sixty thousand people will be killed, three-quarters of them from the people of the East. Then the defeat will be upon them. The army he directs to the East will march until it encampes in Kūfah. There will be a severe battle between them with many casualties. Then the defeat will be upon the people of Kūfah. How much blood will be shed, bellies ripped open, children killed, wealth plundered, and chastity violated! People will flee to Makkah. The Sufyānī will write to the commander of that army to march to the Ḥijāz. He will march after trampling it [Kūfah] like a hide. He will encamp in Madīnah and put Quraysh to the sword, killing four hundred men from them and from the Anṣār. He will rip open bellies, kill children, and kill two siblings from Quraysh, from Banū Hāshim, and crucify them at the gate of the mosque, a man and his sister named Muḥammad and Fāṭimah. People will flee from him to Makkah. He will march with that army of his to Makkah, intending it. He will encamp at al-Baydā'. Allāh Almighty will command Jibrīl, peace be upon him, and he will cry out with his voice, 'O Baydā', swallow them!' They will be destroyed, from the first to the last of them. Two men from them will remain. Jibrīl, peace be upon him, will meet them and turn their faces to their backs. It is as if I see them walking backwards, telling people what they encountered."

The Battles of the Romans (Malāḥim al-Rūm)

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim:

- 2897 From Abū Hurayrah, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then the Hour will not be established until the Romans encamp at al-A‘māq or Dābiq. An army from Madīnah, consisting of the best people on earth at that time, will go out to them. When they line up in ranks, the Romans will say, ‘Leave us and those who were taken captive from among us; we will fight them.’ The Muslims will say, ‘No, by Allāh, we will not leave you and our brothers.’ So they will fight them. A third will be defeated, upon whom Allāh will never accept repentance. A third of them will be killed, the best of martyrs in the sight of Allāh. And a third will conquer, never to be tempted by tribulation. They will conquer Constantinople. While they are dividing the spoils, having hung their swords on the olive trees, Satan will cry out among them, ‘The Messiah [Dajjāl] has taken your place among your families!’ So they will go out, but that will be false. When they reach Syria, he will emerge. While they are preparing for battle, arranging the ranks, the prayer will be established, and ‘Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, will descend and lead them. When the enemy of Allāh sees him, he will dissolve as salt dissolves in water. If he were to leave him, he would dissolve until he perishes, but Allāh will kill him at his hand, and he will show them his blood on his spear.”

The Hour will be established when the Romans are the most numerous of people:

- 2898 Mūsā ibn ‘Alī, from his father, said: Al-Mustawrid al-Qurashī said to ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, "I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: ‘Then the Hour will be established when the Romans are the most numerous of people.’" ‘Amr said to him, "Be sure of what you are saying!" He said, "I am saying what I heard from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him." He [Al-Mustawrid] said, "If you say that, indeed they possess four qualities: they are the most forbearing of people in times of tribulation, the quickest to recover after a calamity, the swiftest to return to battle after a retreat, and the best of them to a poor person, an orphan, and a weak person. And a fifth, good and beautiful: they are the most resistant to the oppression of kings."

- 2896 From Suhayl ibn Abī Ṣāliḥ, from his father, from Abū Hurayrah, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then Iraq will be prevented its dirham and its qafiz, Syria will be prevented its muddy and its dīnār, and Egypt will be prevented its irdabb and its dīnār. And you will return to where you began, you will return to where you began, you will return to where you began." The flesh and blood of Abū Hurayrah bear witness to this.

The Advance of the Romans with Great Slaughter, then the Emergence of the Dajjāl:

- 2899 From Yasīr ibn Jābir, he said: "Then a red wind blew in Kūfah, and a man came whose only cry was, 'O 'Abd Allāh ibn Mas'ūd, the Hour has come!' He [Ibn Mas'ūd] sat up, having been reclining, and said, 'The Hour will not be established until inheritance is not divided, nor is there rejoicing over spoils.' Then he gestured with his hand like this, towards Syria, and said, 'An enemy will gather for the people of Islām, and the people of Islām will gather for them.' I said, 'Do you mean the Romans?' He said, 'Yes. And then there will be a severe apostasy in that battle. The Muslims will dispatch a vanguard for death, not to return unless victorious. They will fight until night separates them. Both these and those will return, neither victorious, and the vanguard will be annihilated. Then the Muslims will dispatch a vanguard for death, not to return unless victorious. They will fight until night separates them. Both these and those will return, neither victorious, and the vanguard will be annihilated. Then the Muslims will dispatch a vanguard for death, not to return unless victorious. They will fight until evening. Both these and those will return, neither victorious, and the vanguard will be annihilated. On the fourth day, the remainder of the people of Islām will advance against them. Allāh will bring about their defeat. They will inflict a slaughter – he either said, ‘the like of which has not been seen,’ or he said, ‘the like of which was never seen’ – such that a bird passing by their sides would not pass beyond them before falling dead. The descendants of a father, who were a hundred, will count themselves and find only one man remaining from them. So with what spoils would one rejoice, or what inheritance would one divide? While they are in that state, they will hear of a calamity greater than that. A crier will come to them, saying, ‘The Dajjāl has taken your place among your offspring!’ They will cast aside what is in their hands and advance. They will send ten horsemen as a vanguard.’ The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, ‘I indeed know their names, the names of their fathers, and the colors of their horses. They are the best horsemen on the face of the earth on that day, or among the best horsemen on the face of the earth on that day.’” Ibn Abī Shaybah said in his narration from Asīr ibn Jābir.

- 2913 From Abū Naḍrah, he said, then we were with Jābir ibn ‘Abd Allāh, and he said: "It is imminent that the people of Iraq will not have a qafīz or a dirham brought to them." We said, "From where is that?" He said, "From the direction of the non-Arabs (al-‘Ajam); they will prevent that." Then he said, "It is imminent that the people of Syria will not have a dīnār or a muddy brought to them." We said, "From where is that?" He said, "From the direction of the Romans." Then he was silent for a moment, then he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "There will be in the end of my ummah a caliph who will scoop up wealth abundantly, not counting it." He [the narrator] said, I said to Abū Naḍrah and Abū al-‘Alā’, "Do you think he is ‘Umar ibn ‘Abd al-‘Azīz?" They both said, "No."

- 2920 From Abū Hurayrah, that the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then you have heard of a city, one side of which is on land and one side of which is in the sea?" They said, "Yes, O Messenger of Allāh." He said, "The Hour will not be established until seventy thousand from the Banū Ishāq (Children of Isaac) invade it. When they come to it, they will encamp but will not fight with weapons nor shoot an arrow. They will say, 'There is no god but Allāh, and Allāh is Greater (Lā ilāha illā Allāh, wa Allāhu Akbar).' One of its two sides will fall." Thawr said, "I do not know him to have said anything other than, 'The one in the sea.'" "Then they will say a second time, 'There is no god but Allāh, and Allāh is Greater.' Its other side will fall. Then they will say a third time, 'There is no god but Allāh, and Allāh is Greater.' It will be opened for them, and they will enter it and take spoils. While they are dividing the spoils, a crier will come to them and say, 'The Dajjāl has indeed emerged!' They will leave everything and return."

Sunan Abī Dāwūd:

- 4292 From Jubayr ibn Nufayr, regarding the truce, he said: Jubayr said, "Take us to Dhū Mikhbar, a man from the companions of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him." So we went to him, and Jubayr asked him about the truce. He said, "I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: 'Then you will make a secure peace with the Romans. You and they will invade an enemy beyond you. You will be victorious, take spoils, and be safe. Then you will return until you encamp in a meadow full of hills. A man from the Christians will raise the cross and say, 'The cross has prevailed!' A man from the Muslims will become angry and break it. At that point, the Romans will act treacherously and gather for the great battle (al-Malḥamah)."

- 4293 From Ḥassān ibn ‘Aṭiyyah, then with this Ḥadīth, he added in it: "And the Muslims will rush to their weapons and fight. Allāh will honor that group with martyrdom."
- 4294 From Jubayr ibn Nufayr, from Mālik ibn Yukhāmīr, from Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then the flourishing of Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem] will be the ruin of Yathrib (Madīnah), the ruin of Yathrib will be the outbreak of the great battle, the outbreak of the great battle will be the conquest of Constantinople, and the conquest of Constantinople will be the emergence of the Dajjāl." Then he struck his hand on the thigh of the one he was narrating to, or his shoulder, and then said, "This is as true as you are here, or as you are sitting," meaning Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal.
- Chapter: On the Succession of Great Battles:
- 4295 From Abū Baḥriyyah, from Mu‘ādh ibn Jabal, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then the Great Battle, the conquest of Constantinople, and the emergence of the Dajjāl will be within seven months."
- 4296 From Ibn Abī Bilāl, from ‘Abd Allāh ibn Busr, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then between the Great Battle and the conquest of the city (Madīnah, referring to Constantinople) will be six years, and the Messiah Dajjāl will emerge in the seventh." Abū Dāwūd said: This is more authentic than the Ḥadīth of ‘Īsā.
- 4298 From Abū al-Dardā’, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then indeed the encampment of the Muslims on the day of the Great Battle will be in al-Ghūṭah, beside a city called Damascus, one of the best cities of Syria."

- 4299 From Nāfi‘, from Ibn ‘Umar, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then it is imminent that the Muslims will be besieged up to Madīnah, such that their furthest outpost will be Salāḥ."
- 4300 From al-Zuhrī, he said: "Then, Salāḥ is near Khaybar."
- 4301 From ‘Awf ibn Mālik, he said that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then Allāh will not combine against this ummah two swords: a sword from itself and a sword from its enemy."

On the Prohibition of Provoking the Turks and the Abyssinians:

- 4302 From Abū Sukaynah, a man from the freedmen, from a man from the companions of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, that he said: "Then leave the Abyssinians as long as they leave you, and leave the Turks as long as they leave you."

Al-Mustadrak ‘alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn by Abū ‘Abd Allāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī:

- 8298 From Dhū Mikhmar, a man from the companions of the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, who was the nephew of al-Najāshī, that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "You will make a secure peace with the Romans, such that you and they will invade an enemy beyond them. You will be victorious, take spoils, and return until you encamp in a meadow full of hills. A man from the Romans will say, 'The cross has prevailed!' And a man from the Muslims will say, 'Rather, Allāh has prevailed!' They will argue about it among themselves. The Muslim will rush to their cross, and they are not far from them, and break it. The Romans will rush to the one who broke their cross and kill him. The Muslims will rush to their weapons and fight. Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will honor that group of Muslims with martyrdom. The Romans will say to the leader of the Romans, 'We have spared you the might of the Arabs.' They will act treacherously and gather for the Great Battle. They will come to you under eighty banners, under each banner twelve thousand." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, but they (al-Bukhārī and Muslim) did not include it.

- 8400 From Jābir ibn 'Abd Allāh, may Allāh be pleased with them both, he said: "It is imminent that the people of Iraq will not have a dirham or a qafīz brought to them." They said, "From what cause is that, O Abū 'Abd Allāh?" He said, "From the direction of the non-Arabs (al-'Ajam); they will prevent that." Then he was silent for a moment, then he said, "It is imminent that the people of Syria will not have a dīnār or a mudy brought to them." They said, "From what cause is that?" He said, "From the direction of the Romans; they will prevent that." Then he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "There will be in my ummah a caliph who will scoop up wealth abundantly, not counting it." Then he said, "By Him in Whose Hand is my soul, the affair will indeed return as it began. Every īmān (faith) will indeed return to Madīnah as it began from it, until all īmān is in Madīnah." Then he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "No man leaves Madīnah out of aversion to it except that Allāh replaces him with someone better than him. And people will indeed hear of cheap prices and fertile land and follow it, but Madīnah is better for them, if they only knew." This Ḥadīth is authentic according to the conditions of Muslim.
- 8423 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr ibn al-'Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both: "That a man from the enemies of the Muslims in al-Andalus, called Dhū al-'Urf, will gather a great assembly from the polytheistic tribes. Those in al-Andalus will know they have no strength against him. The strong among the Muslims will flee in ships and cross to Ṭanjah (Tangier). The weak among the people and their community who have no ships to cross on will remain. Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will send a mountain goat and it will cross the sea for them; the water will not cover its hooves. People will see it and say, 'The mountain goat, the mountain goat! Follow it!' The people will all cross following its tracks. Then the sea will return to its former state. The enemy will cross in ships. When the people of Ifrīqiyah sense them, they will all flee from Ifrīqiyah, and with them those Muslims who were in al-Andalus, until they enter al-Fuṣṭāṭ (in Egypt). That enemy will advance until they encamp between Marbūṭ and the Pyramids, a journey of five barīds, and they will fill that place with evil. The banner of the Muslims will go out to them at the bridge, and Allāh will grant them victory over them. They will defeat them and kill them up to Alūlbah, a journey of ten nights. The people of al-Fuṣṭāṭ will use their wagons and equipment for fuel for seven years. Dhū al-ʿUrf will escape being killed, and with him will be a book which he will not look into except while he is fleeing. He will find in it mention of Islām and that he is ordered in it to enter into peace. He will ask for security for himself and for those of his companions who responded with him to Islām, those who came with him. He will embrace Islām and become one of the Muslims. Then, the following year, a man from Abyssinia called Asīs will come, having gathered a great army. The Muslims will flee from them from Aswān until no Muslim remains there or below it, except those who enter al-Fuṣṭāṭ. Asīs will encamp with his army at Manf (Memphis), which is at a distance of one barīd from al-Fuṣṭāṭ. The banner of the Muslims will go out to them at the bridge, and Allāh will grant them victory over them. They will kill them and take them captive until a black person is sold for a cloak." This Ḥadīth is authentic, a mawqūf narration (ascribed to a Companion) according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs (al-Bukhārī and Muslim), and it is a basis for knowing the occurrence of tribulations in Egypt, but they did not include it.

- 8426 From Kaʿb, he said: "Indeed, the strongholds are three: the stronghold of the people on the day of the Great Battles is Damascus; the stronghold of the people on the day of the Dajjāl is the river of Abū Quṭrus – some people will say Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]; and their stronghold on the day of Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj (Gog and Magog) is Mount Sinai."

- 8428 From Ka'b, he said: "Al-Jazīrah (Upper Mesopotamia) is safe from ruin until Armenia is ruined. Egypt is safe from ruin until al-Jazīrah is ruined. Kūfah is safe from ruin until Egypt is ruined. The Great Battle will not occur until Kūfah is ruined. The city of disbelief (Madīnat al-Kufr) will not be conquered until the Great Battle occurs. The Dajjāl will not emerge until the city of disbelief is conquered."
- 8488 From Kathīr ibn 'Abd Allāh, from his father, from his grandfather, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, saying: "The world will not pass away, O 'Alī ibn Abī Ṭālib." 'Alī said, "At your service, O Messenger of Allāh!" He said, "Know that you will fight Banū al-Aṣfar (the Byzantines/Romans), or those after you from the believers will fight them. The vanguard of the believers, the people of Ḥijāz, who perform Jihād in the way of Allāh, not fearing the blame of any blamer in the cause of Allāh, will go out to them until Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, grants them conquest over Constantinople and Rūmīyah (Rome) with tasbīḥ (glorification of Allāh) and takbīr (proclamation of Allāh's greatness). Its fortress will crumble, and they will acquire immense spoils, the like of which they have never acquired, to the extent that they will divide them by the shieldful. Then a crier will shout, 'O people of Islām, the Messiah Dajjāl has emerged in your lands and among your offspring!' People will abandon the wealth; some will take it, and some will leave it. The taker will be regretful, and the leaver will be regretful. They will say, 'Who is this shouter?' and they will not know who he is. They will say, 'Send a vanguard to Ludd (Lydda). If the Messiah has emerged, they will bring you news of him.' They will go and look but see nothing, and they will see people doubting. They will say, 'The shouter did not shout except for some news. Make a firm decision, then be guided aright.' They will resolve to go out all together to Ludd. 'If the Messiah Dajjāl is there, we will fight him until Allāh judges between us and him, and He is the best of judges. And if it is otherwise, then it is your lands, your kinsfolk, and your encampments; you will return to them.'"

- 8496 Abū al-Dardā', may Allāh be pleased with him, says that he heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "On the day of the Great Battle, the encampment of the Muslims will be in a land called al-Fūṭah, in which there is a city called Damascus, the best of the Muslims' abodes on that day." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, but they (al-Bukhārī and Muslim) did not include it.
- 8655 From Ishāq ibn 'Abd Allāh, that 'Awf ibn Mālīk al-Ashja'ī came to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, during a conquest of his. He said, "Congratulations to you, O Messenger of Allāh! Allāh has indeed strengthened your victory, made your religion manifest, and the war has laid down its burdens, its heavy chest resting on the ground." He said, and the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, was in a leather tent, "Enter, O 'Awf." He said, "Shall I enter all of me or part of me?" He said, "Enter all of you." He said, "Indeed, the war will not lay down its burdens until there are six [events]. The first of them is my death." 'Awf wept. The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, "Say, 'One.' The second is the conquest of Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. The third is a tribulation among the people like the murrain of sheep. The fourth is a tribulation among the people such that no household remains but their share of it enters upon them. The fifth is that a boy will be born among Banū al-Aṣfar (the Byzantines/Romans) from the children of kings. He will grow in a day as a child grows in a week, and he will grow in a week as a child grows in a month, and he will grow in a month as a child grows in a year. When he reaches twelve years of age, they will make him their king. He will stand among them and say, 'For how long will this people dominate us over the best parts of our land? I have decided to march against them until I drive them out of it.' The orators will stand and approve his opinion. He will send [orders] to the islands and the mainland for the construction of ships. Then he will load them with fighters until he encampes between Anṭākiyah (Antioch) and al-ʿArīsh." Ibn Shurayḥ said: I heard someone say that they are twelve banners, under each banner twelve thousand. "The Muslims will gather to their leader in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem], and they will agree in their opinion to march to the city of the Messenger, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, until their outposts are at al-Sarḥ and Khaybar." Ibn Abī Jaʿfar said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "My ummah will emerge from the places where artemisia grows." Or, al-Ḥārith ibn Yazīd said, "They will indeed stay there for a while. A third of them will flee, a third of them will be killed, and Allāh, Exalted and Majestic, will defeat them [the enemy] with the patient third." And Khālīd ibn Yazīd said, "On that day, by Allāh, he will strike with his sword and thrust with his spear, and the Muslims will follow him until they reach the strait which is near Constantinople. They will find its water dried up, so they will cross to the city and encamp by it. Allāh will demolish their walls with the takbīr. Then they will enter it and divide their wealth with shields." Abū Qabīl al-Maʿāfirī said: "While they are in that state, a rider will come to them and say, 'You are here, and the Dajjāl has taken your place among your families!' It was only a lie. Whoever among the scholars hears that will remain with what he has acquired. As for others, they will disperse. And the Muslims will be building mosques in Constantinople and campaigning beyond that until the Dajjāl emerges – the sixth [event]." This Ḥadīth has an authentic chain of narration, but they (al-Bukhārī and Muslim) did not include it.

Majma' al-Zawā'id by its author 'Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- And from 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Abī Bakrah, he said: I came to 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr in his house, and around him were two rows of people, and there was no one on his bed. So I sat on his bed by his feet. Then a red man with a large belly and stature came and said, "Who is the man?" I said, "'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Abī Bakrah." He said, "And who is Abū Bakrah?" He said, "And what do you remember of the man who leaped to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, from the wall of Ṭā'if?" He said, "Yes." Then he began to narrate to us, saying: "It is imminent that the Son of the Lamb's Burden (Ibn Ḥamal al-Ḍa'n) will emerge." I said, "What is the Lamb's Burden?" He said, "A man, one of whose parents is a devil, who will rule the Romans. He will come with a million men, five hundred thousand on land and five hundred thousand at sea. They will encamp in a land called al-'Amīq. He will say to his companions, 'I have some unfinished business with your ships,' so he will burn them with fire. Then he will say, 'You have no Rūmiyah (Rome) and no Constantinople! Whoever wishes to flee, let him flee.' The Muslims will seek help from one another until the people of 'Adan Abyan provide them with aid. The Muslims will say to them, 'Join them and become one force.' They will fight for a month until blood wades up to the horses' hooves. The believer on that day will have two shares of reward over those who came before him, except for the companions of Muḥammad, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him. When it is the last day of the month, Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, will say, 'Today I shall draw My sword, grant victory to My religion, and take vengeance on My enemy.' Allāh will grant them the upper hand over them. Allāh will defeat them until Constantinople is conquered. Their commander will say, 'No spoils today!' While they are thus, dividing gold and silver with their shields, it will be announced among them that the Dajjāl has taken their place in their homes. They will leave what is in their hands and fight the Dajjāl." Narrated by al-Bazzār as a mawqūf narration. In its chain is 'Alī ibn Zayd, whose Ḥadīth is ḥasan (good), and the rest of its narrators are trustworthy.

Al-Sunan al-Wāridah fī al-Fitan:

- From al-Awzā'ī, he said: "When the possessors of the yellow banners enter Egypt, let the people of Syria dig tunnels under the ground."
- 477 From Sufyān al-Thawrī, he said: "A neck (group/force) from the Berbers will emerge. Woe to the people of Egypt!"
- 478 From a mawlā (freed slave) of Shuraḥbīl ibn Ḥasanah or 'Amr ibn al-'Āṣ, he said: I heard him one day, and he faced us and said: "Woe to you, Egypt, when you are shot at by the four bows: the bow of al-Andalus, the bow of Abyssinia, the bow of the Turks, and the bow of the Romans."
- 1263 From Ka'b: He said, "And the Romans will make excuses for those among them. They will gather and come with an army by sea from Rūmiyah (Rome), led by a commander of theirs called al-Jamal (the Camel), one of whose parents is a jinnīyyah (female jinn) or he said a devil. He will sail with his ships until he encampes at a monastery called 'Umqā in 'Akkā (Acre)."
- 1319 Ka'b said: "And indeed in the West (al-Maghrib) is Ḥamal al-Ḍa'n (the Lamb's Burden), a king from their kings, preparing a thousand fortresses for the people of Syria. Every time he prepares them, Allāh sends a violent wind upon them until Allāh permits their emergence. They will anchor between 'Akkā (Acre) and the river. They will engage every garrison that extends a garrison." It should be asked, which river is it? He said, "The outflow of the Orontes, the river of Ḥimṣ, and its outflow is between al-Aqra' and al-Maṣṣīṣah."

- 1326 From Ibn Lahī'ah, from Abū Qabīl, he said: "When you conquer Rūmiyah (Rome), enter its great eastern church from its eastern gate. Count seven flagstones, then remove the eighth, for beneath it are the staff of Mūsā (Moses), the Gospel fresh, and the ornaments of Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]."
- 1333 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, he said: "When Dhū al-Khalaṣah is worshipped, it will be the ascendancy of the Romans over Syria."
- 1346 From Ibn Muḥayrīz, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Indeed, Persia is one butt or two, then no Persia after that. The Romans are the possessors of horns; whenever a horn goes, another horn replaces it in its place, masters of rock and sea. Far, far [is their end], until the end of time. They are your companions as long as there is good in life."
- 1347 From Ibn Lahī'ah, from Abū Qabīl, he said: "The one who will conquer Constantinople, his name is the name of a prophet." Ibn Lahī'ah said: "And it is narrated in their books, meaning the Romans, that his name is Ṣāliḥ."
- 1375 From Yūnus ibn Sayf al-Khawḷānī, he said: "You will make a secure peace with the Romans, such that you and they will invade the Turks and Karmān, and Allāh will grant you victory. The Romans will say, 'The cross has prevailed!' The Muslims will become angry, and they will withdraw, and they [the groups] will withdraw. They will fight a severe battle, then at Marj Dhī Tulūl. Then Allāh will grant you victory over them. Then the Great Battles will be after that."
- 1409 'Abd al-Ṣamad ibn 'Abd al-Wārith narrated to us from Ḥammād ibn Salamah from 'Alī ibn Zayd from 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Abī Bakrah, he said: I heard 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr say: "It is imminent that Ḥamal al-Ḍa'n (the Lamb's Burden) will emerge," three times. I said, "What is Ḥamal al-Ḍa'n?" He said, "A man, one of whose parents is a devil, who will rule the Romans. He will come with one million five hundred thousand men: one million on land and five hundred thousand at sea, until he encampes in a land called al-'Umq. He will say to his companions, 'I have a request concerning your ships.' When they disembark from them, he will order them to be burned. Then he will say, 'You have no Constantinople and no Rūmīyah (Rome)! Whoever wishes, let him stay.' The Muslims will seek help from one another." Then he mentioned the Ḥadīth until, "You will conquer Constantinople, the adulteress. Indeed, I find it in the Book of Allāh Almighty as 'the adulteress.'"

- 1428 From Arṭāh, he said: "There will be a peace treaty between the Mahdī and the tyrant of the Romans after his [the Mahdī's] killing of the Sufyānī and the plundering of Kalb, such that your merchants will travel to them and their merchants to you. They will engage in building their ships for three years. Then the Mahdī will perish. A man from his household will rule, who will be just for a little while, then he will become tyrannical and will be killed, but his mention will not cease until the Romans anchor between Ṣūr (Tyre) and 'Akkā (Acre). That is [the time of] the Great Battles."

The Emergence of the Dajjāl and the Descent of 'Īsā (Jesus), peace be upon him

Ṣaḥīḥ al-Bukhārī:

- 1780 From Abū Bakrah, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, he said: "Then the terror of the Messiah Dajjāl will not enter Madīnah. It will have seven gates on that day, with two angels at each gate."

- 1782 From Anas ibn Mālik, may Allāh be pleased with him, from the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, he said: "Then there is no land that the Dajjāl will not tread except Makkah and Madīnah. There is no pass leading to them but will have angels in ranks guarding them. Then Madīnah will tremble with its inhabitants three times, and Allāh will expel every kāfir (disbeliever) and munāfiq (hypocrite)."
- 1783 From Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, may Allāh be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, narrated to us a long Ḥadīth about the Dajjāl. Among what he narrated to us was that he said: "Then the Dajjāl will come, and it will be forbidden for him to enter the passes of Madīnah. He will encamp in some of the salt marshes near Madīnah. On that day, a man, who is the best of people or among the best of people, will go out to him and say, 'I bear witness that you are the Dajjāl about whom the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, told us in his Ḥadīth.' The Dajjāl will say, 'What do you think, if I kill this man and then bring him back to life, will you doubt the matter?' They will say, 'No.' So he will kill him, then bring him back to life. When he brings him back to life, he [the man] will say, 'By Allāh, I have never been more certain about you than I am today.' The Dajjāl will say, 'I will kill him,' but he will not be given power over him."
- Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim:
- 169 Sālim said, 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Umar said: "Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, stood among the people and praised Allāh as He is deserving, then he mentioned the Dajjāl and said, 'I indeed warn you about him. There is no prophet who did not warn his people about him. Nūḥ (Noah) indeed warned his people about him. But I will tell you something about him that no prophet told his people: know that he is one-eyed, and Allāh, Blessed and Exalted, is not one-eyed.'"

- 169 Ibn Shihāb said, and ‘Umar ibn Thābit al-Anṣārī informed me that one of the companions of the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, informed him: "That the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said on the day he warned the people about the Dajjāl: 'Then indeed, it is written between his eyes: KĀFIR (disbeliever). Whoever dislikes his actions will read it, or every believer will read it.' And he said, 'Know that none of you will see your Lord, Exalted and Majestic, until he dies.'"
- 2933 From Qatādah, he said, I heard Anas ibn Mālīk say, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then no prophet was sent but he warned his ummah about the one-eyed liar. Behold, he is one-eyed, and your Lord is not one-eyed. And between his eyes is written K-F-R (ك ف ر)."
- 2934 From Ḥudhayfah, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then I know better what the Dajjāl has with him than he himself does. With him are two flowing rivers. One of them, to the eye, is white water, and the other, to the eye, is blazing fire. If anyone reaches it, let him come to the river that he sees as fire, close his eyes, then lower his head and drink from it, for it is cool water. And indeed, the Dajjāl has a wiped-clean eye, upon which is a thick membrane. Between his eyes is written KĀFIR, which every believer, literate or illiterate, will read."
- 2937 From al-Nawwās ibn Sam‘ān, then he said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl one morning. He spoke lowly of him and then highly of him, until we thought he was in the cluster of palm trees. When we went to him in the evening, he recognized that in us and said, "What is the matter with you?" We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, you mentioned the Dajjāl this morning, speaking lowly of him and then highly of him, until we thought he was in the cluster of palm trees." [He said:] "The Dajjāl is what I fear most for you. If he emerges while I am among you, I will be his contender on your behalf. But if he emerges and I am not among you, then every man is his own contender, and Allāh is my successor over every Muslim. Indeed, he is a young man with very curly hair, his eye is floating. I liken him to ‘Abd al-‘Uzzā ibn Qaṭan. Whoever among you encounters him, let him recite the opening verses of Sūrat al-Kahf over him. He will emerge from a pass between Syria and Iraq, and he will wreak havoc to the right and to the left. O servants of Allāh, stand firm!" We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, and how long will he remain on earth?" He said, "Forty days: one day like a year, one day like a month, one day like a week, and the rest of his days like your days." We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, that day which is like a year, will the prayer of one day suffice us in it?" He said, "No, estimate for it its proper measure." We said, "O Messenger of Allāh, and how fast will he travel on earth?" He said, "Like rain driven by the wind. He will come to a people and call them, and they will believe in him and respond to him. He will command the sky, and it will rain, and the earth, and it will sprout. Their grazing livestock will return to them in the evening with their humps taller than they have ever been, their udders fuller, and their flanks more extended. Then he will come to a people and call them, but they will reject his call. He will turn away from them, and they will wake up destitute, with none of their wealth in their hands. He will pass by a ruin and say to it, ‘Bring forth your treasures!’ and its treasures will follow him like swarms of bees. Then he will call a man in the prime of youth, strike him with a sword, and cut him into two pieces, like a target struck. Then he will call him, and he will come forward, his face beaming, laughing. While he is in that state, Allāh will send the Messiah ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary). He will descend at the white minaret, east of Damascus, between two lightly saffron-dyed garments, placing his hands on the wings of two angels. When he lowers his head, drops will fall, and when he raises it, beads like pearls will scatter from it. No kāfir who finds the scent of his breath will survive, and his breath will reach as far as his sight extends. He will pursue him [the Dajjāl] until he catches him at the Gate of Ludd (Lydda) and kills him. Then 'Īsā ibn Maryam will come to a people whom Allāh has protected from him. He will wipe their faces and inform them of their ranks in Paradise. While he is in that state, Allāh will reveal to 'Īsā, 'I have brought forth servants of Mine against whom no one has the power to fight. So gather My servants to Mount Ṭūr.' And Allāh will send Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj (Gog and Magog), and they will swarm down from every slope. The first of them will pass by the Lake of Tiberias and drink what is in it. The last of them will pass by and say, 'There was once water here.' The Prophet of Allāh 'Īsā and his companions will be besieged until the head of an ox is better for one of them than a hundred dīnārs are for one of you today. The Prophet of Allāh 'Īsā and his companions will supplicate, and Allāh will send upon them naghaf (worms) in their necks. They will perish as one soul. Then the Prophet of Allāh 'Īsā and his companions will descend to the earth, and they will not find a handspan of space on earth that is not filled with their stench and putrefaction. The Prophet of Allāh 'Īsā and his companions will supplicate to Allāh, and Allāh will send birds like the necks of Bactrian camels. They will carry them and cast them wherever Allāh wills. Then Allāh will send rain which no house of clay or wool will keep out. It will wash the earth until it leaves it like a mirror. Then it will be said to the earth, 'Bring forth your fruit and restore your blessing.' On that day, a group will eat from a single pomegranate and seek shade under its husk. Blessings will be in milk, such that a milking she-camel will suffice for a large group of people, a milking cow will suffice for a tribe of people, and a milking sheep will suffice for a clan of people. While they are in that state, Allāh will send a pleasant wind. It will take them under their armpits and will take the soul of every believer and every Muslim. The most evil of people will remain, copulating in public like donkeys. Upon them the Hour will be established."

- 2938 From Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then the Dajjāl will emerge, and a man from the believers will go towards him. The armed forces will meet him – the Dajjāl's armed forces. They will say to him, 'Where are you heading?' He will say, 'I am heading to this one who has emerged.' He said, They will say to him, 'Do you not believe in our lord?' He will say, 'Our Lord has no hiddenness.' They will say, 'Kill him!' Some of them will say to others, 'Has not your lord forbidden you to kill anyone without his [permission]?' He said, So they will take him to the Dajjāl. When the believer sees him, he will say, 'O people, this is the Dajjāl whom the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, mentioned!' He said, The Dajjāl will order him to be stretched out and will say, 'Seize him and beat him!' His back and stomach will be severely beaten. He said, He [the Dajjāl] will say, 'Do you not believe in me?' He said, He [the man] will say, 'You are the lying Messiah.' He said, He will be ordered to be sawn with a saw from the parting of his hair until he is split between his legs. He said, Then the Dajjāl will walk between the two pieces. Then he will say to him, 'Stand up!' And he will stand upright. He said, Then he will say to him, 'Do you believe in me?' He will say, 'I have only increased in insight concerning you.' He said, Then he will say, 'O people, he will not do this to anyone after me.' He said, The Dajjāl will take him to slaughter him, but the space between his neck and his collarbone will be made of copper, so he will not be able to find a way to him. He said, So he will take him by his hands and feet and throw him. People will think he has thrown him into the Fire, but he will have been thrown into Paradise." The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, "This is the greatest of people in martyrdom in the sight of the Lord of the Worlds."
- 2943 From Anas ibn Mālik, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then there is no land that the Dajjāl will not tread except Makkah and Madīnah. There is no pass leading to them but will have angels in ranks guarding them. He will encamp at al-Sabkhah. Madīnah will then tremble three times, and every kāfir and munāfiq will go out to him from it."

- 2944 From al-Awzā'ī, from Ishāq ibn 'Abd Allāh, from his uncle Anas ibn Mālik, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then seventy thousand from Zafar, Iṣbahān, wearing ṭayālisah (shawls/hooded cloaks), will follow the Dajjāl."
- 2945 Jābir ibn 'Abd Allāh says Umm Sharīk informed him that she heard the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, say: "Then people will indeed flee from the Dajjāl into the mountains." Umm Sharīk said, "O Messenger of Allāh, where will the Arabs be on that day?" He said, "They will be few."

Sunan Abī Dāwūd:

- 4319 'Imrān ibn Ḥuṣayn narrates, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then whoever hears of the Dajjāl, let him keep away from him. For by Allāh, a man will come to him thinking he is a believer, but he will follow him because of the specious arguments he presents, or for what specious arguments he presents."
- 4321 From al-Nawwās ibn Sam'ān al-Kilābī, he said: *"Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl and said, 'If he emerges while I am among you, I will be his contender on your behalf. But if he emerges and I am not among you, then every man is his own contender, and Allāh is my successor over every Muslim. - 4324 From 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Ādam, from Abū Hurayrah, that the Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then there is no prophet between me and him, meaning 'Īsā (Jesus), and he will indeed descend. When you see him, recognize him: a man of medium height, reddish-white complexion, between two lightly dyed garments, as if his head is dripping water though no wetness has touched it. He will fight people for Islām, break the cross, kill the pig, and abolish the jizyah (poll tax). Allāh will destroy all religions in his time except Islām. He will destroy the Messiah Dajjāl. He will remain on earth for forty years, then he will pass away, and the Muslims will pray over him."

Ibn Mājah:

- 4072 From Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, narrated to us: "Then indeed the Dajjāl will emerge from a land in the East called Khurāsān. Peoples whose faces are like hammered shields will follow him."
- 7075 From al-Nawwās ibn Sam'ān al-Kilābī, he says: *"Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl one morning. While they are in that state, Allāh will send upon them a pleasant wind. It will take [them] under their armpits and will take the soul of every Muslim. The rest of the people will remain, copulating like donkeys copulate. Upon them the Hour will be established.”

- 4077 From Abū Umāmah al-Bāhilī, he said: "Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, addressed us, and most of his address was a Ḥadīth he narrated to us about the Dajjāl, and he warned us against him. Part of what he said was: 'Indeed, there has been no tribulation on earth since Allāh created the offspring of Ādam greater than the tribulation of the Dajjāl. And Allāh has not sent a prophet except that he warned his ummah about the Dajjāl. I am the last of the Prophets, and you are the last of the ummahs. He will inevitably emerge. If he emerges while I am among you, I will be the contender for every Muslim. But if he emerges after me, then every man is his own contender, and Allāh is my successor over every Muslim. He will emerge from a pass between Syria and Iraq, and he will wreak havoc to the right and to the left. O servants of Allāh, stand firm! For I will describe him to you with a description that no prophet before me has described him with. He will begin by saying, "I am a prophet," but there is no prophet after me. Then he will follow up by saying, "I am your lord," but you will not see your Lord until you die. And he is one-eyed, but your Lord is not one-eyed. And it is written between his eyes: KĀFIR, which every believer, literate or illiterate, will read. And part of his tribulation is that with him is a paradise and a fire. His fire is a paradise, and his paradise is a fire. Whoever is afflicted by his fire, let him seek help from Allāh and recite the opening verses of al-Kahf, and it will be cool and peaceful for him, just as the fire was for Ibrāhīm (Abraham). And part of his tribulation is that he will say to a Bedouin, "What do you think, if I resurrect your father and mother for you, will you bear witness that I am your lord?" He will say, "Yes." So two devils will appear to him in the form of his father and mother, saying, "O my son, follow him, for he is your lord." And part of his tribulation is that he will be given power over a single soul. He will kill it and cut it with a saw until it is in two pieces. Then he will say, "Look at this servant of Mine. I will resurrect him now, then he will claim that he has a lord other than Me." Allāh will resurrect him, and the wicked one [the Dajjāl] will say to him, "Who is your lord?" He will say, "My Lord is Allāh, and you are the enemy of Allāh, you are the Dajjāl. By Allāh, I have never been more certain about you than I am today." Abū al-Ḥasan al-Ṭanāfīsī said... From 'Aṭiyyah, from Abū Sa'īd, he said, the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "That man is the highest in rank of my ummah in Paradise." He said, Abū Sa'īd said: "By Allāh, we did not think that man was anyone other than 'Umar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb until he passed away." Al-Muḥāribī said: Then we returned to the Ḥadīth of Abū Rāfi'. He said: "And part of his tribulation is that he will command the sky to rain, and it will rain, and he will command the earth to sprout, and it will sprout. And part of his tribulation is that he will pass by a community, and they will disbelieve him, and not a single grazing animal of theirs will remain but it will perish. And part of his tribulation is that he will pass by a community, and they will believe him. He will command the sky to rain, and it will rain, and he will command the earth to sprout, and it will sprout, until their livestock return from their day fatter than they have ever been, larger, with more extended flanks, and fuller udders. And no part of the earth will remain but he will tread it and prevail over it, except Makkah and Madīnah. He will not approach them from any of their passes but the angels will meet him with drawn swords, until he encampes at al-Ẓarīb al-Aḥmar, at the end of the salt marsh. Madīnah will then tremble with its inhabitants three times, and no hypocrite man or woman will remain but will go out to him. It will expel the impurity from itself as the blacksmith's bellows expel the impurity from iron. And that day will be called the Day of Deliverance." Umm Sharīk bint Abī al-'Akr said, "O Messenger of Allāh, where will the Arabs be on that day?" He said, "They will be few on that day, and most of them will be in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem], and their leader will be a righteous man. While their leader has stepped forward to lead them in the Ṣubḥ (dawn) prayer, 'Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary) will descend upon them at dawn. That leader will step back, walking backwards, for 'Īsā to step forward and lead the people in prayer. 'Īsā will place his hand between his shoulders and then say to him, 'Step forward and pray, for it was established for you.' So their leader will lead them in prayer. When he finishes, 'Īsā, peace be upon him, will say, 'Open the gate.' It will be opened, and behind it will be the Dajjāl with seventy thousand Jews, each with an adorned sword and a green shawl. When the Dajjāl looks at him, he will dissolve as salt dissolves in water and will flee. 'Īsā, peace be upon him, will say, 'I have a decisive encounter with you which you will not escape.' He will catch him at the eastern Gate of Ludd (Lydda) and kill him. Allāh will defeat the Jews, and nothing that Allāh created will remain for a Jew to hide behind, but Allāh will make that thing speak – no stone, no tree, no animal – except for the Gharqad tree, for it is one of their trees, it will not speak – but it will say, 'O servant of Allāh, the Muslim, this is a Jew, come and kill him.'" The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "And his days are forty years: a year like half a year, a year like a month, a month like a week, and his last days like a spark. One of you will be at the gate of Madīnah in the morning and will not reach its other gate until evening." It was said to him, "O Messenger of Allāh, how will we pray in those short days?" He said, "You will estimate the prayer in them as you estimate it in these long days, then pray." The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said: "Then 'Īsā ibn Maryam (Jesus son of Mary), peace be upon him, will be in my ummah a just judge and an equitable leader. He will break the cross, slaughter the pig, and abolish the jizyah. Charity will be left, and no one will strive for a sheep or a camel. Enmity and mutual hatred will be removed, and the venom of every venomous creature will be removed, such that a child will put his hand into a snake's mouth, and it will not harm him, and a young girl will make a lion flee, and it will not harm her. The wolf will be among the sheep as if it were their dog. The earth will be filled with peace as a vessel is filled with water. The word will be one, and none will be worshipped except Allāh. War will lay down its burdens. Quraysh will be stripped of its kingdom. The earth will be like a silver platter, producing its vegetation as in the time of Ādam, until a group of people gather over a cluster of grapes, and it will satisfy them, and a group of people gather over a pomegranate, and it will satisfy them. An ox will be worth so-and-so amount of money, and a horse will be worth a few dirhams." They said, "O Messenger of Allāh, what will make the horse cheap?" He said, "It will never be ridden for war." It was said to him, "What will make the ox expensive?" He said, "The entire earth will be cultivated. And indeed, before the emergence of the Dajjāl, there will be three difficult years. People will suffer severe hunger in them. Allāh will command the sky in the first year to withhold a third of its rain, and He will command the earth to withhold a third of its vegetation. Then He will command the sky in the second year to withhold two-thirds of its rain, and He will command the earth to withhold two-thirds of its vegetation. Then Allāh will command the sky in the third year to withhold all of its rain, so not a drop will fall, and He will command the earth to withhold all of its vegetation, so no green thing will sprout. No cloven-hoofed animal will remain except that it will perish, except what Allāh wills." It was said, "What will people live on in that time?" He said, "Tahlīl (saying Lā ilāha illā Allāh), Takbīr (saying Allāhu Akbar), Tasbīḥ (saying Subḥān Allāh), and Taḥmīd (saying Alḥamdulillāh). That will suffice them as food." Abū ‘Abd Allāh said, I heard Abū al-Ḥasan al-Ṭanāfīsī say, I heard ‘Abd al-Raḥmān al-Muḥāribī say: "This Ḥadīth should be given to the teacher so that [it is taught] in the school."

Ṣaḥīḥ Ibn Hibbān:

- 6784 From Abū Naḍrah, from Jābir ibn ‘Abd Allāh, he said: "Then the Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, met Ibn Ṣā’id, and with him were Abū Bakr and ‘Umar. He said, And Ibn Ṣā’id was with the boys. The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said to him, ‘Do you bear witness that I am the Messenger of Allāh?’ He [Ibn Ṣā’id] said, ‘Do you bear witness that I am the messenger of Allāh?’ The Prophet of Allāh said, ‘I believe in Allāh and His Messenger.’ He said, Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, ‘What do you see?’ He said, ‘I see a throne on the water.’ The Prophet, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, ‘You see the throne of Iblīs (Satan) on the sea.’ He said, ‘Look, what do you see?’ He said, ‘I see two truthful ones and two liars.’ The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, said, ‘He has confused himself about me, so leave him.’” Mention of the report about the time when the Dajjāl was born.

- 6787 From Yaḥyā ibn Ya‘mar: (He said to Fāṭimah bint Qays: "Narrate to me something you heard from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, and do not narrate to me anything you did not hear from the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him." She said: "Yes." Then the call for congregational prayer was made, so the people gathered and were alarmed. She said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, ascended the pulpit, praised Allāh and lauded Him, and said: "I have not gathered you for something desired or feared, but for a narration told to me by Tamīm al-Dārī. He claimed that he sailed the sea with thirty men from Lakhm and Judhām. He said: The sea tossed us about"—and perhaps he said, "the waves tossed us about"—"for a month. Then the ship brought us to an island in the sea. He said: We went ashore and were met by a girl dragging her hair; we did not know if she was facing us or had her back to us. We said: What are you? She said: I am al-Jassāsah. We said: Tell us. She said: Go to the master of the monastery, for he will inform you and seek information from you." He said: So we entered upon him, and there was a man, Allāh knows how huge he was, bound with iron chains to a rope. We said: Who are you? He said: Inform me about what I ask you. They said: Ask us. He said: What has happened to the date palms of Baysān? Do they bear fruit? We said: Yes. He said: Soon they will not bear fruit. Then he said: Tell me about the spring of Zughar; does it have water? We said: Yes. He said: Soon it will have no water. Then he said: Tell me about this man; has he emerged? They said: Yes. He said: Indeed, he is truthful, so follow him. We said: Who are you? He said: I am the Dajjāl." Kahmas said: Ibn Buraydah mentioned something I did not memorize, except that he said the earth is folded for him, and he will come upon all of them in forty mornings).

- 6793 From Ayyūb and ‘Ubayd Allāh ibn ‘Umar, from Nāfi‘: (Then Ibn ‘Umar saw Ibn Ṣā’id in one of the alleys of Madīnah, so Ibn ‘Umar cursed him and reviled him. He swelled up until he blocked the road. Ibn ‘Umar struck him with a stick, and he subsided until he returned to his normal state. Then he swelled up again until he blocked the road. Ibn ‘Umar struck him with a stick he had until he broke it on him. Ḥaḥṣah said to him: What is your concern with him? What provokes you against him? Did you not hear the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, say: "The Dajjāl will only emerge out of an anger that angers him"?).
- 6798 Anas ibn Mālīk said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("Then the Dajjāl will be followed by seventy thousand from the district of Isfahan, wearing Ṭayālīsah [Persian shawls].").

Al-Mustadrak ‘alā al-Ṣaḥīḥayn by Abū ‘Abd Allāh al-Ḥākim al-Naysābūrī:

- 8419 From Ibn Abī Mulaykah, who said: I went to Ibn ‘Abbās, may Allāh be pleased with them both, one day, and he said: ("I did not sleep last night until morning." I said: "Why?" He said: "They said the comet—the star with a tail—had risen, and I feared that the Dajjāl had appeared." This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs [al-Bukhārī and Muslim], though they did not narrate it).

- 8420 From Abū Qabīl, from ‘Abd Allāh ibn ‘Amr ibn al-‘Āṣ, may Allāh be pleased with them both, who said: ("The Dajjāl has known signs: when eyes sink, rivers are depleted, basil withers, and Madhḥij and Hamdān migrate from Iraq and settle in Qinnasrīn, then expect the Dajjāl, morning or evening.") This is a Ḥadīth with an authentic chain of narration, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.
- 8473 From Abū Naḍrah, who said: (We came to ‘Uthmān ibn Abī al-‘Āṣ on a Friday to compare our codex [muṣḥaf] with his. When Friday [prayer] was due, he ordered us, so we performed ablution, perfumed ourselves, and went to the mosque. We sat with a man who was narrating. Then ‘Uthmān ibn Abī al-‘Āṣ came, and we moved to him. ‘Uthmān, may Allāh be pleased with him, said: I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, say: "The Muslims will have three strongholds: a stronghold at the confluence of two seas, a stronghold in al-Jazīrah, and a stronghold in al-Shām. The people will be terrified three times. Then the Dajjāl will emerge in the main body of an army and will defeat those from the East. The first stronghold he reaches will be the one at the confluence of two seas. Its people will become three groups: one group will stay, saying, 'We will observe and see what he is'; one group will join the Bedouins; and one group will join the stronghold that is next to them. Then he will come to the stronghold next to them, and its people will become three groups: one group will say, 'We will observe and see what he is'; one group will join the Bedouins; and one group will join the stronghold that is next to them. Then he will come to al-Shām, and the Muslims will withdraw to ‘Aqabat Afīq. They will send out their grazing livestock, and their livestock will be afflicted.

This will be severe upon them, and they will suffer extreme hunger and hardship, to the extent that one of them will burn the string of his bow and eat it. While they are in this state, a caller will call out to them from the pre-dawn: 'O people, relief has come to you!' Some of them will say to others: 'This is the voice of a satiated man.' Then 'Īsā ibn Maryam, peace and blessings be upon him, will descend at the time of the Fajr prayer. The leader of the people will say to him: 'Step forward, O Spirit of Allāh, and lead us in prayer.' He will say: 'You, the community of this Ummah, are leaders over one another. You step forward and lead us in prayer.' So he will step forward and lead them in prayer. When he finishes, 'Īsā, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, will take his spear towards the Dajjāl. When the Dajjāl sees him, he will dissolve as lead dissolves. His spear will strike him between his breastbone, killing him. Then his companions will be defeated, and nothing on that day will conceal any of them, to the extent that a stone will say: 'O believer, this is a disbeliever, kill him.' ").

This is a Ḥadīth with an authentic chain of narration according to the conditions of Muslim, mentioning Ayyūb al-Sakhtiyānī, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.

- 8507 From Ḥudhayfah ibn al-Yamān, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("I know more about what the Dajjāl has with him than he himself does. He will have two rivers: one will be a blazing fire in the sight of whoever sees it, and the other will be white water. If any of you encounters him, let him close his eyes and drink from what he sees as fire, for it is cool water. And beware of the other, for it is the trial. Know that 'kāfir' (disbeliever) will be written between his eyes, readable by whoever can write and whoever cannot. One of his eyes will be wiped over, with a thick membrane upon it. He will emerge at the end of his affair on the bank of the Jordan, near Bayt Afīq. Everyone who believes in Allāh and the Last Day will be on the bank of the Jordan. He will kill a third of the Muslims, defeat a third, and a third will remain. Night will fall upon them, and some believers will say to others: 'What are you waiting for to join your brothers in the pleasure of your Lord? Whoever has surplus food, let him share it with his brother. Pray when dawn breaks, and hasten the prayer. Then advance upon your enemy.' When they stand to pray, 'Īsā ibn Maryam, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, their leader, will descend and pray with them. When he finishes, he will say: 'Thus, clear the way between me and the enemy of Allāh.' " Abū Ḥāzim said: Abū Hurayrah said he will melt like grease melts in the sun. And 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr said like salt dissolves in water. "And Allāh will give the Muslims power over them, and they will kill them, until the tree and the stone will call out: 'O 'Abd Allāh, O 'Abd al-Raḥmān, O Muslim, this is a Jew, kill him!' So Allāh will annihilate them, and the Muslims will be victorious. They will break the cross, kill the pig, and abolish the jizyah. While they are in this state, Allāh will bring forth the people of Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj. The first of them will drink the lake, and the last of them will come when it has been drained, and they will not leave a drop in it. They will say: 'We have overcome our enemies; there was once a trace of water here.' The Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, and his companions will come after him until they enter a city in Palestine called Lud. They will say: 'We have overcome those on earth, so come, let us fight those in heaven.' The Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, will pray to Allāh at that point, and Allāh will send upon them a lesion in their throats, and not a single human among them will remain. Their stench will harm the Muslims. 'Īsā, peace and blessings of Allāh be upon him, will pray against them, and Allāh will send a wind upon them which will cast them all into the sea.'"). This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to the conditions of Muslim, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.

- 8508 Al-Nawwās ibn Sam'ān al-Kilābī says: (The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl one morning. He spoke of him in a way that sometimes belittled him and sometimes magnified him, until we thought he was in a cluster of palm trees. When we went to the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, he recognized that in us and said: "What is the matter with you?" We said: "O Messenger of Allāh, you mentioned the Dajjāl this morning, sometimes belittling and sometimes magnifying him, until we thought he was in a cluster of palm trees." He said: "If he emerges while I am among you, I will contend with him on your behalf. If he emerges and I am not among you, then every man must contend for himself, and Allāh is my successor over every Muslim. He is a young man with very curly hair, his beard standing on end, as if he resembles al-'Uzzā ibn Qaṭan. Whoever among you sees him, let him recite the opening verses of Sūrat al-Kahf." Then he said: "I see him emerging from between al-Shām and Iraq, wreaking havoc to his right and havoc to his left. O servants of Allāh, stand firm!" We said: "O Messenger of Allāh, and how long will he remain on earth?" He said: "Forty days: a day like a year, a day like a month, a day like a week, and the rest of his days like your days." We said: "O Messenger of Allāh, that day which is like a year, will the prayer of one day suffice us in it?" He said: "No, estimate its measure for it." We said: "O Messenger of Allāh, and how fast will he travel on earth?" He said: "Like rain driven by the wind." He said: "He will come to a people and call them, and they will believe in him and respond to him. He will command the sky, and it will rain, and he will command the earth, and it will sprout. Their grazing animals will return to them in the evening with their humps taller than they have ever been, their udders fuller, and their flanks more extended. Then he will come to a people and call them, and they will reject his words. He will turn away from them, and their wealth will follow him, and they will become destitute, with nothing in their hands. Then he will pass by a ruin and say to it: 'Bring out your treasures.' He will depart, and its treasures will follow him like swarms of bees. Then he will call a young Muslim man, strike him with a sword, and cut him into two pieces, the distance of an arrow's shot. Then he will call him, and he will come forward, his face radiant and laughing." He said: "While he is in this state, Allāh, the Exalted, will send 'Īsā ibn Maryam, who will descend at the white minaret east of Damascus, wearing two lightly saffron-dyed garments, placing his palms on the wings of two angels. When he lowers his head, drops will fall, and when he raises it, beads like pearls will scatter from it. No disbeliever who smells his breath will survive, and his breath will reach as far as his sight extends. He will search for him [the Dajjāl] until he catches him at the gate of Lud and Allāh will kill him. Then 'Īsā ibn Maryam, peace be upon him, the Prophet of Allāh, will come to a people whom Allāh has protected from him. He will wipe their faces and inform them of their ranks in Paradise. While they are in this state, Allāh will reveal to him: 'O 'Īsā, I have brought forth servants of Mine whom no one has the power to fight. Secure My servants on Mount Ṭūr.' And Allāh will send Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj, and they will swarm down from every mound. The first of them will pass by Lake Tiberias and drink what is in it. Then the last of them will pass by and say: 'There was once water in this place.' The Prophet of Allāh, 'Īsā, and his companions will be besieged until the head of an ox for one of them on that day will be better than one hundred dinars for one of you today. The Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, and his companions will supplicate to Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic. Allāh will send upon them the 'naghaf' [worms] in their necks, and they will perish as one soul perishes. The Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, and his companions will descend, and they will not find a handspan of space except that Allāh has filled it with their grease, stench, and blood. The Prophet of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, and his companions will supplicate to Allāh, and He will send birds like the necks of Bactrian camels, which will carry them and cast them wherever He wills. Then Allāh will send rain from which no house of clay or wool will be safe, and it will wash the earth until it leaves it like a smooth surface." Then He will say to the earth: "Bring forth your fruit and restore your blessing." On that day, a group will eat from a single pomegranate and take shelter under its husk. Milk will be blessed so that the milk of one pregnant camel will suffice a large group of people, the milk of one pregnant cow will suffice a tribe, and the milk of one pregnant sheep will suffice a clan. While they are in this state, Allāh will send a pleasant wind that will take them under their armpits and seize the soul of every Muslim. The rest of the people will remain, engaging in public intercourse like donkeys. Upon them the Hour will be established."'). This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs [al-Bukhārī and Muslim], though they did not narrate it.

- 8551 From Hishām ibn ‘Āmir al-Anṣārī, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "Indeed, the hair on the Dajjāl's head from behind is very curly, very curly. And he will say: 'I am your lord.' So whoever says: 'You are my lord,' has been tempted. And whoever says: 'You have lied; my Lord is Allāh, and upon Him I rely, and to Him I turn in repentance,' he will not be harmed," or he said, "there will be no trial upon him." This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to the conditions of the two Shaykhs [al-Bukhārī and Muslim], though they did not narrate it.
- 8561 From Abū al-Zāhiriyyah, from Kathīr ibn Murrah, from Ibn ‘Umar, may Allāh be pleased with them both: (The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, was asked about the food of the believers in the time of the Dajjāl. He said: "The food of the angels." They asked: "And what is the food of the angels?" He said: "Their speech of glorification (Tasbīḥ) and sanctification (Taqdīs). So, whoever's speech on that day is glorification and sanctification, Allāh will remove hunger from him, and he will not fear hunger."). This is a Ḥadīth with an authentic chain of narration according to the conditions of Muslim, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.

- 8614 From ‘Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Jubayr ibn Nufayr, from his father, from his grandfather: (Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl and said: "If he emerges, I will contend with him. And if he emerges [after me], then every man must contend for himself, and Allāh is my successor over every Muslim. Lo, his eye is effaced, as if it were the eye of ‘Abd al-‘Uzzā ibn Qaṭan al-Khuzā‘ī. Lo, it is written between his eyes 'kāfir' (disbeliever), which every Muslim will read. So whoever among you meets him, let him recite the opening of Sūrat al-Kahf. He will emerge from between al-Shām and Iraq, wreaking havoc to his right and havoc to his left. O servants of Allāh, stand firm!" (thrice). It was said: "O Messenger of Allāh, so what will be his stay on earth?" He said: "Forty days: a day like a year, a day like a month, a day like a week, and the rest of his days like your days." They said: "O Messenger of Allāh, so how shall we perform the prayer on that day? The prayer of one day, or shall we estimate?" He said: "Rather, you shall estimate."). This is a Ḥadīth with an authentic chain of narration, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.
- 8631 From Miḥjan ibn al-Adra‘, may Allāh be pleased with him: (The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, addressed the people and said: "Then, the Day of Deliverance! And what is the Day of Deliverance?" (three times). It was said: "O Messenger of Allāh, what is the Day of Deliverance?" He said: "The Dajjāl will come and ascend Uḥud. He will look out and observe Madīnah, then say to his companions: 'Do you not see this white palace? This is Aḥmad's mosque.' Then he will come to Madīnah and find at every one of its passes an angel with a drawn sword. He will come to Sabkhat al-Jurf and pitch his tent. Madīnah will experience three tremors, and no hypocrite man or hypocrite woman, nor any praised or dissolute person, will remain except that they will go out to him. Thus, Madīnah will be purified. And that is the Day of Deliverance."). This is an authentic Ḥadīth according to the conditions of Muslim, though they [al-Bukhārī and Muslim] did not narrate it.

Majma' al-Zawā'id wa Manba' al-Fawā'id by 'Alī ibn Abī Bakr al-Haythamī, may Allāh have mercy on him.

- And from Ḥudhayfah, who said: (The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl and then said: "Indeed, I fear the trial of some of you more than I fear the trial of the Dajjāl. And no one will be saved from what came before it unless he is saved from it. And no trial has been made since the world began, whether small or great, except for the trial of the Dajjāl."). Narrated by Aḥmad and al-Bazzār, and its narrators are those of al-Ṣaḥīḥ.
- From Rāshid ibn Sa'd, who said: (...When Iṣṭakhr was fortified, a caller cried out: "Lo, the Dajjāl has emerged!" He said: Al-Ṣa'b ibn Jathāmah met them and said: "Were it not for what you are saying, I would have informed you that I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, say: "The Dajjāl will not emerge until the people forget to mention him, and until the Imāms cease to mention him on the pulpits.""). Narrated by 'Abd Allāh ibn Aḥmad from the narration of Baqiyyah from Ṣafwān ibn 'Amr, which is authentic as Ibn Ma'in said, and the rest of its narrators are trustworthy.
- And from Fāṭimah bint Qays, who said: (I heard the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, call for the congregational prayer. I went out with some women of the Anṣār until we reached the mosque. The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, led us in the Ṣuhr prayer, then ascended the pulpit. Fāṭimah said: I saw the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, raising his hands until I saw the whiteness of his armpits. Then he said: "Shall I not inform you that this is Ṭaybah [Madīnah]?" (thrice). Then he said: "Shall I not inform you that it is towards al-Shām?" Then he fainted for a while, then he was relieved, then it passed from him. Then he said: "Rather, it is towards Iraq. Rather, he is towards Iraq. He will emerge, when he emerges, from a town called Isfahan, from one of its villages called Rastaqābād. He will emerge, when he emerges, at his forefront seventy thousand wearing Sījān [green shawls]. With him will be two rivers: a river of water and a river of fire. Whoever among you reaches that, and is told to enter the water, let him not enter, for it is fire. And if he is told to enter the fire, let him enter it, for it is water."). Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Kabīr and al-Awsaṭ in her lengthy Ḥadīth, and in it is Sayf ibn Miskīn, who is very weak.

- And from Sulaymān ibn Shihāb, who said: (He stayed with ‘Abd Allāh ibn Mu‘attam, who was one of the companions of the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him. He narrated to me from the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, that he said: "The Dajjāl is not hidden. He will come from the East and call [people] to me, and he will be followed. He will set up [a confrontation] for the people and fight them and overcome them. He will continue in that state until he reaches Kūfah, where he will manifest the religion of Allāh and act according to it, and he will be followed and loved for that. Then, after that, he will say: 'I am a prophet.' At this, everyone of sound mind will be alarmed and will part from him. He will remain after that until he says: 'I am Allāh.' Then his eye will be covered, his ear will be cut, and 'kāfir' (disbeliever) will be written between his eyes, which will not be hidden from any Muslim. Everyone from creation who has a mustard seed's weight of faith in his heart will part from him. His companions and soldiers will be the Magians, the Jews, the Christians, and these non-Arabs from the polytheists. Then he will call for a man and order him to be killed. Then he will cut his limbs, each limb separately, and separate them so that the people see. Then he will gather them together, then strike with his staff, and behold, he [the man] will be standing. He will say: 'I am Allāh; I give life and cause death.' And all of that is magic with which he bewitches the eyes of the people; he does not actually do any of that."'). Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī, and in it is Saʿīd ibn Muḥammad al-Warrāq, who is abandoned.

- And from al-ʿUryān ibn al-Haytham, who said: (I entered upon Yazīd ibn Muʿāwiyah. While we were sitting with him, a man came and took his armrest and leaned on it. We asked: "Who is this?" Some of them said: "This is ʿAbd Allāh ibn ʿAmr." Some of us said: "O ʿAbd Allāh ibn ʿAmr, indeed we narrate Ḥadīths from you." He said: "You, the people of Iraq, take Ḥadīths from their lower sources and do not take them from their higher sources." They mentioned the Dajjāl, and he said: "In your land, there is a land called Kūfah, with salt marshes and palm trees." We said: "Yes." He said: "Indeed, he will emerge from there."'). Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī, and its narrators are trustworthy.
- From Abū Hurayrah, who said: The Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl and said: "His mother will give birth to him while she is cast away in her grave. When she gives birth to him, women will conceive sinners." Narrated by al-Ṭabarānī in al-Awsaṭ, and in it is ʿUthmān ibn ʿAbd al-Raḥmān al-Jumaḥī, about whom al-Bukhārī said he is unknown.

Al-Muṣannaf fī al-Aḥādīth wa al-Āthār by Abū Bakr ʿAbd Allāh ibn Muḥammad ibn Abī Shaybah al-Kūfī.

- 37492 From Ribʿī ibn Ḥirāsh, who said: (I heard Ḥudhayfah say: "If the Dajjāl were to emerge, a people in their graves would believe in him.").
- 37499 From Saʿīd ibn al-Musayyib, who said: (Abū Bakr asked: "Is there a land in Iraq called Khurāsān?" They said: "Yes." He said: "Indeed, the Dajjāl will emerge from there.").
- 37536 From Abū al-Ṭufayl, from a man from the companions of the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge on a donkey, filth upon filth.").
- 37537 Abū Bakr narrated to us, saying: Abū Muʿāwiyah narrated to us from Hishām ibn ʿUrwah, from Wahb ibn Kaysān, from ʿUbayd ibn ʿUmayr, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("The Dajjāl will surely come to a people who will say: 'We indeed accompany him, and we indeed know that he is a liar, but we only accompany him to eat of his food and to graze from his trees.' When the wrath of Allāh descends, it will descend upon all of them.").
- 37538 Wakīʿ narrated to us from Sufyān, from Abū al-Miqdām, from Zayd ibn Wahb, from ʿAbd Allāh, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge from Kūthā.").
- 37539 Wakīʿ narrated to us from Sufyān, from Salamah, from Abū Ṣādiq, who said: ʿAbd Allāh said: ("Indeed, I know the first households upon whom the Dajjāl will knock: you, the people of Kūfah.").

Al-Jāmiʿ by Ibn Maʿmar:

- ʿAbd al-Razzāq informed us from Maʿmar, from al-Zuhrī, who said: (ʿAmr ibn Abī Sufyān al-Thaqafī informed me that a man from the Anṣār informed him from some of the companions of Muḥammad, peace and blessings be upon him, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, mentioned the Dajjāl and said: "He will come to the salt marshes of Madīnah, while it is forbidden for him to enter its passes. Madīnah will then shake with its inhabitants once or twice – which is the earthquake – and every hypocrite man and hypocrite woman will go out from it to him. Then the Dajjāl will turn towards al-Shām until he comes to some of the mountains of al-Shām and besieges them, with the remainder of the Muslims at the peak of one of the mountains of al-Shām. The Dajjāl will besiege them, encamped at its base, until, when the affliction upon them has lasted long, a man from the Muslims will say: 'O assembly of Muslims, how long will you be like this, with the enemy of Allāh encamped in your land like this? Are you not faced with one of two good outcomes: either Allāh grants you martyrdom, or He gives you victory?' So they will pledge allegiance to death, an allegiance which Allāh knows is sincere from their souls. Then a darkness will overtake them in which a man cannot see his own hand." He said: "Then Ibn Maryam will descend, and he will remove [the veil] from their sight. Among them will be a man wearing his armor. They will say: 'Who are you, O servant of Allāh?' He will say: 'I am the servant of Allāh and His Messenger, His spirit and His word, 'Īsā ibn Maryam. Choose between one of three options: either Allāh sends upon the Dajjāl and his soldiers a punishment from the sky, or He causes the earth to swallow them, or He gives your weapons power over them and withholds their weapons from you.' They will say: 'This, O Messenger of Allāh, is more healing for our chests and for ourselves.' On that day, you will see the great, tall, gluttonous, heavy-drinking Jew, his hand unable to hold his sword due to trembling. They will rise against them and will be given power over them. And the Dajjāl will melt when he sees Ibn Maryam, just as lead melts, until 'Īsā comes to him or overtakes him."

Al-Fitan by Ibn Ḥammād:

- 1202 Al-Walīd narrated to us from Ṣafwān ibn ‘Amr, from someone who narrated to him from the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, who said: ("A group from my Ummah will raid India, and Allāh will grant them victory, until they meet the kings of India chained in fetters. Allāh will forgive them their sins. They will then depart to al-Shām and find ‘Īsā ibn Maryam in al-Shām.").
- 1447 From Ka‘b al-Aḥbār, who said: (It used to be said: "The dog of the Hour is the Dajjāl. Whoever is patient with the trial of the Dajjāl will not be tempted, and will never be tempted, alive or dead. Whoever he reaches and does not follow him, Paradise is due to him. And if a man is saved and denies the Dajjāl once, saying: 'I know who you are, you are the Dajjāl,' then recites to him the opening of Sūrat al-Kahf, he will not fear him, nor will he [the Dajjāl] be able to tempt him, and that verse will be like an amulet for him against the Dajjāl. So, glad tidings to whoever is saved by his faith before the trials of the Dajjāl, his humiliation, and his disgrace. And he will surely reach peoples like the best of the companions of Muḥammad, peace and blessings be upon him.").
- 1479 From Ka‘b, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge in the year eighty. And Allāh knows best which eighty: two hundred and eighty, or another.").
- 1485 From Arṭāh, who said: ("Constantinople will be conquered, then the news of the Dajjāl's emergence will reach them, and it will be false. Then they will stay for a third of seven 'sābū' [weeks or units of seven]. In that year, the sky will withhold a third of its rain; in the second year, two-thirds; and in the third, it will withhold all its rain. No animal with claws or fangs will remain except that it will perish. Hunger will occur, and they will die until not even ten out of every seventy remain. People will flee to the mountains of al-Jawf, to Antioch. Among the signs of the Dajjāl's emergence is an eastern wind, neither hot nor cold, which will demolish the idol of Alexandria and uproot the olive trees of Morocco and al-Shām from their origins. The Euphrates, springs, and rivers will dry up. The timings of days, months, and the timings of crescents will be altered.").

- 1494 From Abū Hurayrah, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge from a village in Iraq. People will scatter after his emergence. A group among them will say: 'Let us go to al-Shām, let us go to your brothers.'").
- 1495 From Saʿīd ibn al-Musayyib, from Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge from Marw, from its Jewish quarter.").
- 1496 Yazīd ibn Hārūn narrated to us from Saʿīd, from Qatādah, from Ibn al-Musayyib, from Abū Bakr al-Ṣiddīq, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: ("The Dajjāl will emerge from Khurāsān.").
- 1497 From Kaʿb, who said: ("The Dajjāl's birthplace is in a village in Egypt called Qūs, which is in Sarā.").
- 1498 From Jubayr ibn Nufayr, Shurayḥ, al-Miqdām, ʿAmr ibn al-Aswad, and Kathīr ibn Murrah, who said: ("He is not a human; he is only a devil.").
- 1499 From his father, who said: ("He is Ibn Ṣāʿid, who was born in Madīnah.").
- 1506 From Shahr ibn Ḥawshab, who heard ʿAbd Allāh ibn ʿAmr, may Allāh be pleased with them both, who heard the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, say: ("People will emerge from the East, reciting the Qurʾān, but it will not go beyond their throats. Every time a generation of them emerges, it will be cut off"—the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, counted this more than ten times—"Every time a generation of them emerges, it will be cut off, until the Dajjāl emerges in their remnant.").

- 1518 From Ḥudhayfah, may Allāh be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("The Dajjāl, the enemy of Allāh, will emerge, and with him will be soldiers from the Jews and various kinds of people. With him will be a paradise and a fire, and men whom he will kill and then revive. With him will be a mountain of tharīd [a bread dish] and a river of water. I will indeed describe his characteristics to you: he will emerge with an effaced eye, and on his forehead will be written 'kāfir' (disbeliever), which everyone who can read and who cannot will read. His paradise is fire, and his fire is paradise. He is the Lying Messiah. Thirteen thousand Jewish women will follow him. May Allāh have mercy on a man who prevents his foolish womenfolk from following him. Strength against him on that day will be through the Qur'ān, for his affair is a severe trial. Allāh will send devils from the easts and wests of the earth, and they will say to him: 'Seek our help in whatever you wish.' He will say to them: 'Go and inform the people that I am their lord and that I have come to them with my paradise and my fire.' The devils will set out, and more than one hundred devils will enter upon a man, appearing to him in the form of his father, his son, his brothers, his kinsmen, and his slaves. They will say: 'O so-and-so, do you recognize us?' The man will say to them: 'Yes, this is my father, this is my mother, this is my sister, and this is my brother.' The man will say: 'What is your news?' They will say: 'Rather, you tell us your news.' The man will say: 'We have been informed that the enemy of Allāh, the Dajjāl, has emerged.' The devils will say to him: 'Hold on! Do not say this, for he is your lord who desires [this]. This is his paradise he has brought, and his fire. And with him are rivers and food, and there is no food except what was before him, except what Allāh wills.' The man will say: 'You have lied! You are nothing but devils, and he is the liar. It has reached us that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, has narrated your account, warned us, and informed us about him. So, no welcome to you! You are devils, and he is the enemy of Allāh. And Allāh will surely drive 'Īsā ibn Maryam until he kills him.' They will be humiliated and will turn back disappointed." Then the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "I only narrate these things to you so that you may comprehend them, understand them, and retain them."

- 1521 From 'Abd Allāh ibn 'Amr, who said: ("The vanguard of the Dajjāl will be seventy thousand, swifter and bolder than leopards." A man asked: "Who can withstand these?" He said: "None but Allāh.").
- 1522 From al-Haytham ibn Mālik al-Ṭā'ī, tracing the Ḥadīth back to the Prophet: (The Dajjāl will rule in Iraq for two years, during which his justice will be praised, and people will crane their necks towards him. One day, he will ascend the pulpit and address them, then turn to them and say: "Has the time not come for you to recognize your lord?" A speaker will say to him: "And who is our lord?" He will say: "I am." A denier from among the servants of Allāh will deny his claim, so he [the Dajjāl] will seize him and kill him. Two angels will descend upon him from the sky. One of them will say to him, when he says, "I am your lord": "You have lied." And his companion will say: "He has spoken the truth," affirming his companion. Whoever Allāh wills guidance for, He will make him firm, and he will know that the angel only affirms his companion [the first angel]. And whoever Allāh wills misguidance for, He will make it ambiguous for him, and he will say that when the angel affirms his companion, he is only affirming the Dajjāl, arranging for his misguidance. Then the Dajjāl will proceed. Whoever responds to him, he will command the sky, and it will rain upon them. Whoever opposes him will wake up to find that all their wealth has followed the Dajjāl. Most of his followers will be Jews and Bedouins. He will restrict [provisions] for the Muslims and tighten [conditions] upon them until they reach a state of hardship, and until the members of a household, though numerous, will be satisfied by a single she-goat for their evening meal.).

- 1526 From Ka‘b, who said: (The Dajjāl is a human, born of a woman. His affair was not revealed in the Torah or the Gospel, but he was mentioned in the books of the Prophets. He will be born in a village in Egypt called Qūs. There will be thirty years between his birth and his emergence. When he appears, Idrīs and Khanūkh [Enoch] will emerge, crying out in the cities and villages: "Indeed, the Dajjāl has emerged!" When the people of al-Shām prepare for his emergence, he will head towards the East. Then he will descend at the eastern gate of Damascus. Then he will be sought but not found. Then he will be seen at the minaret near the river of al-Kiswah. Then he will be sought, but it will not be known where he went. His mention will be forgotten. Then he will come to the East and appear, and he will rule justly. Then he will be given the caliphate, and he will be appointed caliph. This will be after the emergence of the Messiah. He will heal the blind and the leper, until people are amazed. Then he will display magic and claim prophethood. People will separate from him, and the people of al-Shām will part from him. The people of the East will split into three groups: one group will join al-Shām, one group will join the Bedouins, and one group will join him. He will advance with those with him. Ka‘b said they are forty thousand, and some scholars said seventy thousand. He will come to the nations and ask for their support against the people of al-Shām, and they will respond to him. All the Jews will gather to him. He will march towards al-Shām, his vanguard being the Eastern contingent, with them Bedouins of Jadis wearing Ṭayālīsah [shawls]. The people of al-Shām will be terrified and will flee to the mountains: twelve thousand men and seven thousand women, most of them to Mount al-Balqā’, having taken refuge there. They will not find [anything to eat except] the salt tree. Some will flee to the plain, and some of them will come to Constantinople and settle there. Then they will correspond with each other and will come quickly until they camp west of the Jordan, by the river of Abī Fuṭrus. Every fugitive from the Dajjāl will gather to them. They will prepare an armed force at the minaret west of the Jordan. The Dajjāl will approach and descend from the pass of Afīq, camping east of the Jordan. He will besiege them for forty days. He will command the river of Abī Fuṭrus, and it will flow towards him. Then he will say: "Return," and it will return to its place. He will say: "Dry up," and it will dry up. He will command Mount Thawr and Mount Ṭūr Zaytā to collide, and they will collide. He will command the wind, and it will stir up clouds from the sea, and the earth will rain and sprout. He will command his offspring to follow him, and they will show him treasures. He will not pass by a ruin or land containing treasure without it casting its treasure to him. With him will be a group of Jinn, who will resemble their dead. A close relative will say to his close relative: "Was I not dead, and now I am alive?" He will wade into the sea three times a day, and the water will not reach his thighs. The believers, hypocrites, and disbelievers will be distinguished. Fleeing from him is better than remaining in his presence. The one who speaks a word on that day by which he attains salvation will have a reward like the number of sands in the world. He will fight people on the basis of disbelief. Those of them who are killed, their graves will be illuminated in the darkest night and the pitch-black darkness. Ka'b said: When the believers see that they cannot kill him or his companions, they will go west of the Jordan, in Bayt al-Maqdis [Jerusalem]. Their fruits will be blessed for them, and the eater will be satisfied with a small amount due to its great blessing. They will be satisfied there with bread and oil. The Dajjāl will follow them, and two angels will come to him. He will say: "I am the Lord." One of them will say to him: "You have lied." The other will say to his companion: "You have spoken the truth." His description is that he is bow-legged, reddish, of varied creation, his right eye effaced, one of his hands longer than the other. He will dip the longer one into the sea, and it will reach its bottom, and he will bring out fish. He will traverse the farthest and nearest parts of the earth in two days, his step being as far as his sight can reach. The mountains, rivers, and clouds will be subservient to him. He will come to a mountain and lead it. His crops will ripen in a day. He will say to the mountains: "Move aside from the path," and they will do so. He will come to the earth and say: "Bring out what is in you of gold," and it will spew it forth like swarms of bees and like the eyes of locusts. With him will be a river of water and a river of fire, a green paradise and a red fire. His fire is paradise, and his paradise is fire, and a mountain of bread. Whoever is cast into his fire will not burn. He will appear once in 'Āliyah, once at the gate of Damascus, and once near the river of Abī Fuṭrus. 'Īsā ibn Maryam, peace be upon him, will descend).

The Emergence of Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj (Gog and Magog)

Ṣaḥīḥ Muslim:

- 2880 From Zaynab bint Umm Salamah, from Umm Ḥabībah, from Zaynab bint Jaḥsh: (The Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, awoke from his sleep saying: "Lā ilāha illā Allāh (There is no god but Allāh). Woe to the Arabs from an evil that has drawn near. Today, an opening like this has been made in the barrier of Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj"—and Sufyān made a circle with his fingers indicating ten. I said: "O Messenger of Allāh, will we be destroyed while righteous people are among us?" He said: "Yes, if wickedness becomes widespread.").

Ibn Mājah:

- 4076 Al-Nawwās ibn Sam‘ān says: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("Then the Muslims will use the bows of Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj, their arrows, and their shields for fuel for seven years.").
- 4079 From Abū Sa‘īd al-Khudrī, that the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("Then Ya'jūj and Ma'jūj will be let loose and will emerge as Allāh, the Exalted, said: {And they will swarm down from every mound} [Qur'ān 21:96]. They will cover the earth. The Muslims will withdraw from them until the remnant of the Muslims are in their cities and fortresses, and they will gather their livestock with them. They will pass by a river and drink it until they leave nothing in it. The last of them will pass by their tracks, and one of them will say: 'There was once water in this place.' They will gain dominance over the earth, and one of them will say: 'These are the people of the earth; we have finished them off. Let us now fight the people of heaven.' One of them will hurl his spear towards the sky, and it will return stained with blood. They will say: 'We have killed the people of heaven.' While they are in this state, Allāh will send creatures like locust worms (naghaf al-jarād) which will seize them by their necks, and they will die like locusts die, one piling on top of another. The Muslims will wake up and not hear any sound from them. They will say: 'Who will risk his life and see what they have done?' A man from them will descend, having resigned himself to being killed by them. He will find them dead and call out to them: 'Rejoice, for your enemy has perished!' The people will come out and let their livestock roam free. They will have no pasture except their flesh, and they [the livestock] will be more grateful for it than for the best vegetation they ever found.'").

Ibn Hibbān:

- 6832 From Abū Saʿīd al-Khudrī, who said: The Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him, said: ("This House [the Kaʿbah] will continue to be visited for Ḥajj and ʿUmrah even after the emergence of Yaʿjūj and Maʿjūj.").

The book is completed with the praise of Allāh, the Exalted.

We are in:

Shawwāl - 1425 AH / December - 2004 CE

The rights to print and publish this book are reserved for anyone who wishes to do so, provided that its content is preserved and not altered in any way. I seek nothing from this book of mine except the blessing of the Muslims' supplications, and a foothold that enrages the disbelievers, for which a righteous deed may be recorded for me. And the reward is from Allāh for obeying Him and fighting His enemies.

I advise whoever wishes to print the book to produce his copy in one of three formats:

1. To print it in two volumes (Part One) and (Part Two) if printed in a small font.
2. To print it in five volumes if the font is medium. It will be approximately 1300 pages, in the following manner:

Volume One: Containing (Chapter One and Two). (Introductions, Current Reality, and Sharīʿah Rulings Therein).

Volume Two: Containing (Chapter Three and Four). (History and its Analyses).

Volume Three: Containing (Chapter Five, Six, and Seven). (History of the Awakening, the Jihādī Current, and its Harvest).

Volume Four: Containing (Introduction to Part Two and Sections 1 - 2 - 3 of Chapter Eight).

These are (The Jihādī Methodology and Creed, Political Theory, and Theory of Integrated Upbringing).

Volume Five: Containing (Sections 4 - 5 - 6 - 7 - 8). These are (Military, Activist, and Organizational Theories, and Theory of Incitement for Resistance. In addition to Chapter Nine, Glad Tidings and Concluding Remarks).

3. To print it in 12 separate treatises in a clear font, and it will be approximately 1635 pages in total, as I have divided it, which is the introductory treatise and eleven treatises, each on a separate topic. This is easier for circulation and more accessible for those not accustomed to reading lengthy works.

O Allāh, this is the call, and upon You is the conveyance.

O Allāh, decree for me sincerity and acceptance in this book.

And make it reach the Easts and the Wests. And grant it acceptance among Your servants.

And benefit with it the people of Islām in general, and the people of Jihād in particular.

And make for this call of mine its men, accept from them, and decree for me the like of their rewards.

O Allāh, I seek refuge in the light of Your Countenance from seeking, in all my states and utterances and what my pen has written, the pleasure of people at the cost of Your displeasure.

And cast upon me love from Yourself. And I seek refuge in You from being among those about whom You said:

{And We will proceed to what they have done of deeds, so We will make them scattered dust} [Qur'ān 25:23].

Rather, make me among those about whom You said:

{So for those, Allāh will replace their evil deeds with good deeds. And ever is Allāh Forgiving and Merciful} [Qur'ān 25:70].

O Allāh, Āmīn... Āmīn.

And O Allāh, send prayers and peace upon Your Prophet and Your servant, our master and our leader, Muḥammad, and upon his family and companions.

And our final supplication is that praise be to Allāh, Lord of the worlds.

And it is fitting for the author of such a book to write his will at its end – So this is my will:

In the name of Allāh, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.

Praise be to Allāh, Lord of the worlds, and peace and blessings be upon our master Muḥammad, and upon his family and all his companions, and those who follow them in excellence until the Day of Judgment. And thereafter:

This is the will of me, the servant in need of Allāh's mercy:

Muṣṭafā ibn ‘Abd al-Qādir Sit Maryam Naṣṣār, known as:

(‘Umar ‘Abd al-Ḥakīm / Abū Muṣ‘ab al-Sūrī)

I enjoin my family and all my brothers to have Taqwā (fear and consciousness) of Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic, and to adhere to His religion and the guidance of His Prophet Muḥammad, peace and blessings be upon him. For tribulations have approached like segments of a dark night, one following another, and we have reached the "days of patience" in which the one holding onto his religion is like one holding onto hot coals, in the time about which he, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "A man will be a believer in the morning and a disbeliever by evening, selling his religion for a paltry worldly gain." Nothing saves from these tribulations, after Allāh's mercy, except adherence to what Allāh has commanded, the companionship of those obedient to Him, avoidance of what Allāh has forbidden, avoidance of those disobedient to Him, and asking Allāh for well-being in religion and the worldly life, and a good end.

I enjoin them all, and whoever this will of mine reaches from among the Muslims, to wage Jihād against the enemies of Allāh from the disbelieving invaders and those who ally with them and assist them from among the hypocrites, with their hands, their tongues, and their hearts. Allāh does not burden a soul beyond its scope. This, today, is an individual obligation like prayer and zakāh.

I write this will of mine as we endure the trials He has blessed us with in His cause, still moving from one hideout to another, pursued by the enemies of Allāh from the disbelievers and their apostate, hypocritical helpers. Therefore, I wish to draw attention to a very important matter in this will of mine, which is:

That if Allāh decrees safety and well-being for us, as we hope, Allāh willing, we will wage Jihād against the disbelieving enemies of Allāh and their hypocritical allies as Allāh, the Exalted, has commanded, striving to defeat them, and that we may meet Him as martyrs in His cause while He is pleased with us, Allāh willing. I have recorded the summary of my creed, thought, and methodology in the last thing I wrote during this stage of hideouts in my book:

“The Call for Global Islamic Resistance”

In it are the details of the summary of my creed and thought, and the summary of my advice and call to Muslims in general, and to their youth waging Jihād against the enemies of Allāh in particular, and the latest benefits from the lessons of experience. I ask Allāh for guidance and forgiveness.

And if Allāh decrees captivity for me – and I ask Him for well-being – as He decreed it for many of our best mujāhidīn brothers, then I draw attention to the fact that striving to rescue Muslim prisoners is a trust upon the neck of all Muslims, and the mujāhidīn among them in particular. And I draw attention to the fact that a prisoner is a human being devoid of free will, and his statements and what he is forced to say are not valid according to Sharī‘ah. And if anything is issued from me, should that happen – Allāh forbid – that contradicts what I have written in this book of mine regarding the call to Jihād against the enemies of Allāh, or any position or statement that contradicts the truth we have believed in and called to, then disregard it and cast it aside. This is the Sharīʿah ruling concerning what is issued by Muslim prisoners under the pressure of Allāh's enemies, and in what happened in Egypt, there is a lesson for us.

I have lived most of my life striving in Jihād against these disbelievers and their allies from the apostates and hypocrites, with my person, my tongue, and my pen, and whatever I was able. I hope that Allāh accepts from me what I did well and overlooks my slips, my weakness, and what I did wrong, by His mercy and His vast pardon and forgiveness, and that He decrees for me sincerity, acceptance, and martyrdom in His cause, and places me with those whom Allāh has favored by His grace and generosity.

It was my intention to gather all that I recorded of audio and video lectures, transcribe their content in writing, and add to it the collection of what I wrote in manuscript, in its historical sequence, and publish it in a collection titled "The Complete Works." Circumstances may not allow me to do so. If some of those who are qualified for it undertake this work, I hope that it will contain what benefits the Muslims, and that I will have in it what connects its reward to me if my deeds are cut off, and that those working on this project will have a share in the reward. Let them benefit from the experience of transcribing the works of Shaykh ʿAbd Allāh ʿAzzām and publishing them in a complete encyclopedia. They wrote their methodology in its introduction. It was a successful experience, may Allāh reward those who undertook it well. They can rely on the treatise "Index of Production" (Fihris al-Intāj), which contains an almost complete list of topics. And Allāh is the Granter of success.

I ask everyone to forgive me, to seek forgiveness for me, and to ask Allāh for forgiveness and well-being for me in this world and the Hereafter, and the stations of the martyrs.

Some brothers had some debts upon me. If they see fit to forgive me for them, this is my hope in them. If they see fit to claim their right, let them approach my family, and I hope from them that they will settle what is upon my liability. And praise be to Allāh Who occupied us with Jihād in His cause rather than seeking the world. And I hope to meet Allāh without any right of any of creation upon my neck, except that it has been settled for him or he has forgiven me for it, and that Allāh, by His grace, will take care of whatever of that there was, and all my affairs, by His pardon and generosity.

I enjoin my parents, my wife, my children, my brothers and sisters, and my brethren to be patient and seek reward [from Allāh], and not to say, if news of my death or whatever afflicts me reaches them, except what is good and what pleases Allāh, the Mighty and Majestic. And among the best of that is to say:

"Innā lillāhi wa innā ilayhi rāji'un. Lillāhi mā a'tā wa lahu mā akhadha, wa lā ḥawla wa lā quwwata illā billāh al-'Alī al-'Aẓīm. Allāhumma ighfir li-'abdika al-miskīn al-ḍa'if..." (Indeed, to Allāh we belong and to Him we will return. To Allāh belongs what He gave and to Him belongs what He took, and there is no might nor power except with Allāh, the Most High, the Most Great. O Allāh, forgive Your poor, weak servant...).

I enjoin whoever undertakes my burial, if I die or am killed, to strive for the Sunnah in the matter of my preparation, and not to erect any structure over my grave—this, if I am fortunate enough to have a grave.

And I say, in the station of bidding farewell to this world and welcoming the Hereafter, verses I composed while writing this will of mine, hoping in them for Allāh's mercy:

I have come before a God, all my conviction... is that I will be saved and I will not be disappointed.

For my Lord is Forgiving, Benign, Merciful... Generous, Benevolent, and He is the Responder.

And in my satchel, there is nothing but hope... and good opinion of Him, which is never disappointed.

And that I bear witness that there is no god... but the Most Gracious, whom the intelligent hope for.

And that Muḥammad is the best of creation... the Messenger of Allāh, beloved to the Creator.

O believers, I enjoin upon you what the martyr of Islām in Syria of al-Shām, our Shaykh Marwān Ḥadīd – may Allāh have mercy upon him and admit him to His spacious gardens – enjoined:

Your example is the Messenger of Allāh, peace and blessings be upon him. He strove in the cause of Allāh until certainty came to him. So, deal with the enemies of Allāh as Allāh has commanded: {So when you meet those who disbelieve, strike [their] necks until, when you have inflicted slaughter upon them, then secure their bonds} [Qur'ān 47:4]. {And prepare against them whatever you are able of power and of steeds of war by which you may terrify the enemy of Allāh and your enemy and others besides them whom you do not know [but] whom Allāh knows} [Qur'ān 8:60].

And know that: ...There is no victor except Allāh... So may the eyes of the cowards never sleep...

My beloved ones, all of you:

Allāh, the Exalted, said to His Messenger, peace and blessings be upon him: {Indeed, you are to die, and indeed, they are to die} [Qur'ān 39:30]. So every calamity after him is minor...

And tomorrow, Allāh willing, we will meet the beloved ones, Muḥammad and his companions. And may Allāh send prayers and peace upon our master Muḥammad and upon his family and companions. And our final supplication is that praise be to Allāh, Lord of the worlds.

I bear witness that there is no god but Allāh, and I bear witness that Muḥammad is the Messenger of Allāh.
